FEARFUL EXPLOSION OF POWDER MAGAZINE CAUSED DEATH OF TWENTY-FIVE PEOPLE

STORMY SCENES IN THE HUNGARIAN DIET

Insults Hurled at the Premier In Deafening Shouts.

Sensation Is Caused By Direct Charges of Bribery.

Budapest, Hungary, July 29.—Deputy Zolomon Papp caused a sensation in the lower house of the diet today by spreading out on the table 10,000 kronen in cash, which he declared had been tendered him as a bribe to desert his fellow-obstructionists and leave Budapest. Herr Papp, who is a member of the Kossuth party, added that it was former Deputy Dienes who attempted to bribe him. Herr Dienes, he asserted, had 12,000 kronen, of which sum he retained 2000 as commission and handed 10,000 kronen to Herr Papp, which the latter accepted in order to be able to prove his allegations.

Deputy Lovaszy said that the editor of the Magyar Orszag had been asked how much money would be required to buy off the newspapers' support of the obstructionists. A parliamentary committee was appointed to investigate the matter.

There were stormy scenes in the diet this afternoon when the premier, Count Hedervary, rose to commence the debate on the indemnity bill. The obstructionists stood up and the chamber resounded with deafening shouts, the banging of desk lids and insults hurled at the premier from the opposition bench. The sitting was suspended, but the scenes were repeated on its resumption, and ultimately, being unable to obtain a hearing, the premier handed the clerk of the house a written order, moving the reading of the bill. When the obstructionists became aware of this action a couple of members of the Kossuth party stormed the presidential tribune, snatched the paper from the clerk's hands and tore it to pieces. The tribune was soon filled with shouting deputies, and amidst the tumult the session was again suspended.

CUBAN AGITATORS PROMPTLY KILLED

Attempt to Incite People to Treason Has Inglorious Ending.

Havana, July 29.—The efforts of a quartette of wild characters to cause an uprising in the vicinity of Bayamo, province of Santiago, have ended in the capture of their leader and the killing of the other three men. For weeks the four men had been attracting considerable attention in that vicinity, endeavoring to excite the people to treason and violence on the ground that the revolutionary forces had not been and were not likely to be paid. Yesterday the party was overtaken by a detachment of the rural guard and the leader and the horses of the agitators were captured after some shooting on both sides. The other three men were pursued until late yesterday, when they were all killed.

Several shots were fired at the guards, but none of them hit. The facts in the case were telegraphed to Senor Yerro, secretary of the interior, by the governor of Santiago. Secretary Yerro informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that this effectually ends the only semblance of an uprising in Cuba. Two of the culprits were former convicts. Only one of the party had belonged to the revolutionary army.

PRESIDENT AND SONS SPEND THE NIGHT ON BARE GROUND

Wrapped In Blankets the Chief Executive and Party Put In the Night on the Sandy Shores of Huntington Bay.

Oyster Bay, L. I., July 29.—Lying on the bare ground, wrapped in blankets, President Roosevelt and his sons and nephews passed last night on the sandy shores of Huntington bay. The president makes an annual custom of camping with his boys. Late yesterday afternoon the president and his little party left Sagamore Hill in two boats for Lloyds Neck, the sandy promontory on Huntington bay, which had been selected for the night's camp. He occupied one boat with his son Archie and his nephew, Nicholas Roosevelt, and his son Kermit and nephews Philip and Oliver Roosevelt occupied the other. The president and Kermit handled theseen. oars. As the distance to Lloyds Neck is about ten miles, it took them two hours to row it. After breakfast today the party returned to Sagamore Hill.

Soon after his return the president received a call from former Senator Washburn of Minnesota. They discussed the financial situation, Senator Washburn expressing the opinion that the present flurry in New York is not so serious as it appears on the surface to be, and that it does not affect the country's general prosperity in the least.

"Mother" Jones and four members of her "army" arrived here today. They were told the president could not be

PORTUGUESE OFFICIALS GIVE AMERICANS WARM RECEPTION

A Cordial Welcome By King and Queen at the Castle, and Banquet at Ministry of Marine Formed Part of Program.

Lisbon, Portugal, July 29.—King Charles is expected to visit the United States European squadron Saturday.

The reception accorded to Rear Admiral Cotton and the other American officers by the king and Queen Amelia, at the royal castle at Cintra (fourteen miles from Lisbon) Monday, was most cordial. Admiral Cotton, while at Cintra, visited Queen Maria Pia, mother of the king, and the duke of Oporto, brother of his majesty.

There were 250 guests at the banquet given at the ministry of marine last night in honor of the Americans and at which all the cabinet ministers were present. Admiral Cotton, who was greeted with cheers, made a speech during which he eulogized Portugal and thanked the officials for the hearty reception accorded to the American warships. He also referred to the exaggerated accounts of a petty squabble which occurred between the police and some sailors ashore and declared that the relation of the two forces were most friendly. The minister for foreign affairs, the minister of marine and United States Minister Bryan also made speeches.

Admiral Cotton and his officers will entertain a large number of Portuguese ladies at a reception on the Brooklyn August 4, and Minister Bryan will give a garden party August 5.

Chicago, July 29.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Richmond, Va., says: Maggie L. Walker, colored, enjoys the distinction of being the first woman, white or colored, ever elected president of a bank in this section. She has been chosen to head the St. Luke's Penny Savings bank, under the auspices of the Order of St. Luke. The institution will open for business Sept. 1 with $5,000 deposits. President Walker has been a teacher in the public schools here and enjoys the respect and confidence of both races.

WAREHOUSE AT WALKER BURNED

Walker, Minn., July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—A fire at midnight completely destroyed the warehouse of the Akeley Lumber company here with its contents, consisting of complete outfits for four lumber camps stored here during the summer. The loss is estimated at $6000 with only a very small insurance.

LOOKS OVER WORK.

Capt. Potter Returns From Touring Lake Superior.

Liverpool, July 29.—The shareholders of the Cunard Steamship company at a meeting here today, unanimously approved the changes in the articles of association, announced July 21, (by which the government will pay considerably over $5,000,000 for the construction of two additional steamers for the line, placing the whole fleet at the disposal of the admiralty for use as cruisers and providing for an improved Atlantic mail service) and confirmed the agreement with the government with the chairman, Lord Inverclyde, asserted did not constitute subsidizing the company, but only "paying for services rendered."

CUNARD STOCKHOLDERS

Approve Changes In Articles of Association.

Deputy Sheriff W. J. Bates today brought Charles Lundeen down from Chisholm to be examined as to his sanity. He is the man that went mad in a railroad camp near Chisholm and drove all the men out into the woods. Yesterday in the jail he undressed himself and started to tear things up, but today he was quite mild and appeared to be all right. He was to be examined this afternoon.

Deputy Sheriff F. L. Magie today brought down Nick Marshall from Eveleth, to serve sixty days in the county jail for drunkenness.

MASSES CELEBRATED FOR POPE AND KING

Solemn Requiem For Leo In Vatican; For King Humbert In Pantheon.

Rome, July 29.—Rome this morning was the scene of one of those dramatic contrasts which are now so characteristic of the Eternal City. While at the Vatican in the Sistine chapel, a solemn requiem mass was being intoned, with all the solemnity the Catholic church can impose, for the repose of the soul of Leo XIII., the spiritual monarch who claimed Rome as his capital, another and no less solemn requiem mass was being celebrated in the magnificent pantheon for the repose of the soul of the late King Humbert, the temporal monarch, the capital of whose kingdom was Rome. King Victor Emanuel and the Dowager Queen Margaret came here on purpose to attend the annual mass which is celebrated on the anniversary of the assassination of King Humbert, which occurred three years ago. The king drove to the pantheon the well known red liveries of his coachmen and footmen arousing much interest among the people in the streets and arrived there in time to meet Queen Margaret who was dressed in deepest black. After a tender embrace, mother and son entered the pantheon, heard the mass and placed wreaths on the tombs of King Humbert and King Victor Emanuel. The entrance and exit of their majesties was witnessed by a large crowd.

At one o'clock members of the municipality with the exception of those of their number who a few days ago went to the Vatican to condole with the camerlingo on Pope Leo's death (as representatives of the clerical party of the city government) visited the pantheon in a body and placed wreaths on the tombs of the two kings.

The second requiem mass in the Sistine chapel was termed the foreign mass. The cardinal who celebrated was Cardinal Kopp, bishop of Breslau, Germany, assisted by three foreign cardinals, Goosseen, archbishop of Mechlin, Gruscha, archbishop of Vienna, and Perraud, bishop of Autun and one Italian cardinal, Di Pietro. The beautiful chapel overflowed as it did yesterday with the faithful.

The Vatican, as a rule, provides a carriage and horses for all the cardinals, and all the horses are alike, black with long tails; but the authorities were not prepared for so many cardinals and were obliged to give the last arrivals bay horses.

From the estimates made the cost to the holy see of the various ceremonies from the death of Pope Leo to the election of his successor, if it takes place within a few days, will be about $400,000.

FIERCE FOREST FIRE RAGING ON STAR ISLAND IN CASS LAKE

Mayor Stein, With the Cass Lake Fire Department, and Other Volunteers Have Gone to the Island to Fight the Fire.

Cass Lake, Minn., July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mayor Stein, the deputy fire-warden here, telegraphed last evening to State Fire Warden Andrews at St. Paul for advice, because a fire is raging fiercely on Star island, stating it would take thirty to sixty men to quell the fire. Gen. Andrews replied to go after the fire, and the fire department was called out, and with other volunteers left for the scene. There is a very high wind and fighting the fire is a serious problem. Star island is government land and is reserved by the Morris law. The island contains valuable pine, is a beauty spot, and is two miles by water from the town.

St. Paul, July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following letter was today sent to the mayor of Cass Lake by the chief forest fire warden:

St. Paul, Minn., July 29.—To the Mayor of Cass Lake, Minn.: Dear Sir—Some weeks ago I sent you a circular letter calling your attention to section 1 of the fire warden law, which constitutes you, by virtue of your office as mayor, a fire warden, and instructing you to, in case of any forest fires being neglected in territory reasonably accessible to you, to promptly go with sufficient assistance and extinguish or control the same, but I was not favored with any reply from you.

Last night I received a telegram from Cass Lake, "that a forest fire has been burning for days on the north end of a large island in Cass Lake; also one up Turtle river, both running badly owing to extremely dry weather. No settlers in that territory." I immediately wired you to send sufficient force to control the fire and hereby renew the instructions. The expense will be paid under section 5 of the fire warden law. I am surprised that you failed to give attention to this fire without waiting for special instructions. The beautiful forest on this large island in Cass Lake is reserved from being cut by a recent act of congress on account of its value for scenery. You will go yourself with a party or send a competent foreman. They should be provided with means for camping out, with axes, spades and means for carrying water. Fell trees and back fire, if necessary. Under section 5 of the fire warden law every able bodied male person over 18 years old must assist when called upon. I will rely upon your having this work done promptly and thoroughly. Yours truly,

C. C. ANDREWS,
Chief (Forest) Fire Warden.

CORP. CARNEY ENLISTED TOO SOON

New York, July 29.—President Roosevelt has refused to grant the request of Corpl. John P. Carney, of the marine corps, for permission to leave the government service, where he receives $13 a month, in order that he might accept a position as keeper in Raymond street jail at a salary of $1200 a year.

Before enlisting Carney took the civil service examination. Hearing nothing from the examiners, he concluded that he had failed to secure the coveted position, so he enlisted to serve four years. In a few days he was notified that he stood fourth in the list, but owing to his being a Spanish war veteran, had been placed at the top and the $1200 position was his. His appeal for permission to resign from the federal service finally reached the president, but met with refusal on the grounds that it might form a dangerous precedent.

FIREMEN TIE UP STREET RAILWAY

Detroit, July 29.—All the street car lines in the city were tied up for more than two hours this morning at the time travel is usually heaviest, by a strike of thirty-five firemen at the power house of the Detroit United railway. The men struck to enforce a demand for an eight-hour day made some time ago. Outside help was rushed to the power house and by 8 o'clock the company had a few cars running on most of the lines. At 8 o'clock three of the firemen had returned to work, while the others were endeavoring to induce the engineers to join them in their strike. Thousands of people were late in getting to their work this morning owing to the strike and tie-up.

RECEIVER FOR ONE PALACE CAR

New York, July 29.—A receiver was appointed in the chancery court at Newark, N. J., for a single palace car. It is called the Boston and at the time it was built was known as one of the finest in existence and was exhibited widely. Later it became famous by remaining sidetracked for almost two years near Springfield, Mass., while the question of its ownership was being fought in the courts. All that time a colored porter and his wife stuck to the car. The litigation grows out of a transfer made to a New Englander, who holds a mortgage on the property and the court has instructed the receiver, whose bond was fixed at $10,000, to sell the coach.

ATHLETE PECULIARLY STRICKEN

St. Paul, July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Donald Hardisty, once a well known athlete, was stricken with a peculiar cramping of the muscles Sunday night and is now in a dangerous condition at Bethesda hospital. Hardisty's muscles contract and relax at intervals, causing him intense pain. The affliction is thought to be due to an injury which he received years ago. A weakening of the heart is supposed to have brought on the attack. The man's condition is said to be serious. He is under the care of Dr. J. J. Platt and Dr. J. P. Shepherd of Indianapolis, an old friend of Hardisty's. Hardisty is an heir of Sir Donald Smith and is well connected in Canada. He was well known in athletic circles. Lately he has been traveling in the United States.

Over Fifty Others Were More or Less Injured.

Accident Occurred at a Plant Near Lowell.

Window Glass Was Broken Twenty Miles Away.

Lowell, Mass., July 29.—An explosion destroyed the magazine of the United States Cartridge company at Tewkesbury today, causing the death of probably twenty-five persons and injury to more than fifty others, setting fire to a number of buildings and generally wrecking houses within a half mile.

The concussion was felt in Boston, forty miles away, and at Exeter, N. H., which is a greater distance from Lowell. At many points a score of miles distant window glass was shattered and other damage done. In some cases there were reports in circulation that there had been an earthquake.

The city was thrown into a panic, and it required every effort of the authorities to establish and maintain anything like order. It became necessary to summon four companies of the state militia. Alarming reports to the effect that over 100 persons had been killed and injured caused widespread confusion. The explosion is thought to have been caused by the jarring of dynamite stored in the magazine by workmen who were making a new floor. The dynamite set off the powder stored in one chamber, and that explosion was followed by another in a second chamber.

The plant of the United States Cartridge company is located in a district known as Riverside Park, in Tewkesbury, just outside of Lowell.

The building in which the explosion occurred was a stone structure about one and a half miles distant from the works of the cartridge company. Within a distance of fifty yards are located half a dozen houses. Within 100 yards there are twenty houses more, and beyond that the buildings are close together. Every structure within a quarter of a mile was torn within and without. Men, women and children who were inside the houses sustained cuts, bruises and broken bones, if they escaped with their lives. Men who lived on streets not far away, who were fortunate enough to escape serious injury, immediately gave themselves over to the work of removing women and children to places of safety, for almost simultaneously with the explosion came flashes from several buildings.

Into the flames and debris scores of men were soon plunging in efforts to save life and property. The wreck was so complete, however, that the work was harrowingly slow. The patrol wagons of the police and teams of all description were brought into use to supplement the hospital ambulances. It was nearly noon before anything like an accurate estimate of the number killed could be obtained.

Previous reports had said that the dead would number seventy-five, but at 11:45 a canvass of the hospitals and inquiry at the police station resulted in a conservative estimate of twenty-five killed and fifty-five injured.

Sixteen victims most seriously hurt were taken to St. John's hospital, where at noon it was said that four would die and that as many more were desperately hurt. The crowds increased momentarily, and it seemed as if all Lowell had suspended business and was at the scene of the catastrophe.

The following are among the dead:

MRS. WILLIAM RIGGS, of Riverside Park.

JAMES GALLOWAY, aged 9.

WILLIAM FLYNN, aged 12.

WILLIAM McDERMOTT, aged 10.

MICHAEL ROGERS, aged 10.

All the boys were in swimming in the Concord river.

Unknown man, driving a grocery wagon.

WILLIAM GALLOWAY.

Six bodies of men working near the powder storehouse were recovered.

Fatally injured: John B. Sullivan, Mrs. Victoria Perrous, —— Gallagher (girl), —— McDermott (girl), —— Sullivan, teamster.

On the way to the fire numerous carriages were met that bore bleeding bodies of victims.

Bodies were taken from the ruins and laid on the grass. Some were mangled beyond recognition. Men and women fainted at what they saw.

The district about the cartridge company's plant is known on the Boston & Maine railroad as South Lowell, but it is locally often called Wigginsville. At one time no buildings stood near the cartridge company's plant, practically, but of late years the section in the vicinity, especially Acton street, has been taken up by persons working in Lowell, who built wooden cottages over several acres of ground. Many of these stood close to the magazines.

Pracically the entire populace of South Lowell and Wigginsville was panic stricken for a time after the explosion. Within the stricken territory those who escaped serious injury fled in panic from their homes.

Before the arrival of ambulances some of the seriously injured were conveyed to boat houses along the Concord river, which had escaped destruction. Physicians who hurried out from the city as the news of the disaster became known, joined with doctors in Wigginsville to make the injured as comfortable as possible. Several of the injured were badly maimed and burned. One man was suffering such intense agony that upon his arrival at the hospital he begged the surgeons to shoot him and end his misery. A large number, however, who were treated at the hospital and by outside physicians, sustained only cuts caused by glass on the hands and faces.

MRS. CUSHMAN K. DAVIS WEDS HUNTER DOLL OF KNOXVILLE

The Widow of the Late Senator From Minnesota Quietly Married at Washington After a Three Months' Acquaintance With the Groom.

Washington, D. C., July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Cushman K. Davis, widow of the late Senator Davis, of Minnesota, was married at noon today to Hunter Doll of Knoxville, Tenn. The wedding was a very quiet affair and took place at the residence of the bride, very few of her friends knowing anything of the affair and no invitations being issued. Mrs. Davis met Mr. Doll about three months ago and the courtship was rapid, it being a case of love at first sight. Mrs. Davis has been quite prominent in Washington, being an exceptionallly handsome woman, and on account of the high position held by her late husband she was prominent not only in social but official life.

DYNAMITE USED TO WRECK MINE

Idaho Springs, Co., July 29.—An explosion at the Sun and Moon mine near here, wrecked the transformer house, set fire to the oil in the aransformers and threatened the destruction of the main shaft house.

The watchman at the mine saw men running away at the time and shot one of them. He was taken in charge and cared for. The mine employed non-union men after a strike. Dynamite is believed to have been used.

The wounded man died today. He was Philip Fire, of the miners' union.

Aldermen Would Hear Sentiment on the Telephone Proposition.

Zenith Company Asks Concessions Other Than Those Granted.

Members of the city council are interested in having the taxpayers in the city fully understand the subject of the citizens' meeting in the council rooms tomorrow evening and turn out to take part in the discussion.

The meeting has been called for the purpose of reaching some decision relative to the new concessions which the Zenith Telephone company has asked for in the proposed passage of the ordinance granting the company the privilege of raising its rate.

The ordinance was supposed to come up at the last council meeting for passage and in its original form it was expected that there would be no opposition to it. The company has, however, asked for other concessions and opinion among the aldermen is divided as to whether the concessions should or should not be granted.

For this reason it is very desirable that the citizens who are now paying for 'phones and whom the concessions will affect, shall turn out at the meeting and make known their opinions.

The Zenith company, as other concessions, wants to raise residence rates and establish a sliding scale., according to the telephones in use, raising the rates as the number of subscribers increases. The company argues that the rates should be raised as business increases, because it costs more to operate.

It is understood that while some of the aldermen are in favor of granting all the concessions possible to the company, others do not favor those now asked and they desire much to get the views of their constituency.

Some people have the idea that the meeting tonight is to decide whether the ordinance sohuld be passed, but the city fathers wish it made clear that the real object is to discuss the proposed new concessions to the ordinance before it is passed.

SHE WORE TROUSERS

And It Was Thought She Had Suicided.

Columbus, Ohio, July 29.—It was because Mrs. Charles Moeller, of Clark's Mills, in this county, believes—or rather did believe—in wearing of male attire at certain times that the countryside near her home was aroused yesterday and the Scioto river dragged for her remains.

When her husband awoke up yesterday morning at an early hour he missed his companion from his side. On the chair near the bed were the garments untouched. Moeller rose and went through the house looking for her, but in vain. He went about calling her name, but there was no response—she had disappeared. Now, thoroughly alarmed, he went to the nearest neighbors and enlisted their support in looking for her. A telephone message was sent to this city asking their son to come out and assist in the work.

After the well had been searched it was decided that she had thrown herself into the river, and poles were secured and prodding begun. In the midst of the hullabaloo Mrs. Moeller stalked into the house wearing a suit of her husband's clothes and carrying two buckets of blackberries, which she had picked while her life partner snored. Removing her spouse's boots she put on her slippers and dismissed the searching party with her thanks for their solicitude.

It is said that Mr. Moeller has not yet made it clear to her why he should have conceived the idea that she had attempted suicide.

SUICIDE'S WILL IS CURIOUS

Remarkable Document By Which He Disposed of Property.

Bloomington, Ill., July 29.—Interest in the suicide of Frederick Schultz, the German farmer of Northeastern McLean county, who was said to have been driven to self-destruction on account of religious differences with his wife, who belonged to the Amish faith, has been revived by the filing of his will for probate. The document is a remarkable one, and may be contested. The writer had written the will just a short time before his death, and it was covered with bloodstains. A verbatim copy is as follows:

"I will end my life. Good-by to the world. I can not live with the woman any more, for she wants to control everything. I can not obey any longer, for I am nearly worn out. I can not stand it to work any more, so I shall end my life. Farewell to all. I will appoint Peter Ringenberger guardian over my family without bond. Let each of the children have one-half of his share after all debts are paid, and the woman the northwest quarter of section two, the home place, as long as she stays a widow. After her death it is to go to the children. If she marries, it is to go to the children at once. The administrator will have power to make loans on the land, and pay debts coming due, but the land is not to be sold, but rented for cash till the youngest child is of age, and then it might be divided if they all desire it, but the boys shall have one-fifth more than the girls, providing they work for the interest of the property until they are 21 years old, as Simon did. The girls have considered themselves of age when 18, therefore the property shall all be appraised and when divided that the children that are married shall have the places they possess. Simon has already gotten $4900. The boys shall have the first chance on the Mc-Lean county property providing that they work for the interest of the estate till of age. Their mother shall have a living out of the forty as long as she stays single, till death, but if she marries again, will forfeit all of her income out of my property for her cruelty to me. I have shed many a tear over it. Farewell to the world and all people. I hope that everybody will strive for peace.

F. W. SCHULTZ."

There are rumors that the will will be fought in the courts owing to its ambiguity. The document indicates in an indefinite way that there were differences between the husband and wife, and it is said by the neighbors that the trouble was due to his refusal to accept the tenets of the Amish sect of which the wife and some of the children were members. The will is a grewsome relic of the horrible deed of the suicide.

COLONELS FIGHT

In Presence of the Governor of Georgia.

Rome, Ga., July 29.—In the presence of Governor Terrel, who came here to visit the state troops in camp, V. T. Sanford and M. B. Eubanks, two of the many colonels on the gubernatorial staff, engaged in a pugilistic contest, which lasted only two rounds, but was fast and furious while it lasted, and resulted in "bunged up" eyes and sadly soiled uniforms.

Cols. Eubanks and Sanford are citizens of Rome, and for some time have not been on speaking terms. Both were arrayed in all the glory of gaudy uniforms to greet the governor. When the governor reached the parade ground the two colonels were thrown together in some way. Angry words passed in an undertone, and then Col. Sanford's right shot out and landed on Col. Eubanks' jaw, and the latter went down. As Col. Eubanks rose his right eye came in contact with Col. Sanford's left. The colonels then clinched, but other colonels prevented further hostilities. A board of honor will probably adjust the matter without recourse to the field of honor.

IS IN NEW HANDS

M. J. Bryan and A. W. Kuehnow Retire From Baseball Ownership.

J. C. McGreevy and E. W. Lyons Buy—Vrn Praagh, Manager.

He has devoted the greater part of his time to the personal management of the team since the last week of May, and some before that.

His duties as general agent of the Wisconsin Central road here, however, will not permit him to continue actively in the baseball management, as the heavy business of mid-summer will commence soon.

Alfred W. Kuehnow, treasurer of the baseball club also disposed of his interests and will sever his connections with the great American game in this city.

The retirement of these two leading spirits of the club, which was effected without any announcement whatever, caused a great deal of surprise about the city to those who heard about it this morning.

The interests of Mr. Bryan were sold to John C. McGreevy, a conductor on the Iron Range railroad, and the interests of Mr. Kuehnow were sold to Edward W. Lyons, manager of the Duluth Lumber company.

L. Van Praagh will have the destiny of the ball team in his hands from now on. He has taken the active management for some few days past, and will now travel with the team and secure the players he decides.

He announced this morning that several new players would be secured in the course of a few days, and the team would close the season in a blaze of glory and victory.

President Bryan took the active management of the Duluth ball team upon the solicitation of several of Duluth's business men, who desired to see the game revived here, and was not especially desirous of assuming the responsibility of Duluth's ending at the end of the season, as he had been in the baseball business before. He took the place somewhat under protest, and worked hard and energetically and untiringly through the season up to a week or so ago, when he decided that he had done all he could toward securing a good team, and directed his attention to other things.

Manager Van Praagh has been associated with Mr. Bryan in the business management of the team all summer, and will continue as such.

The next games for the next month may be expected to be warm ones, if the men in sight can be landed, and Manager Van Praagh said this morning that he believed he could secure them shortly—in a day or two, in fact.

THE SCHEME IS GIGANTIC

Waters of Platte to Be Utilized For Road Network.

Freemont, Neb., July 29.—Work has begun at this place on the survey for a gigantic power canal scheme, which will harness the waters of the Platte and furnish an enormous amount of power for the owners, which will, it is promised, be distributed throughout this section. It is known that the Armour packing company is behind this enterprise and have found in it a place to invest their surplus capital. Naturally as a market for this power the street railways are of first importance.

Now, it is significant that the Armours are the present owners of the controlling interest in the street railway of Kansas ity. It is also significant that recently the Omaha and bridge motor lines were consolidated and purchased by a New York banking house in the interests of —the wise say, Armour. Shortly after this purchase the Omaha line was extended ten miles north to a town named Florence, and it is a fair prediction that this line will be extended further north, possibly to Sioux City. A company has been formed in Sioux City to built an electric line from that point to Homer, Neb., another company contemplates another line south from Omaha; still another has one in view from this city north and south. All that these companies are doing is laying out the plans, looking over the best routes and then reporting the results of their work to—they say "interested capitalists." Some of these companiese are plainly marked by the presence of Armour men.

Even the people, with their brains on summer vacations, can work out that proposition, but thinking out the possibilities to which such an affair might extend is like trying to conceive life everlasting. With a system of electric lines running from Sioux City south to Omaha and thence to St. Joseph and Kansas City under the control of the Armour packing company and with the same people owning a powder plant big enough to run this railway system with plenty of power to spare, it is easy to see where those four cities which are destined to be the great packing centers for the next fifty years will look like four aces in the hands of the Armour company.

The proposed electric line would, of course, carry both freight and passengers and it would naturally be the idea to have the outside traffic amount to enough to pay the cost of maintaining the line, or perhaps at a profit aside from the hauling of all their own freight. In addition to this is the enormous amount of power possible above what they need for their own use, which would be thrown upon the market. This has been scientifically figured out and there is no doubt of the practicability of the scheme. The idea was thought out most completely by the city engineer of Omaha, and the plan would have then been worked out to completion had not the city council of Omaha, for some reason, opposed the project in the interests of the power companies at present in control in the city. The present promoters are believed to be rich enough to obviate this difficulty in securing a franchise in Omaha.

It is not yet certain whether the canal will be built from this point or from Columbus. The Central electric company has surveyed the Columbus route, while the Kelley Engineering company, of New York, has the job of doing the work for the Fremont Canal company. John Fairchild, vice president and secretary of this company, will, with a representative of the Columbus company, and a third member to be chosen later, form a board which will decide the most feasible plan. Most of the work in connection with the survey is being done in New York, the parties now here simply taking the measurements.

According to all indications the Armour people are going into this project alone, and do not intend sharing the pie with the packers' combine. The entire work is, of course, carried on as secretly as possible, for reasons that are self-evident, but the entire scheme as presented here was disclosed during a social conversation by a man who holds a position in close touch with the entire affair and makes his words authoritative.

James is a veteran of the Civil War, who lives in a small hamlet in New Hampshire. The examiners have been taking testimony in his case, and the evidence is conflicting. But the most remarkable testimony of all is given in the following affidavit, to which one of the claimant's neighbors subscribes:

I varily believe that Orville James is fatigued earnin his leavin becos he is too fatt ways 260 pounds he have dropsy but I no he have no dropsy becos he would bust if he had moar inside him than he now have, besides which he are without vitious habits or references. A PECULIAR CASE

Toledo, Ohio, July 29.—If Miss Renesse Cravens, who, until recently, supposed her name to be Renesse Evans, can prove that her mother was the daughter of the late Hon. Hiram P. Evans, who died in Louisiana, the young lady will acquire a sufficient fortune in her own right to prevent the wolf of poverty from ever causing her any great degree of annoyance. The case is a decidely peculiar one. The young lady, who is pretty and refined, was educated in a New Orleans convent, but subsequently, through a train of circumstances, became a trained nurse in a Protestant hospital in the South. For this infraction of religious etiquette, so to speak, the young lady was ostracized by many of her earlier acquaintances. Her life was shaped largely by circumstances, which, after arriving at the age of womanhood seemed to make it necessary for her to earn her own livilhood. That her mother, who died when Miss Cravens was an infant, was formerly a Miss Ewart, and a Northern girl, she had also learned, although, for a time, finding it difficult to harmonize with other facts in her possession.

That her grandfather was a man named Evans she had also in some mysterious manner learned while she was yet a girl in her teens. She had also, within the past few weeks, been told that her grandfather's right name was Ewart, and that for some reason he had gone South when but a young married man, with an infant daughter, deserting family, friends and all who knew him. She was told that he then changed his name to Evans, and thereafter shut himself off from all former associations.

Miss Cravens but recently learned that her own father's name was Evans. She had always been led to believe that her own name was Evans, for reasons she had never been able to induce any one to satisfactorily explain to her. She had also learned, by dint of persistent inquiry at the convent and elsewhere, that her mother's father had time and again refused to have anything to do with his daughter, when, in after years, she succeeded in locating him. He would simply tell her that she only wanted to be recognized because he had money, and that he had no relatives that would ever get a penny of his while he was alive and in his right mind.

All of these facts she gathered on two or three occasions when one of the older sisters at the convent, who had taken a fancy to a friendless girl, would permit herself to be coaxed into talking about her arrival at the institution and her earlier life, of which this one sister appeared to be quite familiar.

Hiram Evans, who had acquired the title of "honorable" by accidental election to the legislature in one of the Southern states many years ago, was a money-making machine—a cold, sordid, morose, calculating, grasping individual, who died with none to mourn him, and his soul saddened by the thought that he could not take his wealth with him across the Great Divide.

The only known relative, except some very far removed, it is said, is this Miss Cravens, or Miss Evans, as she is still called by those who know her. He never saw her from the time he left her an infant in her mother's arms, and only contributed toward her support, as the young lady learns, on a few occasions, after being persistently importuned by the convent authorities to do so.

At the time of her grandfather's death, as she tells the story to friends here, she was nursing in a private family in Macon, Ga. She saw a brief notice of the death in a Southern paper and at first gave the subject little thought. But, like most people whose origin is somewhat in doubt or obscured by lack of detail, and with a meager budget of names and incidents to draw from, her mind was ever ready to grasp anything that might lead to a more thorough knowledge of her relatives or the betterment of her own condition. Confiding her case to a young, but ambitious and hustling attorney, the two began a systematic search for data. That her mother was buried somewhere in Central Ohio she had been told, but it was only through a careful search of the records, coupled with meager information at hand, that she finally discovered that her mother had been buried in what is known as the Bloomfield cemetery, in Morrow county, about two miles west of Sparta. This is not only the largest rural burying ground in Ohio, but one of the oldest. Some of the graves bear tombstones bearing dates back nearly a hundred years.

The old sexton, Ashford Kent, was dead, and has been dead for many years; but with the aid and counsel of Miss Mabel Dorn, of this city, a private nurse who had at one time shared Miss Cravens' lot while in Galveston, during that city's awful extremity, she at last secured information regarding the death and burial of her mother that she believes will be legally sufficient to establish her own identity. With this documentary evidence and other valuable information, she this week returned to the South, where she hopes to establish her right to the estate of the late Hon. Hiram P. Evans, said to be worth about $125,000. It is claimed that bogus claimants are already attempting to usurp her rights, but she is confident of winning the fortune.

CARELESS BOY KNEW HOW.

Smashed the Pitcher at the Proper Time.

"It's a good thing for us, I suppose, that whenever we get it all settled and arranged in our minds that we're too everlastingly bright and crafty to be 'done' by anybody, we usually get a fall that takes the perkiness out of us," said a Washington department store buyer who makes frequent trips to New York to the Sun. "Up to a certain day last week, for example, I had a pretty thorough understanding with myself that there was no old kind of a New York bunko game that I'd bite on. I'd been going to New York too often and for too long a time for anything like that. Well, listen.

"A week ago Monday morning last I was standing, after breakfast, on the Thirty-sixth street side of the Marlborough hotel, in New York, taking a sun bath for myself and mapping out my program for the day. Two or three other men were standing near me doing the same.

"Our attention was lazily enlisted, as we stood there, by the spectacle of a boy wearing a chef's cap and apron, recklessly swinging an empty crockery pitcher above his head. The boy was rigged up like a hotel kitchen apprentice. He moved along Thirty-sixth street from Broadway on his way to Seventh avenue, carrying the large crockery pitcher in his right hand and describing half-arcs and full circles and many strange and curious geometrical figures with it as he swung it through the air, whistling merrily the while.

"'What infernal whelps most boys are, anyhow,' remarked a sporty-looking man standing near me to a plain-looking individual who was standing alongside of him. 'Now just look at that cub fooling with that pitcher—it's a cinch that he'll drop it and smash it to smithereens before he gets to Seventh avenue.'

"'Oh, I dunno,' was the reply of the plain-looking man. 'I guess the kid knows what he's about—he's got a pretty good clutch on the handle of the pitcher. He'll hang onto it, all right.'

"'Bet you five he drops it before he reaches Seventh avenue,' was the quick response of the man with the sporty look.

"'I guess I'll take that bet,' answered the plain-looking man, and he produced his wad. The sporty-looking citizen peeled a V from his roll and both men put up their money with the uniformed carriage opener stationed outside the Marlborough. Then they took up the jog together toward Seventh avenue to keep an eye on the boy, who was still swinging the pitcher wildly. I held my ground and watched the proceeding. It looked like a pretty good bet for the plain-looking man—no idea of a 'frame-up' had percolated through my mind and then—until, when the boy was only about ten feet from the corner of Seventh avenue, the pitcher flew out of his hand as he was trying some singularly difficult piece of juggling with it and was dashed into a hundred fragments on a doorstep. The sporty-looking man and the plain-looking individual returned to where I was standing and the former took the two Vs from the stakeholder with a grin, saying:

"'I thought sure I was going to lose out on that when the kid got so near Seventh avenue without anything happening to the pitcher.'

"'Well, perhaps I am thicker than I have any right to be, but, even then, it did not occur to me that this was all a prearranged scheme on the part of the sporty-looking man and the boy in the kitchen apprentice's make-up.

"Two days later I was standing along side a hotel at the corner of Eighth avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, in Harlem, waiting for a down-town electric car, when I saw that self-same youngster, with the identical kitchen apprentice's toggery, swinging along Eighth avenue, again wildly swinging a pitcher. Then I cast my eyes about me, and there, only three feet to the left of me, and leaning against an L stanchion, was the sporty-looking man. He blinked lazily at me when he saw that I had observed the boy with the pitcher.

"'What infernal whelps most boys are, anyhow,' he said to me in precisely the same words and the same tone he had used in making the remark a couple of days before to the plain-looking man who had lost his V. 'Now, just look at that cub fooling with that pitcher—it's a cinch that he'll drop it and smash it to smithereens before he reaches the next corner.'

"'What a foxy way this fellow has of making a living,' I mused. 'But I'll just give him a little run for his money, so I will.'

"'That's the betting end of it,' I said aloud to the sporty-looking man, 'that I'd be willing to take myself.'

"'Oh, well,' he replied laughingly, 'any old thing to pass the time away—it's about an even thing, one way or the other, I suppose.'

"'Just about,' said I.

"'Well,' he said, good-naturedly, then, 'I'll bet you a V that he doesn't smash it before he reaches the next corner.'

"'You're on,' said I, and we put up our five spots with the newsdeater on the corner.

"'This,' said I to myself, as I fell into step with the sporty-looking man, 'is like wheedling gran'ma out of a nickel for cookies. There's no way that this crafty coon can pass the tip to that kid not to drop that pitcher, according to the usual frame-up, without my getting next to the dodge and calling him down on it. I think I see a new five-dollar bonnet for myself this afternoon.'

"My reflections along this pleasant line, however, were interrupted. The boy was already crossing the street, still swinging the pitcher wildly and whistling with all the fervor of youth—and I had lost.

"How has the sporty-looking man passed the signal to the kid not to drop the pitcher on that occasion? I gave it up. I didn't stop to inquire of him. I felt too cheap to stop for any purpose whatever, but swung on board the down-town surface car with a whole lot of the kinks of conceit combed out of me."

GREAT FAIR RECORDS.

Every fair or exposition, international or national, is announced as "the greatest yet," and if all the figures of preliminary announcements were justified, the success of each succeeding fair would be so great as to make impossible any serious effort to compete with it at a succeeding one, says the New York Sun.

The St. Louis Fair next year will be, it is announced, twice as large as any former exhibition. The Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia covered 236 acres; the Paris Exposition of 1890-1900 covered 336 acres, the Columbian Exposition at Chicago 633 acres, but the new World's Fair at St. Louis will cover 1180 acres.

The construction of the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition cost $8,500,000, that of the Paris Exposition $9,000,000, and of the Columbian Exposition $27,350,000. The estimated cost of the St. Louis Fair is $30,000,000.

Before the exposition gates are open, the city of St. Louis will have expended, and is now committed to the expenditure of $20,000,000. Of this amount $5,000,000 was appropriated for the fair through the Municipal Assembly; citizens of St. Louis raised $5,000,000 more by private subscription. By popular vote at a special election charter amendments were carried which will enable the city to expend $10,000,000 more.

The attendance at the Vienna Exposition of 1873 was 7,254,687, and the receipts $6,971,832; at Philadelphia in 1876 the attendance was 9,910,966 and the receipts $3,813,725; in Paris, 1878, the attendance was 16,032,725 and receipts $2,531,650; in Paris, fourteen years ago there was 28,149,353 attendance and $8,390,000 receipts, and in 1893 at Chicago 27,539,521 attendance and $14,117,332 receipts.

RAZORS DON'T GET TIRED.

"Do you know why we dip a razor in warm water before we begin shaving, and do you know why some ignorant men say a razor is 'tired?'" asked the barber, according to the Buffalo Express. "Well, this is all due to the fact that a razor is a saw, not a knife, and it works like a saw, not like a knife. Examined under the microscope, its edge, that looks so smooth to the naked eye, is seen to have innumerable and fine saw teeth. When these teeth get clogged with dirt all the honing and stropping in the world will do no good—the razor is dull, and nothing will sharpen it. Then is the time the ignorant say it is 'tired' and stop using it, but the wise know it is only clogged.

"The wise, though, don't suffer their razors to get clogged. They dip them in warm water before they use them, and thus the teeth are kept clean. It is because a razor is a saw that lather is used on the beard. The latter doesn't soften the beard, as so many people think; it stiffens it, so that it will present a firm and resisting surface to the razor."

GIVE THEM A RIDE

Business Men's Scheme to Bring Customers to Duluth.

Would Give Very Cheap Round Trip Excursions Here.

A suggestion has been made that is likely to be taken up by local merchants with a view to increasing their custom from nearby lake towns.

The idea is to charter a boat, such as one of Capt. Singer's vessels, and give weekly excursions at a very low rate, the difference to be made up by subscriptions among the merchants.

For instance, an excursion could be given from Two Harbors to Duluth, at a fare of 10 cents for the round trip, on some week day each week, giving the excursionists time enough in Duluth to do shopping.

This would not pay for the hire of the vessel, of course, and the merchants who would be expected to better their receipts by the coming of the excursionists would be expected to pay the difference.

The idea had been broached by one of the local merchants, who is taking it up with some of the others. It has just been started, and has not assumed any very definite shape as yet, but those who have considered it appear to think well of it, and to believe that it would pay to carry it out.

The belief of those who favor the scheme is that these excursions would be well patronized, owing to the extremely low rate that would be offered, and that would mean business for Duluth retailers. Many residents of nearby towns like to come to Duluth to do their shopping, but they can hardly afford to do it and pay railroad fare.

The plan may be tried on Two Harbors, and if it is a success it may be extended to some of the Wisconsin towns that are not so near as the lake county town.

THEY WANT MUCH MONEY

Personal Injury Claimants Ask $19,000 From Street Railway.

Two personal injury suits have been begun in district court against the Duluth-Superior Traction company, by people who claim to have been injured through the negligence of the company. The two claimants ask for an aggregate of $19,000.

Sadie Wadleigh wants $16,000 from the company. She alleges that on June 29, 1903, she took passage on a Superior street car at Second avenue west to go to Eighteenth avenue west. At the latter avenue she was about to get off the car having stopped, when, as she was coming out of the car into the vestibule, another car came up behind and collided with her car, throwing her violently to the ground.

She alleges that she was severely injured, being knocked senseless, and that she has been confined to her bed and her home ever since. She asserts that she has been permanently injured in health, and that she will never be physically as she was before the accident. Therefore, she asks for $12,000 actual damages and $4000 exemplary damages, or $16,000 in all. John Jenswold, Jr., is her attorney.

Frans O. Ehnebom is another personal injury claimant, and he sues on behalf of his daughter, aged six years. He alleges that on March 20, 1903, while the girl was crossing Main street on Connor's point, in Superior, she stumbled and fell in front of a car, which struck her and gave her severe injuries. It is claimed that the car was traveling at an unlawful rate, and that it had time to stop before it reached the child. Ehnebom asks $3000 damages. John Jenswold, Jr., is also his attorney.

GUILTY OF ADULTERY

English Court Decides North Dakota Divorces Are Invalid.

London, July 29.—The validity of Dakota divorces in England was again raised today before the president of the divorce court, Sir Francis Jeune, in the suit for divorce brought by D. S. Constandinidi against his wife, who is a daughter of Stephen Ralli, a member of the firm of Ralli Bros., well known in New York as well as in London. The husband charged his wife with bigamously marrying Dr. Lance, the family physician. Mr. Constandinidi obtained a judicial separation from his wife in 1899.

"This delicately-nurtured lady of Belgravia went to a wild district of the earth, emigrated to the half-settled state of Dakota, became an American citizen, stayed six months there, fraudulently obtaining a so-called divorce and married the co-respondent there, thus using the lax Dakota laws for her own purpose.

"This," concluded Mr. Walton, "was fraud on civilized jurisprudence."

The jury found the respondent and co-respondent guilty of adultery, awarded $125,000 damages against Dr. Lance, and also found the petitioner guilty of the counter charge of adultery. His petition, therefore, was dismissed and argument on the points of law involved was postponed until tomorrow.

THISTLE LOSES TOPMAST.

New York, July 29.—The schooner yacht Thistle, of the Atlantic Yacht club, finished off Scotland lightship in the 290 mile ocean race, from Brentons reef lightship, at 9:25 this morning. Her forestopmast had been carried away about five feet above the masthead. The schooner yacht Ingomar finished first in the race having arrived at the Scotland lightship at 6:45 last evening.

MANY ARE COMING

Omaha and Great Northern Are Both Planning Excursions.

Harvest Demand Is Clearing Laborers From the Streets.

The Omaha railroad will haul about 1500 people into Duluth Friday afternoon and evening, on two trains from Wisconsin points north of Elroy, if the weather continues pleasant.

A week from Saturday the Great Northern will bring about 2000 people here from Sioux City, Sioux Falls, Yankton and intermediate points, and this will be one of the best excursions of the summer on this road.

On both the excursions the rates will be very low and the Great Northern's trains that bring the crowd from the West will consist almost entirely of sleepers.

The railroad men are in a quandary. For a long time the Commercial club has specifically requested that excursions be divided up, so that no two roads flood the town with passengers at the same time. The reason for this is that it is known the city cannot accommodate all the people two or three roads can bring in and some might have to walk the streets because of the lack of sleeping quarters.

It has been sugested that the Great Northern road leave the sleeping cars open to the tourists at the station, and in case they are unable to get sleeping quarters, permit them to sleep in the berths they used on the trip up in the cars.

The railroads have an interest in this plan also, because they feel that the excursion business might be injured if too many people have to walk the streets here. They feel that after a man has made one trip and has been required to stay on the streets all night, he will be a hard proposition for the passenger agents to go up against when they are getting up another excursion next year. The excursionists also form a not very exalted opinion of Duluth itself, under these circumstances, and they believe it will be beneficial to all interests, including those of the hotels and lodging houses, to permit the tired to sleep in their cars.

The Commercial club is making arrangements to care for the crowd that will come Friday and stay until Sunday afternoon from the sister state, Wisconsin, and it is likely that there will be little trouble in securing plenty of accommodations for them.

HARVEST HANDS GOING.

Demand Has Cleaned Duluth of Surplus Labor.

No longer are the Bowery sidewalks thronged with idlers—strong men with their hands in their pockets and peculiar, foreign pipes in their mouths and heavy mackinaws on when the thermometer is 88 degrees above.

Those who are left look forlorn and out of place, and they are drifting one by one into the employment offices, where the agents are offering large wages for labor in the Dakota wheat fields.

The demand is becoming more urgent every hour, and the price of day labor may go up to a figure much higher than the highest now being paid.

The harvest hands will be employed three or four weeks, and those who go from Duluth will have to pay $6 each way. The wages will amount to in the neighborhood of $100, from which it will be necessary to take out car fare. It is a windfall to many.

Last night the Great Northern road sent out two carloads of men to the wheat fields in Northern North Dakota. Other roads are carrying many, and yesterday and today the number to leave will be 200.

It is said that there is a shortage of labor in the local field, which will not be relieved until the wages being paid now are off.

Another big delegation of harvest hands will leave for the Dakotas this evening.

It is estimated that 20,000 men will be needed to harvest the wheat crop this year.

Railroad Notes.

Assistant General Freight Agent Henry E. Still of the Northern Pacific road was in the city today, looking over the work on the new freight house and also local freight conditions. He visited several shippers in company with General Agent T. E. Blanche this morning.

Vice President J. M. Hannaford of the Northern Pacific road, who has just returned from a visit to the wheat fields along his line through Western Minnesota and the Dakotas, said upon his return that the wheat crop would be large this year, but not larger than the average, in his belief.

WILSON FOR PRESIDENT.

Cincinnati, July 29.—The trustees of Lane seminary have elected the Rev. Dr. Samuel Tyndall Wilson head of Marysville college, Tennessee, president and professor of systematic theology in place of Henry Goodwin Smith. Dr. Wilson has not yet accepted.

MRS KELLY A WITNESS.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 29.—Mrs. Blanche Kelly, wife of D. J. Kelly, representative of the baking powder trust, who is here to identify the letters written to her husband by former Lieutenant Governor John A. Lee, was today to appear as a witness before the Cole county grand jury, which convenes at Jefferson City next Monday.

FIRE AT COLEBROOKE, N. H.

Colebrooke, N. H., July 29.—Several business blocks were burned here early today, and it is thought that Jesse Forristall, owner of the Cobden block, in which the flames originated, lost his life. At one time the village was in danger but was saved. Mr. Forristall was seen to enter the building during the fire.

FLOATING BODY

Remains of an Unidentified Man Picked Up In Canal.

His Description Does Not Fit Anybody Who Is Missing.

The crew of the tug Carpenter of the Independent Towing company, picked up a floating body in the canal at 11.30 o'clock this morning.

The body was taken to the undertaking establishment of Flood & Horgan, where it now lies, awaiting identification.

It is the body of a man about 30 years of age. He was of light complexion and wore a red mustache and close cut hair. The body is five feet eight inches and weighs about one hundred and seventy pounds.

In his pocket were found a knife, a briar wood pipe, a purse, containing a five-cent piece, and a silver open-faced watch.

The watch had an Elgin movement, number 9601320. The face had the Arabic figures, and the back was dust proof, screwing on. On the back was a representation in gold of two men sawing a log. The hands were stopped at 8.32.

The man wore an ordinary workingman's clothes in good condition. He had also a pair of shoes, that had been worn but a few times.

His body has no peculiar marks on it with the exception of his right knee joint, which has been cut on the outside at some time in his life, and had been left stiff and drawn up from the effects of the wound.

Those who saw the body picked up thought it was that of Patrick Delaney, the fireman who was drowned from the tug Merrill, but those who knew Delaney, denied it, upon seeing the body.

William Asher of the Bethel association, remembered seeing the man in attendance at some of the meetings in the branch Bethel.

Mr. Mackenzie, a carpenter, living at First avenue west and Second street and who is a regular attendant at the Bethel meetings, had approached the man and asked him to attend the meetings regularly and stop drinking. The man had replied that he was going to get 'fixed up and stop.' Mr. Asher did not know the man's name, nor did the man seem to be acquainted with any of the attendants at the meetings, generally coming alone.

Patrick Sheehan is another missing man, and his description answered to him in many particulars, except that he had no lame leg.

RANGE OF WILD ANIMALS.

Some Girdle Globe Others In Small Area.

Our more or less indigent friend the monkey is found in every continent except Australia, but his largest habitat is in Africa, says the New York Sun.

He is confined in North America chiefly to the long peninsula from Mexico to Panama that unites the two Western continents. He is found in Europe only in the extreme southern part of Spain, along the straits of Gibraltar, where tourists who have time to wander among the forests overlooking the sea will discover him leaping from branch to branch as he does in tropical Africa.

Monkeys are very numerous along the northwest coast of South America, but are not found west of the Andes from Northern Peru to the south end of the continent. Their home in South America is chiefly in the forests of Venezuela throughout the great Amazon basin and along the fluvial systems of the upper half of the Paraguay and the Parana rivers. A little south of the junction of these two rivers they disappear, and the greater part of Uruguay and Argentina regard them as a curiosity to be exhibited in traveling shows.

The monkey lives in the forests of nine-tenths of Africa, from the mountains of the Atlas ranges in the north to the Orange river of the south; and variety throughout India, Burma and Cochin China, the islands of the Indian archipelago and parts of Southern China and Japan. Strange to say, he draws the line at New Guinea and the neighboring tropical coasts of Northern Australia, where he is conspicuous for his absence, though the conditions there seem to be favorable for his prosperity.

The Indian elephant is found throughout that peninsula and also in Burma, Siam, and the French East Indies, but his range among the islands of the archipelago is confined to Sumatra and Borneo. He is not known in Java.

There seems to be no climatic reason why he should not have appeared on the other islands of the East Indies. His home in Asia extends about 17 degrees of latitude further north than that of his African cousin, who was once numerous among the Atlas mountains, near the Mediterranean; but, having been exterminated there, his most northern range is only about 15 degrees north of the equator.

He roams through the Soudan and the whole of Central Africa, from the neighborhood of Timbuktu and Lake Chad as far south as the tropic of Capricorn in South Africa. Not many years ago the African elephant was browsing on the site of what is now the city of Durban, on the South African coast, but he was hunted so persistently that he has entirely disappeared in the southern part of Africa, and is now found not nearer than 1500 miles north of Cape Town.

The polar bear will not wander very far from the ice oceans of the North. The result is that his habitat is extremely narrow, though it girdles the world in the Arctic regions.

He wanders all along the northern coasts of the continents and the shores of the Arctic islands. Peary has seen him on the edge of the most northern land yet discovered around the north coast of Greenland.

If we were to visit Iceland for a look at the polar bear we should have to go to the north coast to see him. The waters washing the other coasts of the island appear to him a little too warm for comfort. This is natural, for the south coasts are under the influence of the warmer waters of the Atlantic, and the polar bear cannot understand why anyone should enjoy life in such an uncomfortably hot climate.

We have the skunk all to ourselves in North America. He lives in Canada as far north as the upper part of the Mackenzie river, and is distinctively a North American animal.

He is found throughout our broad domain from Portland, Me., to Oregon and from Florida to Los Angeles. For some reason he seems to have a prejudice against Nova Scotia and is not known in New Foundland.

The skunk is really a very respectable beast and cannot be severely blamed for making himself obnoxious to his enemies. Some bold experimenters assert that the skunk is very good eating.

There are just four regions in which the wild African ostrich is now found. He lives in considerable numbers in Arabia where he has been little hunted. In Africa his most northern habitat is the Scudan and the southern part of the Sahara from the Red sea almost to the Atlantic ocean.

He does not live in the excessively moist regions of Central Africa, but in the drier countries between the Indian ocean and the Nile he is found in considerable numbers. His fourth home in Africa is in the great dry districts of German West Africa, from the Atlantic ocean more than half way across the continent.

He was long ago driven out of the thirst lands of Cape Colony, for hunters became too numerous for him. The fact that wild ostriches are always killed to obtain their plumage has unfortunately caused a great diminution among them; and the prospect is that in time they will be entirely replaced by the domesticated ostrich now living on the ostrich farms of Cape Colony far south of any of the regions where the wild bird is found.

The habitat of the elder duck, whose down is so highly valued, practically coincides with that of the polar bear. It is found on all Artic coasts, but also lives considerably south of the southern limits of the polar bear. The time was when the elder duck girdled all the northern coast lines of the world with its myriad nests; but the bird has been so mercilessly hunted that it has now disappeared from thousands of beetling cliffs along the sea where it was formerly known.

Probably no famous bird has a smaller habitat than the bird of paradise, whose beautiful feathers are so highly prized in the millinery trade. No one knows why the varieties of this beautiful bird are confined to the island of New Guinea and the neighboring coasts of Australia. There are many other islands not far away where the conditions would seem to be equally favorable to their existence, but they are not found among them; and if we should ever see a hunter of the bird of paradise we would know that he was a native of New Guinea or the neighboring mainland of Australia, or had visited those regions.

Everybody has heard that the cowry shell is used as money over a wide part of the Western Soudan. It came to be regarded on account of its shape and sizeas a very convenient medium of exchange. But if the cowry shell might have been picked up in bushel baskets by any one strolling along the African coasts it would, of course, have been valueless as money. If the shell were very easy to get so that every pickaninny might accumulate large quantities of it nobody would give his ivory, vegetables or skins in exchange for it.

The cowry shell came to have value in much the same way that value has been attached to gold. It was regarded by the West Africans who saw it as a convenient form of money; but it was difficult to obtain it. As the article was desired it came to have value just as anything does which men desire to possess.

The cowry shell is found only on the coasts of a number of islands off the southwest shores of India. It had to be carried thousands of miles to the west coast of Africa, where there was a demand for it, and so real value became attached to it and could be used as money.

The time came, however, when on account of the large profit derived from the transportation of cowry shells to West Africa that supply became greater than the demand. Naturally the price of cowry money was reduced and West Africa passed through a financial crisis which was never adequately reported in the newspapers.

Cowry money became so cheap that there was little temptation even to steal it. This state of affairs put an end to the importation of the cowry shells and no more was shipped until equilibrium had been restored between supply and demand.

This chapter in the history of cowry money is very similar to that of silver money in recent years when the over supply of silver cut in two the price of silver bullion and led to great fluctuations in the value of silver coin.

THE VIRTUE OF POTATOES.

One morning early, we began to plant the shrubs, says Country Life in America. "Where will ye have the rosey dandrums?" was my greeting from Thomas as I entered the garden. Having noticed from the breakfast table that he had slyly buried something at the bottom of each hole prepared for the planting, I waited my chance the first minute he was out of sight, dropped on my knees, felt around in the soft soil at the bottom of the hole and unearthed a potato. Another hole and still another was examined. Yes, there was a potato in each; he must have wasted a bushel!

"The mass," I said, when he had returned with a load from the compost heap, "what are these potatoes doing down here?"

"Divil a tree will grow in Orchard without wan," he explained. "How is that?" I asked, in darkest ignorance.

"Ye see, mum, the patatey sprouts first off, thin, begorrah, it lifts the leafs into the tree and obliges it to push up thruout." As a matter of fact, we did not lose a tree or shrub, in spite of the long drought.

Noldin Loses Game to Grand Forks In the First.

McCoy Finishes and Does Fine Work—Duluth and Fargo Tied.

NORTHERN LEAGUE.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Winnipeg	45	16	.738
Grand Forks	37	23	.617
Crookston	36	25	.590
Duluth	33	26	.560
Fargo	32	26	.500
Superior	25	42	.359

Noldin lost yesterday's game for Duluth against Grand Forks, and he pitched but one inning. In that time he allowed four hits, gave three men bases on balls, and five runs were scored against him.

McCoy, the emergency pitcher, was then pressed into service, and he was the hero of the game, for Grand Forks scored but four runs after that, while Duluth chalked up 7. In the eighth inning McCoy slammed out a home run and brought in three scores. Sessions was a little off color, but played a heady game nevertheless. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Duluth	7	9	4

Batteries: Noldin, McCoy and Crippen; Sessions and Mullane.

Foulkes, of Fargo, and Morris, of Superior, both southpaws, had a battle royal at Fargo yesterday and though Fargo won it was through the ill-luck, rather than the letting up of any of the steam which Morris had on. He allowed but one base on balls, but this was followed by a rank error by Page and then one of the three hits of the game brought in the only two runs scored. Foulkes allowed but two hits and Fargo played an errorless game. The fielding on both sides was brilliant and there were sensational double plays. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Superior	0	2	2

Batteries: Fargo—Foulkes and Barthron; Superior—Morris and Howard.

Winnipeg and Crookston played a close game yesterday with Bemis and Freeman in the box. Both men were hit rather freely and the bases were filled several times. Winnipeg placed its hits to best advantage and was favored somewhat by luck. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Crookston	2	8	2
Winnipeg	4	7	3

Batteries—Freeman and Edwards; Bemis and Rogers.

McCoy will get a great welcome from the fans when he returns. On the trip he has been batting wonderfully, being there with the goods when they are needed. His performance yesterday in the box shows, too, that he has lost none of his cunning at twirling and that he is an excellent emergency pitcher.

Noldin is not making good in the way that the fans looked for. Wildness has been characteristic of his work from the start. It was thought when he first came here that it was due to his having been out of the game for a couple of weeks and the change of climate, but he does not seem to pick up. His work in the first inning at Grand Forks yesterday was the limit.

Murphy, the Duluth third baseman, is ill with a high fever and will be laid up about three weeks.

The resignation of Manager Scott Karns, of the Grand Forks team, has been accepted and E. C. Cooper chosen to fill his place. Capt. Cole was made assistant manager and will be in charge of the team when Mr. Cooper cannot be with it.

The Grand Forks Herald says that Bemidji is disgusted because Grand Forks made no effort to put up a fast game of ball at that place Sunday when it played against St. Cloud. McKenna, who pitched, was released from Grand Forks a week ago. Scharnweber, shortstop, was the only man who played in his regular position.

Duluth and Fargo are now tied in the percentage column with a very good chance for Duluth falling into fifth place for the Cardinals have the Champions to go against now.

THE JOBBERS' LEAGUE.

Best Game of the Season Scheduled For Saturday.

Great interest is being manifested in the baseball game to be played Saturday afternoon, between the F. A. Patrick & Co. and Kelley-How-Thomson nines. The latter team has proven the strongest in the league, but are not all over confident of winning the coming game. The dry goods men have been materially strengthened since July 1, by the acquisition of Patrick and Wernham, two good players. The former for the last two years has played first base for the university of Chicago team, and Wernham up to the date of coming to Duluth played short for the university of Illinois. Patrick as captain of the team has shown good results. The team work has been greatly strengthened and the boys are playing good fast ball. McDougall, a well known local player and former pitcher has joined the pitching staff of the dry goods men and is a strong factor in the game.

The hardware men are in good condition and manager Berini looks forward with confidence to maintaining the high standard already attained.

The management of the jobbers' league expect a large attendance at Saturday's game and with this end in view has secured the regular league grounds at the Athletic park for the occasion.

EVEN AFTER DEATH

Barbers Have Jurisdiction Over Patron, Say Unions.

Trenton, N. J., July 29.—Negotiations between local unions lasting several months have resulted in an official decision by the Central Labor union that the jurisdiction of barbers over their patrons continues even after death. The question was raised by a complaint of the Barbers' union that local undertakers were allowing their employes to officiate as barbers.

CAR WHEEL CONSOLIDATION.

New York, July 29.—The proposed merger of car wheel companies is nearing completion, according to a dispatch from Rochester where appraisement committees are at work. Ten companies will be taken into the consolidation including plants at Buffalo, Wilmington, Baltimore, Boston and several western cities. Saving in freight charges through the division of territory is said to be one of the chief objects to be attained.

BRUTALLY TORTURED.

A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equaled. Joe Golobick, of Colusa, Calif., writes: "For fifteen years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me, though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and Kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists.

SALES OF LUMBER

Some of Fair Size Reported to Have Been Made.

Eastern Buyers Claiming That Lumber Here Is All Sold.

Lumber sales have been picking up in the local market during the last few days, although Eastern buyers are spreading the report that there is little lumber at the head of the lakes docks that is not marked sold.

The Merrill & Ring Mill company is reported to have sold 2,000,000 of No. 3 and better, the Lesure Lumber company about 500,000 feet of the same grade and smaller quantities are said to have been disposed of by a few other concerns. A few sales have been reported of lath and singles in small quantities and scattering lots.

While the bulk of the sawed lumber is not yet dry enough for shipping, it is rapidly getting in condition and augurs well for a lively shipping movement another month.

The lumber movement at the head of the lake for this month, with a few more days to go, will show up about 42,000,000 to 45,000,000 feet. No change has been experienced in the tonnage market or vessel situation.

While some of the harbor mills have been curtailing their season's cut by taking off the night shifts, the interior mills are cutting all the lumber possible. The mill at Tower has started up again after a short close down for repairs. The two mills at Hibbing, one at Virginia, those at Cloquet, Scanlon and Lake Nebagamon are all very busy.

Nolan Bros. & Laird, who are manufacturing at Skibo, on the St. Louis river, are shipping about 1,500,000 feet per month from that place over the Duluth & Iron Range road. The shipments are made quite close up to saw.

The Duluth Log company has completed its shipment of ties and posts from Drummond and will put in camps in the same locality the coming winter.

The Lake Superior Piling company has established a large camp on the South Shore road this side of Nebagamon, and is getting out a large quantity of piling this summer.

The McAlpine Lumber company has bought about two miles of steel rail for its spurs north of Highland, and the track is now being laid to the timber.

Reports from the West indicate that the Potlach Lumber company, which was organized by Henry Turrish, formerly of Cook & Turrish, and the Weyerhaeuser interests, is causing quite a stir in lumber circles. The company took over the holdings of the Wisconsin Log and Lumber company and two other concerns. Last week it completed a deal for 13,000 more acres of timber land at Moscow, Idaho, at a consideration of over $250,000. Palouse, a town about fifty miles south of Spokane, is the center of the company's operations, and is said to be coming to the front among the lumber towns of the far Northwest.

LAW AND ORDER IS TRIUMPHANT

The President of Peru Proclaims a State of Peace.

New York, July 29.—In his message to congress, which body has just convened, President Romana declares, cables the Lima, Peru, correspondent of the Herald that the state of peace now prevalent proclaims the definite triumph of law and order in Peru, after a wave of political feeling which was never more threatening. In view of the declarations recently made by Chili in Santiago and Buenos Ayres, Peru is disposed, says the message, to renew the negotiations for a settlement of the long standing boundary dispute.

In reference to the financial affairs of the country, the president said both the income and expenditures were less during the year than had been provided for in the budget, and there is a favorable balance of more than one million dollars.

NIGHT WAS HER TERROR.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Appelgate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. HERMAN IS SLOW

In Complying With the Conditions Imposed By Wynne.

New Bids For Printing Money Order Blanks Possible.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The delay in the signing of the contract for printing the money order blanks has caused inquiries to be made by prominent printing houses throughout the country as to the possibility of new bids being advertised for by the postoffice department. The contract was awarded to Paul Herman on July 1, but Herman has yet been unable to satisfy the conditions imposed upon him by First Assistant Postmaster General Wynne, with which he must comply before Mr. Wynne will sign the contract.

Herman has been to Washington twice since he was awarded the contract, requesting an extension of the time for fulfilling the conditions, which would indicate that he has found it a greater task than he thought for, to establish a complete lithographing and printing plant, and secure skilled union workmen, and arrange to bind and ship 2000 in money order books a day, all within the two months time allotted. While the situation has not yet reached an acute stage much uneasiness is manifested by those familiar with the money order business, over Herman's delay. Little information can be secured, either here or in New York as to his possible equipment or regarding his facilities for executing the contract, but it is well known to the printing trade that the assembling of the machinery and the securing of the employes necessary to a task of this magnitude, within such a limited time, would tax the resources of a large establishment with considerable capital. Consequently, the opinion is freely expressed by political workmen at the government printing office, who were engaged on the printing of these blanks when it was done at that office, that it will be impossible for Herman to begin furnishing the blanks on Sept. 1, in accordance with his contract. He has less than six weeks in which to begin the delivery of the books and it requires three weeks from the time work is commenced on the books until they are ready for delivery. Consequently, Herman will have to begin printing within three weeks.

Because of the clamor over the letting of the contract and Herman's representations that he could save the government $40,000 to $60,000 on the four-years' contract, the postoffice department has granted him all the favors consistent with the strictest interpretation of the law, but the fact that if he should fail to deliver the books promptly the money-order business will be seriously crippled, if not entirely suspended, has caused much apprehension on account of his delay. The specifications provide that each proposal must be accompanied by a satisfactory guarantee that the bidder will "within ten days after the date of notification of an award having been made by the postmaster general, execute a contract in accordance with the terms of the proposal," under the penalty that "the guaranty to accompany bids must be in the penal sum stipulated, * * * the amount of which shall be forfeited if the contract be not executed."

With his bid Herman gave a bond of $5000 furnished by a bonding company, that he would execute the contract within ten days, in accordance with the specifications, but although over three weeks have elapsed he has not executed the contract and yet his $5000 bonds has not been forfeited.

DORA CLAY BROCK

Says General Treated Her as a Daughter.

Lexington, Ky., July 9.—Mrs. Dora Clay Brock, says the report that she will claim that her 6-year-old son, Cassius Marcellus Clay Brock, is the heir of Gen. Marcellus Clay, of White Hall, who died last week, leaving a will which the children will contest, is untrue. She says she never occupied the relation of wife to Gen. Clay.

"He loved me, and I tried to love him. He looked upon me as a child and cared for me as he would his own daughter," she said today. "He bought me toys and candy and sat me on his knee and told me stories of great work in behalf of the negro before the war and of his great times in Russia, where he was a favorite in the court.

"He would talk to me by the hour when we were alone, and finally he would send me off to bed, retiring in his own room. Sometimes in the night he would come to see if I was comfortable and spread blankets over me."

MUTINEERS IN ZION

Must Hereafter Sell Out at Actual Cost.

Chicago, July 29.—Trouble with mutinous members of his flock at Zion City caused John Alexander Dowie, "Elijah II.," yesterday to state in plain language what those who did not obey the rules could do. Summing it all up, he told them to get out.

"Some may complain that I am judge in Zion City," he said. "You would better believe that I am. I was put here by God to be judge. I know the laws of God, and so I arranged it that when you took your lease for 100 years, you took it in the name of the Lord, and with the covenant that you would obey God and do right. When you break that covenant you break your lease, and you have no more right to hold land in Zion City.

"The only thing left to do is to wind up your affairs and get out. I have not yet been unwilling to buy a man out, paying him every cent he spent in purchasing a lease in Zion City, and the cost of his building. But in almost every case when they went they sold for much more than they paid. That is one thing that I have regretted, that the devil has made a profit out of us.

"I intend to stop that from now on by telling our people not to buy bad persons' property beyond its cost. In future when a person disobeys the law of God and gets drunk, commits adultery, lies or steals, I shall say, 'We will pay you what you paid, and not one cent more. Then go.'"

GORHAM MURDERED.

Son Searching Day and Night For the Criminals.

Chicago, July 29.—Certain that his aged father, whose body was found in the Fox river, at Geneva, Ill., a week ago, was murdered, Ira L. Gorham, of this city, is spending his days and nights in a search for the criminals. Working with the state's attorney of Kane county, he is collecting evidence which he hopes will fully establish the fact of the murder and bring the murderers to justice.

Learning that the description of the body answered to that of his father, Mr. Gorham sent his brother and nephew to exhume the remains. After some difficulty with the deputy coroner they succeeded in uncovering the body, which had been carelessly buried, and fully identified it. To satisfy himself and to discover what evidence existed for a theory of murder, Mr. Gorham went to Geneva and again exhumed the body. Three swellings on the skull and a long gash in the neck told plainly a tale of murder. The authorities of Aurora, St. Charles and Geneva were called upon and a thorough investigation has been set on foot.

LIQUOR DEALERS CHEATED

By Getting Short Measure In Whisky Barrels.

Philadelphia, July 29.—Frauds which it is claimed will result in a loss of millions of dollars to retail liquor dealers in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburg, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and other cities, have been unearthed as a result of investigation into the workings of the government gaugers by secret service men from Washington.

In every large city in the country it is said saloonkeepers have been paying for thousands of gallons of whisky they did not get. As a result of the investigation here during the last two years four government gaugers were recently suspended indefinitely. They are J. J. Mack, William L. Medora, Raymond Jones and R. L. Sheridan, who all protest that they are entirely innocent of any intention of wrong doing. Wholesale decapitations of offending gaugers in other places have resulted.

Two years ago a Philadelphia saloonkeeper, after emptying a barrel of whisky noticed that the government figures stamped on the barrel marked its weight at seventy pounds. When he weighed the barrel he found it actually weighed eighty-two pounds. He realized that he had paid for twelve pounds of whisky he had not received—a gallon and a half. He investigated further and found he had been swindled out of several hundred gallons of whisky in this way. He reported the matter to Washington, and an investigation resulted in astounding developments.

The inference is drawn that the gaugers and the rectifiers shared the profits from the scheme. Regarding this feature of the matter, however, the officials here refuse to give any information.

FOR NEXT SUMMER

Manager Marshall Already Planning For Attractions For Lyceum.

Engages Melbourne MacDowell Company—Will Have Opera Also.

Manager C. A. Marshall closed a contract with Francis Courtenay last night for a stock engagement of Melbourne MacDowell and Miss Florence Stone at the Lyceum theater early next summer. It was also agreed that the company should return here for a regular engagement during the coming theatrical season, when the company is on its way to the Pacific coast.

Plans for the next summer are about perfected, and in conjunction with the theater circuit in this part of the country, not only the MacDowell company, but an opera company of the general of the Northwestern Opera company, which recently closed here, will play odd weeks in Duluth through the summer.

A plan is also on foot for securing contracts with a well-known stock company on the road to fill in open time at the Lyceum theater the coming season.

Manager Marshall is convinced that Duluth has discovered just what it wants in the MacDowell company, and the support for the three weeks of the season just passed justified the making of contracts for the season of 1904. The company will probably open early, and will present a large number of the latest Eastern successes as stock productions.

Last night arrangements were finished for the opening of the new Power theater at Hibbing, which will present its first attractions in the shape of "Resurrection," and perhaps others of the Sardou reportoire, by the Melbourne MacDowell company.

The dates of the Hibbing engagement will be Aug. 10, 11 and 12, with perhaps a matinee, and the engagement will be made a social and business event at the thriving mining town, which has been growing so fast recently that it has become important in the theatrical world and didn't know it, until W. J. Power saw an opening and erected a large, modern theater, which will seat over 1000 people, with two balconies and a large stage, capable of accommodating almost any road company.

The result will be that the desirable companies coming into Duluth will be eligible for engagement at that house. It will be a boon to the range people, whose dramatic entertainment has been rather meager heretofore.

During the trip of the MacDowell company to the range town, there will be two traveling companies come in at the Lyceum theater, the first in the schedule of the winter season.

Frederick Hartley, who arrived here last Friday morning to enter the Melbourne MacDowell company for the remainder of the stock engagement, as leading man, returned on the midnight train last night to Chicago, where he will join his wife, Anne Sutherland.

Mr. Hartley was to have made his initial appearance in "Alabama" tomorrow night, but circumstances arose, over which he had no control, which compelled him to leave for home.

Mr. Hartley expressed deep regret at having to leave the city so unceremoniously, and would have desired to appear before the people of his own town, and show his abilities as an actor, which are recognized in the profession as excellent.

He desired that a few words of explanation and regret be given the public, in the shape of a note sent to a friend in the city. It is as follows:

"Owing to the serious illness of my wife, I am very sorry I shall be compelled to abandon my proposed engagement with Mr. MacDowell and Miss Stone.

"Will you express, through your paper, my sincere regrets to my good friends. Yours,

"FREDERICK HARTLEY."

The MacDowell company will remain as it is, and Mr. Hartley's chosen part will be taken by another member of the organization.

Of Simon Cameron, Long Dead, Is Filed.

St. Paul, July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The life of a once famous man has been recalled by the filing of a certified copy of the will of the late Simon Cameron with Register of Deeds Fitzgerald.

Mr. Cameron, who died many years ago, was secretary of war under President Grant and owned considerable property in Ramsey county. His home was at Harrisburg, Pa., and a perusal of his will shows him to have been a very wealthy man.

The object of filing a certified copy of the will here was for the purpose of clearing up the title of the real estate owned by the deceased in this county.

THE WORK IS SLOW

Rock Is Encountered In Excavating on East Superior Street.

Street Railway Company Finds It Difficult to Work to Advantage.

Progress on the East Superior street repaving work is necessarily slow. Today there are a large number of men at work, but their employment differs so much that it is almost a case of one man hindering the other. The contractors are pushing the water connection work as fast as possible but a great deal of almost solid rock has been encountered between Third and Fifth avenues East and the excavation can only be made in connection with blasting.

The street railway company has a crew of men relaying new rails on the lower side of the street and these will be welded to gether as fast as possible. While it is likely that some means will be devised by the company to bridge over the excavations for the water connections and for the support of the concrete it is understood that the policy of the company will not be to push its work until the other men and work are out of the way. It is claimed that so much work cannot be carried on advantageously at once.

The work is said to have already cost the street railway company nearly double what it was anticipated when the re-construction work began.

The excellent condition of the old concrete foundation on East Superior street is causing much favorable comment and some of the city officials expressed themselves to the effect that it was almost too bad that it had to be disturbed for the water connections, for the chances were that the new concrete owing to the settling of the ground at the connections will be apt to break and cause dissatisfaction.

SUSPICIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES

Surround Death of Frank Hekkala of Laurium.

Houghton, Mich., July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The sudden death of Frank Hekkala, of Larumium, is being investigated by Sheriff Wills under the direction of J. Larsen, the prosecuting attorney, with a view of determining whether he died from natural causes or met with foul play. Circumstances are somewhat suspicious and authorities will not rest until conclusive evidence has been gathered tending to prove or disprove foul play theories.

DRUNK GETS NAME MIXED

Two Respond to Same Name—Wife Identifies Right One.

"The state against Charles Vexel, drunk—stand up, Vexel," said Special Municipal Judge Gearhart this morning.

Two men arose, one standing behind the other. The court looked mildly surprised and looking over at the first man said: "Is your name Vexel?"

Both nodded and the court looking at the second man, said: "Sit down."

Both sat down.

"Stand up, Charles Vexel," again demanded the court, and again both men stood up.

It took several minutes to get the tangle straightened out and find out which man was Vexel, but as the wife was the complaining witness in the case, her identification was accepted and Vexel received suspended sentence on his promise to do better hereafter.

William Nolan, who got his name mixed with that of Vexel, and who was charged with the same offense, was given the alternative of $12 fine or ten days in the county jail.

David Doharty, who was charged with disorderly conduct and whose case was continued over from yesterday, was let off with suspended sentence, as was Louis Weaver, who was caught riding his bicycle on the sidewalk.

Frank and Joseph Growsky, two boys residing near Eleventh street and Fourth avenue East, were arraigned on the charge of shooting firearms within the city limits. The boys begged hard to be let off this time, promising to be more careful about marksmanship within the city limits another time, and the court suspended sentence.

POISONED CANDY

Killed Georgia Girl and Her Lover Is In Jail.

The Tragic End of the Romance of Essie Weeks.

Reidsville, Ga., July 29.—A touching story of love and disappointment, which culminated in the death of a young lady, supposed to have been poisoned by eating candy administered to her by her lover, occurred in the peaceful hamlet of Glenville, near the lower edge of Tatnall county, recently. The two persons that figured in the sad affair were Roach Barnard and Miss Elsie Weeks.

Believing each other faithless, they drifted apart by a slight misunderstanding until last Sunday, when they met for a few moments at the girl's home. A shocking tragedy ends the dream of love in the heart of the young girl and leaves the young man to be followed through life with the terrible memory of being charged with the foul crime of poisoning his sweetheart.

Miss Weeks was a fair, attractive and accomplished woman of 18 and possessed a lovable disposition, and was considered one of the prettiest and most popular girls in the county. She had many admirers and friends, among them being Roach Barnard, the son of a wealthy planter. It seems that the young couple were very much infatuated with each other, but two months ago some strange fate overtook the happy course of their love and an estrangement was the result.

Through some channel—perhaps by the gossip of the village—the young man was informed that Miss Essie had discarded him for another, and it weighed heavily on his mind. After studying the situation over he decided to discontinue his visits to the Weeks home. His prolonged absence caused the young lady much anxiety. Some few days ago her mind was relieved by receiving the following note:

"Dear Miss Essie—I could not rest satisfied until I wrote you this letter. I have just understood that the report was unfounded. I could not believe it, though the report seemed to come from a reliable source. I shall call on you next Sunday evening, with your permission, and endeavor to have a satisfactory explanation about the matter. I trust you will grant me the desired request asked for. Please answer at your earliest convenience. As ever,

"ROACH BARNARD."

Miss Essie was gratified on receiving the note and indited a hasty reply. She penned the following to him:

"Roach Barnard—Dear Friend—I was indeed surprised upon receiving your note. I assure you that it will give me great pleasure to receive your company next Sunday evening. Please come without fail. Yours very truly,

"ESSIE WEEKS."

On Sunday, July 12, Mr. Barnard was met on the veranda of the Weeks domicile by Miss Essie and received in a cordial maner. During the conversation she denied ever saying she loved another young man. This satisfied young Barnard. Other subjects were discussed and both appeared to be as loving as on former occasions. Just before bidding her good bye he presented Miss Essie with a package of French candy. She accepted the gift and thanked him kindly. As he passed out of the gate they exchanged smiles, and he remarked he would see her again soon.

But, alas! It was the last time he ever gazed on her pretty form alive. As soon as Barnard disappeared Miss Essie went to the kitchen, where her mother was, and opened the package of candy. She ate several pieces and shortly afterward complained of a bitter taste in her mouth, and turned deathly ill.

"That is the bitterest candy I ever tasted in my life, mamma," she said, with a gasp.

"I can't tell what the trouble is," replied her mother.

"Mamma, I believe there was poison in that candy," she screamed hysterically.

At this juncture the girl fell to the floor in a convulsion, and suffered the most intense pain. Becoming alarmed at the peculiar symptoms displayed by her daughter, Mrs. Weeks hastily dispatched a messenger for a physician, and Dr. G. W. Tootle at once responded. Everything was done, but to no avail. She died in less than an hour. After a searching medical investigation the doctor gave it as his opinion that Miss Weeks came to her death by having eaten poisoned candy.

By request of the family, Dr. Tootle removed the stomach and sent it to State Chemist McCandless at Atlanta for anaylsis.

Under the circumstances surrounding the case, the authorities deemed it advisable to arrest Barnard, and he was fortwith lodged in the Reidsville jail. He cried bitterly when arrested, protesting his innocence, and said he would be the last man to give poisoned candy to the only girl he ever loved.

The funeral of Miss Essie was attended by a large concourse of people, and many a tear filled the eyes of those who were touched by her sad death, which has removed one of the brightest and most lovable young ladies of this section of the country.

BURIED AT THE SOO.

Last Tribute of Respect to John T. Atkinson, Jr.

The Soo Times, of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., referring to the fatal accident at Duluth of John T. Atkinson, Jr., on the Williams dredge last week, says:

"The body was brought to the Soo, the casket being buried under flowers which were conveyed to the depot in a street car chartered by the dredgemen and Maccabees for that purpose. Alex Atkinson, a brother of the deceased residing in this city, went to Duluth, and with the wife, accompanied the remains to the Soo. They were met at the depot by the local Maccabees and friends with a profusion of flowers, the body being removed from the depot direct to Riverside, where the interment took place.

"The deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Atkinson, Sr., who reside at Rudyard. His early life was spent in the Soo and this vicinity, and he was one of the most popular young men in the city. For the past fifteen years he has been a faithful employe of the dredging firm of E. T. Williams, of Duluth. Besides his parents he is survived by a wife, who resides at 2814 West Second street, Duluth; four brothers, Alexander, William, Joseph and Thomas, all of this city, and three sisters, Mrs. John McKeown, of Bay Mills; Mrs. William Paulding, of Fort William, Ont., and Mrs. Fred Hawkins, of the Soo."

MR. KEENE'S COOLNESS.

One of the notable features of the slump in stocks in Wall street and the collapse of the brokerage firm of Talbot J. Taylor & Co., in which James R. Keene lost $1,500,000, was the coolness with which he parted with this large sum. When interviewed on the failure, he said he was not embarrassed, "only annoyed." It takes a man of great wealth to be only annoyed by such a heavy loss, and not every man of wealth would be so cool under the circumstances. But Keene is a seasoned gambler in stocks and horse races, and even the loss of millions would not cause him to make a noise. He is a "good loser," and he has had plenty of experience in that line during his lengthy career in Wall street.

Mr. Keene went from San Francisco to New York in 1878 with a reputation for daring speculative deeds and a fortune supposed to rise into the millions. This fortune has been lost, won back, increased and lost again several times since then. He was reputed to have dropped from $4,000,000 to $7,000,000 in the slump of 1883-4 and suspended payment, but was soon on his feet again gathering in other millions, operating generally on the bear side, but more recently as leader on the bull side in the great market boom which started in 1899. His winnings on this rise must indeed have been large enough to make the loss of $1,500,000 a mere bagatelle, but his loss through the Taylor firm is probably less than what he must have lost through the general collapse in values.

THE YEAR'S IMMIGRATION.

As was expected, the immigration into the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, was greater than any previous year. Up to this time the year 1882 had the largest number of arrivals, namely, 788,992, but the reports for the past year show 857,046, or an increase of nearly 70,000 over the year of 1882. It was also an increase of 208,573 or 32 per cent, over the preceding twelve months. The indications are that the immigration for the calendar year will reach the 1,000,000 mark.

The great bulk of this year's influx, 672,726, were from Italy, Austria-Hungary and Russia. From Italy, including Sicily and Sardinia, same 230,622, an increase of 52,247 over the preceding twelve months; from Austria-Hungary, 206,011, an increase of 34,022, and from the Russian Empire and Finland, 136,093, an increase of 28,746. Great Britain and Germany, the countries which formerly made the chief contributions to American immigration, sent only 60,000 and 40,000 respectively.

These figures appear in striking contrast to the record of 1883, two decades earlier, when the German arrivals numbered 195,000, and those from the United Kingdom 158,000, while Italy sent only 32,000, Austria-Hungary, 27,000, and Russia, 12,000. While the tide of immigration is swelling at an unprecedented rate, a serious problem in itself, the quality is deteriorating still more rapidly. The least desirable classes of Europeans are crowding into the American cities. This element is largely illiterate, and the few who cannot be thus classed speak and write alien languages. They are unacquainted with American political ideals, and the freedom and power they enjoy are sources of danger to themselves. Necessarily eager to secure any rate of wages offered, they swell the ranks of cheap labor and tend to bring down the standard of citizenship. And there is even a more serious problem in the proportion of the criminal element in this migration.

At present this influx, although approaching a million a year, is absorbed industrially, if not politically, but it would seriously complicate a period of depression with a large element idle and discontented. Although the United States government is discouraging immigration by stringent regulations, the tide is sustained and swelled by the agents of steamship and transportation companies, who visit the poorest and worst quarters of European cities and encourage the least desirable classses, simply because they are most easily influenced. The general tone of Immigration Commissioner Sargent's report and the note of alarm which he sounds regarding both the quantity and quality of last year's influx give grounds for the hope of a rapid enactment of far more drastic measures for the exclusion of the undesirable element coming so rapidly. With quite a proportion of the best element of older immigrants located in the West, going to Canada, the present influx may be viewed as quite alarming.

The Methodist hymnal commission, which has concluded its sessions at Plymouth, Mass., to reassemble in December at Washington, marks a considerable step toward the desired reunion of the church South and the church North, for the commission is a joint one, to produce a book of choral worship which each shall use. The Plymouth session was the second since January, and there was large progress made toward agreement. If the two churches can agree on a common singing book, why not on real unity?

New Jersey labor unions have decided, after profound consideration, that a barber has jurisdiction over his former patron after death, in respect to tonsorial duties, rather than the undertaker. At least the deceased will get one shave that will not hurt him.

In view of the history of past conclaves, it is not much use to speculate on the coming election of a pope.

It is reported that the president is mosquito-proof. But mosquitoes are slight pests compared with the office-seekers.

THE END NOT IN SIGHT.

According to the reports of the inspectors who are engaged in unearthing frauds against the government in the postal department, the end of the investigation is yet a long way off. New trails are discovered at every turn and there is no knowing where they will lead. Several of the indictments already returned are the result largely of accident. That of Mr. Driggs and Mr. Machen was due to this, at least it was an unlooked for development that led to the action against them. While following up a lead in Machen's division something directed the attention of the inspectors to the contracts for the Brandt machine. The large prices aroused suspicion and a couple of men were detailed to run the facts to earth and to find out the reasons that induced Beavers to pay $25 and $50 a machine more than the market price. It is also interesting to know that if this accidental discovery had been delayed a few weeks the case against Driggs would have fallen to the ground by the application of the statute of limitations.

According to Holmes Conrad there will be new revelations later on when the inspectors will be able to give closer attention to the details of the history of other bureaus than the one presided over by Mr. Machen. Opportunities for fraud against the government were greater in the division of salaries and allowances, of which Beavers was, until recently, the chief. It will be a matter of surprise to the inspectors if they do not discover evidence there on which to demand the indictment of several other men.

None of these engaged in the active work of investigation see the end in sight. Fourth Assistant Bristow has yet to write the first line of his report to the postmaster general. It took Mr. Bristow six weeks to write his famous report on the postal frauds in Cuba. It is thought that he will require a month to tell of the inquiry into the wrongdoings in the department, and as the president has announced that the report shall be made public, Mr. Bristow will observe great care in its preparation.

There is one thing upon which the public is agreed and that is, that the investigation be thorough; let every trail be followed and every man who is guilty, punished.

GROWTH OF ELECTRIC ROADS.

The growth of electric railways in the United States in the last two decades has been scarcely less than wonderful. It is hardly more than fifteen years since the first electric railway line was built in this country, yet at this time the electric railways have a mileage of 22,576 and are capitalized at over $2,308,000,000. By way of comparison, they have a capitalization of one-fifth and a mileage of one-tenth of the capitalization and mileage of the steam roads of the country. The figures regarding traffic are equally interesting. During the year 1901 the steam railroads of the country carried 607,000,000 passengers. The previous year the street and electric roads carried the enormous total of 5,871,900,000 persons, of whom 4,809,554,000 paid fares. This means that, on an average, every person in the United States rode sixty-three times on an electric road, which is thirty-one rides more than the average person took in the year 1900.

The electric companies give employment to 140,700 persons. Accepting the statement that every wage-earned supports a family of five persons, it follows that the electric roads support over 700,000 persons. Each year over $87,000,000 are paid in salaries. The rates of fare charged by the lines are 3, 4 and 5 cents—an average is probably near 4 cents, thus making an income to the electric companies of about $192,000,000.

What the future holds out to electric railroad progress it is hard to foretell, but it is safe to say it will be marvelous.

NEW YORK'S HOTELS.

The great metropolis of the new world, New York, is greatly hampered in the accommodation of its transient guests. In short it is unable to take care of the people who visit its boundaries. To obviate this, fifteen immense hotels for transient guests are under construction there at a cost of $50,000,000. They will have a total of 8720 sleeping apartments and will accommodate 14,300 guests. The present hotel capacity of New York is 35,000 guests, which will be increased over 40 per cent by the new structures, some of which are to be opened in the fall, and all within two years. The new Hotel Astor will cost $5,000,000; the Hotel Belmont, twenty-six stories high is contracted for $4,500,000, and the Hotel Knickerbocker will cost $3,000,000, with $650,000 more for the furniture. Other projects in hand are the Hotel Brunswick, with 2000 rooms, to cost, with the land, $8,000,000; the new Sturtevant, $2,600,000; the Hotel Wolcott, $2,900,000, and the Hotel York, $1,000,000. There are other large hotel projects in New York and all look for business to the ordinary tide of travel.

Of course these figures refer only to the larger hotel projects. There are a multitude of smaller houses projected and in course of construction, and there is no doubt that the mighty army of visitors to the metropolis will be provided with comfortable accommodations. These people spend an immense amount of money in New York daily and their trade is an important item to the great city.

The press of the country, irrespective of party, is condemning the nomination of Gen. Wood to be a major general in the army, because it is rank favoritism on the part of President Roosevelt. A few years ago Wood was a doctor in the army with the rank of captain. He affiliated with the Rough Riders, and then his promotion began. It breeds dissatisfaction in the army to have old officers ignored and passed over to make way for a new officer with a pull.

Senator Aldrich says he would not oppose tariff revision "at the proper time, if done by Republicans." In other words, he would revise according to the ideas of the trusts when the trusts are willing to have a revision.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Don't know Nick Vanderpool?

Well, well, well!

Everybody knows "Old Nick." He's been with the New York Central since the year one.

That's what George M. Smith says, anyhow.

And George ought to know, because he's been in Duluth since the time when they used to drive cattle up from the Twin Cities and ship them by barge to Two Harbors or up there somewhere and drive them up on the range to kill for fresh beef.

If anyone mentioned his name without saying Omaha road, he'd never speak again.

But this is mere airy persiflage.

To return to Nick, who travels out of Chicago, and hops over the country like a Santos Dumont machine. First he's here and then he's there. He rides in parlor cars, and don't care what the company says when his expense bills go in.

He was in Duluth to get a few passengers to ride over his road and help the company out of debt—poor old N. Y. C.

He got 'em.

Incidentally, he found a story here.

It wasn't his. Oh, no.

A conductor on the Great Northern road discovered it, and he told it to Larry Kitchell, at the local office. Larry told it to another man's wife, she told it to his wife and she told it to another man's wife, she told it to her husband, and he told it to Nick Vanderpool.

Then modest Nick tells it about himself. It's like this and it isn't funny or worth the time.

He was pacing the platform (though he didn't say what he was doing there after he came in) when he noticed a long, white-haired individual duplicating his pace.

Nick's head was bent, and the Swedish gentleman had his beat low. He was about fifteen feet behind, so every time Nick turned to pace back he faced the man for a few feet.

The Swede began walking faster and faster, and finally caught up and stopped old Nick.

"Did you want to see me?" asked Nick.

"Aye bat aye do," said the flaxen-haired person.

"Why didn't you cut cross lots and stop me?" he asked.

"Aye ban keach up," said the satisfied one.

"Well?" queried Nick.

The Swede felt in his trousers pockets and finally through the rest of his garments, finally extracting from his hat a well folded ticket, with the first coupon folded up bearing the destination Minneapolis.

"Minoplus," gurgled the Swede.

Nick says he fell dead.

The Clock Struck One.

Lippincott's: The head of the family, with his beloved sweetbriar and his favorite magazine, had settled back in the rocker for a quiet, comfortable evening. On the other side of an intervening table was the miniature counterpart of himself, the wrinkling of whose 3-year-old forehead indicated that he was mentally wrestling with some perplexing problem. After a while he looked towards his comfort-loving parent, and, with a hopeless inflection, asked:

"Pa?"

"Yes, my son."

"Can the Lord make everything?"

"Yes, my boy."

"Every everything."

"There is nothing, my son, that He cannot do."

"Pa'on, could He make a clock that would strike less than one?"

"No, Johnny, go fight upstairs to your ma, and don't stop down here to annoy me when I'm reading."

Johnny went and wondered still.

FARMER, SPARE THAT BEE.

(A scientist has advised the farmer not to kill the bumble bee, as it is the insect that fertilizes the red clover blossom and makes it produce seed.)

Don't kill the busy bumble bee,
Oh, honest Farmer John;
Don't swipe it with your snickersee,
But let it bumble on.

What though it light upon your nose
And stick its stinger in?
To swat that bee to death's repose
Would be a soulless sin.

What matter if the bumble bee
Shall put you on the bum?
Can you not stand the stingeree

THE QUEST OF VAN CRUGER

By H. S. Canfield.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co)

Van Cruger was the result of years of inbreding. The Van Crugers—of course the Van Crugers of New York; there were no other Van Crugers worth mention—had married the Van Crugers for so long that the family records simply read "Van Cruger" and nothing more. This was to preserve the Van Cruger estates, keep them in the Van Cruger family. It was whispered in the innermost circle of the inner family circle that occasionally in the past a Van Cruger had jumped the reservation, as it were, and rushed away and married some one other than a Van Cruger. When this happened the offending Van Cruger was left in the outer darkness; he became anathema marantha, and the good Van Crugers, the Van Crugers who knew what was due to a Van Cruger and to the Van Crugers, knew him no more.

This Van Cruger was a slender, quiet, kindly, intellectual, perfectly cultivated and indescribably washed-out. He walked, or strolled, through life until he was 30 years old, a very model of a Van Cruger. He attended the family reunions, he sat at the family table, he used the Van Cruger language and said the Van Cruger things in the soft thin Van Cruger voice. He collected his share of the ample Van Cruger revenues. He shot a little, fished a little, rode a little, painted a little, wrote a little, read a little and danced a little as became a Van Cruger. His kinfolk said of him: "Duyck is of and for the family. He will marry a Van Cruger and beget more Van Crugers, which is the highest and noblest aim a Van Cruger may have. As long as he lives he will be a credit to us and when he dies his acres and his dollar will go to truly born Van Crugers. Brethren and sisters, let us be thankful that we are not Van Dusenberrys or Van Spoopendikes or Van Schwarzboomels or Van Batsnootches, but Van Crugers."

It is not easy therefore to picture the general dismay, not to say consternation, which spread through the ranks of the Van Crugers when at the last Van Cruger reunion Duyck Van Cruger said smoothly, but positively: "My kinsmen and friends, this is the last reunion I shall attend for some time. I am going away and do not know when I shall come back. I am going west—a long way west. I am going in search of a wife.

There was a chorus of ejaculations and questions. Duyck's lips were thin and they set in a hard, straight line. A slight fluttering came to his narrow temples as he breathed quickly through his nostrils.

"I have said it," he resumed. "My reason? The Van Cruger line needs new blood. There are fifty of you here, men and women, and every one of you is slender, physically below the average in strength, every one of you has white eyebrows and lashes; every one of you has blue eyes and a thin nose. I have them myself. One description answers for us all. The Van Crugers freckle too readily. Their blood is cerulean blue; we want some red blood in it. When did I find this out? I have been finding it out for two years."

Afterwards Mrs. Anna Van Cruger, whose daughter Katrina was 25 and had been set aside for Duyck Van Cruger, said to Mrs. Paula Van Cruger:

"You know, dear, that Duyck, while wholly Van Cruger, belongs to a slightly different strain. His great grandfather, grandson of Peter Van Cruger, married a domestic. She was a Norwegian girl, I believe. For much more than a century we have kept this hidden even from ourselves, but it is this blood which is working in him now. Strange is it not how even a far away tint will affect the purity of the stream?"

Duyck Van Cruger walked out of the old Van Cruger mansion and went west. He did not know where he was going and he did not care. He was going to find a wife, but he was in no hurry about it. He had plenty of time to waste. He had told some of his acquaintances at the club of his determination and they had said he was crazy. "If you want to marry outside of your own precious family, Duyck," they said, "please remember that it is not all of New York. There are a few Smiths and Joneses here, unblessed with a single sapphire drop of the Van Cruger blood. Take one of them. She will give you the cross you want and you won't have to poison yourself with fried steak and alkali water in the bad lands."

"No, he answered, "I want a girl who has never seen New York. I want an American woman whose people have lived in another part of this country since they came to it. I want to get clear away from the possibility of Dutch blood."

He smiled as he boarded the train, remembering this: "Probably," he muttered, "I shall go around a bit for six months and then return unmarried. This does seem to be a rather crazy proceedure. However, I stand committed."

He did go around a bit—he went for a year and a half. At first he used to look at the women he saw with a curious eye, wondering if each could be the possible she, but he always shook his head. He did not feel attracted to any of them. Meanwhile they, if they noted him at all thought of him as a bony man who seemed to be not exactly in bad health but ailing. In Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, California and western Texas they thought him to be a consumptive. There was nothing the matter with his lungs, his heart or his head; but he was just tired and wore eyeglasses and was washed out.

Of late months he had given up his quest wholly, despairing of finding his mate, and was drifting because he had got into the habit of it. There is a substratum of nomad in every American and in him it had been brought to the surface. So it happened that late one afternoon in spring his horse threw him near the head of a lonely valley in the Nevada mountains. Having done this the horse galoped down the trail, put his hoof in a hole, rolled over and broke a leg. Van Cruger fell on his aristocratic head and all consciousness was knocked out of him. When he came to he was lying on his back with his head in a girl's lap. She was looking down at him with a pair of velvety black eyes and with a handkerchief was washing the clotted blood from a gash in his scalp. Her pony grazed near.

"Well," she said, cheerily, "how goes it now?"

"Thank you," he muttered, struggling to a sitting posture and putting his hand to his wet hair, "I guess I can manage now. That was a nasty fall. Have you seen anything of my horse?"

"Found him with a broken leg awhile ago and shot him," she answered in a matter of fact way. "He wasn't any more good and I put him out of pain. Took off your saddle and bridle and hung them by the trail. Then I found you. What's your name and where are you from?"

"Duyck Van Cruger," he replied, "from New York."

"I'm Miss Masters," she said. "Miss Ray Masters and I live here. Come to the ranch."

He tried to walk, but staggered and sunk down, so with her help he managed to climb to her side-saddle and sitting with one leg crooked over the horn was led to the ranch house two miles away. There her mother, who was dark, bound up his head with simple skill, and her father, who was dark, shook hands vigorously and made him welcome, evidently delighted to see a stranger. He knew much more about them in an hour and when dinner was ended he knew all about them. How they were of old Virginia stock; how Masters had married there and come west with his young wife 25 years before; how he had found this valley and, tired of gold seeking, had gone to ranching; how their daughter was born in the shadow of the great mountain above them; how they had been there ever since; how the daughter had been sent to a finishing school in San Francisco; how glad she was to get back to the valley; and a good deal more of the short and simple annals of the American rural well-to-do. He was less communicative only because he had less to tell, for in that household all barriers of reserve seemed to melt away. By bedtime with a sore head and a gay heart he felt that he had known them for years.

The girl was beautiful, with a lithe, powerful frame, clear skin and raven hair. She was a fine example of the glowing brunette type and it was manifest that she was innocent. She had never seen a man like Van Cruger and he interested her. He said he wanted to learn the ranch business and stayed. The life filled him out and broadened him physically and mentally. His irreproachable Van Cruger manners softened and refined the girl. When he went away the entire family went with him as far as San Francisco and there was a wedding in the Palace hotel.

A year later he was swinging down Fifth avenue, with his shoulders squared and red in his cheeks. His wife swung by his side, with shoulders back and the clear bright blood showing through the clear dark of her skin. Old De Peyster sat in the bow-window of the Century club and saw them pass.

"Now," he said in a querulous emphatic manner of the club oracle, "I want you to know that it pays to get back to the common stock. The common stock of the nation, and this is the greatest nation."

Two Victims of the Sailboat Tragedy In Everett Bay.

Everett, Wash., July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two of the victims of the recent sailboat tragedy in Everett bay were Wisconsin people. P. G. Foster came to Everett one year ago from Marinette, where his widow and his divorced wife now live. His widow was formerly Miss Alice Kilmer, of Green Bay, Wis. Eight years ago he divorced his then wife, who was an Iron Mountain, Mich., girl. With her are Foster's two children, Prudence, a boy, aged 15, and Gertrude, aged 13. One year after divorcing his wife he married Miss Kilmer, who came to Everett last summer, but did not remain with her husband. In his suit for divorce, which Foster had recently instituted here against his wife, he charged that she was so insanely jealous that it made life a burden to him. A woman here who has known the family for years says the real reason the divorce was asked was that Mrs. Foster No. 2 objected to Foster paying any part of his earnings toward the support of his two children. Foster was 40 years old. He was a life insurance agent and represented himself as a bachelor.

Miss Edna I. Warner, one of the girls drowned with Foster, was the daughter of Charles E. Warner, a building contractor. Miss Warner completed her education at the Oshkosh state normal school in June, 1899. She had taught school in Marysville, six miles north of Everett, since 1901. She was born in Wisconsin and spent her life there until coming West. She was soon to have been a bride.

Miss Nina Solomon, the third victim, was born at Jamestown, Ottawa county, Mich., in 1877. She was the "600" girl at the Everett telephone exchange.

When the sailboat was righted the sheet was found tied fast. The afternoon the accident occurred the weather was bright, and although slightly gusty it was not by any means stormy. The bodies were recovered twenty-four hours after the accident, clinging together as they had evidently gone down. There had been no witnesses to the accident. When recovered it was found that crabs had wrought sad havoc to the bodies, although they had lain in the water so short a time. It happened they went down at a point where the city garbage scows are dumped, the haunt of millions of crabs. Miss Warner's face was unrecognizable.

THE STAGE

The run of "Under Two Flags," for a week, which marks an epoch in the length of engagements of dramatic companies in Duluth, will be succeeded tomorrow night by "Alabama." The run of "Under Two Flags" is positively the longest on record for one play consecutively in Duluth, and the result has been gratifying to not only the management but the patrons of the theater, who have for the most part gone to see it twice. The play has been a successful one from every standpoint.

The offering of "Alabama" is expected to meet with another success, the play being one of the most beautiful love stories ever transferred from life to the stage, and the drama itself one of the purest, sweetest and most loveable of them all. The perfume of the magnolia fills the nostrils and the soft southern drawl is prevalent in the atmosphere.

The management has provided an elaborate production, and will present it in a manner worthy of the theme, the play and its author Augustus Thomas.

"The Little Minister" is drawing well at the Metropolitan and is demonstrating that the popular Barrie play has as strong a hold on the Duluth public as ever. This evening it will be played for the last time. Tomorrow night the first production of "The Burglar" will be given. It is a popular play and will doubtless be well received. One of the Gardner children will play the child part.

Tonight,

July 29, the ladies of the Endion M. E. church will give a lawn social in the vacant lot on East Second street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth avenues east. Ice cream and cake will be served and a good time assured. All are cordially invited.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Warrant Issued Against Hope Man For Slandering Girl.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Jamestown.—A warrant for the arrest of George Pratt has been issued and Deputy Sheriff Eddy left for Hope to make the arrest. It is alleged that Pratt slandered a girl 14 years of age named Barker, who resides near Courtenay. The girl's father, who secured the warrant, alleges that Pratt told stories reflecting on the character of Miss Barker. Pratt is married.

Jamestown will have a summer carnival beginning August 3, and continuing to August 8. A great many attractions have been secured for the event which will undoubtedly bring people to the city from all over the James river valley.

Andrew Thompson, residing in the northern part of Stutsman county, discovered that several checks had been forged on him and the checks cashed at Courtenay and Kensal. The total amount is over $100. The forger's work was very neat and there is no clue.

The foundation for the new ward building at the state hospital for the insane has been completed but no more work will be done on the structure until the supreme court hands down its decision in the bond case.

Driven by a terrific wind three box cars left the side track at Elridge and crashed into a west-bound Northern Pacific fast freight. Seven box cars loaded with goods were wrecked and traffic was delayed over twelve hours. The trainmen were not hurt.

Wheatland.—A well organized gang of horse thieves is operating around Wheatland and the authorities are hot after them. On Saturday night four valuable work horses, harness and a new buggy were stolen from B. H. and W. Harrold, farmers. A posse followed the thieves as far as the Maple river, where they are supposed to be in hiding.

Minnewaukan.—After a preliminary hearing lasting over a week, Wesley Styles, cashier of the First State bank of Maddock, was bound over on the charge of manslaughter in the first degree. Peter J. Selseth, Styles' victim, died at Maddock, July 5, from the effects of a kick in the abdomen received in a street fight a few days previous.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Belle Fourche—Owing to the crowded condition of the range, Harris Franklin & Co., the heaviest owners of cattle on the Northwestern ranges, are going to close out and retire from the business. Harris Franklin, of Deadwood, general manager, says everything fit for beef and the she-stock will be sent down into Nebraska, where the company is acquiring a large tract of land, intending to conduct its business in the future by pasturing during the summer and feeding during the severe winter storms. Next year will see the last of the company's thousands of cattle on these ranges moved out. The reason for this is that the country is filling with small cattle owners, sheepmen and farmers. These men are fencing their land, cutting off much of the water, and it is asserted that much loss is suffered by range cattle owing to their bein gchased and driven by the dogs and hired men of the farmers and others, so that between them and the wolves the profit is greatly reduced. Under existing conditions a hard winter would entail frightful loss to heavy cattle men, and Mr. Franklin says his company has decided to get out as quickly as possible. It began closing out last season by shipping very closely, and the shipping will be much closer this summer. The company's herds will be greatly reduced, and the future business will be on a more limited scale, although more satisfactory and secure.

Mitchell—By the latter part of the week the stone work on the University's Century Memorial hall will be completed and the roof will be put on. While it was hoped the building could be used at the beginning of the fall term, the opening will have to be postponed until the beginning of the second term the latter part of the year.

Centerville—A. E. Dann and Arthur Blades, members of the board of education, went to Minneapolis to investigate brick for the new school building.

Thompson Bros., of Linn Grove, Iowa, have about decided to establish a brick and tile factory here. The clay is reported to be of good quality.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Next Week Will Be a Busy One at Hancock.

Hancock—The week beginning August 3 will be devoted to celebration by the residents of Hancock and out-of-town visitors. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the twelfth annual reunion of the upper peninsula posts of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held, and this will be followed by the ninth annual tournament of the Upper Peninsula Firemen's association, which will fill in the remainder of the week.

Besides this, there will be a street carnival to furnish amusement. The firemen's tourney will be the feature, an attractive program of running events having been finished. It is believed this tournament will be one of the finest and largest ever held. Hancock will put on gala attire, Quincy street, the main thoroughfare, being strung with incandescents. Everything is in readiness for the celebrations.

A. C. Skong, who has been principal of the Hancock high school for a year, has resigned to accept a position as head of the Nelson-Dewey school at Superior, Wis. He materially improved the high school here until it ranks with the best in the state.

Houghton—Owing to a heavy downpour of rain, the annual reunion of the upper peninsula lodges, A. O. U. W., was not the success its promoters hoped it would be. Many of the iron country members did not come, owing to the rain. Exercises were held in the amphidrome, attended by several hundred persons. William B. Hoar, of Houghton, acted as master workman. William T. Miller, president of Houghton, welcomed the visitors. Addresses on the benefits of the order were delivered by Dr. C. L. French, of Detroit, grand medical examiner; J. C. Thomas, of Ironwood, grand foreman; John F. C. Hollings and J. J. Hollings, of Detroit, state deputies. A grand ball ended the re-union.

F. P. Levine & Co., formerly proprietors of the defunct department store at Lake Linden, have been ordered to show cause why they should not be punished for failure to account for $900 worth of goods that had not been paid for and that have been shipped to unknown places.

A great flurry among holders of Calumet & Hecla stock was caused a day or so ago at local brokerage offices by the rumor that a block of the stock has been sold for $110 a share. Although Calumet & Hecla declined in value with the others in the slump, the mine never looked better from an investor's viewpoint.

Calumet—One daughter dead, another seriously ill and his wife's life despaired of is the result of Con McCullar storing his drinking water in barrels at his logging camp. The water was hauled several miles and allowed to stand for some time.

Iron Mountain—Military officers are here for the purpose of mustering Company L, Third regiment, M. N. G., out of service, because it was below the mark when inspected by Major Wood of the regular army a month ago. The loss of the company is a severe blow to society here.

GIRL RETURNS.

Mystery Regarding Annie Higginson Is Cleared Up.

Chicago, July 29.—Drenched by the heavy rain and carrying a three weeks old baby in her arms, Miss Annie Higginson staggered into her aunt's home at 3960 Drexel boulevard last night, and a mystery that has been baffling the police was cleared.

The young woman had been missing for three months, having disappeared in April from the residence of E. A. Helm, 5720 Washington Boulevard, with whose family she had been living while she was studying in Chicago.

Miss Higginson said that she had been in a hospital since she disappeared.

WAKING UP.

Harvard Student Coming Out of Long Nap.

New York, July 29.—After having been asleep forty-four days in a Long Branch, N. J., hospital, except at slight intervals, C. E. Endicott Allen, a Harvard student, is showing signs of improvement. Allen's strange sleep is supposed to have been in the nature of hysteria caused by overwork. The doctors believe he is now on the road to recovery.

SUNK BY BRITISH CRUISER.

Plymouth, Eng., July 29.—The British third-class cruiser Melampus collided with and sank the British steamer Ruperra, off the Lizard last night. The crew of the Ruperra were saved.

The damage sustained by the Melampus will necessitate docking her for repairs.

GOLD FROM KLONDIKE.

Ottawa, Ont., July 29.—The officers of the Candian bank of Commerce and the bank of British North America report that up to the present date the banks have received from the Klondike since the opening of navigation $2,850,000. They expect at least $16,000,000 will be taken out of the Klondike before navigation closes.

GIRLS WILL STRIKE.

New York, July 29.—At a mass meeting under the auspices of the wrapper makers, 2000 girls employed in that trade here have been ordered to strike for a nine-hour day.

Used Another's Name.

Alderman Gust Jarvi, of Hibbing, has been placed in a rather embarrassing position. A fellow was arrested there for maliciously breaking a window, and was sent to the county jail here to serve sentence for thirty days. In court he appropriated the name of Alderman Jarvi and was committed to the county jail as such. The real Gust Jarvi is a peaceful, law-abiding business man, and naturally does not relish the impression which some have gained that he has been going around breaking windows.

MEMORIAL FUND

To Late Sir Hector Macdonald Is Growing.

London, July 29.—The general committee, of which the duke of Argyll is president, formed to establish a memorial to the late Sir Hector Macdonald, is receiving considerable support. The following letter has been received by the committee from an American millionaire:

"Having ascertained that the subscriptions to the Gen. Sir Hector Macdonald memorial fund are likely to amount to about £4000 within a fortnight, I take pleasure in informing you that my promised check of £1000 will be placed at your disposal at that time. I also hereby renew my promise to send you a second £1000 when your next £4000 are subscribed. Yours very faithfully, JOHN BANNON."

Subscriptions varying from 1 shilling to £100 have been received, and the committee hopes that all admirers of the late general who have not yet subscribed will do so immediately, so that Mr. Bannon's offer may be taken advantage of. The memorial is being enthusiastically supported by Scotsmen and the public generally in the "Britains over the seas" as well as at home.

"It was for the British empire he wrought the magnificent deeds which have added luster and glory to the martial history of the British army, and it is fitting therefore that in London a memorial worthy of his services should be established so that it may stand as an imperial monument, recording to posterity the gallant deeds of this great British hero."

To do proper justice to Sir Hector's grand record of work, £10,000 are required, and the committee confidently appeals to intending subscribers in Canada, Australia, India, Africa and all the world over to forward their donations at once. Amongst the donations received already are: Samuel Greenlees, £105; Sir Malcolm McEacharn, £50; Ralph Docker, £25; the duke of Argyll, £10 10s; W. H. Milligan, £20; Professor Dewar, £10,000. The honorary treasurers are: Dr. Farquhar Matheson, J. P., 11 Soho square, London, W.; William Grant, St. Mildred's house, Poultry, London, E. C. Donations may also be sent to Sir Charles R. McGrigor, Bart., & Co., bankers, 27 Charles street, St. James', S. W.; the Bank of Scotland, 19 Bishopsgate, Within, London, E. C., and Samuel Greenlees, 92 Portland place, London, W., chairman of general committee.

LANGUAGE OF THEIR OWN

Used By Police In Reference to Criminals.

"Will she croak?" called the "short-stop" man, as he stood at the head of the big iron stairway and yelled to the jailor as he stood in the door at the landing, says the Kansas City Journal.

"I don't know. I'll ask the bone puller," replied the Turnkey, and with that he slammed the big door, which closed with a bang that resounded through the whole building.

In a moment he returned and called up the stairs: "She's already passed in her checks. Call the white wagon."

It was at police headquarters. The "short-stop" man was the police officer who is kept at Central Station to be ready to go a short distance and make an arrest in cases of emergency, a kind of general utility man in case it is not practicable to call up the officer on the beat in which the services of a police officer are needed. The desk sergeant had told him to ascertain whether "she" who lay on a table in the police surgeon's operating room was dead or not. The "bone puller" was the surgeon himself. "She" was one of those unfortunate women of the North end, whose destiny after a few hours of vice and crime was suicide. A quarrel, followed by a fit of despondency had been sufficient to send her to a nearby drugstore, where she bought an ounce of carbolic acid. Then a little cheap melodrama in which she plays the heroine before her associates and drinks the poison after tragically bidding them goodby. The police were notified and the woman was bundled into the emergency ambulance and hurried to Central station, where an attempt was made to cheat her of her glory.

When the jailor went to the surgeon's room to do the desk sergeant's bidding he was met by the surgeon's remark. "It was too late; she's all in. Call the white wagon."

Why the undertaker's ambulance which hauls away the tragic load from police headquarters should be called the "white wagon" is one of those strange peculiarities of a police station that cannot be accounted for, but it is known by no other name. As a matter of fact, the ambulance is of a dull, black hue, but in police circles it is known as the "white wagon."

The conversation that passed between the jailor and the "short stop" man suggested the fact that there are only two ways to die at central police station. In police parlance there is no other way to give up life and pass into the great beyond. On way is to "croak" and the other is to "pass in your checks."

That lower and more vicious class of human beings who inhabit the North end of Kansas City and who pass in and out of the police station month in and month out, protesting to the desk sergeant and pleading with the police judge, form a race of people who are well nigh distinct, and who have a language of their own.

Among the negroes a police officer is known as "de law." His approach upon a crap game in an alley is heralded with the warning. "Here comes de law. He's born in de timber and knows how to handle it. If he bounces de locust off'n yo' head you'll have to spread de cream for de judge in de mawnin'."

When this one expression is translated it explains a great deal of slang used in Kansas City below the dividing line, Fifth street. When he spread the alarm that send the negroes scurrying in all directions from the crap game in the alley and gave his timely warning he said in calm, police English. "A police officer is approaching our midst intent upon placing us under arrest for violating the city ordinances. In his hand he carries a heavy, black club which is molded from a piece of black locust timber. Should he strike you on the head with the club and take you to police headquarters you will be called before the police judge in the morning to explain why you should not be fined and be sent to the workhouse."

This same negro was caught and sent before the police judge one morning, but on an entirely different charge from shooting craps. In explaining his appearance in police court he made a clean breast of it and threw himself on the mercy of the court: "Yo' Honah, it was like dis, dat I run away from that offisah and he catch me. I took a sack of coal, and when I see him a-comin' I took a duck."

When the judge had fathomed the mystery of how the negro took a sack of coal and a duck, he laughed and gave the negro a small fine. No sooner had he reached the hold-over than he chuckled to the other victims and said: "I suttinly did spread de cream dis mawnin'."

Two police officers who had become inoculated with the slang were talking a few nights ago when one of them voiced this expression: "Whenever you see him reach us and get his lid you may know that he has joined the rabbits. He's done wrote to you and run out from under his hat. The only thing to do then is to smoke 'em. Flatten the lead."

In every-day English the policeman sought to advise his brother officer that in the event of a negro reaching for his hat when he was fleeing from arrest, the best plan to pursue would be to abandon the pusuit by foot and after drawing his revolver send a bullet after him, as the piece of lead would travel much faster than his own pedal extremities.

There are two ways for the man who is known in police parlance as the "hobo" to get into the city and likewise two ways for him to get out. Upon his arrival he either "lights" or "blows in." In order to get out he must either "fly the coop" or "throw his feet." While in transit he either "rides the blind," or "hits the rods." The former is accomplished by taking passage on the front end or platform of a baggage car, which has no front door, and hence is blind. The latter consists in stealing a ride by sitting on the rods under a passenger coach, and thus avoiding the eagle eye of the ever present flagman or brakeman.

Nearly every class of prisoners who climb the stairs at Central Police station, and advance to the sergeant's desk, have a name that is peculiar only to the station itself. A crazy man is called a "sack;" a drunk a "sleeper," and a person well dressed, "a silk stocking;" a man wearing a long-tailed coat "an ankle bearer."

Between the police officers and the detectives there is a bitter rivalry, and one class is continually nagging the other. The man who is neither, but who is known as a "plain clothes man," doing the work of a detective and drawing the pay of a patrolman, is the target for no little repartee. "A fly cop" is his usual appellation, but when the patrolman wishes to make him real mad he politis him out and says in derision, "a detective." Nothing will irritate the "fly cop" so much as that one expression, which is always said with a peculiar twang of sarcasm and derision known only to the patrolman. The detectives are called "sleuths," "brain workers," "men of clews." The policemen are called "coppers," "bulls," "flattles," and a lot of other like names.

A well-known detective on the department was walking through the hall at Central station the other day when he was met by a sergeant of police. The detective put his hands together as a swimmer does when he is preparing to dive, and shrugging his shoulders, lunged forward. Not a word was spoken, but they both seemed to understand and passed on. When an explanation was asked for the sergeant said: "He was giving me the sign of the 'high dive,' which means that I had trespassed upon his case. He was after a negro thief and I happened to get information that led to my making the arrest before he located the thief. He's jealous now and showed it by giving me the sign of the 'high dive.'"

A letter from the chief of police is known by no other name than "Two bears." On the wall at police headquarters is a large oak cabinet which contains lock boxes for the different stations and for the detectives and officers of the force. When a man opens his box and draws out a letter that has the picture of two bears on it he knows its author. It is from the chief, whose stationery bears the trade mark of two bruins. The receiver's face begins to grow long as he opens the epistle for it usually contains a reprimand for some infraction of the rules and regulations of the police department.

THE CHILD FOUND

John La Prairie, Half Breed, Finds Little Albert Swenson.

Alive But Exhausted and Hungry After Four Days Wandering.

Albert Swenson, the five-year-old boy who had been lost in a swamp since Friday afternoon near Gowan, was found last evening just at dusk by John Laprairie, one of the three half-breeds who were helping in the search for him. The boy was about exhausted as he had been without food or shelter for four days and four nights. Laprairie came upon the boy's tracks just before he found the child, lying under a tree and leaning against the trunk.

Laprairie fashioned a cradle of birch-bark and slung it over his back, and then walked back to the Swenson homestead, over three miles away.

Weary searchers were still in the swamp and the child's mother was at home, nearly crazed by grief. A number of the neighbors were in attempting to cheer her up, and the sensation created by the arrival of the half breed with the missing boy can easily be imagined. The searchers were called in and the child was fed and put to bed. He will be none the worse for his terrible experience after a day or two.

OWNERS MEET NEXT MONDAY

Lake Avenue Paving to Be Considered at That Time.

Next Monday morning the Lake avenue property owners will have an opportunity at a special session of the board of public works to express their desire whether a guaranty shall be imposed on the sandstone pavement that is to be laid on the avenue. If the guaranty is not required the cost of the pavement will be reduced about $1600.

The city council has already gone over the question and the bids called for contained provisions for the guaranty and for the paving without it. The council decided that the property owners should decide which bid they will accept.

It has been argued that when such material as sandstone is used the expense entailed by a guarantee is unnecessary, than the cost is increased without increasing the protection.

City Engineer Patton is in favor of retaining the guarantee on any kind of pavement. He says that other cities are making the terms under which paving is done, even more rigid, rather than abandoning them.

CONTRACTORS HAVE A CLASH

Row Over the Right to Build a Cement Sidewalk.

A lively clash between rival contractors in the laying of a cement sidewalk in front of A. L. Ordean's East Superior street property, took place yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Ordean decided recently to put a cement walk along the avenue side of his property and gave the contract for the work to Dixon & Lowry. O. H. Anderson, who has the contract with the city to construct all cement walks ordered by the council, thought that the new walk came under his jurisdiction, so his men proceeded to remove the material which Dixon & Lowry's men had placed on the ground, and prepared to lay the walk under the contract with the city.

At the noon hour when Contractor Anderson's men were away, Dixon & Lowry's men shifted the material of the city contractor and a clash took place between the employes of the rival concerns that for a time threatened to result in serious trouble. The police department was requested to send officers to keep order and Dixon & Lowry decided to settle the question in the courts.

Inquiry at the office of the board of public works this morning indicates that the board believes City Contractor Anderson has the best of the argument. It stated that the walk which Mr. Ordean started to build was ordered in by the city and that the time during which the owner might go ahead with the work had expired.

It is held that this being the case it was only a matter of which contractor got his material on the ground first. Contractor Anderson was the first to place his material and begin operations and the board of public works will hold that he had actually entered upon his contract.

BREMERTON MUST SHOW

By What Right the Opening of Saloons Is Restrained.

Olympia, Wash., July 29.—The supreme court has issued an order returnable Friday, requiring the town council of Bremerton to show cause why they should not be restrained from interfering with the opening of the saloons of that place. In order to secure rescinding of the navy department's order that no more government craft shall go to the Bremerton yards on account of the immoral surroundings, the Bremerton town council revoked the liquor licenses of the saloons in the town. One saloonkeeper carried the matter into the courts, claiming the town council had no authority to revoke a license prior to its expiration. The lower court decided in favor of the town and the saloonkeeper appealed.

HONDURAS RAILROAD.

British Consul Is Dissatisfied With the Situation.

New York, July 29.—A dispatch to the Herald from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, says a representative of the New York syndicate to whom the Honduras railroad was under lease until seized recently by the government, has left Tegucigalpa and gone to San Francisco. He is understood to have made satisfactory arrangements with the government. But the British consul at Porto Cortez is said to be greatly dissatisfied over the situation and likely to urge, through the British minister at Guatemala City, that a warship be sent to his station to protect the interests of English stockholders in the railroad.

HE HAS SPECULOMNIA.

Former Wall Street Broker Goes to Poorhous.e

Greenwich, Conn., July 29.—Joseph Burtis Husted, a former Wall street broker and once owner of the farm which William Rockefeller bought, went to the town poorhouse yesterday. He refused the offers of his two sisters, who live near the poorhouse on large farms, to pay his board elsewhere, as he said that would deprive him of his independence. The sisters fear to give him money, knowing that he would go on Wall street and lose it, as he has done a number of times.

INSULTED LADIES.

Son of John Brisben Walker In Trouble.

Denver, Col., July 29.—William Walker, son of John Brisben Walker of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, is charged in a criminal warrant sworn out by M. J. Moore, clerk of the district court, with disturbance and carrying concealed weapons. Moore says that young Walker and he had a rough and tumble fight at Troutdale, a summer resort in Platte Canyon and while Moore has a black eye, he claims that he thoroughly whipped Walker. The cause of the fight as given by Moore, was Walker's brutal threats and insults to two reputable Denver ladies, one of them the wife of a Pinkerton official. Moore says the ladies, who were living in adjoining cottages were so badly terrorized by Walker that they did not dare to go out doors for two days when, Moore says, he learned of their trouble, hunted up Walker, demanded an explanation and became involved in the fight. The ladies then hurried to their homes here.

They confirm Moore's story and will appear in court if necessary. They say Walker carried a large revolver and terrorized everybody in the vicinity of Troutdale. Moore says he was told by the landlord of Walkers' hotel that he knew of the outrages but would not interfere because it was Brisben Walker's son.

COLLEGE FOR WOMEN.

Geneva, N. Y., July 29.—William Smith, a millionaire nurseryman, will, it is announced, found and endow a college for women to be known as the William Smith college for women. The institution will be on a site of thirty acres in the outskirts of the city. The plans call for one building to cost $150,000. Mr. Smith has made large donations to public institutions and also maintains the Smith observatory.

ACTIVITY DIMINISHING.

New York, July 29.—The activity of Vesuvius, which recently became quite marked, is now diminishing, says a Herald disatch from Nales. Explosions are less frequent and little lava is emitted.

PLAGIARISM INDICATED.

Providence, R. I., July 29.—Officials of Brown university have begun an investigation into the charge that the oration delivered by Maurice B. Rich, at the last Brown commencement, with which he won the Gaston medal, shows evidence of plagiarism from an oration of a student at Hamilton college in 1901.

HESSIAN FLY

North Dakota Crop Report Tells of Appearance In Valley.

Minnesota Report Is Not So Pessimistic as the Other.

The Hessian fly has appeared in the Red river valley according to the North Dakota crop report for the week ending Monday. This report comes from Grand Forks county and the statement is made there that it is doing considerable damage. Other parts of the state do not report its presence as yet.

A report was received in Duluth recently that the Hessian fly had been in some fields near Grand Forks but it did not indicate a general presence of the destructive bug.

The report for the week is not at all encouraging, telling of further deterioration of wheat. Flax is also said to have gone backward.

The report is as follows:

"The past week has been generally dry, although light to heavy showers fell at widely separated places, with temperatures above the normal, two of the days, Thursday and Friday, being extremely hot. In most sections the rains were only heavy enough to wash the dust off grain and freshen it up temporarily, but some few others had heavy enough showers to greatly benefit all crops. No hail is reported from any section. Gophers are doing considerable damage where crops are good, and the Hessian fly has appeared in the Red river valley, and is doing much damage.

Wheat is ripening fast in all sections but while it has made rapid advancement in some places, as a rule it has deteriorated during the week, and is not in as good condition as it was a week ago. Some fields are being plowed under, and in some places what there was left of the crop has been cut for feed.

Oats are ripening fast, but the yield promises to be light, as considerable rust has appeared in them and the straw is very short and the heads not well filled. Harvesting of barley is general and the bulk of the crop has now been cut. Most of the rye has also been harvested. Late sown forage crops are not doing well except in those sections that have been favored with heavy showers.

Flax has generally gone backward during the past week; that sown early has blossomed but the stand is thin and quite weedy, and some of it has been cut for fodder; that sown late does not promise much, as it is thin, straggling and weedy, and very uneven.

Corn is doing well but has been affected by the hot weather; it has been very backward, but the hot weather of the past week has forced a rapid growth, but it is now feeling the effect of the drouth and except where relieved by rain, is shrivelling up and fast going back. It has generally tasseled out, but is short, and not up to the average for fodder.

Haying is in progress in all parts, and in some, has been finished. The yield of hay is light; as a general thing thin, and will be scarce the coming winter."

The Minnesota report is somewhat at variance in central and western portions, those in parts of Lincoln, Pipestone, Rock and Noble counties being accompanied by very large severe hailstorms, which laid waste whole townships, causing damage to growing crops which will aggregate over $1,000,000. There were severe hailstorms and large loss in parts of Ottertail, Wadena and Becker counties also. There were scattered showers on other dates, too, most of them being light till the night of the 26th, or the morning of the 27th, when there were locally very heavy rains and severe thunderstorms in southern and middle western portions.

"Notwithstanding the fact that there had been little or no rain in the Red River valley at the time the reports were mailed, correspondents state that the wheat and oats on the fall-plowed lands seem to be improving in condition, and that they are filling well. The late sown wheat, oats and flax are poor.

"Rye is generally about all cut. Barley harvest is well advanced in the southern portions, and the crop is ready to cut in northern portions. In southeastern portions barley is a good crop. Barley and rye are being stacked in the South, and a little threshing has been done. Wheat and oats in southern portions are rusting, and some oats are being cut early for that reason. Early Champion oats are ripe. Where flax has not been too wet, the early sown is good and a little is ripe in the southwest. Hay is a very light crop in the North, but in the Southwest clover and timothy were heavy and large hay crops have been secured. The second crop of clover does not seem to have much seed, while timothy saved for seed promises a good crop. In south central and southwestern counties the wild hay meadows are still very wet, and some barley and rye fields are too soft for the use of binders. Corn has been growing well, and much of it is in tassel. Early potatoes are ripening."

CONVICTS AND GOOD ROADS

Plea For Permanent System For Good Road Building.

To the Editor of The Herald:

As the source of all power in each state is derived from the citizens, who uniting for a purpose confer upon their governor the vested right to direct the affairs of the state consistent with the best interests of all the people; as good roads in every part of the state, are essential to develop its wealth, to become a wonderful factor for the convenience of its citizens, by all means let each individual make use of his rights, and feel it his duty to combine and insist that the power and influence of the state be directed to create and establish a permanent system for the building of good roadways, easy of grade, perfect in construction, a good source for development, a pride for all time to come, whereon those who delight in rapid transit can go from any part of the state without delay or hinderance, giving localities the benefit of lavish expenditures to the advantage of local circulation.

This to be desired state of affairs is well worth striving for, and can be obtained if citizens will combine and without additional expense to the taxpayer over present outlay for the maintenance for the state prison, to result in so much good to the general interests of each state in every way, but particularly by the relief of honest labor from the competition of cheap prison labor, ever a source of friction because involving a problem difficult to combat, being a state charge.

The state, perforce must care for these unfortunate wards, a vast army for good, if all the prisoners of all the state were given to concentrate their time and services exclusively for the benefit of their respective states in building good roadways. The profit of prison labor is well known to the contractors of prison labor, and they are well equipped and prepared to fight all legislation against their interests. That leaves the citizen defenseless and without remedy, so long as he fails to combine.

For the sake of humanity, and in the interests of the spirit of mercy, let citizens combine and become insistent to place the unfortunate prisoner in a position to feel that he is giving his labor exclusively for the good of the state, whose laws he has broken, as his expiation will result in a more wholesome feeling, that will give evidence for his good, physically and spiritually.

Yes, by all means let the state prison as now managed be abolished, and the palatial architecture be adapted to the wants of the more helpless wards, and the prisoner placed in schools of discipline to be located where good stone abounds, where good clay is plentiful, where cement rock is convenient, and the prisoner can be kept busy for twelve months in the year preparing good material for a ten-inch concrete basis, to be covered with a vitrified brick surface, a roadway not excelled for durability and economy, because made with care, from good materials and the least possible cost because for the board of the labor that the state must support. The road force, i. e., the least vicious of the prisoners anxious for a little liberal rebate for good behavior, to be cared for, while on duty, in portable buildings, those not in use, to be moved on line of improvements near operations, the workmen to be rewarded by special consideration when too cold to do road work. The freight on material to nearest point of operations and incidental expenses, to be at the expense of the county benefited by the state road force.

The problem of permanent road building can be solved, the revenue and development of the state aided by the rise in land values and the increased products, and the condition of labor be freed from cheap and irritating competition, while the health, morals and comfort of the prisoner will be relieved from the demoralizing knowing that his services are sold for unmanly rates, to a contractor whose innate selfishness justifies getting all possible service from the prisoner, without regard to his feelings.

This much desired arrangement will also result in a still greater benefit to the prisoner and the community, as it should become evident to the thoughtful mind, that the prisoner thus engaged in promoting the one great need of the public, and not in earning money for the prison contractor, is entitled to consideration, that will grow in kindness and logic, i e. Why deprive the state of the services of the criminal? Why not let him expirate his crime for the good of his country and possibly benefit his spiritual welfare by living his natural lifetime, since the spirit of mercy will never blend with the rigors of the scaffold and the many bolts of the electric chair; fall not thus to lean to mercy for the good of your state and country.

Should not this question be of absolute importance to every citizen? Should he not assume that as its success depends upon their personal action that it is his duty to insist that prison labor be applied exclusively to promote the interest of the state, and not the detriment of honest labor. As no other question has so many claims upon each individual, your urgent efforts in behalf of humanity and in the name of mercy demands your action. No interest on your part will be of more interest to the rural citizen whose success means general success; that can be so easily secured by a united action, than to exact the best results from those whom the state must support and punish, for an action made by their own volition, than by insisting that the person so supported become a public benefactor, the permanent builder of good roads, until crime ceases to be. This subject is so important to the whole country, that every citizen will be justified in the firm resolve that "I would rather secure for my country a permanent system for road building than be its president." With this resolve by many interested citizens, the success of a permanent system for road building will be assured.

JOHANN MAY STAY.

San Francisco, July 29.—Johann Mueller, the bookkeeper of the Danish bank, who eloped with Julius Anton Jeergensen, cashier of the same institution at Copenhagen, who is now about to be sent back to Denmark on a charge of abstracting a large sum from its vaults, has been released from custody by United States Marshall Shine upon orders from Attorney General Knox. She will not be sent back to Denmark as she is in no way connected with the theft.

CREW'S NARROW ESCAPE.

New York, July 29.—Twenty men composing the crew of the tramp steamer Eastri, have had a narrow escape from death. Rushing from a burst of flame caused by an explosion of sulphuric acid gas in the hold of the ship, which was moored in the Erie basin, the men made their way up the black smoke filled hatchway and half smothered, plunged into the water. All were saved.

DRAMATIC STORY

Of Intrigue Told By Former King Milan of Servia.

Aide Who Poisoned Wine Compelled to Drain the Cup.

Chicago, July 29.—Walter Wellman, in a Washington special to the Record-Herald, says:

One of the most dramatic stories of royal life I ever heard was told me by Morton Frewen, the English traveler and economist, shortly before he sailed for home a few weeks ago. Mr. Frewen is a good deal of a sportsman and has visited many countries in search of big game.

Some years ago he was one of a party that occupied a hunting lodge in the depth of a Hungarian forest. Among the other sportsmen there was King Milan of Servia. One evening, while they were all gathered about the supper table in the hunting lodge, Milan told this story:

"I had not long been upon the throne of Servia," said he king, "before my secret agents brought me the details of a plot that had been formed against my life. The conspiracy embraced so many men in military and civil life that my advisers were very much alarmed and wanted me to cause them all to be summarily removed. I replied that it was not the business of a king to depopulate his kingdom, and if I executed every man who joined a plot against me it would not be long before I had no people to rule over.

"According to the plans of the conspirators, I was to be put out of the way by means of poison. An annual ceremonial banquet was soon to be held, and one of my aides-de-camp, Col. Blank, whose duty it was to hand me a golden goblet of wine, was to see that the cup contained the poison. Declining to accept the advice of my ministers to make immediate arrests and telling them to leave the whole matter in my hands, I went to the banquet. At the proper moment in the ceremonies, the aide-de-camp came up to me, extended the golden goblet and made a very pretty speech, commending my reign as a blessing to the Servian people, and wishing me many years of health and happiness.

"I took the goblet," continued Milan, "and held it aloft a moment while I gazed about the banquet hall. You may imagine, gentlemen, the tension of that moment. Fromouy a third of the people in the room knew that the wine was poisoned, many of the conspirators being present, as well as those of my trusted people who had been informed of the plot. As I looked into the eyes of the hundred men who sat watching me, it seemed to me I could distinguish the friends from the foes, though it was not difficult to tell which were in the majority. Probably I was the calmest man of them all, for I knew all that they knew and something more besides.

"'Nobles and gentlemen of Servia,' I exclaimed, 'it gives me great pleasure to receive this mark of affection and support of my people. It is with the happiest feelings of good will to all and love for our dear country, that I drink to your toast.'

"At this juncture I touched my lips to the golden goblet and watched with keen interest the involuntary shudder that ran around the room. Pausing, then, without having tasted the wine, you may be sure, I resumed:

"'Upon second thought I will not drink this toast myself. I see around me scores of my loyal officers, ministers and friends. There is one among them who has given me such marked proof of his devotion that I now propose to pay him the unusual honor of asking him to be my deputy and to drink this toast in my stead.'

"So saying, I turned to Col. Blank, the aide-de-camp and would-be regicide, who stood by my side, and handed the goblet to him. I shall never forget the look upon his face. In his eyes I could read his thoughts; he had been betrayed; his plot was known to me; he had his choice between drinking his own poison or being executed by my orders before daylight. He hesitated a moment, but only for a moment, then he bowed to me and to the company, and drained the cup to the last drop. A few moments later he fell dead at my feet.

"'And that,' concluded the king, 'is what I call the death of a gentleman. He took his own medicine with a bravery worthy of a better cause.'"

I asked Mr. Frewen if he had reason to believe this was a true story. He said he had. He had questioned some of Milan's attendants, and they declared they had been present at the banquet and had witnessed the episode precisely as Milan had told it. For obvious reasons the affair was not permitted to get into the newspapers.

BRUCE WILL RESUME WORK

Of Making Selections For the Big Federal Forest Reserve.

Washington, July 29.—Eugene S. Bruce, lumber expert for the bureau of forestry, leaves for Minnesota to resume work in making selections for the big federal forest reserve on the Chippewa Indian reservation. Mr. Bruce has already selected for the national reserve 104,469 acres of land, upon which 5 per cent of pine is to be left for reforestation. Of this area 14,752 acres are agricultural and 98,707 acres are pine land. In addition there are ten sections that have been selected to remain intact, as have also the islands in Cass lake, Sugar Point and Pine Point. The 95 per cent of pine on this first selection is to be sold under sealed bids, Dec. 28. Mr. Bruce and his assistants will be at work until late this fall on the reservations.

Land Commissioner Richards, owing to the serious illness of his wife, will not take up the Cass Lake land office matter this week. It is now doubtful if anything is done until September. Mr. Richards will not be prepared to resume official duties at his office for several days, and the case will remain in statu quo for awhile. Mr. Buckman expresses himself as confident that no change will be made, and the department is going ahead advertising sales of pine lands at Cass Lake.

Officials of the general land office are somewhat indignant over the statements printed in Minneapolis papers relative to the time limit for removing pine on the lands to be sold at the first sale, beginning Dec. 5.

The statements are misleading, and the figures given wide of the mark. The facts are that the land office is undertaking to pursue a business policy and meet, if possible, the urgent and repeated demands for the opening of the agricultural and pine lands.

The stories about several billion feet being sold at the first sale are wide of the mark. Official figures show 120,147,000 feet of white, and 83,616,000 feet of Norway pine to be sold at the first sale. The department will insist, for the time being, on the time limit of June 1, 1905, being maintained for the first sale, but on the second sale, to open at Cass Lake Dec. 28, it is quite probable that the limit will be fixed at July 1, 1907, thus giving three winters to do logging.

This, it is said, is the greatest concession the department will make. Secretary Hitchcock and Land Commissioner Richards are determined to dispose of the long-standing Chippewa question at the very earliest date possible. One billion feet is almost four times as much pine as will be offered at the first sale, the exact amount being 262,763,000 feet.

PEOPLE'S PARTY.

Two Factions Will Be United Into One.

Denver, July 28.—The two factions of the People's party, each with a national organization, will be amalgamated into one party by action to be taken this evening at the national conference of the People's party and Allied Reform parties, now in session in this city. The committee on resolutions and addresses will today issue a proclamation that will call on the several factions of the Populist party to unite. It will also contain the declaration of principles. A list of names composed of one person from each state, who will act as provisional committeemen, is being prepared also, the names to be announced after the adoption of the report of the committee on resolutions.

No business was transacted this morning. The conference met, but the committees were not ready to report, and recess was taken till this afternoon.

USED DUMMY VOUCHERS.

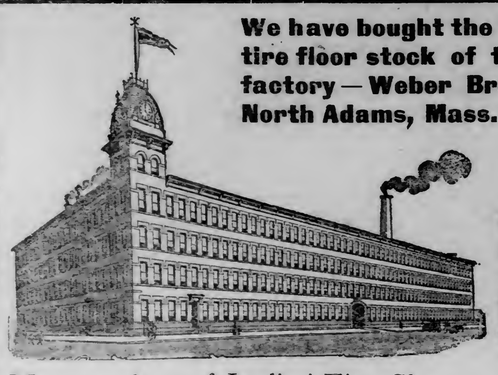

How Hawaiian Legislators Robbed the Treasury.

Honolulu, July 29.—The federal grand jury will investigate Clerk Solomen Mehule and other officials of the house of representatives, who are accused of destroying the vouchers for the expenditures of the house during the last two sessions.

These expenditures amounted to $70,000, far more than the expeditures of any session except that of two years ago. The white members made an effort to have the vouchers made public, but the natives objected and voted the proposal down. It is said the natives received large sums on dummy vouchers and are amenable by statute.

IMPORTANT MATTERS

New School Board Has a Number to Come Before It.

Overcrowding of Schools One of the Most Perplexing Problems.

The first meeting of the school board to be held since the recent elections, will take place next Saturday evening in the board room at the high school.

One of the first matters to be taken up by the new board will be the election of a chairman. At least two names have been mentioned by various members of the board for the position, those of F. B. Smith and Dr. C. L. Codding.

The new board has a number of pressing matters demanding its attention. Overcrowding in the schools, which was the cause of many anxious moments to the board last year, promises to be increased this year, and the problem of finding accommodations for the rapidly increasing number of students will present itself to the board as soon as the fall term commences. This condition of affairs is at its worst in some of the West Duluth schools and in those in the central part of the city.

In addition to this serious question the board will face a shortage in ready money, nothing but the most rigid economy on the part of the board last year keeping it out of financial difficulties. At times last year the board was compelled to appoint special committees for the purpose of raising ready money.

This year, however, unless the board is compelled to expend large sums to relieve the overcrowding in the schools, this shortage will be relieved and the normal condition of affairs regained.

The residents of West Duluth have also started an agitation for high school facilities in that portion of the city, and although the movement may not result in any action on the part of the board this year, the question will probably come up for some discussion. West Duluth has now two representatives on the board, and while no action would be taken that would make too large a hole in the building fund, it is not likely that these two members would be adverse to seeing West Duluth provided with high school facilities.

YACHT CLUB MAKING PLANS

Has Building of a Fine Club House In Contemplation.

At a meeting of the members of the Duluth Yacht club, held last evening in the Commercial club, it was decided to hold a cruise to Two Harbors or some other nearby point on Lake Superior, some time during the month of August.

The cruise will be made an annual event. This year the members will start Saturday and return Sunday evening.

Races were arranged for the remaining Saturdays during the present season, and the racing committee will complete the details of the races.

A rule was passed which allows only club members to be carried in the boats during the races.

The club was re-organized and new officers elected. The following are the officers for the coming year: President H. H. Johnson; commodore, Frank R. Leslie; vice-commodore, J. A. Kent; captain, C. P. McCormick; secretary, G. H. Letteau; treasurer, Joseph Roth.

The club now has thirty-five members owning twelve boats and is in a very prosperous condition.

A committee was appointed last evening to look into the advisability of building a new club house, which is planned for next year. The committee is to look into the probable expense of such an undertaking and report at a future meeting of the club.

CHARGE USE OF A RINGER

Duluth Police Say Superior Is Working In a Man on Them.

The ball game between the Duluth and Superior police departments, which was played in Superior last week and which resulted so disastrously to the Duluth team, is being protested by the locals on the ground that the Superior department broke the agreement and rang in an outside player in the person of James McGowan, a bartender for J. B. Ennis, of Superior. It is claimed that while McGowan, who played third base for the Superior department team, has an application before the police and fire commission of that city for a position on the force, he is not a regular member and is not therefor entitled to play with the Superior patrolmen.

The members of the local dpeartment who played ball in Superior are all men who have seen considerable service on the department and Chief Troyer made affidavit to that effect before the game. He supposed that Chief McKinnon of the Superior department would be as fair.

The locals were given the tip while in Superior that the police ball team there would bear investigation for ringers and it was supposed that the catcher was not eligible. An investigation, however, showed that he has been in the department four months.

Yesterday one of the Duluth detectives discovered McGowan tending bar in Ennis' saloon and the locals declare that his presence in the game was a direct violation of the agreement that none but regular members of the department should play.

JOHNSON MADE SWIFT TRACKS

Got Away Under a Misunderstanding and Skipped Quickly.

Frank A. Johnson, the "Lone Swede," arrested by Chief Troyer in a Bowery saloon Monday evening, left the city in a hurry yesterday afternoon. His departure is regretted by the police department as it resulted through a misunderstanding, the intention being to hold him until the police could hear whether he was wanted elsewhere.

Johnson was arraigned before Judge Windom on the charge of vagrancy, but as Chief Troyer was busy on the Proctorknott attempted bank robbery the court was not informed as to Johnson's police record or the circumstances under which it was desired that he be held, Judge Windom suspended sentence with the understanding that Johnson leave the city, which he did without delay.

THRILLING FIGHTS

With Copperhead Snakes By the Farmers In Ohio.

Venomous Reptiles More Numerous This Season Than Ever.

Barnesville, Ohio, July 29.—It is the season for snake stories, and every farmer is telling of thrilling encounters with copperheads. A scope of territory southwest of Barnesville, known as the Leatherwood valley, Oppenshaw Ridge, Gobblers' Knobb, Dog Hollow, Harmony and other well-known settlements, is the veritable home and propagating grounds of the venomous copperhead. It has been their home for years, and, notwithstanding they are destroyed by thousands every season, the tribe continues to flourish. This season the snakes are vastly more numerous than ever.

Much of the country where the snakes abounds consists of stony hillsides, which have been denuded of their virgin growth of timber, and either have been allowed to grow up in briars and bushes or now and then yield a crop of tobacco to the patient and toiling husbandman. A tobacco plant of sufficient growth is a favorite place for a copperhead to coil and strike the hand of the farmer who is cultivating his crop, pulling the worms from the plant or stripping the leaves. Instances are numerous every season of farmers being bitten while taking their tobacco, but in most instances they have antidotes and no deaths are recorded. Copious draughts of whisky generally bring the victim out all right, and not a few pin their faith to a prompt application of turpentine to the wound.

Once James Smith, a well-known farmer of Leatherwood valley, was bitten on the hand by a copperhead and came near dying before a messenger could gallop to town and back with a half gallon of whisky, all of which, it is said, Smith swallowed as fast as he could, and when after several days he recovered from the whisky he had also recovered from his snake bite.

Just at this time the copperhead has a liking to the harvest field. It is one of the snake's delight to coil under a swath of hay or in a sheaf of grain. It is common for a farmhand to encounter one of the nasty things in a forkful of hay or to embrace one as he picks up a sheaf of grain to bind. A man named Carpenter caught two vicious fellows in sheaves of wheat a day or two ago, one of which bit him on the hand. After dispatching the snake he hastened to the house and applied turpentine freely to the wound and then went on with his work of gathering in the sheaves. But to the well-known and hardy Carpenter race there attaches a legend that neither lightning from the storm cloud nor the lurking copperhead snake was never known to kill an individual by the name, though both deadly agencies have tried it many times.

In some portions of the territory mentioned copperhead snakes are so plentiful this season that even the most intrepid are frightened and renewed efforts for their extermination are now on. Among the more prominent snake hunters this season are Emmor Hall, Alex Moore, George and James Anderson, Sam Boyd, France Knox, Levi Matthews, Jim Hardesty and many others.

So far Knox holds the championship. In one afternoon he encountered sixty-four copperheads and killed every one of them. Matthews comes next. While bringing up the cows for the evening milking he dispatched twenty-eight, not, however, until one had spent its venom in the leg of his rubber boot. George Anderson's special way of killing the snakes is to clip them in two with his mowing machine. In one day's mowing recently he decapitated eleven good-sized "coppers."

Bob Evans and Earl Moore were hunting groundhogs when one of their dogs, a small beagle hound, got too close to the lair of a "copper" and was bitten on the nose. The boys recognized the danger to the dog and hastened with it to a farm house. Within ten minutes the dog's head was swollen to three times its normal size, but large doses of milk and warm grease poured into the dog saved its life, though the animal was laid up for more than two weeks. The dog now is a terror to copperhead snakes and never fails to kill every one that he comes in contact with, and though bitten at times, shows no ill effect from the poison.

Alex Moore had a valuable Jersey cow bitten by a large copperhead, the snake fastening its fangs in the cow's udder. Within a short time the udder became terribly swollen and turned a dark purple. While it did not result in the death of the cow it forever ruined her as a milker. Instances are frequent of stock being bitten by these snakes. The snakes as a rule seem to prefer young stock, such as colts, calves, lambs, etc. In most cases death resulted. One case is cited where a lamb was bitten and died from the effects, and later the carcass was found lying in the pasture field and upon it was complacently coiled the snake that had caused its death.

One of the most prominent snake-fighters in this neighborhood is Larry Mahoney. Larry's ancestors, so tradition says, helped St. Patrick drive the snakes out of Ireland. Mahoney has done, and is doing, what he can to exterminate the copper-head. In his lifetime he is credited with killing more snakes of this species than any man living. He is not the least "afeered" of the reptiles, and when he encounters one he simply clubs or stones it to death or stamps the life out of it with his boot-heel.

Such well-known residents of copperheadom as Jim Oppenshaw, George Jackson, George and Charlie Douglas, Dick Davey, Jimmy Fowler, Levi Mott, Jim Welsh, Josh Cleary, George Fowler, Billy Scofield and many others know by experience what a copperhead snake is, but in the whole list Emmor Hall, of Leatherwood, is the only one who has succeeded in making a pet of a copperhead. This he did some time ago, and during his ownership taught the snake to catch a small yarn ball thrown at it, and to return the ball by a swinging motion of its head.

Hall's brother George, a swarthy blacksmith of this place, is another of the few persons who are not afraid of copperheads. This fellow has hypnotic powers over beasts and reptiles, birds and insects, and handles them with impunity and immunity to himself.

But there are too many copperhead snakes in the localities mentioned for the comfort of the residents therein, and an organized effort is now on to exterminate them if possible. It is not a pleasant greeting for a farmer's wife or daughter to go to the springhouse and find a couple of "coppers" coiled on the lids of the milk crocks. It sort o' makes the farm wife lose interest in the market price of eggs to find a "copper" coiled up in the hen's nest in the fence corner or in some old tumbled-down building. Somehow the farmer girls don't like to go out in the pasture field to milk, and find a half dozen of these snakes in their path, and there is a general feeling of unrest over the over-abundant crop of snakes this season.

Last Saturday afternoon a number of the snake-fighters met at a popular trading place on Chestnut street, and each reported the number of snakes of the copperhead species killed in the several localities during the week. The number footed up to 968, with two of the most noted snakekillers' reports not in, owing to a big washout in the Dog Hollow woods.

ENJOYS TRIP TO DULUTH

Frank H. Gentry, of the famous Gentry Bros., proprietors of dog and pony shows known all over the United States, arrived in the city last night, having run in from Omaha several days ahead of the show that he is managing to get a breath of Lake Superior's fresh, cool breezes.

"I always look forward to my annual visit to Duluth," said Mr. Gentry last evening, "and this time I had looked forward so long, and it was so infernally hot where we have been for the past few weeks that I could not wait to come with the show, but slipped on ahead and landed here today. I am enjoying every minute of the time, for it has been inexpressibly hot through Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, where we have been showing lately.

"We show here Friday and Saturday, and if we do not have good business it will be the first time it has happened in Duluth. The show is much larger than it has ever been before, with many new features. It is getting to be a bigger proposition every year. A couple of years ago we were traveling with twenty or thirty people, and now the stock has increased so that we have to carry 120 men, using half a dozen cars.

"This has been the most prosperous season we have ever had. The Northwest is in excellent shape financially, and that has worked to our advantage, of course. We are just coming from South Dakota, where the crops are immense and everybody seems to be contented and happy.

"Duluth is making wonderful strides. I can see her grow every year as I come here. I did not make this city last year, one of my brothers coming with his show instead, so it has been two years since I saw the city. It has made wonderful advances since that time. I have always taken a particular interest in Duluth, and I am as proud of her growth as I would be if I lived here all the time. I wish I did live here, too, but a showman hardly ever gets a chance to live anywhere."

Mr. Gentry is the youngest of four brothers, who started out years ago with one dog and pony show and who now have four of them, of equal size, on the road. They are numbered, but not according to merit, as theatrical companies often are. They are numbered according to age. The show that Frank H. Gentry handles, which is coming here Friday and Saturday, is the No. 4 show, and it has been coming here, with the exception of last season, for half a dozen years.

SECOND WATCH DISCOVERED

Pawning of Another Stolen Timepiece Traced to Robert Harris.

The police department has secured additional evidence against Robert Harris, the negro whom Chief Troyer arrested Monday evening in a Bowery pawn shop, where he was negotiating a loan on a watch stolen from F. H. Chandler, of this city.

Yesterday Detective Irvine located in a Superior pawn shop a watch stolen from Albion Anderson, a tailor employed by William Mies, in the Wolvin building. The watch was pawned last Saturday evening. The pawnbroker said two colored men called at his place that evening and one secured a loan on the watch.

Harris was identified as one of the men, but the pawnbroker could not remember the other until it was suggested to him that unless he assisted the officers his license might be revoked. He then remembered that a colored barber in Superior, by the name of Fields, accompanied Harris.

Fields admitted that he was with Harris, but he claimed the watch was a silver timepiece, while Anderson's was a gold watch, and that it was pawned Thursday evening. Fields claimed that Harris was only an acquaintance.

Harris' preliminary hearing has been set for tomorrow.

I have no hesitancy in recommending your S. S. S. as the best Spring tonic on the market. I have used many other medicines, but find S. S. If you suffer from debility, insomnia, nervousness, loss of appetite, bad digestion, or any of the symptoms of a disordered blood, nothing will so soon put your blood in good condition, invigorate and tone up the system as S. S. S.

HADJI DIED DREAMING

Passed Away on the Desert Among His Old Friends.

He Came From Armenia With a Herd of Camels.

Phoenix, Ariz., July 29.—A party of hunters had reached the mining camp of Kingman in Arizona territory after three months in the solitude of forests on the rim of the Grand canyon of the Colorado, and they were celebrating their return to the settlements in characteristic disorder. This meant a night in the "Palace" gambling joint, humorously labeled by its proprietors with placards on the rough board wall, which read like this:

"The Only Second-Class Saloon in Arizona."

"We scouted queer game this trip," spoke up one of the Nimrods. "Camels—wild camels. One Apache devil said they're heap good grub.'"

A shout greet the uncertain approach of a short heavy set foreigner of swarthy features, who at this statement turned feebly and listened for more of the narration.

"Hi jolly!" they exclaimed in chorus, as they recognized the veteran Armenian camel driver, Hadji, and addressed him in the "cow-puncher" adaptation of his name.

"Lash my cayuse," ejaculated Tim Holderman, the loquacious hunter who had ventured the tale of the camels, "era bit o' meat the Apaches would o' had this season if that old Turk hadn't o' brought them pesky hump-backed varmints to the deserts. Loosen yer yer cinch, old hoss, and put a jolt under yer belt."

"I will drink, and thanks to gentlemen," returned the Armenian, and as he drank of the "pizen" he smacked his lips with an air of satisfaction, which soon changed to one of melancholy interest as he motioned the narrator to proceed with the story of the camels.

"Don't believe his yarn, Hi Jolly," warned the husky buckeye, who wetting of the whistle of his own tanglefoot with surprising tenacity. "Not many o' you fellers wuz here nigh onto fourteen year ago, when we had a slaughter o' them camels.

"Old Jack Looney was a-freightin' under guvernment contract when he turned up in this joint with a yarn about a whole durned herd o' wild camels wiping stampeded his outfit, and he was vowin' bloody vengeance.

"The boys all said they had a poor run o' luck ever sense them critters was brought to this section, so they loaded their shootin' irons for big game, and in twentyfour hours there wusn't a humpback left on the plains.

"Indians had a big feast and everybody said we'd have a little better run o' luck, excep'in' Hi Jolly, an' it puts him out of a job."

"Your big Gen'ral Miles, my boss, lose me my job long ago," remarked the Armenian. "He says: 'Hadji, camels no d— good here. Feet get sore, can't travel. Diff'rent kind deserts in your country. Bad times for Hadji since then. I try work in mine, but get too tired and want much my country."

The men exchanged significant glances for it was plain that the lonely alien was not long for any country.

"Gettin' long in years, ain't you, ole man," and the vaquero nooded to the barkeep for fresh supplies. "Thar, old hoss, take another jolt. Nothin' puts iron in a man's arm like Whisky Brown's booze."

"I been here many year," continued the nonogenarian, "I come in '57 on big ship Suwanee. Hadji and camels get very tired of ship all the way from Asia. Then we have fight with bad Indians. Gen'ral Miles he want camels to take grub cross desert to his men. But nigh mountain trails too rocky for camels. Gen'ral, he say camels no good and turn 'em loose. I love the camels that come from my country and stay with them, but Indians take me and I escape. I guess camels all die," he concluded, with a touch of sentiment in his voice.

"You're all wrong, Hi Jolly," declared big Jake Miller, a horny-handed prospector, who spoke for the first time. "I was crossin' Malapai gulch on a prospectin' trip and saw three o' the critters the other day. Breed's run down, I guess, since the varmints been runnin' wild. They weren't no bigger'n cow-ponies, but they carried their necks higher. I could a tossed a rope over the head o' one of 'em, but my cayuse got scared and begins a pitchin' ways'n you ever seen an' started straight cross country for Cedar Grove. There wern't no holdin' him, and I lost my pack o' burros as well as the camels."

"What kind o' luck did ye have in yer bear hunt?" interrupted the proprietor of the "Palace." All but one pair of eyes turned toward Tim Holderman, who proceeded to relate the slaughter of burros at the Grand canyon.

The Armenian was forgotten and the camel incident was lost sight of in the thrilling recital of more recent experiences.

Hadji strolled over to the faro game. Three cards remained hidden in the box.

"Call the turn," suggested the dealer. A brilliant solitaire in the bosom of his gingham shirt spoke eloquently of those who had failed to turn this little trick at his "hog box." The Armenian was engrossed in a flood of remainscence and wandered off without paying attention to the salutations in gambler's vernacular.

"I don't often try to call the turn at another man's game," said the faro dealer, addressing a bystander, "but I'll bet his eye guess if old Hi Jolly isn't about ready to cash in his chips."

The dealer called the turn.

Away from the scene of clashing glasses, loud laughter and discordant saloon music the old man lay down in his adobe hut to sleep. But the memories of an eventful career flashed on the lantern slide of his life, awakening a fitful unrest.

Early scenes of his boyhood flitted across his mental vision. There haunted him the face of the woman he had married in early youth and deserted for the opportunity of joining the American expedition when the secretary of state, Jefferson Davis, had induced the government to bring the Eastern beasts of burden into the great American desert.

Hadji longed for the religious solace of the soft-voiced priests; for the dim churches of his sect. In the light of breaking day he arose and started toward the open country in the direction of Cedar Grove, where the prospector had seen the last remnant of the once stately procession of the ships of the desert.

The Sirocco winds scorched his face and twisted his uncanny white beard and unkempt locks across his sight. On and on he plodded over burning sands, his eyes riveted on the oasis of Cedar Grove and a neighboring chain of low sand hills, which seemed to recede as he approached.

"Ah," he exclaimed, and his features were illuminated with a look of glad surprise. High up in the cloudless sky of the Mojave desert appeared the most singular and startling of desert phenomena. Plainly outlined on nature's canopy was an inverted picture of a small heard of camels—a mirage.

"Hy-a, hy-a," he shouted as he gazed upon the picturesque climax of his day of search. He plodded on stubbornly toward his goal. His hands were lacerated by his frequent falls into the cacti-covered ravines, but he reached the plains beyond. As the darkness grew intense there loomed before him a faint, mountainous outline. His old-time summons in his native tongue was not unheeded as his words echoed in the dry gorges of the sand hills. Another and another animal was shown to be standing near him.

Hadji approached them slowly, murmuring soft syllables of endearment, and the camels stood in an attitude of uncertainty for their wild life had given them the hallmark of the early species. The Armenian straightened his form to native dignity. As he approached his one-time charge he was again Hadji, the camel driver, and no longer Hi Jolly, who had been for so long the butt of the miners' good-natured cuss. He commanded them to kneel, and the leader dropped down, as he had been trained to do, in response to the word. The others followed his example.

In his dreams he reached his home.

AT WEST DULUTH

Two workmen at the blast furnace engaged in a mix-up yesterday, which narrowly escaped costing one of the men his life.

A man named McCann and another workman, who had been at the furnace but a short time, quarreled over the handling of some iron. Both men are said to have been drinking prevous to the incident, and they quickly lost their tempers. McCann suddenly raised the heavy shovel which he was carrying, and before the other man could make a move to defend himself, struck him heavily on the head, knocking him to the ground.

He was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried to his boarding house on Central avenue, near Raleigh street.

Here he revived after a short time, but refused to allow the owner of the house to send for a doctor. He also declined to say anything to the police about the assault.

He has not returned to his work since the incident, and has left the Sherman house, where he was boarding. It is believed by the proprietor of the place that he has left the city. He was known to be discontented and had several times spoken of leaving the city. He came here from Chicago about three months ago.

THE THIRD AND LAST.

Next Party of Land Seekers to Leave Wednesday.

The third, and what will probably be the last, party of land-seekers will leave West Duluth next Wednesday for California to file on timber claims.

When Mr. Smith, who is organizing the party, got together the first party, which he accompanied himself, he did not expect to send another. The glowing accounts of the returned members, however, inspired a number of other West Duluthians with a desire to visit California, and the second party was organized, a number of the members of the first party sending their wives. About forty residents of this portion of the city have now made the trip and secured claims within a circle not more than five miles in circumference.

Mr. Gilman, who located the two parties, is in the city, and on his return to California next week will take with him a number of others who desire to file on claims. He has had numerous applications from residents of the small towns in the neighborhood of Duluth, and the prospects are that the party will be fully as large as either of the others, although the number of West Duluthians in it will be smaller.

The timber in the district is being taken up so rapidly by Eastern parties that there will not likely be any claims left in the vicinity after the end of August.

The members of the party expected to leave last week, but delayed their departure until after Aug. 1, in order to take advantage of the cheap rates which are offered by the railroad.

ANNUAL PICNIC.

The Swedish Benevolent association will hold its annual picnic at Zenith park next Sunday.

The association has a large membership in West Duluth and the picnic will doubtless be largely attended. The members of the society in Superior will also join in the picnic.

There will be a program of sports held during the day, and boats will be run both from Superior and West Duluth to the grounds. This is the ninth annual picnic of the association.

The steamer Balcom will run to the grounds from Superior and the Mary Mann from West Duluth.

The members of the association at the head of the lakes, and their friends will turn out in a body, and the crowd at Zenith park promises to be one of the largest of the year.

CHORAL SOCIETY CONCERT.

The choral society of West Duluth will give a grand concert this evening in the Great Eastern hall.

The society is composed of some of the best amateur talent in West Duluth. The members have been practising for some time past under the leadership of P. H. Evanson, and the concert this evening promises to be a most sucessful one.

In addition to the choruses there will be several vocal solos by prominent singers, inuding Mr. Milton B. Griffith, Miss Carolin Teter, Miss Clara Bousha, Earl Stumpf and Roy Prytz.

The Y. M. C. A. orchestra will also assist in the program.

Miss Blanche Murray and Leon Stavseth will be the accompanists. The chorus consists of twenty-five voices, specially trained for the occasion, and the concert promises to be a most enjoyable one.

AN ACT OF HEROISM

Amos Chapman's Rescue of Wounded Friend Under Hot Fire.

Guthrie, Okla., July 29.—The recent visit of Lieut. Gen. Miles to Oklahoma and his approaching retirement from the command of the United States army brings into prominence again that old army scout who annually visits Gen. Miles in Washington, Amos Chapman, of whom Miles says: "Chapman performed one of the bravest deeds in the annals of the army."

Amos Chapman now lives out in Woods county, in western Oklahoma, where, when the Cherokee Strip was opened to settlement, he took a claim near Cottonwood lake. He frequently appears in Alva and other larger west side towns on business with the government land offices, but as a rule he sticks close to his claim except during the time of his sojourn with his old commander in Washington.

Amos Chapman is one of the fast disappearing type of men who lived in the Western country when it was not safe to venture far from the scattered army posts. He is one of the most celebrated of the old Indian scouts now living in the Southwest, coming to Oklahoma first in 1868, when Gen. Custer was operating against the Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Kiowas and Comanches. Prior to that time Chapman was in the employ of the government as courier and scout at Forts Harker, Dorned and Dodge in Kansas. At Fort Supply, in Oklahoma, Chapman was chief of scouts for years, his employment only ending when the fort was abandoned by the government a few years ago. He is chiefly noted for the fight in which he was a main feature with the Cheyennes and Arapahoes at a point near the Antelope hills, along the western Oklahoma-Texas border, and in which battle he lost a leg. This occurred in 1874, when Gen. Miles was conducting a punitive campaign against these Indians.

Gen. Miles, with the main force, was near what was then known as Canyon Blanco, and the rations running short, Chapman and four soldiers were sent back toward Fort Supply to intercept the supply train and guide it to the command. On the morning of the second day after leaving Gen. Miles' command the party of five were attacked just at daylight just north of the Antelope hills by a large body of mounted Indians. Every horse belonging to the five was killed at the first fire and one of the soldiers, William Dixon, was wounded in both shoulders. An attempt by the party to reach the crest of the hill was intercepted by the Indians, who rode between the soldiers and the hill, but another attempt, this time to reach a buffalo wallow, was successful, all but Dixon reaching it in safety. A number of Indians were killed and the redskins then withdrew out of rifle range. All the packs were lost with the horses, but a German soldier in the party had a hunting knife, and with this he threw up breastworks for the protection of the men. Chapman turned his attention to the rescue of Dixon, whose wounds prevented him from reaching the wallow. He reached Dixon safely and, with the wounded man on his back, started again for the wallow. Several times did he let Dixon slide to the ground as Indians rode close to shoot at Chapman and his wounded comrade. When within a quarter of a mile of the wallow, however, Chapman was struck by a bullet on the shin bone of the right leg and the bone shattered. Immediately another struck him on the right ankle. Still did Chapman not give up, but, catching the soldier's collar in one hand, he continued to drag the wounded bluecoat until he reached the wallow. Chapman crawling ahead and stopping at intervals to fire at the Indians who would approach too close for safety. In the shallow hole scooped out by the German the wounded were placed. Chapman, besides his wounds, had two bullet holes through his hat and three through his coat.

Dixon died early the next morning and for five days afterward the four men stood off a band of Indians, estimated at 150 strong. At any time a charge by the Indians would have ended the fight, but they knew that in attempting it some of them would be killed by the four soldiers. During all these five days the men were without food, and for two days without water, but on the third a good rain fell, thus relieving their sufferings, as far as thirst was concerned. All four were wounded during the fight. On the afternoon of the fifth day the soldiers saw the Indians hurriedly ride together and scamper swiftly away and within a few minutes four troops of cavalry, commanded by Maj. Price, came in sight. A brief skirmish followed with the Indians, resulting in victory for the troops and the rescue of Chapman and his three comrades. Dixon was buried in the buffalo wallow, where the fight had been so bitter. When rescued, Chapman said his men had given their rifle cartridge left together with several rounds of revolver ammunition, and Maj. Price had no food for them excepting mule meat. With Chapman and the other wounded on horseback, the march was resumed, and within four days more the supply train was located and guided to Miles' headquarters.

Twenty days later, Chapman, by order of Gen. Miles, was removed to Fort Supply, where his right leg was amputated. He remained in the hospital just six days, and within a month was again in the saddle. It was of the fight in the buffalo wallow and the rescue of the wounded man by Chapman that Miles made the statement, referred to above, that "Chapman performed one of the bravest deeds in the annals of the army."

Naturally, Chapman believes that death only should sever Gen. Miles from his station at the head of the army, for he retains a great love for his old commander. He is now preparing for his annual trip to Washington, where, as the guest of the lieutenant general of the United States army, the one-legged scout, grizzled and modest, will spend a month hobnobbing with the epaulets.

A CHOICE OF POLICY GIGS.

"Every now and then an arrest is made of some person charged with promoting policy, but the local authorities have the situation well in hand, and there is not as much playing as in olden days," said Jake Berman, of the Washington detective force, to a Washington Times man.

"Policy, by reason of its simplicity, appeals to the very ignorant. There are supposed to be four drawings daily of the policy lottery. There are two different companies, each having a drawing morning and evening. These drawings, known as the 'Frankfort' and 'Kentucky' games, are said to be done in Covington. In reality, the drawings take place in or near New York City, and such numbers are drawn as will give the largest percentage of gains to the 'policy king.'

"Seventy-eight numbers are theoretically held in a wheel. Twelve are withdrawn for each of the morning drawings and thirteen for each of the afternoon drawings. This most simple form of gambling at policy is a wager on the first numbers drawn. As there are 78 numbers, the odds against guessing the first out should be 71 to 1. Instead of those odds, 50 to 1 is paid. Twenty-five to one is paid that the number cannot be guessed which will be first from in either of the morning drawings. The odds should be 3 8to 1.

"Most familiar of the policy plays is known as a 'gig.' The player attempts to guess three of the twelve numbers drawn in the morning or three of the thirteen numbers drawn in the afternoon. In the morning the odds are 100 to 1 against the 'gig,' and in the afternoon the same odds are paid, less 12½ per cent. Instead of being 100 to 1, the legitimate odds against 'gig' should 304 to 1.

"There is what is known as a 'cross gig,' which permits the three numbers to be drawn in either of the drawings, morning or afternoon. The odds are cut 8 to 1. A 'saddle' consists of two numbers instead of three, and the odds are but 12 to 1. A 'horse' consists of four numbers, and the odds are 400 to 1; they should be 1200 to 1.

"There are many other combinations which may be made to decrease or increase the odds, and the devotees of the game almost learn a language of their own in discussing it. From the short description here given it can be sheen even when honestly conducted policy is a thieving game.

"Policy players become exceedingly superstitious and take advantage of minor incidents, hoping to obtain a winning 'gig.' For this reason certain things are popularly thought to indicate the early appearance of certain numbers. Various 'gigs' have been named. With negro players 4-11-4 compose a favorite 'gig,' and when these numbers appear, as they do on an average of about once a year, the face is well advertised. The 'dead gig,' to be played after the death of a relative or some noted person, is made up of '9-19-29.' The 'fire gig' is '6-46-60.' The 'shoe gig' is '5-9-16.' The 'eating gig' is '2-12-21.' The straw hat 'gig,' which is played by all policy holders on the appearance of the first straw hat on the street, is '1-8-71.'"

LIQUOR DEALERS' LIBRARY.

The Maine liquor law provides that every county may set asde every year $500 from the fines collected from liquor dealers and use this sum to replenishing and building up the law libraries in the different courthouses. In counties with two courthouses, as in Washington and Aroostook counties, the sum may be increased to $1000 a year, says the New York Sun.

This feature was incorporated in the Maine law away back in 1863, and for 40 years the liquor dealers have been contributing $9000 a year toward buying new books for the lawyers and justices to in deciding knotty problems.

Every courthouse, then, the state has a large reading room, made up as a library, the shelves of which are congested with the best textbooks and most complete reports of decisions that money can buy, every book having been paid for by the men who sell liquor in defiance of the law. In proportion to its wealth and population, Maine contains the largest number of excellent law libraries of any state in the Union.

"And the worst of it all is," said an old liquor dealer, "the more books we pay for the more the lawyers learn how to pinch us where the fines hurt, until now our fines are as sure as death or taxes and the cost of settlement has increased fourfold since I began selling.

"I am saying no more than the truth when I tell you that no dealer in Maine can afford to pay more than 02 a gallon for whisky, which he sell over the bar for 10 cents a glass. So, while the lawyers are gaining in wisdom from the books which we buy for them, we are getting in our revenge by selling them cheap whisky, which is eating the lining out of their stomachs and making them old men before their time. It is a long lane which has no turn."

POWERFUL RIFLE

With Which the American Army Is to Be Equipped.

Can Pierce Twenty-Three Men at Five Hundred Yards.

Washington, July 29.—The American soldier is to be armed with a wonderful rifle which will hurl a bullet five miles in space. It is the most powerful weapon ever designed for the foot soldier.

It will shoot a single bullet through the bodies of forty-five men formed in a straight column, all facing its muzzle, the nearest man being fifty-three feet away. At a distance of 500 yards it can, with one of its little lead projectiles, mow down twenty-three men; at 1000 yards, thirteen men; at 1500 yards, six and one-third men. According to a law deduced by ordnance experts, a man's body, from front to back, offers the same resistance to a bullet as does a plank of white pine one inch thick.

A queer target was arranged for the test of the new rifle. Some twenty or more squares made of one-inch white pine were mounted vertically, one inch apart, at the end of the field. Bullets shot from the improved cartridges of the new gun demonstrated that from the nearest square the average penetration was through 54.7 of the boards; at 1500 yards, through 6.3.

Only forty-six men can be mowed down by one bullet of the army's present Krag-Jorgensen rifle, as against the fifty-five which could be put to death at one trigger pull of the new arm, both weapons being discharged at fifty-three feet away.

Although this rifle will hurl a bullet five miles, 2000 yards is the greatest distance with which the soldier with the sharpest eyes, even when aided by a telescope, can see a human target with sufficient accuracy to aim.

The new bullet has the same weight as that of the Krag-Jorgensen rifle, but back of it is 43.3 grains of powder, whereas the charge of the present rifle is but 37.6 grains. The bullets leave the new weapon's muzzle buzzing through space at a velocity of 2300 feet per second, or 300 feet per second faster than the muzzle velocity of the present rifle's bullets. At a distance of 1000 yards the new weapon's bullets are flying at a speed of 958 feet per second; those of the old at 901.

The heavier charge of the new rifles' cartridges, besides giving this greater velocity and greater striking energy, causes its bullets to travel in a much flatter vertical curve or 'trajectory.' To reach the soldier 1000 yards away the old rifles' bullet must go five feet higher in the air than must that of the new. The flattest possible trajectory is what ordnance experts the world over have been striving for, and we have beaten that of the German military rifle, hitherto the most nearly perfect in this respect, by more than three feet. The flatter the trajectory, the surer the aim.

The bullet of the new arm is equal to that of the old in diameter (0.3 in.) as well as in weight. But its greater charge of powder increases the weight of the entire cartridge by more than twelve grains. Yet the total weight of the new rifle with bayonet, scabbard and 100 cartridges is one pound less than that of the old with the same additions. It is six inches shorter, over all, than the old. With its new substitute for a bayonet and scabbard it weighs only 9.47 pounds, against the 10.64 pounds of the Krag-Jorgensen with the present bayonet and scabbard.

For the first time in history the American soldier will now be armed with a pike. This little rifle can now be converted into such a weapon by simply pressing a button under the muzzle and pulling out the cleaning rod beneath the barrel. This rod of steel terminates in a sort of threaded spear point. When pulled out to a distance of ten inches beyond the muzzle of the rifle the button catch gives a click and holds the rod fast. This steel pike will replace the present bayonet. It is, in fact, known also as the "rod bayonet." The bayonet and its scabbard are thus dispensed with as separate articles, such as would weigh down the soldier. The bayonet's place at the soldier's belt will hereafter be filled by an intrenching tool, now being designed. The need of an intrenching tool—a convenient trowel with which the soldier can hurriedly throw up breastworks—has been fast growing in our army.

The new weapon is a magazine gun, firing five cartridges in succession, as does the Krag-Jorgensen. The magazine is in the stock, directly below the chamber, whereas that of the present musket projects awkwardly at the side.

The new "load" of the manual will be executed by means of clips—little strips of brass—each holding five cartridges in a row. To fill the magazine a clip is held edgewise over the chamber and by pressure with the right thumb on the top cartridge all five shells are forced into the magazine, leaving the empty clip in a vertical position outside, whence it is expelled to the ground by a forward motion of the knobbed bolt, which closes the chamber. Before each discharge of the piece this bolt is pumped backward and forward, the backward motion expelling the empty shells previously fired, and the forward jerk bringing another in place before the firing pin. The magazine being filled for emergencies, it can be cut off and the rifle used as a single loader, or it can be used when the magazine is empty.

The "mob cartridge" designed for the new musket is a decided military novelty. Should the army or militia be called to suppress riots, the regulation shell with its elongated bullet, capable of a range of five miles, would be a dangerous instrument. After penetrating the bodies of numerous combatants it might course thsough crowds of bystanders and effect a veritable massacre of innocents. But the "mob cartridge is designed to be effective up to 200 yards only. Instead of carrying one elongated bullet it contains two pieces of round shot of the same diameter (0.3 inch).

Being six inches shorter than the present army rifle, and having a barrel only twenty-four inches long, the new gun will serve all purposes of the cavalry carbine and will replace the latter. It is very probable that all American fighting men, sailors and marines as well as soldiers and militiamen, will ultimately carry the same rifle and the same cartridges. During the civil war the Union infantry regiments alone were armed with no less than twenty different rifles of various calibers, and serious were the delays due to failure of troops here and there to receive ammunition fitting their peculiar arms.

With its forty-three inches of length over all (the Krag-Jorgensen measures forty-nine), the new weapon will be the handier one in the forests and undergrowth of our tropical possessions. It is the shortest army rifle in the world, the nearest approach to it being that of Japan, a trifle over forty-eight inches long.

We come to the front with our new and superior weapon after the military forces of all civilized powers have rearmed their foot troops with magazine rifles of small calibers. Even Abyssinia, Sarawak, Morocco and the Balkan states have made the reform. But in Mexico a strange idea has taken possession of the military authorities, who claim to have learned, as a lesson of the Spanish-American war, that magazine rifles are exceedingly liable to get out of order and are too complicated for military purposes. Hence an order for 32,000 small caliber Remington single single shooters was lately given by our sister republic, and the rest of the world still stands agape.

Our new rifle, the "'03 Springfield," will be turned out by the government's arsenals at Springfield, Mass., and Rock Island, Ill. Their joint capacity is 659 rifles per day. But because of a lack of funds on hand only 350 will be turned out each day. At this rate the entire regular army can be armed in a year and the National Guard of the states within the succeeding three or four years.

ENCIRCLED THE GLOBE

Government Detectives Found Him a Millionaire Mine Owner.

Washington, July 29.—When C. E. Herron and D. W. Dwyer, deputy United States marshals of Alaska, arrived here last Sunday night, they had completely encircled the globe on a romantic and thrilling manhunt. They had left here six months before, minus four days, with the necessary warrants and requisition papers for James C. Beasley indicted by a federal grand jury at Cape Nome, Alaska, on the charge of forging army pay checks for $7,000. Herron and Dwyer had their man in tow when they arrived in Washington, but their chase for him had cost the government about $11,000. By means of a letter received at Cape Nome by a friend of Beasley's last December, Herron and Dwyer learned that Beasley had been in Tasmania, Australia, about a year before. They left here January 24 with the necessary requisition papers For two months they raked the main land of Australia and all the adjoining islands for their man without result. They had lost track of him when they happened to occupy a table at a Melbourne hotel one night with an operatic manager fresh from South Africa, who had played all the principal towns there with a company on the way from London to Australia. The American sleuths had passed themselves off in Australia as mining experts from this country on a tour of inspection. The London man was full of admiration for the gold fields of South Africa. "But," insisted the Englishman, "I know the gold field of South Africa is richer than that of Alaska, for at Kimberly only three months ago, I became very well acquainted with a charming American named Beasley, who was a gold miner in Alaska for years. After an experience of eighteen months in South Africa Beasley declares the Alaskan gold field is not in the class with that of South Africa."

Had the sky sent down upon them at that moment a shower of gold, Herron and Dwyer could not have been more astonished. Just as they had given up pursuit of their quarry and were thinking on the long return trip home empty handed, a fresh clue, and one that was substantial, was found. The deputy marshals were directed to proceed immediately to South Africa from Australia and keep on the trail of what is declared to be one of the richest copper mines in the world. He recognized his captors at sight and without any ado expressed a willingness to accompany them back to Alaska to stand trial on the charge of forgery. From Pietersburg, the extreme northern outpost of the Transvaal civilization, Beasley's copper mine is a distance of nearly three hundred miles through the wildest country on earth. The roar of lions, the piercing shriek of hyenas, the trumpeting of elephants and the chatter of monkeys and parrots made sleep impossible to the detectives in camp at night, and it was only in the day time that they were able to sleep. They were accompanied by six Kaffir guides and it was necessary to go into camp at night to avoid the wild beasts of the jungle.

That Beasley has captured his captors they themselves acknowledge. While expressing no opinion of his guilt or innocence, they say that he is one of the most companionable men they have ever met. At Cape Nome he was a high roller in a community of high rollers. "He can spend $500 quicker and with more resultant hilarity than any man I ever saw on a frolic," said Deputy Dwyer. "He must have made $1,000,000 or more in Alaska in a few years." Dwyer went on to say, "and he spent it nearly as fast as he made it. If he gets out of this trouble and can hold onto his property in South Africa until he develops it, he will be one of the richest men in the world in a few years. I know what I am talking about for I saw some of his properties and talked with experts about other holdings of his which I did not see."

Beasley's frame is slight but sinewy. He is all bone and muscle. He is only 32 years old, but the thick hair on his head, which was black before he went to live among the Kaffirs and Hons of Africa, is as white as snow. His black moustache is trimmed and pointed like that of the kaiser. He was born in Australia, where his father went forty years ago as engineer for an English mining syndicate. His brother is married to the daughter of Sir John Howell, a leader in the new Australian parliament. To this brother Beasley cabled for funds on his arrival here. That was Sunday night. Monday night an order on the Western Union Telegraph company for $2500 in favor of Beasley was cabled here from Tasmania. Beasley was reared in California. His father owned a large ranch in that state near San Jose. It was here that Beasley built up the strong constitution which has withstood the Arctic blasts of Alaska and the torrid sun of Africa.

He was graduated at the Leland Stanford university and then "struck out" for himself. Before he was 21 he had developed a copper mine in Arizona that is now a part of Senator Clark's great property in that region. His education at Leland Stanford university not only fitted him to know "pay dirt" when he sees it and how to develop it, but also to master the Kaffir language strange as that may sound. This, in turn, enabled him to get on such friendly terms with the savages as to put him in possession of what he is convinced is one of the most valuable copper mines in the world. Beasley learned Latin thoroughly at the California university. He had not been among the Kaffirs a week before he discovered that their language resembles Latin. Beasley says they learned it from the ancient Romans in the day of Rome's mastery of the world. The Latin these naked Africans speak is, for the most part, purer, declares Beasley, than that spoken by any other people. When the words used by the modern Kaffir are stripped of their prefixes and endings, Beasley declares, the original Latin is revealed. It was through this discovery that he was able to master the Kaffir language. This in turn placed him on such good terms with the Kaffir chiefs that one of them personally conducted him to an abandoned copper mine on the Crocodile river that has not been worked for more than 300 years, acording to the best traditions among the Kaffirs. He has collected evidence which shows that the Romans delved into this enormously rich vein of copper 2000 years ago.

This sounds romantic, but Beasley's evidences seem to be convincing. At any rate, he has so far convinced an Anglo-American syndicate of the truth of his marvelous discovery as to have nearly completed a deal for the sale of the major portion of the property for $5,000,000. He has turned over to his captors correspondence which establishes beyond a doubt the truth of this huge negotiation. This correspondence shows that a Western Republican politician of national fame, who now lives in New York, is his financial representative in the United States. This fact was learned only on condition that the name of the American should not be printed now. This man kept in constant communication with Beasley while the latter was here, both by telegraph and long-distance telephone. Beasley declares that the mineral wealth of Africa scarcely has been touched. He says now that the Boer war is over and the bars have been let down, immigration is pouring into South Africa from every country of Europe and from the United States in a constantly increasing stream. "An American of courage and energy can make a fortune over there at almost anything he touches," he declares. "I know hundreds of men in South Africa from all parts of the United States, who have made fortunes in the last eighteen months and who have just fairly started."

TOM JOHNSON

Outlines His Plans For the Ohio Campaign.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 28.—Mayor Tom L. Johnson is going down to Canton next week to campaign against Representative Pollock, Republican, who incurred the enmity of his honor by his vote on the curative act. Later he will start the state campaign in the close legislative districts.

William Jennings Bryan will probably come into the state to help Mr. Johnson in his fight. He has not been asked yet, but Mr. Johnson said that an invitation would probably be extended to him to help in the campaign.

Save for the help of Mr. Bryan and perhaps two or three others, Mayor Johnson will do the largest part of the spell-binding stunt, with the aid of his own followers.

Mr. Johnson claims he has but one aim, and that is the repeal of unjust laws and the enactment of laws he believes are just. He said to a correspondent:

"The Republicans intend to flood the state with outside speakers and fight the campaign along national issues. We shall conduct our campaign along local lines.

"While I would like to see Mr. Hanna defeated, it is a matter of minor importance to obtaining the election of a legislature, whether Democratic or Republican, pledged to stand for home rule and just taxation. I would rather aid in the election of a Republican member of the general assembly pledged to these ideas than a Democrat who could not be relied on to support these questions. We will make the campaign along these lines."

NOT A BEGGAR,

And Rev. Burton Resigns Presidency of University.

Berea, Ohio, July 28.—Rev. E. O. Buxton, D. D., has resigned the presidency of Baldwin university because he says the trustees tried to force him to become a beggar. They engaged him at a fancy salary and he was inaugurated last June. Yesterday he resigned because the trustees wanted him to go out and solicit the necessary money to pay his salary. Dr. Buxton said that to enact the role of a beggar and solicit funds would impair his prestige and he could not do it. He will return to the pastorate of the Methodist Episcopal church in Youngstown.

Dr. Freshwater resigned the presidency of Baldwin for the same reason. He wanted the trustees to employ a financial secretary to solicit funds, but when they asked him to do the begging he quit.

This is considered to be a tribute to American sportsmanship.

DRAWN UNDER THE WATER

Four Young People Drown at Opening of New Dam.

Pittsburg, July 29.—A sad accident followed shortly after the formal opening of dam No. 1, in the Alleghany at Herrs Island last evening, in which four young people were drowned.

Their names are:
JOSEPH BROWN, aged 19.
HENRY BROWN, aged 14.
FREDERICK BUGLER, Jr.,
EDNA SHIPLEY, aged 13.

After the ceremonies incident to the opening of the dam the three boys were riding around below the dam in a skiff, and seeing three girl friends on the bank, inviting them to join in the ride. When all had been seated the skiff was headed for the dam and when within a short distance from the structure, the suction from the "bear trap" drew the boat, in spite of the boys' frantic efforts, under the water flowing over the dam. The accident was witnessed by hundreds of people and rescuers were quickly at work but before the party could be reached, four of the number were drowned.

LAND TITLE SWINDLER.

St. Louis Man Arrested on Charge of Fraud.

St. Louis, Mo., July 29.—Henry A. Bradford was arrested here yesterday by postoffice inspectors on the charge of the using of the mails in order to defraud, as the result of an investigation of land titles swindles that has been in progress since last December. The investigation has been pursued in Colorado, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Wes Virginia and North Carolina.

Bradford's arrest resulted from complaints that he was using the mails to sell fraudulent land titles. Bradford's bond was fixed at $2000, but up to a late hour he had failed to give bond. Postoffice Inspector Dice said the investigation has led to the arrest of thirteen other men on similar charges, in different parts of the country and he is of the opinion that the arrest yesterday will mark the final collapse of one of the most gigantic land swindles in the history of the country.

Bradford was arrested on May 5, 1900, on the charge of using the mails to defraud, but was acquitted on the ground that the offense did not conform to the facts set forth in the indictment.

RESCUED JUST IN TIME.

Mob Was About to String Up Hungarian.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 29.—But for the timely arrival of Policeman John Posteoh, a Hungarian steel worker, would have been strung up by an enraged mob on Wheeling island last night.

Posteoh, who was drunk, caught in his arms and embraced a well known and respected lady residing on the island as she was returning home over the steel bridge unescorted late in the evening. The woman's cries were quickly answered by citizens, who rushed from their homes. The man took to his heels, pursued by a crowd which was increased every minute. When the mob drew close to the foreigner he wheeled and drew a dirk fully twelve inches in length and held the mob at bay for a time. A cobble stone hurled the knife out of the man's hand, while another struck him on the head and knocked him down. Stone after stone was rained upon the unconscious man in rapid succession and a rope was quickly sent for by the now thoroughly aroused citizens, who were until that time under the impression that a criminal assault had been committed. Vengeance had been decided upon and a convenient shade tree picked out when a force of policemen arrived upon the scene and rescued the Hungarian from the mob's hands. He is in a serious condition.

CRAZY STRANGER

Red Wing, Minn., July 29.—A stranger, 60 years of age, giving his name as William Harrington, ran amuck at a farm house in Welch yesterday morning. He asked for breakfast and it was given him. Suddenly crying that they were trying to poison him, he pulled a gun and fired at Mrs. Black, the farmer's mother. She scrambled under the table and he ran out in the yard, fired again at four men, missing all of them. A charge of shot from a shotgun stopped him. He was brought here and examined in probate court, where he was committed to jail. He is supposed to hail from Prescott.

Sheriff Richardson and posse of 100 angry citizens of Washington township, Ind., armed with shotguns, revolvers and pitchforks, followed two bloodhounds for eight miles Tuesday afternoon and evening in an effort to find the unknown assailant of Mrs. Joseph Watts. It is thought the man boarded a train and escaped during the afternoon.

Under the supervision of the secretary of the board of health, countless numbers of fish, weighing between 12,000 and 14,000 pounds, were taken from White river at Anderson, Ind., and burned. The fish were killed by the refuse from strawboard factories getting into the river. The state authorities will take the matter up.

Joseph Hosack, a Princeton student; Walter Mehard, a student of Johns Hopkins, with a cousin to Hosack, set out from Gravenhurst, Ont., in a canoe on Sunday. The paddles and Mehard's coat were picked up on the lake. It is feared all three have been drowned.

Hilson's wife had sued him for divorce, and pending the trial of the case the court had ordered him to pay her temporary alimony and her attorney fees. Hilson has failed to make his payments promptly and his wife had threatened him with arrest, which led to the shooting.

Ben Starnes, a convict who recently escaped from the United States penitentiary at Leavenworth, rode through Missouri City, Mo., eastward bound, on a fine saddle horse, which he stole from a farmer. Sheriff Andrew Wymore, of Clay county, with bloodhounds, has gone to Lexington Junction, where he hopes to intercept Starnes. When last seen Starnes was heavily armed.

MARKET IS BULLISH

Strong Advance Made In Wheat on Large Export Business.

Primary Receipts Continue Light—Flax Dull and Slightly Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, July 29.—Wheat made a strong advance today and after a weak opening its course was almost steadily upward. The advance in Duluth September was 1¼c, in Minneapolis 1⅛-¼c, in Chicago 1⅜-½c, in New York, 1¼c, in St. Louis ¾c, and in Kansas City 1⅜c.

The advance was made largely on the large export business. All morning seaboard exporters were reporting the other side as accepting grain and at the close it was reported that the total reached was 50 loads, the largest business for many days. The opening weakness seemed to be due to better weather in the Northwest and more liberal marketings of grain in Kansas. Corn was off somewhat early but it rallied and closed higher. Primary receipts continue very small as compared with last year and the trade finds it hard to get away from this, in spite of the predictions of a better movement near at hand.

Foreign markets were not bullish. Liverpool showing a decline of ¾d, Paris closing ½c higher to 1½c lower, and Antwerp unchanged.

Primary receipts of wheat were 572,000 bus: last year 1,350,000 bus. Shipments, 292,000 bus: last year 448,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 199,926 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market was ¾d lower. In the Chicago market September corn was ½c higher and September oats ¼c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 360,000 bus; last year 275,000 bus. Shipments, 321,000 bus; last year 163,000 bus. Clearances were 205,000 bus.

Trading in wheat was very light in the local market. September opened ½c off at 78c and then sold up steadily to the close, which was at 79½c, an advance of 1⅜c. December advanced the same.

Cash business was dead and prices were unchanged at 8½c over September for No. 1 northern in store and 5c over for to arrive.

Flax was dull and featureless. September sold ⅛c off to 97¼c, rallied to 97⅜c and closed at 97½c. October was off ½c and November ½c.

Following are the closing prices:

The close: Wheat in store, No. 1 hard, 87c; No. 1 northern, 86¼c; No. 2 northern, 84½c. To arrive, No. 1 hard, 86c; No. 1 northern, 84½c; No. 2 northern, 82½c; July 86½c; September, 79½c; December, 77½c. Flax in store, 97¼c; to arrive, 97¼c; on track, 97¼c; July, 97¼c; September, 97½c; October, 97¾c; November, 98c; December, 98c. Oats to arrive, 34c; on track, 34-34½c; to arrive in September, 33c; to arrive in December, 34c. Rye, on track, 50c; to arrive, 50c; to arrive in September, 49½c. Barley, 35@50c.

Receipts: Wheat, 472; flax, 12,670.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Favorable Weather Causes Weakness In Wheat Pit.

Chicago, July 29.—Wheat opened weak on more favorable weather in the Northwest and on reports of more liberal marketing of the grain in Kansas, thogether with the decline in corn. September was off ½@⅝c to ⅝c at 77⅜3/4@¼c, to 77⅛c at the opening and with a moderate demand the price held steady the first hour of trading. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 161 cars, which with local receipts of 57 cars, 14 of contract grade, made total receipts for the three points of 161 cars, against 174 cars last week and 357 cars a year ago.

The market turned exceedingly strong the latter part of the session, due to buying by prominent longs who sold out yesterday. Bullish reports from Manitoba were largely responsible for the better demand. The close was strong with September 1;4@¾c higher, after it had sold up to 79¼c.

Timely rains in the principal corn states caused extreme weakness in corn and opening prices on September were ½@¾c lower at 51⅝@51¾c. A feature in the early trading was the selling of May, which was in poor demand. On a fair scattered demand, September became a little firmer later in the day, but trading was not large. Local receipts were 112 cars with 14 of contract grade.

Similar conditions prevailed in the corn pit as in wheat and local longs replaced lines sold out on the break yesterday. The market closed active, September c. sing he up at 52⅝c.

Oats were weak in sympathy with other grains, September opening ⅛@¼c down at 33@33¼c, and only a light trade the market held about steady the first hour. Local receipts were 153 cars.

Provisions were dull and featureless, but prices were firm influenced by the stregntn in the hog situation. September pork opened 12½c higher at 1375. September lard was up 5@7½ to 10@12½ at $7.70@7.75, while ribs showed a gain of 5@7½c, opening at $7.95@7.97½.

Close: Wheat—July, 78¾c; old, 78⅞c; September, 79¼c, old, 79⅝c; December, 79¾c, old, 79⅝c; May, 81¼c. Corn—July, 53⅝c; September, 52¾c; December, 52½@⅝c; May, 52⅞@53c. Oats—July, 42¼c; September, 33¾c; December, 34⅝@¾c; May, 36¾c. Pork—July, $13.65; September, $13.95; Lard—July, $7.87½; September, $8.07½; December, $7.92½. Ribs—July, $7.87½; September, $8.07½; October, $8.05. Rye—July, 51c; September, 51c; October, 52c. Flax—Cash, N. W., 97c; S. W., 96c; July, 92c; September, 93½c; October, 95c. Timothy—July, $3.40; September, $3.30. Clover—July, $12.50. Barley—Cash, 32@36c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red 79c; 3 red, 77@78½c; 2 hard winter, 77@78c; 3 hard winter, 76½c; 1 northern spring, 82½c; 2 northern spring, 82c; 3 spring, 75@78c. Corn—2, 52c; 3, 51½c. Oats—2, 32c; 3, 30½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market is again strong and higher. There was a little weakness early, but after a few minutes it developed the same absence of selling pressure which has characterized it for some time past. It turned strong and continued so to the close. This market is dull in a cash way, but St. Louis reports a good melting demand and Kansas City reports a fair demand with prices a little better. Reports from the spring wheat crop continue a little conflicting, but including the Manitoba wheat the outlook is still for no better than last year and probably a little less. We see no reason to change our recent position and still feel that wheat should be bought on the soft spots.

Corn—The weather report showed quite general rains through this state, Iowa and Nebraska. As these were needed and rather unexpected the market opened sharply lower. Some of the bulls who had sold out long corn yesterday were in the market to replace it on the weakness, and later it turned strong and closed a little better than yesterday. The crop situation continues pretty much the whole thing. Cash demand is slow. There are evidently some belated shorts in July, and that option went to a premium today. It is likely to continue a weather market and inviting to scalping operations.

Oats—After a weak opening oats also rallied and regained the early loss. The sympathy with the strength in corn and wheat was the supporting influence. The July corner is still maintained. The cash situation is dull and except as oats are held up by the price of other grains, we think they are high enough.

W. H. Bartlett, Chicago: We have a large number of reports from all over the oats belt this morning, indicate very light yield, generally light weight. We believe the crop will prove a great disappointment and will move very slowly. We think purchase of December and May oats will make money.

• • •

J. A. Patten, Chicago: A large grain dealer in our office from Des Moines, Iowa, says he saw yesterday while traveling through Iowa hundreds of men out plowing corn. This shows how backward corn is.

• • •

J. A. Patten, Chicago: I believe one should buy wheat. We get reports everywhere of disappointing yields except from Michigan. There is a report that the crop of grain in Scotland is gone and that they will have to import more grain than any time in twenty years.

Peoria wires: "Some of the best oat fields east of us are turning out only 35 bus; they generally run 50 bus. They test 29 pounds. Around Elwood some fields run as low as 8 to 10 bus, and the best 25 to 30 bus. I believe this oat crop is going to fool people more than any ever raised. The oats are not there—they are all straw."

• • •

C. M. Boynton, Des Moines, Ia.: What corn I have seen around here is farther advanced and more even than South. It is ten days to two weeks late. A good rain in this vicinity tonight was very beneficial. I came up here from Creston this afternoon via the Burlington. Most of the distance the road does not run through the corn country and the greater portion of corn I saw was two or three weeks late and tasseling short. About twenty miles south of Des Moines it began to improve and I saw some fields of very fair corn. The early corn is needing rain badly as it is now beginning to silk. Today nas been very hot and hard on the crop; 100 here and at Creston. I notice some of the very smallest corn is drooping these hot days. Quite a good shower fell here tonight and came just in time. Do not know how general it was.

QUIETER IN STOCKS

Market Closed a Little Irregular But Without Much Change.

Steadier Feeling Shown and Easier Tendency In Money.

New York, July 29.—The London market had two unimportant failures this morning which were without influence on the local stock market. Prices opened higher all around on a free absorption of stocks. Southern Pacific, Manhattan, Amalgamated, United States Steel preferred and International Paper about a point.

Profits were taken in the principal stocks after the opening and there was a general decline running to a point in Amalgamated. St. Paul, Atchison, Missouri Pacific and New York Central sold slightly below yesterday's close. Purchases were soon resumed on a large scale, and most of the important railroads and specialties were lifted higher than before. Grain reached 2¼ in Northwestern, 2 in Tennessee Coal, New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred and Beet Sugar, and 1 to 1⅜ in Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Atchison, New York Central, Erie first and second preferred, Copper, United States Steel, Smelting, the tractions and many others. Chicago & Eastern Illinois certificates advanced 10 and Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred 3 with a reaction of 2. Colorado Fuel fell 4 points and Evansville & Terre Haute 1½.

Sugar, People's as, Leather preferred, Linseed preferred and Rock Island preferred rose 1 to 2, and Evansville & Terre Haute preferred 3 to a point over last night. Lackawanna gained 7 and Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis preferred 2½. The demand apparently became satisfied and prices dropped again. Colorado Fuel fell 6, Pacific Coast 3½, Minneapolis & St. Louis preferred 3, Norfolk & Western preferred 2½, Grass Twine 2 and other inactive stocks a point. The market became very dull and listless. Bonds were irregular.

The midday trading developed few changes of importance outside of Rock Island, which advanced a point on large dealings. New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred reacted 5 and Cotton Oil preferred advanced 3.

The absence of any important demand led to a slowly sagging market with pronounced pressure against Atchison, St. Paul, New York Central, Missouri Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Tennessee Coal and Sugar. Those stocks declined 1@1¼ from the highest and but little remained anywhere of the morning's gain. New York Central, after reacting 1½, rallied 2½. Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis and Colorado & Southern first preferred rose 3 and Evansville & Terre Haute 8. Virginia-Carolina Chemical lost 2¼.

Special pressure was directed against the Atchisons, the common declining 1⅛ and the preferred 1¼ below last night. Minneapolis and St. Louis lost 1½. Republic Steel and Colorado Fuel, 8. Paper preferred rose 2¼. Lake Erie & Western preferred 5 and Lead preferred 3¾. The general market showed resistance at prices slightly below last night. Des Moines & Fort Dodge rose on this morning's absorption. Chicago Terminal preferred dropped 3. The market showed feeble rallying power and the closing was dull and easy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf to Coe Commission Co.: Commission people say the stock market acts well and about as expected. Few observers look for an uninterrupted advance. On the contrary even the most confident bulls agree that set-backs will be frequent. A good deal of stock bought to support the market when the latter was crumbling has yet to be sold and there will be steady realizing by speculators who bought for a turn. The bear traders will continue their aggressions, but despite these drawbacks conservative critics believe that on moderate actions stocks should be bought, particularly the grangers and coalers. This is the season for crop scares and crop rumors and Wall street is getting plenty of the latter just now. Hot winds and drouth are alleged to be doing irreparable injury in the corn belt. The weekly weather crop bulletin, however, suggests that drouth is threatening much damage rather than actually inflicting it, while western railroads who have been asked by eastern friends as to the facts, report that the outlook is still for a fair corn crop in all of the surplus producing localities. The increased movement of gold from Australia to San Francisco is directing attention to the exchange situation and the probabilities of imports of the metal from Europe next autumn, and it is interesting to know some well informed bankers take the position that in view of the higher rates for time money in this country and the great reduction which has taken place within the past nine months, are borrowing abroad, the chances are that gold will be brought from England or the continent early in September, barring, of course, disaster to crops in the West and South. While the bear campaign in the stock market was on and great financial interests were indifferent to the speculative situation, they would do nothing toward drawing capital from the other side. But these interests now hold the stock and in view of the great influence it is fair to assume that when it suits their purpose to do so they will import some millions of yellow metal. doubtless when they desire to make a market on which to sell at much higher prices than these now prevailing, the securities recently bought at panic prices.

Commenting on today's market, representative brokers say that the stocks sold to secure profits were well taken and that the market reflected excellent powers of absorption. It looked as if the big capitalists of the street still had their buying orders with their brokers somewhat below ruling prices. This was noticeable in the case of Pennsylvania, New York Central, St. Paul, Reading and Erie. The short interest, while reduced, was considered very large in nearly all the active stocks and there was a confident belief that a very substantial part of it will not cover until the advance goes much further.

New York to B. E. Baker: Jacob H. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., speaking of Wall street conditions, in an interview, is quoted as saying: "The time is hardly ripe for a full and free discussion of financial situation. I think however that matters are gradually readjusting themselves. In fact so confident am I that all serious danger is at an end that I have arranged to leave town for a stay of thirty days at Bar Harbor. That, I think, best proves my faith in the situation."

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is closing a little irregular, but on the whole without much change. It is a much quieter market and shows a much steadier feeling. The bears are hammering it in spots, notably in Atchison and St. Paul, but so far do not disturb the general situation. The tendency of the money situation is easier. There is a little better demand for investment bonds. The general public is, we think, paying for more stocks and taking them o.. the market than at any time for several years past. Unless something new and important comes in to the situation, we look for a quiet market and think stocks are worth the money.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The reaction near the close was to be expected after the rapid rally and steady advance which was witnessed during the most of the session yesterday. It is on such reactions as this that the market is to be bought now. The stocks are now in position to advance easily as the weak holders have all been shaken out and only the big men are the owners. Though there will be times when the market may be sold for a turn, it is my opinion that the most profitable way is to wait for good setbacks and then get aboard.

Lapsley & Co. to Paine, Webber & Co.: There seems to be a registered protest against any advance save that which represents the natural recovery from intemperate declines. It looks very much as if we should have to be content with the present level, or a bit lower if the banks set in to sell out loans. The opening should be strong.

• • •

Dow-Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Upon the whole the market held the advance very well in first hour, although it was clear that some distribution of stock was in progress where it could be sold without weakening the market. Some of the larger traders appeared to have been put in to bid up Amalgamated, but the buying did not look extra good. Strength in Pacific first represented investment buying of good character. St. Paul fluctuated rather freely but upon the whole showed strength. It is possible Standard oil people have added to their holdings. Some rather good selling of New York Central on the early advance.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been less active and more sentitive today. Liquidation of weak accounts and short selling kept a few stocks weak, but in the main manipulation was for the raise and prices were higher wherever there were rallies in the general list selling orders were met which discouraged the bulls. Coppers acted as well as the rest of the market. There was nothing new in the metal situation. We believe it wise to sell a few stocks on every sharp rally for the present, and would buy only on the reactions. The market will be pretty sure to have two sides for some time to come.

IN MARINE CIRCLES

Great Lakes Towing Company Gets Lumber Towing Contracts.

Steamer Swain Is Floated —May Proceed to Lower Lakes.

The Great Lakes Towing company has gathered in a couple more large shipping interests, and yesterday the Hines Lumber company, which has six steamers and nine barges, besides some chartered boats, closed a contract to let the Great Lakes company do the towing.

Capt. C. H. Sinclair, general manager of the company, was in the city yesterday for the purpose of meeting a representative of the Hines Lumber company relative to reaching a settlement. He was forestalled by word from the offices at Cleveland to the effect that the Hines company had accepted a proposition made them.

The largest acquisition in the shape of contract business was made a short time ago, when the towing of the big Gilchrist fleet came into the hands of the Great Lakes company.

These statements were made by a representative of the lumber craft plying between Duluth and the lower lakes, after he had talked with Mr. Sinclair yesterday.

The Great Lakes company was out in the cold at the opening of the season, so far as lumber business was concerned, for the independent towing company had a large part of it. The lumber boats give much money to the towing companies, for nearly every propeller or steamer is accompanied by one or more consorts. The result is the towing bills run up considerably at every port entry.

The lumber business has been a plum of great value for the towing companies, and the independent lines have been guarding it jealously.

It is now stated on authority that the Great Lakes company has 80 per cent of the business cornered, and is after more.

At the opening of navigation it had practically none.

Every possible lever has been put into service, and the shipping men have been approached on all sides, pressure behind the shipments and through sellers, buyers and everyone connected in a business way with transactions that entail lake transportation, have been used. The connections of the Great Lakes company have dictated who should do towing, and cargoes are held in some instances conditioned upon this point.

At any rate, the campaign has been so severely prosecuted that the company has a large majority of the towing business tied up today.

The lumber boat business was the last to be worked upon, and this is now well in hand.

The gathering of business to this company has been one of the most gigantic enterprises of the past couple of years, and is just tapering off.

The independent tug lines are still securing business enough to operate at a good profit, but the fight between the interests is again at a critical point.

The independent men say the Great Lakes are cutting rates to such an extent that it is operating without a profit, while they claim to be still maintaining the old prices themselves.

SWAIN IS FLOATED.

Sunked Steamer at Two Harbors Is Raised.

The sunken steamer V. Swain was floated this morning at Two Harbors, and taken to the coal dock in that port, for the purpose of trimming her cargo.

The three pumps were working nicely during the night, and are now at work keeping her free from water. C. F. Davies, who had charge of the raising of the Swain, in the interests of the underwriters, telegraphed today to Cleveland, that in his opinion the boat could be kept afloat by means of the three pumps, and could continue on her way to the lower lakes, where she could unload her cargo of ore, and then go into the dry dock for repairs. If he receives a favorable answer from the management of the Gilchrist line, a diver will be put at work to patch the place where the steamer is sprung, and the boat will leave for the lower lakes as soon as her cargo is trimmed, the three pumps being kept at work to keep her free of water.

YOUNG FOX CAUGHT

Young Man Known to the Police Trough Other Misdeeds.

George Fox, a young man with a police reputation, who has been wanted since last Sunday evening for passing a bogus $10 bill on Matt Miller, a local hack driver, was arrested this noon by Chief Troyer, at the road crossing of the belt line railway on Bay View Heights. The arrest was another instance of Chief Troyer's memory for faces, together with a streak of luck.

He was driving back from Proctorknott, where he went this morning in connection with the attempted bank robbery of yesterday morning, and noticed Fox sitting alongside the road. Chief Troyer remembered Fox although he has kept shy of Duluth for the past two years, and jumping out of the wagon he took the young man in custody and brought him into police headquarters.

The bogus bill that Fox passed on Miller really consists of two bills pasted together. Both are advertising bills of the Bank of New Brunswick, one side containing a fairly good resemblance to a bank note, while the other side contained advertising. The two bills were pasted cleverly together with the advertisement sides back to back.

Even after they had been thus arranged, it is claimed that Fox could not have passed the bogus bill had it not been dark. Miller knew Fox quite well and did not suspect that he was attempting to defraud him.

Some time ago Fox, then about 20 years of age, was connected with a safe robbery in the Miller Brewing company's office in this city. Schneider, the man who did the work, was sent to the penitentiary for a term of years and Fox got a reformatory sentence. Since then he has been in trouble over a saloon robbery.

Fox will be arraigned in municipal court tomorrow morning on the charge of attempting to defraud by the use of a bogus bill.

DEMURRERS OVERRULED

Judge Morris Rules In Maginnis Cases—Trials Will Proceed.

Federal Judge Page Morris handed down his decision last evening on the demurrers brought against the five indictments returned by the last federal grand jury, charging C. P. Maginnis with fraud and subornation to commit perjury, in connection with certain alleged land frauds.

The demurrers were overruled and the indictments declared legal and sufficient.

The demurrers were entered on the ground that the evidence on which the indictments of the grand jury were based was insufficient to warrant them, and of such a general nature that specific charges were not warranted. By the decision of Judge Morris, however, the indictments are legal, and the defendant who withdrew his plea of not guilty before entering the demurrers, will re-enter it at the next term of the court.

"The decision has nothing to do with the merits of the case itself," said Judge Morris in speaking of the indictments, and the case itself will have to rest upon its merits, and be tried upon the evidence brought forward by both sides."

The demurrer case was argued before Judge Morris about ten days ago, and since that time he has had his decision under consideration.

The five indictments which were returned on various charges, allege conspiracy to commit fraud and subornation to commit perjury, the principal case being that in which he is charged with inducing Annie Stensland to file on certain lands, swearing they were for her own benefit, when they were to be deeded to the defendant by a prior arrangement.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

New York, July 29.—Daniel Hoagland Carpenter, the genealogist and author of several books dealing with the history of the early settlers of the colonies, is dead at his home in Maplewood, N. J., after a long illness. He was 75 years old.

New York, July 29.—John A. Mooney, LL. D., one of the best known and most prominent Catholic literary men in the United States, is dead at Hurricane in the Adirondacks, where he was spending the summer. He was 63 years old.

INJUNCTION DENIED.

No Case Made Out By Employing Plumbers.

St. Paul, July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Kelly of the district court today denied the injunction against the striking plumbers, prayed for by McQuillan Bros., the Dwyer Plumbing & Heating company, Holt & Dahlby and Joseph A. Hurley.

The judge finds that there has been no case made out that would warrant an injunction. He upholds the right of labor to form unions and to juit their employment in a body for the purpose of compelling their employers to grant demands for higher wages and other betterments in their condition.

HARVESTING IS AT HAND

Will Begin at Some North Dakota Points Next Week.

A letter received by one of the Duluth grain firms from Valley City, N. D., said that cutting of wheat would begin there next Monday.

Another letter from Amenia said the grain there would be ready to cut within a week.

It was generally supposed during the early part of the season that the crop would be late this year, but it seems to have caught up. One of the correspondents said that the weather recently and the rains have been ideal for late crops.

A TERRIFIC WIND STORM

Does Great Amount of Damage In Alpena County, Mich.

Alpena, Mich., July 29.—A terrific wind and rain storm, accompanied by hail, passed over Alpena county last night, causing much damage to orchards and crops. James Pingleton was killed by lightning. Much damage is also reported in Presque Isle county.

At Parrisville, a village in Alcona county, on the lake shore below here, lightning instantly killed James De Forest and his wife in their home. Their dead bodies were found by a milkman today. Dell Crothers, a farmer near Onaway, in Presque Isle county, was killed yesterday afternoon by lightning. In Long Rapids, Andrew Hansen, aged 14 years, and his cousin, a young girl, were both killed, and Hansen's uncle was seriously injured while they were sitting in their parlor watching the storm.

TO CHECK UP WORK.

State Labor Commissioner Here For That Purpose.

John O'Donnell, state labor commissioner, arrived from St. Paul this afternoon, to check up the work of the local labor inspector.

"The report which will be made supplementary, in about ten days," said Mr. O'Donnell at the St. Louis hotel this afternoon, "will show an increase in the number of laborers and other help employed in the institutions of all kinds in Duluth, over that of last winter. I can assure you of that, but I have no figures that I can give, as I haven't paid personal attention to this report.

"It will show the condition of labor, the factories, the number of children employed, and all labor conditions."

Mr. O'Donnell is here to look over the work in Duluth and will probably return home tomorrow. He said he did not think he would be able to get up on the range this trip.

"I do not think the exodus of harvest hands will cut any figure in our reports," said he, "as that class of men do not come in contact with our agents much, any way. We deal mostly with steadily employed help."

RELATIVES SURPRISED.

Did Not Know Mrs. Davis Contemplated Marriage.

St. Paul, July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Davis' relatives in St. Paul knew nothing of her marriage until informed by a reporter. They were wholly unaware that she contemplated marriage, and are not acquainted with Mr. Doll. Mrs. Paul Knaak, of Summit avenue, a sister of Mrs. Davis, expressed great surprise upon hearing the news.

F. B. Kellogg, of the law firm of Davis, Kellogg & Severance, was also unaware of the matrimonial intentions of Mrs. Davis.

Mr. Doll is believed to be connected with the present administration at Washington.

REFORM IN CURRENCY LAWS

Absolutely Necessary, Governor Cummins Tells Bankers.

Davenport, Iowa, July 29.—A. B. Cummins, addressing the bankers of Illinois and Iowa in convention here today, said in part:

"A reform in the laws touching currency is one of the things so necessary that the tortured body of business attests it in the agony of its movements.

"The real spirit that stands like a giant in the way of progress in this direction is the conservatism of prosperity.

"We may be compelled to wait until we are in the throes of financial distress before we do what ought to be done.

"You can help to refute the greatest fallacy of the age, which is that because we are prosperous under certain laws, that those laws will keep us prosperous."

RIGHT TO USE PICKETS.

Kavanaugh's Decision Contrary to the Superior Court.

Chicago, July 29.—Judge Kavanaugh in a decision handed down today in the habeas corpus case of four strikers for violation of an injunction granted to the Illinois Malleable Iron Works, decided that labor unions have the right to place pickets about a plant where a strike is in progress, and he also declared that workmen have the right to persuade others to quit work.

The jurist furthermore held that sending men to jail upon affidavits that they have violated an injunction is illegal.

Judge Kavanaugh's decision is directly opposed to the decisions rendered in the superior court.

PHELPS DEFEATS EGAN.

Chicago, July 29.—Mason E. Phelps, Midlothian, today defeated H. Chandler Egan, Exmoor, present holder of the Ravinoaks cup, by one up.

MUST SHOW NUMBERS.

Chicago, July 29.—The conspicuous display of numbers by all automobiles, for the purpose of identification, was held by Judge Tuley today to be a reasonable requirement. Albert C. Banker and others asked for an injunction restraining the city from enforcing a recent ordinance providing for such display.

MISSING MAN

John Benson Has Been Missing Ever Since Last Friday.

He Attempted Suicide Frequently and His Wife Is Fearful.

John Benson, who formerly conducted a copper repairing establishment at the corner of Eleventh avenue west and Railroad street, has been missing from home since Friday evening.

He left his wife and children on that day saying that he was going to England. When asked by his wife if he would be back for Christmas, he replied: "Duluth will never see me again."

Mrs. Benson is in fear lest he has committed suicide. She says that he has made previous attempts to do so, and that previous to his departure he had been troubled with spells of melancholy, when he threatened to end his life. She also says that he had been addicted to the use of liquor and had been indulging freely previous to his departure.

Some of his friends also say that he had told them he was going to England, where he said one of his sisters had died and left him some money.

He boarded the Northern Pacific train Friday night, and since then has not been heard of, by either his family or his friends.

His sisters in England lived in Scarborough.

Benson was about 48 years of age, rather short of stature and of a dark complexion.

His wife is left to take charge of the business and care for the six small children. She is prostrated with grief at her husband's departure and has no means of telling whether he is alive or dead, but fears the latter. His previous attempts at suicide have caused her to believe that he has put an end to his career.

WHERE IT REALLY RAINS.

"Well, I've seen it rain once or twice in my life," responded the man from Manila, according to the New York Sun; "rain so that even a man from Maracaibo would admit that it was moist, but this shower that you New Yorkers are all gassing about so excitedly—why, that was hardly more than a thick mist for some parts of the country.

"Here you are talking about the bung being knocked out of the sky and all the water above the earth descending in one drop. Then, when you get down to cold, hard facts, the weather gauges show that in nine hours the total precipitation was a fraction less than two and a half inches.

"Gee whiz! how it must have come down! Now, if it had been just reversed, nine inches of rainfall in less than two and a half hours you would have seen something that would have passed a creditable examination in the rain classes almost anywhere. That is the sort of rainfall that counts."

"Pshaw!" snorted the New Yorker, "it never rains like that anywhere."

"Maybe it don't," rejoined his friend. "I don't know. To tell the entire and exact truth, I have never seen just exactly that heavy a fall, but I was in a storm that gave us more than an inch an hour for eight straight hours on end, and you can bet your bottom dollar with no fear of loss that it was wet.

"The Jesuit padres who run the observatory in Manila have seven different kinds of rain gauges on their roof, and it takes them all to keep track of what the mist is doing. Why, say, you don't know what a rain is until you have been out on the road in one of those gentle showers.

"After you have put in a few miles pony back, with the rain coming down at the rate of better than a foot a day, you will never mind anything less than a tidal wave again. Talk about going to school in rubber boots and rowboats and all that! Why, out there our fellows used to have to establish their sentry posts in the tree tops so as to be sure they would not float away over night.

"I remember when it was given out at headquarters that there would be no let-up in the campaigning because of the wet season and then in the first twenty days after the rains broke we got more than three feet of fall, and the campaign slid into cascos and bancas and lit out for some place where it could dry out.

"It's just about time now for the rainy season to set in out there, and when it does you'll hear occasionally something authoritative in the way of rainfall that will make this little shower of yours the other day, where the bung fell out of the sky, look like 17 cents. Mex.

"In one summer that I was out there we got more than seven feet of rain in three months, and four feet of that was in the last 26 days of July. Twice in these 26 days we got more than a foot in the twenty-four hour period, once nearly 15 inches.

"Now, that's what I call raining."

WORLD'S LARGEST PLANT.

The wire mill, rod mill, open hearth furnace and bloom mill, which have been in course of construction for the past two years in Pueblo will be ready for operation soon says the Denver News. This means that there will be three thousand laborers added to the already large force at the steel works. These buildings are located about a mile south of the old site, and when in operation the present steel works plant will be the largest in the world, not excepting Pittsburg. This means that $150,000 will be added to the monthly pay roll, and that more than nine thousand men will be on the roll by July 1. The total pay roll then will amount to more than ½ million dollars a month.

The tin plate mill and rail mill, also in course of construction, will probably not be ready until next summer. These will employ 2000 more men, adding also half million dollars a month to the pay roll. The management of the different mills are hiring all the men they can from Colorado, but will have to be brought here from the east, principally Pittsburg, Worcester and Chicago. The only difficulty that surrounds the coming of this number of people is residences, and the least number that will be required will be more than five hundred houses.

LIFTED CAR WHEELS

Explosion at Lowell Nearly Upset a Passenger Train.

The Concussion Was Felt All Over Eastern Massachusetts.

Boston, July 29.—Persons coming to Boston on the 9:57 train from Lowell, were eye witnesses of the explosion at Lowell. The accident happened just as the train was passing the works, the tracks of the Boston & Maine railroad being about a third of a mile away.

The concussion was so great as to lift the wheels from the rails and it seemed as if the cars would turn over. The train righted itself, however, and there was no damage from the shock.

The detonations were heard over a large portion of Eastern Massachusetts, towns twenty-five miles away reporting having distinctly noticed them, and in Andover, Tewkesbury, Billerica and other places glass was broken.

According to a dispatch from Lynn, slight damage to windows was done in that city, which is twenty miles away.

Cambridge, Mass., July 29.—The shock of the Lowell explosion was generally felt in Cambridge and vicinity. The disturbance was recorded by instruments at the Harvard college observatory.

Similar observations elsewhere, it is thought, may furnish valuable information regarding the velocity of the concussion.

Lowell, July 29.—John B. Sullivan died this afternoon. Two of the six unidentified dead have been identified as Charles Moore, and a teamster named Poteau. Both men were employed by the Stanley Trucking company and were about to move powder when the explosion occurred.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Pittsburg, July 29.—During an electrical storm this afternoon a number of Italians took refuge in a building, No. 7808 Kelly street. The building was struck by lightning and two men were killed instantly. Three others were injured but will recover.

KUROPATKIN AT HOME.

St. Petersburg, July 29.—Gen. Kuropatkin, the Russian war minister, has returned here from the far East.

BAD CHINESE DEVIL.

Kwi, "the big devil," an emissary of the Chief Push that runs the Chinese Hades, is in Chinatown, and the Chinamen are terrorized, writes the Vancouver correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. He has visited the gaming houses of Mah Gim, 43½ Dupont street, and placed his fiendish mark on the head of Wah Lung.

Kwi, though a well-known devil in the far East, both in India and China, has never been known to visit a Christian country before. It was thought that the religious atmosphere surrounding a Christian community was too much for a spirit from the lower regions, and thus the terror among the Chinese is all the greater.

Kwi is a devil who visits opium smokers who are drifting into excess. His method of procedure is to pluck out the hair of a sleeping opium smoker, root and all, without leaving any hair littered about, without causing any pain, and without any material sign whatever.

The story told, in brief, is as follows:

Wah Lung and two companions retired for the night after spending some time in a friendly game of fan-tan. They all slept in the same bunk.

They rose at 7 o'clock, washed, dressed, and sat down to breakfast. While they were eating breakfast Wah Lung's two companions rose in horror and pointed at Wah Lung's head, crying, "Kwi! Kwi! the big devil."

Wah Lung felt his head, which on top was as bald and smooth as a baby's, and two similar spots were noticeable behind either ear.

On the top of the head many of the long hairs of the queue had to be removed, and, in fact, half the queue was gone as a consequence.

The bed was searched and there was no trace of any hair. The head was not shaved, as there were no roots left.

The man was taken to a doctor, who said that he knew of no disease which would cause the hair to fall out in such a manner. This has confirmed the neighbors of Wah Lung in their belief that he is indeed possessed of a devil, and that devil is Kwi.

KNIFE AND POKER PLAY.

Features of Life on Old Time River Packets.

There's been a heap o' stories told about Colonel Bowie that the Bowie knife was named after," said Caleb Mix, the veteran bartender on the Mississippi river packet City of Natchez, to the New York Sun, "an' it stands to reason there must be some truth in some on 'em, it's altogether likely. For all that I know they may be all true, but when folks says, like they do sometimes, that there wa'n't never no other man 't could handle a knife like he did, I reckon there's things that might be said.

"I've saw some tol'able skillful play myself, more'n once, an' I know there was a good mmany that had the name o' bein' better than them that I saw.

"The men that carried knives, or some of 'em, anyway, knowed how to use 'em. There ain't no manner o' doubt o' that.

"In the first place they bought good ones, an' paid a big price for 'em. I've knowed a good many that paid as high as twenty or twenty-five dollars for one, without no fancy work on the hilt, either. Just for the plain steel.

"An' they kept 'em as bright as glass an' keen as razors. You c'd shave yourself with a good Bowie 's well as you could with my razor.

"Then they useter practise with 'em, same as a man practices with a gun. Did you ever see a man try to strike a knife twice in the same spot on a tree or a door, standin' square in front of it? Well, if you think it's easy, just try it once.

"I'll gamble you can't hit within an inch of the spot you aim at 'thouten you've done some practicin'. An' I've seen a man mark a dozen spots on a door, no bigger'n a pin head, each one on 'em, an then stand back and drive his knife into the hull dozen, one after another, so fast you couldn't hardly see his hand move back an' forth, an' not miss one by a hairs-breath.

"You c'n see for yourself that'd be quite a val'able trick if you was standin' up in front of a man that was tryin' to get his gun workin.'

"Then there's a great knack about gettin' the full force of the blow. Thes fellers that fight in the prize ring with their fists knows that. They tell me that they practice for days an' days at punchin' bag to get the trick of landin' a blow so's to make all their stren'th tell.

"Well, that ain't nothin' new. I've seen men that has practiced that same thing with knives, so's't they c'd drive it half way to the hilt in solid oak with one blow. You may think that's easy, too, if your knife is sharp enough, but 'tain't.

"An' when it comes to throwin' a knife, there was them that throwed 'em sometimes, but mostly, a man that fit with a knife kep' his grip on it. Throwin' a knife is another thing that looks easy, but it takes a lot o' practice, an' I've seen them that could throw 'em as straight as any man I ever knowed could shoot.

"An' when you come to think of it, it's a heap sight worse to have a knife throwed into you, nor it is to stop a bullet, more special when the man that throwed it throwed straight, an' sent it as hard as a cannon ball.

"Hit's been a good while, though, since I've seen anybody use a knife like they used 'em when I was a boy. 'Pears like they was out o' fashion.

"In the old days, when the gamblers had free foot on the boats, an' there was a good many on 'em travelin' all the time, there was a knife play frequently, for nearly all on 'em carried Bowies, afore the revolvers come in.

"There was two on 'em come together in a game o' poker, three or four years befo' the wah, that was called the wickedest fighters on the river. Harry Colton was one ov 'em an' Dave Denton was the other.

"They'd been pals a good while afore that, but they'd had some fallin' out over a woman, some said, an' they'd separated on bad terms. There hadn't been no fight between 'em, maybe because they didn't think the woman was worth dyin' for, an' they both knew that neither on 'em ever quit till somebody was dead. I don't know as that was the reason, but likely it was.

"Anyway, they hadn't come together for a long time, when Denton come aboard the old Ross Lee one night at Memphis, an' goin' into the saloon come plumb onto a party that was playin' poker there.

"There were six men playing. One of them was Colton, and another was a pal of his named Mathews. They had caught four suckers from up the river, an' had been playin' with 'em the better part of two days, the suckers not bein' as green as they looked, an' the two gamblers bein' leary o' gettin' ketched.

"I'd been lookin' at 'em quite some, an' I'd made up my mind that the four was cross-roads gamblers their own selves, an' might likely do as well as the two I kuowed. But they didn t have nothin' to do with what happened afterwards, an' I don't know as I ever knowed their names. They was a tol'able slick lot, though, an' Colton an' Mathews had their work cut out for 'em.

"Well, Denton, he seen there was others lookin' on, like there gen'ly was when there was anything of a game goin', an' he stood along with the others for quite a spell afore anybody 'peared to take notice of him. Then I seen Colton look up, an' give Mathews a quick look that I didn't quite understand, but I reckoned it meant somethin'.

"There wasn't nothin' said, though, an' the game went right along. Mebbe it might ha' been twenty minutes after Denton come in that there come a big play with four in.

"It was a jackpot an' Mathews was dealin'. The first man passed, an' Colton opened it. The next man come in, an' the next two dropped. That brought it to the dealer an' he made good. Then the first man to say, he raised it forty dollars.

"It were a good deal of a surprise, seein' he'd passed on the first round, an' I seen Colton give another o' them quick looks o' hisn at Mathews, but I couldn't catch no signal goin' back. Then he looked at the feller that opened it—he was a tall, slab-sided sort of a chap—but he couldn't get no satisfaction lookin'. The feller sat like a wooden man, an' didn't give no sign.

"Finally Colton raised it a hundred an' the man on his left seen the double raise, an' Mathews 'peared to be doin' some studyin'. The way I sized it was that he'd give Colton a strong hand an' the man next to him just enough to make him play, cal'latin' to let Colton win out after the draw, for Mathews were a slick dealer. An', o' course, he'd reckoned on stayin' in his own self to help Cotton out with a double raise if it were needed, but he were puzzled by the feller that had raised.

"He put up, though, after thinkin' some, an' then the other feller made good. That made little over $600 in the pot, which were the biggest one they'd had, an' it struck me 't Mathews were just a leetle nervous.

"Howsumever, he didn't say nothin', but picked up the deck to serve the draw, an' the first man drawed one card. Colton stood pat, an' so did the next man, an' Mathews took two.

"Colton had first bet, o' course, an' he throwed in a white chip. The next man trailed, an' Mathews looked at his hand an' give a little start, an' then he raised it fifty.

"It looked to me like that little start give him away, an' he knowed well enough his hand wouldn't be no good, even if he'd made a full, which he likely had.

"Then the feller that passed at first made it a hundred more to play, an' Colton grinned, an' says:

"'It'll cost you a thousand more to call.'

"He see, plain enough that the man on his left was the one Mathews had started to catch, but the other feller had butted in, 'count o' some accident, so I says to myself that Colton's hand must be nigh the biggest, or else he wouldn't raise no one card draw like that.

"Well, the next man he seen that he wa'n't in it, an' he dropped. An' then Mathews, seein' there wa'n't no call for him to play no further, he dropped. An' the other feller he says:

"'I'd like to play you for a million on this hand, but seein' as I ain't got the money, I'll call you for my pile.' An' he dug up about $800 more an' showed down a straight flush nine high.

"It looked like he'd won the money by a sure enough accident, but Colton showed a king straight flush an' raked the pot.

"Just naturally there was considerable excitement. You don't see a straigh tflush beaten every day, an' them days it were almost unheard of, for they hadn't been playin' straights long, an' the straight flush were a brand new hand.

"But there wa'n't nothin' said for a minute or so. The feller that was busted o'course got up f'm the table an' the deck passed over to Colton.

"While he was shuflin' the cards, an' afore anybody else had spoke, on account of the excitement, Denton spoke up, very quiet like, an' drawlin' out his words very distinct.

"'Pears like our friend that was dealin' come near makin' a powerful bad mistake that time,' he said, an' when they heard it everybody drawed back ready to scatter.

"Such a remark as that, them days, meant fight, an' everybody knowed it. Mathews were as quick as the next, an' he rose up on his feet, pullin' his gun as he rose, but Colton says, just as cool as Denton:

"'Put up your gun, Mathews,' he says. 'I know what this means, an' I'll settle it.' An' he turned on Denton with his bowie in his hand.

"When he turned he seen that Denton had his knife out, an' more'n that, he'd throwed off his coat an' twisted it 'round his left arm. They used to do that when two knife fighters fit, usin' the left arm to parry an' the coat to save the arm if they could.

"Well, you could see how them two had practiced, for Colton was just as quick as Denton, an' afore they come together he had his coat off an' on his left arm, too. An' then they faced.

"The rest on us knowed well enough what was comin', an' there wa'n't a man in the crowd that wouldn't ha' faced a locomotive as quick as he'd gone between 'em. It would ha' meant sure death, so we just stood round an' watched.

"Mathews hadn't put his gun in his pocket, an' it looked like he were standin' by to take a shot at Denton in case he got the best of the fight, but there was two or three that saw it, an' I heard one say, 'Fair play there, now.' An' Mathews, seein' he was watched, put away his gun.

"The two was well matched, bein' about the same weight an' age, an' you c'd see there was goin' to be a fight to the death. 'Peared like they'd nursed their hate so long they were eager to get at each other, but there wa'n't no great hurry about it, neither.

"They feinted at each other for a while, circlin' 'round an' 'round like two gamecocks will sometimes after they make a rush, an' then Colton made a quick side step an' struck fair for Denton's neck. He came near gettin' there, too, for Denton's left arm on'y just got up in time to turn the blow a little an' it scratched deep into his shoulder.

"He never winced, though, an' didn't try no quick blow back, but just kep' circlin' an' feintin'. 'Twa'n't but a few seconds, though, afore he jumped to the left an' struck for Colton's right arm, but Colton caught that blow with his own knife an' the steel rang like a shot an' the sparks flew, but neither on 'em was hurt that time.

"The next time it was different. Colton struck for the heart, an' Denton throwed his left arm up just in time to catch the blow an' managed some way to catch the knife as well in a fold of his coat.

"It was only an instant afore Colton wrenched it loose, but that instant were enough. Denton throwed himself forward so's he stood almost against Colton's body an' stabbed him again and again in the left side.

"Any one o' the cuts was enough to kill him, but while Denton's knife was goin', Colton got his loose and brought it down square into Denton's throat, so when we went to pick 'em up they were both dead.

"It was a great fight an' a heap more excitin' to look at than any gun play I ever seen. But knife fightin' is always that."

BIGGEST MEAT CONSUMERS.

If Germany does not remove the bars she has raised against the importation of American meat products her middle classes will be left to the alternatives of starvation or emigration, according to an investigation made by the National Provisioner, the organ of the provision trade in this country.

The paper thinks there are indications that the restrictions governing meat importation will be lightened instead, to the great benefit of American trade, for the simple reason that, unless that is done, Germany cannot feed her own people.

If figures, that there are out of the total population of 56,000,000, 7,000,000 German families, whose annual earnings average only $225, or $45 a head a year, and 5,000,000 more families that earn not more than $500 a year or $100 a head.

Just how much meat these can afford to eat when that articig was from 50 to 100 per cent higher in price than it was here—and millions of dollars' worth have been barred since by the prohibitive meat regulations—cannot be estimated.

Apart from the raising of prices by the restrictions of the supply it is argued further that Germany cannot feed her own people anyway. By official count a little more than two years ago the country had only 18,000,000 cattle, less than that number of hogs, 10,000,000 sheep and almost 3,000,000 goats to feed her population.

Assuming that the same proportion is killed there annually as here and the weight of the animals to be the same, there would be only 76 pounds of meat a head each year, or a little over three ounces each a day, for the whole population, which is clearly not enough.

With only 50 per cent more population than Germany, the United States kills three times as many cattle, nearly five times as many pigs and seven times as many sheep annually. And when all the great amount sent out of this country is allowed for, there is still left three times as much meat for every head of the population as there is in Germany.

That fact, the paper argues, makes us the biggest meat eaters in the world and the nation with the stoutest manhood, and in time it will make Germany come to us for some of our supply.

AN UPRISING OCCURS IN EASTERN CUBA

Killing of Leaders Did Not Stop Movement.

Mobilization of the Rural Guards Is Ordered.

Havana, July 30.—In spite of the assertion made yesterday by Senor Yero, secretary of the interior of the interior, that the killing of three men and the capture of a fourth man, their leader, who had attempted to cause an uprising in the vicinity of Bayamo, province of Santiago, effectually ended the only semblance of an uprising in Cuba, the rumors of uprisings in Eastern Cuba were fully confirmed today in the government's reports received from the governor and other officials of Santiago province. They are to the effect that since the night of Sunday last sixty armed and mounted men have appeared outside villages in the Cauto river district proclaiming a revolution and demanding the payment of the former members of the revolutionary army. No acts of violence have been reported, but the inhabitants of the Cauto river region are excited. The leader of the revolutionary party is named Pupo. He is a brother of one of the bandits killed by the rural guard on Tuesday.

Gen. Rodriguez, commander-in-chief of the rural guard, has ordered the mobilization of all the rural guards in Eastern Cuba and the governor of Santiago province has been instructed to enlist as many volunteers as may be deemed necessary, to co-operate with the mounted troops.

Secretary of the Interior Yero says there is no doubt that the authorities will be able to cope with the situation, as all the reports he had agreed that popular sentiment is with the government and President Palma, and that those who have entered into the rebellion belong to the lazy class of Puerto Principe. It is reported that many volunteers are offering their services to the government.

DAUGHTER OF RICH NEW YORKER FALLS IN LOVE WITH BEASLEY

They Met on Ocean Liner While He Was In Custody of Officers Taking Him Back to Alaska on Charge of Forgery.

Washington, July 30.—Before his departure from Washington for Alaska last Saturday, James C. Beasley, the adventurer, who had been followed in two continents by officers of the law, received a half dozen telegrams from a young woman in New York who had met him on the St. Paul from Southampton. The young woman became infatuated with him, and when it became known that he was in trouble, determined to follow him to Washington and accompany him to Alaska. Beasley's gallantry is shown by his flat denial that he had heard from the girl or that she had shown any interest in him. Dwyer and Herron, the deputies who had him in charge, knew of the objections of the girl's parents to her association with a criminal, and opened the dispatches. More than to say that the young woman is the daughter of a rich New Yorker, the officers will say nothing. Beasley declined to admit this much. "It is not necessary to connect the name of a young lady, who is almost a stranger to me, with my disgrace," he said. "I could have saved the government the $10,000 it has cost to trace me," continued Beasley, "if I had known I was wanted at Alaska on a criminal charge.

"I did not, as claimed by the officers who have me in charge, go to South Africa by way of Australia. I have not been in Australia for many years. I went from Nome to San Francisco in August, two years ago; from San Francisco I traveled by train like any other passenger to New York. At New York I took passage to Cape Town via Southampton. I have committed no offense and will prove it as soon as I am brought to trial. When I learned through the papers that I had been indicted in Nome for indorsing checks which appear to have been forged, I made up my mind to go back to Alaska as soon as I could get my affairs in South Africa in shape. It was with that object in view that I sold a gold mine in the Transvaal a year ago to an English syndicate for $75,000. But before I finally made up my mind to go back and surrender I satisfied myself that the old copper mine on the Crocodile river which I had come into possession of was an immensely rich deposit, and concluded to develop it and realize on it before coming back to the United States voluntarily. If I had been left alone two months I would have consummated this deal, as you can see from this correspondence. I could have delayed my departure from South Africa several months by fighting the extradition, but that would have done no good either in a legal sense or in a business way. Such a proceeding would have made the capitalists both here and in England with whom I was dealing timid of me, and complications might have ensued whereby I would have lost my great copper mine.

"All I ask now is a speedy trial so I can get out of Alaska before the ice closes transportation. Then I can get back to my mine in the African jungle by Christmas, and before another summer comes I will have to my credit in a bank at Kimberley millions of dollars."

Seattle, Wash., July 30.—After circling the globe to deliver an accused man to the authorities in Manila, and capture another in South Africa to be taken to Nome, two federal officers arrived last night in Seattle with the latter prisoner, James C. Beasley. The men who made the journey are Charles E. Herron, of Seattle, a special agent of the department of justice, and Deputy United States Marshal D. P. Dwyer, of Alaska. Beasley is charged with forgery.

STABBING AFFRAY OVER A GIRL

Minneapolis, July 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Pietro Jarocak, 2315 Second street northeast, was stabbed in the abdomen last evening by William Krish, a 19-year-old boy. The affair took place near the Minneapolis Brewing company's yards in Northeast Minneapolis, and after being stabbed Jarocak was able to stagger into a drug store, from whence he was removed to the city hospital. His assailant gave himself up.

The men had an altercation over a girl last Saturday, but Krish says the trouble arose over a ticket to some entertainment. He says the stabbing was in self defense.

TEN RUSSIAN STRIKERS KILLED

St. Petersburg, July 30.—Ten striking workmen were killed and eighteen were wounded as the result of a volley fired by troops at Mikhailevo, on the Tiflis-Batoum railroad, July 28. The strikers attempted to stop trains and a detachment of forty soldiers was summoned. The soldiers were greeted with a shower of stones and some revolvers. The troops were ordered to fire. The street car service at Odessa is suspended in consequence of a strike of drivers and conductors for higher wages. The employes are preventing the cars from leaving the sheds.

ALL TRACE OF CONVICTS IS LOST

Sacramento, Cal., July 30.—A special to the Bee from the Folsom state prison says that the latest reports received show that the militia have absolutely no trace of the escaped convicts since Monday night. The fugitives are thought to be doubling back from the vicinity of Loftus to the neighborhood of Rattlesnake Bar and the Sentigraf mine. The country in which the prisoners are supposed to be has a number of deserted cabins and several orchards which will afford them shelter and food.

Guard Cochran, who was stabbed in the prison fight, is slightly worse and his recovery is still doubtful.

WITNESSES TELL

Many Additional Facts About the Shooting of Marcum.

Much New Evidence Is Secured By the Commonwealth.

Cynthiana, Ky., July 30.—The commonwealth, in the second trial of Curtis Jett and Thomas White, for the murder of Marcum, today not only produced new witnesses, but also secured additional evidence from those who had testified at the first trial in Jackson. S. S. Taulbee averred that he saw Marcum fall and Ewen running away. He did not see Jett in the street, where the prisoner asserts to have been at the time of the shooting.

William Combs testified that he saw Marcum fall and Jett afterward emerging from the court house.

Hezeklah Combs testified to seeing John Noble, Curtis Jett and Thomas White together just before the shooting. White beckoned Jett to the side door of the court house, where both entered. He talked with Noble then and soon he heard shooting and saw Ewen running away.

OLD BANK IS CLOSED

Doylestown, Pa. Institution In Hands of the Comptroller.

Washington, July 30.—The Doylestown National bank of Doylestown, Penna., has been closed by the comptroller of the currency. Bank Examiner J. W. Schofield has been appointed receiver.

Doylestown, Pa., July 30.—The following notice was posted on the door of the Doylestown National bank today:

"This bank closed and in the hands of the comptroller of the currency.

"T. P. KANE,

"Deputy comptroller of the currency, and,

"J. W. SCHOFIELD,

"National bank examiner."

The posting of the notice caused considerable excitement in the town, as the deposits of the institution are large.

The bank examiners have been working on the books for two days past but no statement has been issued either by them or the officers of the bank. George Brock is cashier of the bank.

The capital of the bank was $165,000 and the last report to the comptroller showed: Surplus and profits, $121,780; deposits, over $1,000,000; loans and discounts, and stock and securities, $1,051,360.

The bank is one of the oldest in the state. Its Philadelphia correspondents are the Philadelphia National bank and the First National bank. The former has been its agent for fifty years, and the latter for thirty years. Bank Examiner Schofield telegraphed the Philadelphia banks to make no remittances to the Doylestown bank today.

The president of the bank is Henry Leer, a prominent lawyer and candidate for judge on the Republican ticket.

The statement issued by the comptroller of the currency says that the failure of the bank was brought about by speculations in stocks on the part of the officers and a number of the customers of the bank.

Deputy Controller Kane said, "The total loss will amount to $215,000."

Francis L. Worthington, a director, said: "The president and cashier ran things to suit themselves. They had not right to do so. I understand there was some speculation—Consolidated Lake Superior, I believe—and in that stock most of the money may have been sunk."

E. H. Brock, cashier, declined to reply to the accusations of Mr. Worthington, saying: "Our investments did not turn out as well as we expected."

MINERS PROTECTED.

Will Be Given Lien on Klondike Mines.

Tacoma, Wash., July 30.—The Yukon council decided last week to allow the miners a prior lien on 50 per cent of the entire output of the Klondike mines. The resolution was subsequently altered to include supplies of wood in the privilege of filing a prior lien, on the same footing as a laborer in a mine. The new ruling, it is believed, protects men employed upon mines against the acts of some employers who have not scrupled to adopt all means in their power to avoid paying the men.

CARBONATE OF IRON

Found In Large Quantities on Unimak Island.

Portland, Ore., July 30.—Dr. John P. Frizell has arrived in Portland from Unimak island, one of the Aleutian chain. He brings with him samples of carbonates of iron which are pronounced practically pure and worth $20 a ton. According to Dr. Frizell, there are thousands of tons of the carbonates of iron in the island deposits. The only other deposits of carbonate of iron are in Bavaria, which supplies all the carbonates in use.

FIRE IN LONDON.

London, July 30.—The Great Central Railway's dock and sheds at Grinsby have been gutted by fire. The sheds were filled with machinery and an immense quantity of barley. The damage done amounts to $500,000.

CANNOT BE FOUND

Bodies of Victims of Powder Explosion Are Missing.

It Is Thought Probable They Were Blown Into Atoms.

Lowell, Mass., July 30.—No further deaths among the injured by the magazine explosion of yesterday in South Lowell have occurred. The condition today of Clarendon Goodwin, who was in charge of the United State's Cartridge company's employes at the storage houses, is critical. He is the man who endeavored to remedy a leakage of nitro-glycerine, and whose act in pouring nitric acid, in mistake for water on the leakage, is thought to have caused the explosion. Two of the injured who, late last night were reported to have died, are still alive.

Of the dead, the bodies of George Flynn, Louis E. Richard and James Grady, employes of the Cartridge company, have not been recovered. It is thought they were blown to atoms.

An unknown man is reported to have been burned to death in the wreckage of a dwelling, despite efforts to rescue him. It is not expected that the death list will exceed twenty-five.

It was a long time before the actual cause of the explosion could be ascertained. It was thought at first that everyone within a radius of fifty feet of the magazines had been killed, but later it was found that Clarendon Goodwin, the foreman of the men, who were loading the powder on the teams, had survived, together with one of his assistants, Amadeo Boulanger, and this afternoon the latter was seen in he hospital. He said that the men went down to the magazine nearest the street to fix the floor, and after the teams had been loaded with the powder, which was in the magazine, it was discovered that a can of nitro-glycerine, which was stored in the magazine, was leaking. Mr. Goodwin picked up what he thought was a jug of water and began pouring it on the nitro-glycerine with the idea of diluting it and washing it up.

As soon as the fluid from the jug struck the floor, he found that it was nitric acid. The fluid at once began to smoke, and when the men saw it, they rushed from the building, but had not gone ten feet when the explosion occurred. This magazine was, therefore, the first to go up, followed immediately by the gunpowder in the three wagons, and several seconds later by the second magazine. To those who heard the crash, it seemed as if there were two continuous roars between them. There are, however, five holes in the ground, which seems to clearly indicate five explosions.

STATION AGENT AND FLAGMAN BADLY HURT AT SOUTH ST. PAUL

W. H. Francis and His Son A. S. Francis Were Struck By a Passenger Train and Thrown a Considerable Distance.

St. Paul, July 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—W. H. Francis, the flagman, and A. S. Francis, the station agent, were seriously, perhaps fatally, hurt, being struck by a passenger train on the Chicago Great Western road, at South St. Paul early this morning. The accident happened about 7 o'clock.

W. H. Francis is about 60 years old and the other man is his son. At the same time when the passenger train was coming up from Chicago, a freight train was coming from St. Paul on another track. The old man appeared to have got confused, with two trains coming at once, and was in imminent danger, when his son rushed forward to his rescue. Both were thrown a considerable distance by the passenger train.

W. H. Francis suffered a compound fracture of the right leg, bad bruises and internal injuries. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital and his chances for recovery were thought to be slim.

A. S. Francis had his head severely cut, besides bodily bruises, and probably internal injuries. He was taken to his home at South St. Paul, and his injuries are believed to be serious.

SHAMROCK III IS A GOOD SEA BOAT

New York, July 30.—(From steam yacht Erin, via De Forest wireless.)—The Shamrocks left Sandy Hook at 10 o'clock today in a twelve-knot west wind with splendid racing conditions and ran off shore under their own sail. Mr. Fife did ont give the challenger a race over a fixed course because he wanted to complete the stretching of her new mainsail. The yachts started from the Scotland lightship at 11:08, nearly side by side, Shamrock III a little to the windward. At 1130 the wind had increased to fifteen knots and the Shamrocks faced the heaviest sea in which they ever yet raced and were jumping the full length of their bowsprits into it. The challenger took the seass in splendid style and sent them flying over her bow clear to her mast.

Close hauled, the challenger not only proved herself a splendid sea boat, but fast in rough water. In half an hour she had beaten Shamrock I by several minutes.

SECRET STAIRCASE OF TWEED RING

New York, July 30.—In removing the large oil painting of Andrew Jackson from its place in the old council chamber in the west wing of the city hall preparatory to renovating the room, an old secret stairway, leading to the upper floor of the city hall from the basement has been uncovered. An old employe said when the "Tweed ring" controlled the municipal government the stairway was often used by aldermen to escape from the building when angry constituents were awaiting them outside and to escape the service of legal papers in suits brought by taxpayers to prevent the grants of franchises.

PRESIDENT TELLS PAYNE TO HURRY

Oyster Bay, L. I., July 30.—Professor Jerome Baker Landfield, an instructor in the university of California, was the first caller on President Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill today. He has just returned from Europe and desired to pay his respects to the president and talk with him concerning his observations during his travels before proceeding to California. President Roosevelt's guests at luncheon today were Postmaster General and Mrs. Payne and Immigration Commissioner Williams and Mr. Van Ingen, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Payne arrived on the revenue cutter Onondaga at noon. As Mr. Payne is to return to Washington in a few days, the president, it is understood, impressed upon him the desirability of concluding the postal investigation at as early a date as practicable.

FINAL TRIBUTE IS PAID TO THE POPE

SMALLPOX A BAR

To Getting Any Employment, Says St. Paul Man.

Thoroughly Disgusted Former Pesthouse Patient Attempts Suicide.

St. Paul, July 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—"I have been unable to get a job since I came out of the pest house, my wife has left me and I thought it just as well to kill myself."

This was the explanation given by J. F. Brown in the police court today.

Discouraged because he could not secure employment and downhearted over his wife leaving him, Brown last evening made two unsuccessful attempts to take his life. He swallowed a dose of laudanum at his room, 436 East Seventh street, and, as the drug acted slowly, Brown went to Burns' saloon, 196 East Seventh street, and attempted to hurry his death by putting a revolver shot through his head.

Patrons of the saloon disturmed Brown and he then staggered to the sidewalk, where he fell unconscious. The police ambulance was summoned and Dr. Stevens, with the aid of a stomach pump, saved the would-be suicide's life.

Brown was taken to Dale street hospital with a case of smallpox May 1 and discharged from the institution on June 18. Since that date he has been unable to secure employment as a bartender. Several times he has been given employment, only to be discharged as soon as it was known that he had been recently an inmate of the pest house.

INDIAN DEED APPROVED.

Washington, July 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The acting secretary of the interior has approved a deed for the conveyance of inherited Indian lands from Way-ge-mah-waun-gay to Frank L. Gorenflo, being lot 7, section 19, township 146 north, range 31 west, 45.26 acres in the Leech Lake agency.

Third Requiem Mass Sung In Sistine Chapel.

Prophecy of Vannutelli's Election Recalled.

Rome, July 30.—The last tribute was paid to the late Pope Leo this morning when the third great requiem was celebrated in the Sistine chapel of the vatican, and the function was no less ceremonious and imposing than the two others. While there were perhaps fewer present, there was a greater display of gorgeous uniforms. Of the sixty-two cardinals now in Rome all attended the mass except Cardinal Cretoni, prefect of the congregation of sacred relics, who was ill.

The picture presented by the procession of cardinals, in violet robes and red capes bordered with ermine, escorted by noble guards in scarlet uniforms and with drawn swords, the scene being softened by clouds of incense and the chapel resounding with the strains of the incomparable Sistine choir singing "Libera Me Domine," made those present feel as though lifted into another world. In the churches of Rome today began the offering of prayers to the Holy Ghost to assist and enlighten the cardinals to choose the right man to sit in the chair of St. Peter.

During the conclave the blessed sacrament will be exposed in several churches for the special prayers of the faithful, with the same object in view.

The mayor of Carpineto, the birthplace of Pope Leo, who proposed to erect with local contributions a monument to Leo XIII on top of the Lepini mountains, surrounding the village of Carpineto, finding that his project was checked by the large amount of money required, intends to make it an international tribute to the late pontiff and will ask all countries to join in the movement. He says he expects considerable contributions, especially from America.

People are now recalling a prophecy which, at the time it was made, produced considerable talk among the superstitious, who held it to be an indication of who will be the next pope, so much so that several large bets were made in favor of the cardinal indicated by the prophesy. Many years ago, the late Cardinal Parocchi, who was not then even a bishop, one day met an old woman in the country. She was a typical witch in appearance, and planted herself before Parocchi, saying: "The bishop of Santa Rufina will be the next pope."

The woman refused to say more. Parocchi repeated the tale, which gained added circulation when he was appointed to that see, and before his death he was considered to be the most likely successor of Pope Leo.

When Parocchi was dying he repeated the story of the old woman's prophecy. The famous bishopric of Santa Rufina was afterwards given the Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli, and now people are asking themselves, will the prophecy come true after all?

TRIAL OF MISSOURI SENATOR FOR BOODLING HAS BEGUN

W. M. Sullivan Is Charged With Bribery In Connection With Baking Powder Legislation—The Usual Pleas and Demurrers Are Argued.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 30.—The case of State Senator W. M. Sullivan, of Christian county, charged with having solicited a bribe of $4500 in connection with baking powder legislation at the recent session of the legislature, was called today before Judge H. C. Timmons, of Barton county. Judge Timmons was specially appointed owing to the allegation of prejudice of Judge Hazell. The defense offered the plea in abatement, setting forth that the defendant was indicted illegally because of the appearance of the attorney general in the grand jury room, together with Messrs. Cosgrove and Dunlop, grand jury stenographers. After a brief argument by the attorneys, Judge Timmons overruled a motion to sustain the plea.

Then came a demurrer similar to those filed in the Smith and Farris cases. Attorney Pope, for the defense, argued the points of the demurrer at length.

GREATEST CLOCK IN THE WORLD

Chicago, July 30.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Milwaukee, says: The greatest clock in the world, the dial of which will be 120 feet in diameter, is being built here for use at the Louisiana Purchase exposition next year. Only the hands and machinery are being made here, for the dial is to be a brilliant bed of flowers. The clock will be placed on the side of the hill north of the agricultural building. The minute hand will be sixty feet long, and the ring at the end, which will be fastened to the machinery, will be eight feet in diameter. The minute hand will move five feet every minute.

The numerals marking the various hours will be fifteen feet in length and made of bright colored coleus. In a broad circle surrounding the dial will be twelve flower beds, one opposite each hour and each two feet wide and fifteen feet long. At night the timepiece will be illuminated with 2000 incandescent lights.

KILL SEALS UNDER JAPANESE FLAG

Seattle, July 30.—Capt. N. H. Nice, agent for the North American Commercial company at Dutch Harbor, Alaska, who is in the city, charges the fishermen on Japanese vessels with the disappearance of seals on the Pribyloff islands. He says American and Canadian fishermen masquerade under the Japanese flag and shoot seals instead of spearing them, which causes the body to sink rapidly, so that many are killed to no purpose, while the shooting disturbs the breeding on nearby islands. Capt. Nice claims that unless the depredations are stopped the Pribyloff island seals will disappear in a few years.

HUNGARIAN DIET HOLDS SESSION

Budapest, July 30.—The third session of the lower house of the Hungarian diet yesterday (after two suspensions, due to disorder in the house) lasted until the early hours this morning. At midnight the obstructionists withdrew, singing the national anthem, and declaring that any further sitting would be illegal, as Wednesday's session ended at midnight and Thursday's had not been called in form. The majority, after having cheered the departing members, adopted Premier Hedervary's motion, providing for the reading of the indemnity bill. The house subsequently adjourned until Friday. It is reported that the public prosecutor has instituted proceedings against Former Deputy Dienes, who was charged by Deputy Zolman Papp, in the house yesterday, with attempting to bribe him with 10,000 kronen in cash to desert his fellow obstructionists and leave Budapest.

ACTIVITY CONTINUES IN RUSSIA

New York, July 30.—Unusual activity continues in South Russian military circles, says a Moscow dispatch to the Times by way of London. Frequent conferences are being held in Odessa by military chiefs from South Russia, Caucasius and even Transcaucasia. Unusually exhaustive numbers of troops are being held throughout the south. Large orders for ammunition have just been placed in various towns by the war office, and the government magazines have been accumulating unusually large quantities of stores for some time. It is reported that the volunteer fleet authorities have been warned by the government that provision must be made for the contingency expedition's withdrawal of the fleet from service under the commercial flag between Odessa and the far East.

"NERVOUS AND IRRITABLE"

Pe-ru-na Is Invaluable to Ailing Women.

Miss Celia Harrington, 303 Second avenue, Detroit, Mich., writes:

"Weakness has filled many months of my life with suffering. Through carelessness I caught a severe cold two years ago which settled in catarrh and seriously interfered with the regular functions of the body, and made me nervous and irritable. I began taking Peruna and found in it a faithful helper, as it enriched my blood and invigorated the whole system. I have no pains now and am well. I heartily recommend Peruna as a reliable medicine."

In Peruna these women find a prompt and permanent cure. Thousands upon thousands of testimonials to this effect are received by Dr. Hartman every year. The good that Peruna has accomplished in this class of cases can scarcely be overestimated.

The great popularity of Peruna as a catarrh remedy has tempted many people to imitate Peruna. A great many so-called catarrh remedies and catarrhal tonics are to be found in many drug stores. These remedies can be procured by the druggist much cheaper than Peruna. Peruna can only be obtained at a uniform price, and no druggist can get it a cent cheaper.

Pe-ru-na, the only Catarrhal Tonic.

Thus it is that druggists are tempted to substitute the cheap imitations of Peruna for Peruna. It is done every day without a doubt.

We would caution all people against accepting substitutes for Peruna. Insist upon having Peruna. There is no other internal remedy for catarrh that will take the place of Peruna. Allow no one to persuade you to the contrary.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

HISTORICAL DATA

Wanted By Dr. Guy Carleton Lee of Baltimore.

Guy Carleton Lee, Ph. D., of Johns Hopkins university, has undertaken the task of compiling a complete and authoritative history of North America, and has appealed to the press of the country for its assistance in making his work a success. He and his colleagues have already been engaged upon the work for some little time. The work was undertaken because of the fact that no general history of America is in existence, and the compilers have concluded that it will require at least twenty volumes to make it in any way satisfactory.

The manuscript is now nearing its final form, but they have arrived at a point where they have left the beaten tracks of books and records, and appeal to the people for information peculiar and personal to themselves and localities. Information is desired concerning the contents of correspondence relating to political, social, or economic matters of the period from the establishment of the colonies to 1899. Any documents relating to any event in the history of the United States, Canada and Mexico and local legends concerning great men and women, places and events, are desired.

Request is made for information concerning the ownership and hanging place of oil paintings, portraying distinguished men and women of North America, and also the personal opinions of ancestors of the present generation and the collective opinion of localities concerning great men, such as Webster, Lincoln, Calhoun, Davis, Diaz and Laurier; of great events, such as the outbreak of the civil war, the emancipation proclamation, the establishment of the republic of Mexico, the union of the British provinces in North America.

All such information can be sent to Guy Carleton Lee, editor of The History of North America, Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, Md.

BALDWIN IS MAYOR.

California Turfman's Racing City of Arcadia.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 30.—For two months there has been bitter opposition all over southern California against E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin's proposition to incorporate a city of the sixth class on his big and beautiful ranch out in the San Gabriel valley. The temperance and church people say that Baldwin is in league with several famous American sporting millionaires, and that it is the plan to create a municipality entirely controlled by Baldwin and his ranch superintendents, where there will be no hindrances to the creation of a little Monte Carlo within a half hour's ride of Los Angeles.

The election took place yesterday and the vote was unanimous for incorporating. To make doubly sure of the perfect control of his municipality, E. J. Baldwin has had himself elected mayor, while his associate councilmen are H. A. Unruh, (Baldwin's superintendent), M. Lawrence, (his head clerk), Hull McLaughry, (his boss horse trainer), and David S. Unruh, (his wine maker.)

The newly elected clerk of Arcadia is J. P. Cavillier, who is head gardener for Baldwin, and the marshal is Elmer Anderson, a horseshoer in the Baldwin stables.

Baldwin says: "I am going to have a city where there is personal liberty. I'll show folks what a beautiful spot there will be here in a few years more. We are going to have the finest winter race course in America, the most elegant clubhouse and hotels. There is no end of money behind this plan to make a big town here. I believe we'll have another Saratoga here some day."

MYSTERIOUS WOMAN

Bradford, Ohio, July 30.—A well-dressed young woman, giving the name of Miss Nora Breen, and her home as 1812 Penn avenue, Pittsburg, Penn., left the Pennsylvania passenger train eastbound here yesterday morning, and wandered about town in a demented state until apprehended by officers at the instance of Agent Williams, of the railway company.

She had a ticket from St. Louis to Pittsburg, considerable money and some valuable jewelry. It was learned she had been in business in Madison, Kan. An envelope was found in her possession addressed to her, care of the Sisters of Mercy, 22 Morgan street, St. Louis. She can give no lucid account of herself, and is being held here pending the action of the railway officials or instructions from relatives.

The Ladies of the First Presbyterian Church

BESSEMER PROTESTS

Against Unwarranted Reports About the Tilden Mine.

Bessemer, Mich., July 30.—The reports which have been sent to the newspapers of Detroit and other big cities that the Tilden mine, which is located here in Bessemer, and is the mainstay of the town, is "played out," are all wrong. Cuckoos of stock jobbers are supposed to be responsible for the reports. As a matter of fact the Tilden now has six shafts working and nearly 800 hands. Like most other mines, its ore deposits are frequently interfered with by rock formations, but which by no means indicate exhaustion of ore. So far the greatest depth of the Tilden is only 700 feet, while the Norris, at Ironwood, six miles from here, is down 1200 feet, and the Bonnie, just outside of Ironwood, over 1600 feet. The Bonnie today is the most promising property on the Gogebic range, though for years it was idle and regarded as an unprofitable proposition.

Only a year ago the Colby mine, and also the Palms, were knocked as the Tilden is now, and both adjoin the Tilden. Yet both properties are still very profitable producers. These false reports about the Tilden hurts the general business of Bessemer, so the citizens quite naturally resent them.

CASE CHILDREN WIN.

Get $20,000 Left In Trust By Jerome Case.

Racine, Wis., July 30.—In a decision rendered by Judge Belden of the circuit court yesterday in the suit brought by the Illinois Trust and Savings bank of Chicago against Henrietta M. Case, administratrix of the estate of her husband, Jackson I. Case, to secure a decision and construction of a paragraph of the will of Jerome I. Case, father of Jackson Case, it was held that Jackson Case's interest in the $80,000 trust fund given by Jerome Case should be paid to the children of Jackson I. Case. An appeal is to be taken to the supreme court by Quarles, Spence & Quarles, attorneys for Mrs. Case.

When Jerome I Case died he left $80,000 in trust, the interest of which was to be paid to his four children, Jackson I. Case being one. When Jackson I. Case died a question arose as to whether his share of the trust, $20,000, should be paid to the widow or the children. The Illinois Trust and Savings bank, with which the $80,000 trust fund had been placed, brought suit against Henrietta M. Case in order to secure a construction of the will. By the terms of the Jerome Case will the trust was to be held and on the death of any of the four children a quarter interest was to be paid to the "legal representative" of the deceased heir. Judge Belden held that "legal representative" meant issue and that the $20,000 passes to the children of Jackson I. Case.

RECEIPTS LARGE

Tax Collections This Year By County the Largest Ever.

June Apportionment Will Bring In Very Much Money.

Tax collections at the office of the county treasurer this year are enormously in excess of those of previous years.

The June apportionment, which will be made up in a few days, will amount to $1,139,226, all of which was collected between March 4 and the present date. Last year the June apportionment was only $67,201.97, little more than half this year's, and in 1901 the apportionment amounted to $623,933.41.

The penalty of 10 per cent went on taxes unpaid on June 1, so there was a rush to pay up during the last few days of May. On the last business day of the month the receipts of the treasurer's office, for a single day, amounted to the enormous sum of $882,955.68. In 1902 the receipts for the last day were $445,366.04, only a little more than half of those of the last day this year. Assistant County Treasurer Williamson estimated that the day's receipts would be $750,000. That was large enough to cause comment, yet it was $132,000 too low.

The total collections for the year since the 1902 taxes became due have been $1,202,284, against $925,833.32 in 1902 and $872,584.08 in 1901.

These immense figures indicate that property owners have paid up more promptly than ever before, and that the list of delinquents will be correspondingly smaller. Not only that, but as collections were pretty close up to the handle last year, it must mean, also, that few people took advantage of the installment plan that is offered, most of them preferring to pay up the whole amount at once. Under the law half might have been paid before June 1 and the other half before Nov. 1, without the penalty being added. If this is responsible for the increase, the November settlement will be smaller than usual, so the political subdivisions that get the money must not get lavish simply because they have a lot on hand. They will need it to make up for the shortage in the November settlement.

The county is simply the collecting agency for the cities, townships, villages and school districts, as well as for the state and for itself. All taxes are paid in a lump to the county, and then the county auditor's force has to apportion the lump receipts to the different subdivisions to which they belong.

Deputy Auditor Marvin has this work to do, and he will get at it immediately. The money will be available for the purposes for which the taxes were levied within a week or ten days.

The apportionment is the largest ever made in this county, and so much of the year's receipts coming in at this time, all funds will be plethoric for a time.

SECRETLY MARRIED

To Engineer Duvall, Claims an Indiana Woman.

Louisville, Ky., July 30.—Two women, one the mother of Reginald Duvall and the other claiming to be his widow, have sued the Southern Pacific Railway company for damages occasioned by the death of Duvall, who was an engineer and who was killed in a freight wreck at Georgetown, Ind., last August. Mrs. M. E. Duvall, mother of the deceased, has qualified as administratrix of the estate of her son, and the woman who claims to be his widow has qualified as administratrix at Huntington, Ind.

The younger woman was Miss Flora Chamberlain, of 2937 Sauk street, Louisville, and when Young Duvall was killed she immediately claimed that they had been secretly married four days before his death, but that the certificate had been lost.

The mother sued the railroad for $10,000, the widow sued for $20,000, and both cases were transferred to the United States court, citizens of two states being interested.

The younger woman was summoned to appear before the clerk of the federal court in Louisville at the instance of Matt O'Doherty, counsel for Mrs. M. E. Duvall, to take her deposition in the case.

The examination has not yet been completed, but Mr. O'Doherty says if the younger woman swears to the fact of a marriage that she will do so at her peril. He further says that he can prove that the young woman was not the wife of the dead engineer.

MAY PROVE FATAL

When Will Duluth People Learn the Importance of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first.

But when you know 'tis from the kidneys;

That serious kidney troubles follow:

That diabetes, Bright's disease, may be the fatal end,

You will gladly profit by the following experience.

"Tis the statement of a Duluth citizen:

Mrs. Agnes McKay, of 125 Nineteenth avenue, says: "For some time I suffered from kidney complaint and although I tried different remedies I did not succeed in getting anything to effectually rid me of the trouble. I had constant heavy bearing down pains across the small of my back, so that I could hardly get around and at night I could not rest well. The kidney secretions were irregular, highly colored and deposited a heavy sediment. I also suffered from severe and persistent headaches. On being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I procured them at W. A. Abbett's drug store and used them. They relieved me of the pains and restored the action of the kidneys' secretions to their normal state."

SHE MAY NOW LEAVE STATE

Mrs. Robert Forbes Released From Writ of Ne Exeat.

Emma W. Forbes has been released from the restraint of the writ of ne exeat under which she, with Robert Forbes, has been existing for several weeks.

The writ used in the Forbes case is one not commonly brought into practice, and as its name implies, it is a command to the person served with it not to leave the jurisdiction of the court. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Forbes, because of the suit brought against them by Dr. A. A. Forbes, and his fears that they were about to fly, taking his property with them, were restrained from leaving the state.

Robert Forbes got a temporary leave of absence a week ago, to last three weeks, and this morning Mrs. Forbes was allowed to go in and out of the state as she pleases, by consent of the parties.

She had begun proceedings to set aside the writ as to herself on several grounds. One was that there was no ground on which to issue the writ, that there was no evidence to back it up. Another was that it was void and unconstitutional, under the state and federal constitutions.

The plaintiff's attorneys consented that the writ might be dismissed as to her, however, and the order was accordingly entered by Judge Dibell. Mrs. Forbes set up in her affidavit that she never intended to leave the state permanently, but that the prosecution of private business made it essential that she be free to come and go from the state, as she saw fit.

LOOKS OVER IRON MINES

Son of C. Oliver Iselin Pays Duluth a Short Visit.

Lewis Iselin of New York city is in the city today, looking over iron properties and the iron business in general up here.

He went up on the range with Assistant General Superintendent D. M. Philbin, of the Great Northern road, and looked over some of the Hibbing mines, and this afternoon went over to Allouez Bay to see the ore docks in operation, under the same guidance.

Mr. Iselin is a son of C. Oliver Iselin, the commodore and chief worker among the American yachtsmen who take it upon themselves to defend the cup that Lipton wants, and manager of the defender of each match.

While the elder Iselin is getting his craft in shape for the coming exhibition and contest, the son is up in the Duluth country looking over iron ore lands.

It is likely that the young man is here on business connected with investments to be made, or already made, though a prominent mining man who was with him this morning refused to say what he was up here for, though he admitted he was up here on some business proposition.

THE BEST OF IT

Duluth Will Get That on Railroad Rates For Once.

Northern Pacific Issues Schedule to Blackduck and Vicinity.

A new rate schedule on the Northern Pacific road, which will go into effect Aug. 3, will be of a great deal of interest to Duluth jobbers and shippers.

The schedule deals with rates from the Twin Cities and Duluth to Blackduck and further points on the new Minnesota & International railroad, and rates from Duluth are from 2 to 8 cents a hundred pounds cheaper.

A great amount of freight is being shipped up in the newly opened country, and it is a matter of surprise among shippers here that the road gave Duluth the best of it, because there was never any agitation for it.

The difference in mileage to these points is about twenty miles in favor of Duluth.

The line has been built eighteen miles past Blackduck this summer, and four new towns have sprung up, which caused the new schedule. The new places are Hovey, Kelliher Dexter and Northome.

At Hovey the road has been made into two branches, one going on to International Falls, and has reached Kelliher, the other going due north and has reached Northome.

About seventy miles of track are yet left to be built before International Falls is reached. This will be completed by early next summer, and at that time the Rainy Lake railway will also have its line almost done, so that another year will see two roads running into the border town, which is expected to be a rich shipper for Duluth and the lakes.

The first class rate on freight is from here to Kelliher, 270 miles. All the rates fall a little below the rates charged from St. Paul, and this will give the shipping interests of Duluth a shade the best of the business in that territory.

Duluth jobbers and wholesalers look on that territory as a promising land, and judging from the amounts of freight shipped into Blackduck and nearby points last winter, the traffic will be very heavy from here the coming shipping season.

HAS NOT STRUCK OIL.

Badger Company Suspends Field Work In Kentucky.

Madison, Wis., July 30.—The Badger Oil and Gas company has issued a circular letter to its stockholders announcing that its officers have ordered a suspension of operations on the company's holdings in Knox county, Ky. The suspension is for an indetinite time, or until the results of deep drilling on adjacent properties, which is now being done, is known. Should oil be struck the Badger company, waich is in good financial condition, will resume operations.

The Badger Oil and Gas company was organized in 1901 by several then state officers and other well known Madison people. It acquired what appeared to be promising property in Knox county, Ky., and immediately began to prospect for oil. Several wells were drilled and quite a quantity of oil found, but the wells did not hold out. The operations extended over a period of about two years, and during the excitement the Standard Oil company built a pipe line into the territory to take care of what then looked like an enormous production of oil.

It is thought by many that the deeper drilling will bring oil, and in case it does the Badger company may resume operations.

The officers of the company are: W. H. Froenlich, ex-secretary of state, president; W. C. Stone, son of the late lieutenant governor, vice president; F. M. Wooten, secretary, and Graham L. Rice, former railroad commissioner, treasurer.

STATEMENT SATURDAY

Concerning Condition of W. L. Stow & Co.

New York, July 30.—Daniel de Wolf Weaver, the assignee of W. L. Stow & Co., issued the following statement today:

"It will be impossible to put out any statement before Saturday, when one will be made showing the condition of the firm as of Friday night, July 24. The showing will be a favorable one. With the rise of the market, the situation is constantly improving, as the banks holding collateral for the most part took a sane view of the situation and held their securities for better prices than those prevailing Friday."

Mr. Stow was in conference today with representatives of the St. Louis & San Francisco interests, but it was again denied that the latter road contemplates taking over the Des Moines & Fort Dodge.

The resignation of Mr. Stow from the Mexican Central directory, was announced today.

HIGH MASS AT CHICAGO

For Repose of Soul of the Late Pope.

Chicago, July 30.—Garbed in cassock, surplice and beretta, all the members of the Roman Catholic clergy of the arch diocese of Chicago assembled at Holy Name cathedral this morning to take part in the solemn requiem high mass for the repose of the soul of the late Pope Leo. Never before in the history of the cathedral had there been such an imposing service. The great edifice was draped in deep mourning. At the altar, surrounded by many candles, was the black catafalque representing the bier of the pope. It was covered with a gold cloth on a black background. On the cloth was embroidered a skull and cross bones, symbolizing death. On the casket rested a pillow, bearing a triple crown of gold. Surrounding this stood eight golden candlesticks seven feet high.

High mass was celebrated by Archbishop Quigley, and Rev. Thomas E. Sherman preached the sermon. The services were attended by 600 priests and members of the religious orders.

IT HAS NO POWER

Health Board Cannot Enforce Ordinance About Sewer Connections.

Action By Council Is Necessary to Make It Effective.

The board of health of the city of Duluth is up against a serious proposition and one which legislation by the city council only can remedy.

The board cannot compel the observance of ordinance 54, relative to the making of sewer connections. Although numerous notices have been sent out to property owners, supposed to come under the jurisdiction of the board, according to the ordinance, some of the property owners have flatly refused to pay any attention to the notice, and have given the department to understand that it cannot take any legal action to enforce the penalty provided.

The ordinance in question gives the board of health the power to require all owners, agents or tenants occupying lots adjoining, or upon any street or highway where there is a public sewer, to make, or cause to be made, under the direction of the city engineer, and not otherwise, a sufficient drain for sewerage purposes, and to cause sewer pipes to be laid and connected by duly licensed persons, subject to the approval of the city engineer.

Whenever notices have been sent out by the board of health they have contained a clause stating that within a certain time limit from the date of notice, the person to whom it is sent will be subject to a fine, not exceeding $100, and the expense of having the drain and sewerage connections made by the city, the cost to be established as a lien against the property described.

It is claimed that the trouble over the ordinance and the only reason that it cannot be enforced has been the neglect of the city council thus far to exercise its power in establishing the districts in which cesspools and outhouses will be allowed and to designate such districts where their maintenance will be prohibited.

The property owners claim that the city council has not yet designated these districts and for that reason they argue that the board of health cannot compel them to make sewer connections.

There is, of course, a chance for arbitrary action on the part of the board of health if it can be proved that certain unsanitary conditions about premises requiring sewer connections has made the property a menace to public health.

Although this condition has existed for some time, and the health department was held up last year after serving notices, the council has not yet attempted the remedy, which can easily be done by the passage of an ordinance establishing the districts mentioned.

It is understood that an ordinance to cover this very ground was drafted some time ago and placed in the hands of the committee on sewers, of which Alderman David Bang is chairman, but nothing has ever come of it and the ordinance has probably been lost in the shhuffle.

Residents in the districts where there are public sewers in the streets are now insisting that the ordinance necessary be brought out and passed for the reason that some of the properties are getting in an unsanitary condition which is steadily growing worse.

TO AUCTION PROPERTY.

A. M. Beattie of Vancouver to Sell Duluth Holdings.

A. M. Beattie, a real estate and mining man from Vancouver, B. C., is in Duluth to dispose of city real estate he possesses here, and he says he will put up the property Saturday at the Hotel McKay at auction to the highest bidder.

Mr. Beattie has not been here for ten years, and is greatly surprised at the progress the city has made. He says that there are three coming cities on this continent, Vancouver, Seattle and Duluth.

A brother of Mr. Beattie who formerly resided here acquired the property, which is on Lake avenue and in the eastern part of the city, and A. M. Beattie has retained it for years, though engaged in business on the Western coast. He will now dispose of it, because he has not the time to give it his attention.

There is a great deal of mining going on in the vicinity of Vancouver, he says, and he has brought samples of iron ore here to interest local men, one of whom has signified his intention of taking hold of the development of one mine, which is practically a mountain of iron.

A SNAKE STORY.

"Speakin' o' snakes," said the grizzled old engineer to the New York Sun, "seems to me it will be a good while yet before I'll forget the one that chased me and old 96 and Sam King, my fireman, down Big Foot grade, the year the b'iler of 143 blowed up and scattered Dan Piper and his fireman, Bill Jasper, all the way through Slocum's cut. All snakes is curious, and some snakes is twice as curious as others, but this black snake that chased us down Big Foot that day was curiouser than all the other curious snakes put together.

"We had just cleared the summit to run down into Shinn Holler, when this snake jumped out from the brush 'longside the track. He stood on his tail a minute—yes, on his tail. I wish Sam King wasn't dead, for then I could take you right to him and he'd tell you the same. And as for black snakes standing on their tails, why, that ain't any trick at all for 'em to do. Every schoolboy knows that, and I've read it in the papers lots of times, besides hearin' huckleberry pickers tell about it.

"This snake stood on his tail a minute, and he was so long that he almost topped the dome of old 96. And you ought to have seen the tongue he kept poking at me. He wa'n't more than three foot away from the cab, and his tongue looked for all the world like one o' these forks they give you to eat oysters off the shell with, only it was as red as the hind lamps on a caboose. I says to Sam:

"Sam, he thought so too, and I pulled the old gal open, and down the hill we went. I thought, of course, that we could run right away from the snake, but when I looked out of the window, great Skeezix, there he was, joggin' along with us, and with his mind all made up, plain enough, to climb into the cab as soon as he could.

"A year or so afore that I made the run down that grade at a run I said I'd never cut out for myself again. It was a sleety sort of night that time, and we had picked up a man at the summit. I forget that man's name, but he had been to a weddin' back o' the Holler somewhere. It seems that his sister wanted to marry a feller that wasn't just up to the mark, and the old folks wouldn't have it, but she—well, I forget just how it was, but this feller had been to the weddin' and got in the way of old 96 somehow, and we picked him up, and I was jest makin' the old gal hum down the hill that night to get him to a doctor, and I said to Sam that I'd never cut out such a gait again.

"But when I seen that snake chasin' us, and bound to get into that cab, I tried to beat even that gait.

"I had pushed her up to 40 mile an hour, and then the boys wouldn't take off another brake, and I had to skin along at that. I says to Sam:

"'The only thing we can do is to jest stand our ground and fight, if this sarpent gets on to us.'

"Sam said he thought so, too. I had often heard my Uncle George Klimfinkle say that a black snake, when he is all ready, can spring at least twenty feet, right from the muscles of his tail. Kangaroos can do that, and why can't black snakes? They don't weigh one-tenth as much as a kangaroo, unless it might be this one I'm tellin' about, and I think it would take a good-sized kangaroo to weigh as much as he did. Anyhow, my Uncle George Klimfinkle said they'd do it, and that you can always tell when they was going to jump by their eyes beginnin' to bulge, and they keep on bulgin' until they stuck out half an inch or more, so I knowed jest what to do.

"'I'll watch this rantankerous chap's eyes, Sam,' says I, 'and if he gets ready to jump I'll be ready for him.'

"Sam said he thought that'd be quite a good idee, and I watched. By and by I see his eyes begin to bulge. He was goin' along with us at the rate of 40 mile an hour, on the tip of his tail, and I could see his eyes bulgin'. I says to Sam:

"'Open the furnace door, Sam,' I says, and stand to one side.'

"Sam done it. By and By the snake's eyes were sticking out half an inch, and I see that Uncle George Klimfinkle knowed what he was talkin' about, for the snake was getting ready to spring.

"And he sprang. I stepped aside. The snake had to duck his head to get into the cab, and he shot plump kersock into the open furnace, jest as I had calc'lated he'd do, and he was goin' so fast that his head struck clean agin' the far end of it. I clapped the door shut, and four foot or more of him hung on the outside.

"We chopped it off and I took it and gave it to Uncle George Klimfinkle's little grandson. He had some idees, the little feller did, and he dried that section o' snake, and I guess he's using it for a baseball bat yet," said the grizzled old engineer, and the stove committee rose.

Mayor Anxious For Large Attendance at Telephone Rate Meeting.

Full Discussion May Avoid Expense of Special Election.

"I wish the people of Duluth would understand the importance of the meeting at the city hall tomorrow evening," said Mayor Hugo, this morning, referring to the citizens' meeting that will be held in the council chambers to discuss the concessions asked by the Zenith Telephone company.

"It is important that the people express themselves on the subject. By the people I mean those who are telephone users and those who expect to be. The company and the council desire information regarding the sentiment of the people relative to a raise in rates and now is the time for the fellows who pay for the 'phones to tell what they think about it.

"The proposed ordinance means a great deal to them. There is no doubt in my mind that the Zenith Telephone company by its coming into the local field has been a direct benefit to the citizens who are telephone users. The telephone habit is a growing one and we know that there will be more and more 'phones in use as the years go by.

While there is no question but that the rates thus far have been moderate, there is question whether the telephone users will stand for a raise. I do not think there will be serious objection to an increase in the rates for commercial 'phones, but when it comes to the increase on the rates for private 'phones there is pretty sure to be some objection.

"If the ordinance is passed, in my opinion 3 per cent of the voters at the last election could petition and secure an election in which the advance in rates would be the issue. Such a situation would mean a large and unnecessary expense to the city, and for that reason I say that every person interested, whether he favors or intends to protest against the proposition, should be present at the meeting and give expression to his opinion.

"I think the first proposition submitted to the council to the company is a fair one."

The proposition to which Mayor Hugo refers was that under which the proposed ordinance was granted, giving the telephone company the privilege of increasing its rates on commercial 'phones from $30 to $38 per year.

The company, however, asks for more concessions. It desires to have a sliding scale on both commercial and private 'phones, with an increase of $6 on commercial and of $4 on private 'phones now, the rate to be increased as the number of 'phones put in is increased.

HAUNTED WITH HAIR.

Began With Oysters and Stayed Until Desert.

"The most trying hour of my life," said the gallant war veteran, Col. Wood, replying to the appeal of the sweet girl graduate, according to the New York Press, "was one trying hour? Let me see. Ah! It had nothing to do with cannon, powder, bayonets, sabers, high skirmishes or charging breastworks. I fear you would not care to listen through a recital of it, as it breathes naught of war."

She demanded. He surrendered.

"I had been invited to dinner by the leading surgeon of the city of ——, whose wife was formerly the belle of the state, and still, at 55, was the very perfection of comeliness of face and form. Her hair was just turning from brown to the delicious gray of old age, and she had a great wealth of it coiled upon her queenly head.

"There were six other guests, prominent men and their wives. The seat of honor at the right hand of the hostess was given to me, and I undertook to entertain her with the light, frivolous conversation of the modern dinner hour. The first dish was an oyster pie. I enjoyed it, but ate sparingly, as all good diners should do. After the third or fourth mouthful I became aware that something foreign to the oyster and to the pastry associated with it on this occasion had come in contact with my tongue. Delicately employing my napkin I sought to remove it, and discovered that it was a hair.

"In the vivacity of the moment no one noticed my discomfiture, and I felt quite happy when the intruder was safely removed, and, as I sincerely believed, dropped upon the floor at my side. Champagne was served, and as I placed my hand upon the glass the servant took away one plate, about one-third of the contents of which I had eaten.

"Singularly enough, as the plate was whisked away an oyster or two and some of the pie crust climbed over the edge and littered the cloth. Regarding it as the carelessness or nervousness of the waiter, I pretended not to have noticed it, and proceeded to drink the health of the hostess. I could not help noticing that her quick eye was upon the accident, but she said nothing. With a crum knife the servant hastily removed the debris, and I felt a tugging at my wrist as he walked away. The hair, instead of dropping to the floor, had become engaged with my cuff button. The other end, being among the oysters and pie crust, had naturally hauled things off the plate, and was now endeavoring to hold back the waiter.

"I felt red all over. I felt guilty. But the waiter got away, and I silently thanked God that the hair had gone with him. The soup was such as Madame Begue makes in New Orleans, but after the second spoonful I stumbled upon that hair again. It still clung to my cuff button, and as I raised my hand to my mouth the lower end dangled into the soup plate, then dangled out again and played along the table cloth, leaving faint traceries. A sharp glance at the company convinced me that I was still safely alone and undiscovered with my hair. Out of the lanis of my eyes I sought a glimpse of my lovely hostess. She looked as innocent as a dove.

"What little courage I may have had in battle failed to aid me. Not to save my life could I steal a peep at that hair. I began to feel that hairs were all over me. I felt creepy. Whose hair could it be? The cook's possibly. No! The cook was a fat negress, with kinky locks an inch long. This hair was all of a yard. If I could only get at the color of it!

"I began to suspect my charming hostess. She had been fussing cheerfully about before the meal. I prayed that she should never know that I knew it was hers. I lowered my arm full length and tried to feel for the hair while pretending that I was only moving my hand a fraction of an inch. Madame's eye was upon me. I felt hot. I must have fidgeted, for she whispered: 'Are you comfortable, Colonel? I have no recollection of what lies I told. But I managed to get hold of the hair. I got it between my first two fingers just as the servant brought the butter. I was going to decline the butter, but Madame would not permit it; we were to have some of her own home-made beat biscuit, specially cooked for myself.

"With desperate eagerness I helped myself to the butter. The hair trailed along. I caught a glimpse of it. It was gray. It was from the suit of my lovely hostess, beyond peradventure of doubt. It mixed lingeringly with the butter and managed to get in between the two halves of the most delicious beat biscuit I had ever tasted. The knowledge that it was from the gray head of the woman whom then and there I could have eaten gave me at first much consolation, but I have since come to the conclusion that if I should have the pleasure of eating a Princess Titania, or Venus herself, I say this with all respect to my hostess. With her hair once more between my teeth I felt as if I were her enemy for life.

"That solitary hair, which was as a billion hairs, followed me through every course of that dinner, winding itself finally around the cigar I smoked after the ladies left the room. What affinity it had for me I never could understand, but I never suffered so much in all my life of hardships. As soon as I could with decency I said good night and went to my hotel. My host insisted that I should travel in his carriage. In the darkness something tickled my cheek. That hair! I thought I had burned it with my cigar. In my room I found it twined around my ear. I laid it gently upon the table, and found it there the next morning, when I placed it in an envelope, labeling it, "The Unhappy Hour of My Life." It is knocking about somewhere today in my archives. I am afraid to break the seal and look at it. That hair is a spirit that haunts me."

TIPPING WITHOUT END.

An average man, who says he has a moderate income and whose business appears to be in the traveling commercial lines, voices the latest complaint against the practice of tipping, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean. This is the Average Man's schedule for one day, as he gives it:

Bellboy who brought my pressed trousers	$ 15
Waiter at breakfast	20
Extra for boy who shined shoes	5
Extra for cabman above rate of fare	25
Lunch, with one as guest, waiter's tip	35
Barber	10
Porter	25
Messenger boy	25
Dinner	50
Bellboy	25
Total	$2.35

There was nothing unusual about this day, according to the Average Man, who explains that the bellboy lingered expectantly after both visits; that the bootblack's fixed charge of five cents was merely a pleasantry and that double the sum was confidently looked for, and that, while the messenger he sent cost but 15 cents to deliver, it was necessary to give the messenger twenty-five cent in order to hurry the note along. The Average Man proceeds:

In these days nobody can safely leave a barber shop by merely paying for the price of his shave, and it would be folly to expect the porter to get your trunk out of your room in time for the train unless there was something in it for him. Here is an extra bill, all told, of $2.35 for one day, and it was within $1.15 of my hotel bill. In my business I earn $7, but it takes me over the country a great deal. I do not know where I am to get the money to invest in the business I want to take up.

According to my judgment there are three classes of people who tip menials—the person who tips because he is generous, the one who tips because he likes to appear generous, and the one who tips because he bribes the person tipped to give him more than his share of attentions. I am in the last class.

While this average man's tipping expenses appear large in proportion to his income, it must be granted that the tips were necessary in order to expedite his business, as he partly explains, and to get proper service. There is nothing new in this plaint except that it has been reduced to figures, and if $2.35 is an average in a moderate commercial hotel there is indeed very little hope of the average man's saving much money to invest in business.

Tipping has grown from a habit to a necessity in all American cities. Formerly the waiter and the bellboy held an almost exclusive advantage, but now the "courtesies" are without the expected reward. Inattention and even incivility are the portion of the man who does not tip. If the average man with a moderate income cannot afford these extra expenditures he suffers, since persons of large incomes, who are directly responsible for the spread of the tipping evil, are still to be found and are willing to pay.

Comfortable travel is impossible without tipping for proper attention. A man gets a better meal, better served, when he offers extra inducements for it. He is better cared for when he pays well. All these things are true, and tipping is excessive, but the average man must bear with it until he offers a remedy. And this no average man seems able to do.

CARRIED OLD BULLET.

Capt. Henry R. Jones, veteran of the Civil war, past department commander of the Connecticut Grand Army of the Republic and editor of the Weekly Tribune, published in New Hartford, in the battle of Antietam, fought September 17, 1862, received a severe wound in the right shoulder, which nearly proved fatal at the time, and has caused him over forty years of continuous suffering, says the New York Times. The ball was imbedded in the clavicle and could not be removed, doctors said, without almost certain fatal results. Several operations were performed without success. During the past six months the wound has been unusually aggressive and painful.

Yesterday as Capt. Jones was dressing the wound he felt something hard, and procuring a pair of pincers he extracted the bullet, which has been in his body forty-one years. The ball, which is nearly round, is the size of a large marble and weighs one ounce. It was probably fired from an old-fashioned musket or shotgun, which weapons were actually used by the Confederates in the War of the Rebellion. The wound is now less painful and shows signs of healing.

Capt. Jones also has a piece of shell that struck him earlier in the Antietam battle.

LIVES BY CRIME

Campbell, Caught By Duluth Police, Has Criminal Record.

With Doc Baker's Circus In Northwest a Few Years Ago.

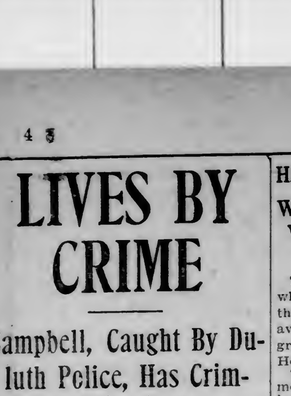

In James H. Campbell, who was yesterday bound over to await the action of the grand jury on the charge of forgery, the local police department believes that it has captured one of the smoothest confidence men and short-change artists in the country.

Campbell was arrested after attempting to swindle Martin Miles, a young man from the country, by means of a bogus $1000 bill.

Campbell, alias James Henderson, alias John Henderson, alias James Strong, was sent up from St. Paul on a 90-day workhouse sentence in 1897 for short-changing a man on a train. He attempted to work a con game, but failing in that, managed to short-change his victim.

In 1900 Campbell, or Henderson, was arrested at the Mardi Gras in New Orleans, by some St. Louis detectives, being regarded as a dangerous con man and suspicious character. He was given a few hours to leave the city.

CAMPBELL, THE CON MAN.

His appearance at the head of the lakes is said to have been about 1900, when he was a member of that famous gang known as Doc Baker's circus, which for some weeks terrorized the smaller towns in Northern Minnesota, defying the officers and robbing people right and left.

Warrants were issued for Baker and his companions at Cass Lake, Ferris, Grand Rapids and other places, but they always went heavily armed and in numbers to thoroughly awe the small police forces. The depredations of the outfit became so notorious that when the circus headed for Cloquet a company of the local militia was sent there a few hours before the circus arrived to take the men in custody. Baker got wind of the arrangements and escaped, but several of the circus attaches were arrested by the militia, under the command of Maj. Bidwell, and brought to Duluth. They were kept here in the county jail for some months, but the cases against them finally fell through for want of evidence, the witnesses being difficult to find.

Detective Robert Benson, then of Duluth, was engaged by some of the outside towns to shadow the circus and arrest Baker when he joined it. The arrest was finally accomplished in Nebraska, but by means of habeas corpus proceedings and other legal subterfuges, Baker escaped being brought back into this state.

It is claimed that Campbell was one of the men wanted at the time the warrant was issued for Baker, but that he was among those that escaped arrest.

Campbell displayed no small amount of shrewdness when in court, indicating that he had been there before. Yesterday, when his preliminary hearing was held before Judge Gearhart, he insisted on acting as his own attorney at times, although he had one engaged.

Campbell is now in the county jail, where he will be held until the grand jury meets in September.

FROHMAN HAS MANY PLAYS

Announces Plans For the Coming Theatrical Season.

New York, July 30.—Charles Frohman came back from Europe and drove directly from the pier to his office. Mr. Frohman, of course, had his usual list of announcements to make. He is especially interested in the French company headed by Mme. Charlotte Wiehe, which he contemplates bringing over in October.

"I don't know at what theater I shall place them," said he. "Their performances consists chiefly of triple bills—pantomimes, comedies, and musical pieces—and they may possibly do 'L'Enfant Prodigue.'"

Other foreign stars on Mr. Frohman's list for America for the coming season are Sir Henry Irving, who comes to the Broadway theater in November with Sardou's "Dante;" Miss Marie Tempest, in "The Marriage of Kitty," probably at the new Hudson theater; Mrs. Langtry, in "Mrs. Dering's Divorce," opening the Savoy Sept. 5; Charles Hawtrey, in "The Man From Blankley's," at the Criterion, Sept. 21; Miss Wynne Matthison, who returns to play again in "Everyman."

For his American stars he has a large number of new plays. William Gillette will appear in Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton," probably at the new Lyceum theater; John Drew has two plays, one by an American and another by an Englishman; William Crane in "The Spenders," Miss Fay Davis in "Lady Rose's Daughter," and Miss Ethel Barrymore in "Cousin Kate." Stephen Phillips' "Ulysses," will be done with Tyrone Power in the leading role at the Garden theater in September, and following that William Faversham and Miss Julia Opp will appear in a production of the same author, "Herod." Miss Virginia Harned will do "The Golden Silence," by Haddon Chambers Garrick.

As to music plays, there is no end of them in Frohman's budget. "The Three Little Maids," with an English company headed by G. P. Huntley, opens Daly's Sept. 1, and "The Girl from Kay," with Sam Bernard and Miss Hattie Williams, comes to the Herald Square in November. George Edwardes is interested in both these productions. Frohman also has a musical piece by Ivan Caryll and Seymour Micks, to be produced in London in December; "My Lady Molly," by the composer of "The Geisha," in which Andrew Mack is to appear; and still another, entitled "Madame Sherry;" also a New Gaiety theater piece.

William Gillette, Clyde Fitch and Augustus Thomas all are at work on new plays for him. Richard Harding Davis furnishes "Ransom's Folly." From Miss Gladys Unger an American girl comes "Richard Brinsley Sheridan." Then there is "Gypsy," by Sydney Grundy; "Whitewashing Julia," by Henry Arthur Jones, and a new play by Arthur Wing Pinero as yet unnamed, which Frohman will produce both here and in London. He also has a melo-drama, "The Best of Friends," to be done at the Academy of Music in October, and "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," is to follow "Ben Hur" at the New York. From France he has Sardou's "The Sorceress;" "Le Detour," adapted by Haddon Chambers; "The Third Moon," by Mme. Gresac; "La Rambouillaise," an Odeon theater success; "Cranquebille," a remarkable fifty-minute play, produced by Guitary at the Renaissance; and a one-act piece, "The System of Dr. Gourdon."

Asked as to his plans for the Empire stock company, Frohman said most of the members would support Miss Fay Davis in "Lady Rose's Daughter" early in the season.

HAY FEVER FOR 27 YEARS.

Well Known New England Woman Cured By Hyomei—Cure Was Lasting.

The thousands of discouraged people who dread summer's approach because they think that hay fever cannot be avoided, will read with interest and gratitude the following statement from Helen F. Williams, of Mansfield, Mass.

"For twenty-seven years, from the month of August until heavy frost, I have been afflicted with hay fever, growing worse and worse each year, and of late years I was unable to attend to my work during that period.

"Last summer I fortunately gave Hyomei a trial and am happy to say that it entirely cured me and I have had no return of the affliction since."

This letter is one of many that have come to the proprietors of Hyomei, and the results following this treatment, have been so wonderful that it is proposed at the annual convention of hay fever sufferers to recommend Hyomei to all who are susceptible to this disease.

Hyomei is a treatment for hay fever that combines the latest discoveries of science and the best of common sense. Knowing that a change of climate was the only way in which relief could be obtained, the evolution of Hyomei naturally resulted. By breathing its germ killing and healing balsams, any one can have, at any moment of the day, either in their home, the office or the factory, a climate like that of the White Mountains or other health resorts, where hay fever is unknown.

S. F. Boyce agrees to refund the money to any hay fever sufferer who uses Hyomei if it does not give satisfaction.

AT WEST DULUTH

Mrs. Amy Sayan, of West Duluth, left yesterday for Alpena, Mich., where she was called by the death of her father, James Fingleton, who was killed by lightnning in the terrific rain and wind storm which visited that vicinity recently.

Mrs. Sayan read the news of her father's death in The Herald last evening, receiving a telegram shortly afterwards, which confirmed the report.

She was almost prostrated at the sudden news of her father's death, but left by the first train for Alpena, to be present at the funeral. She had receievd no particulars of his death beyond the fact that he had been killed by a stroke of lightning.

Mrs. Sayan has resided in West Duluth for some time, living on Fifty-seventh avenue.

Mr. Fingleton also has a brother living in Duluth, who accompanied Mrs. Sayan to Alpena.

DESERTION CHARGED.

Peter Richards Accuses Wife of Leaving Child.

Peter Richards, of West Duluth, appeared before Justice Robert Stone yesterday afternoon and swore out a warrant for the arrest of his wife on the charge of deserting her child.

Mrs. Richards was arraigned last evening and pleaded not guilty to the charge. She was released on bail and will appear for trial tomorrow afternoon.

In the court yesterday Mrs. Richards stated that she had not been living with her husband for some time past. The child in question is an infant of about 18 months. It is claimed by the husband that Mrs. Richards deserted the child and treated it cruelly.

Mrs. Richards denied the charge, claiming that at the time the child was deserted it was under the care of Mr. Richards himself, and that during the time it had been under her care she had cared for it as a mother ought.

INCORRIGIBLE YOUTH.

Emil E. Krohn, a 16-year-old boy, of West Duluth, will have a hearing in municipal court this afternoon on the charge of incorrigibility. The charge is preferred by his parents. Young Krohn's father is employed at the West Duluth stone quarry. The boy is claimed to be indolent and has reached such a state of mind that he refuses positively to do any work, simply contenting himself with living off the labor of his parents. They desire to have him sent to the state school.

FINE GAME SUNDAY.

The West Duluth baseball team has arranged a game with the Freimuth nine, to be played next Sunday afternoon at Athletic park.

The game promises to be one of the best exhibitions of amateur baseball seen in Duluth this season. West Duluth has broken even with the Freimuths, old time rivals, the Big Duluths, and the two teams will be evenly matched.

Larson will pitch for the West Duluth nine, and the West Duluth fans will be out in force to attend the game.

The West Duluth team has made an excellent record this season, winning the majority of the games played, and the members will celebrate, Aug. 6, by a grand ball to be given in the Wieland & Wade hall.

Mrs. Schuler, Miss Fraser and Miss Simpson have returned from an outing at Deerwood, where they have been camping for some time past.

A well known West Duluth fisherman had a memorable experience during the early part of the week, which is causing his friends no little amusement. A large pike which he had hooked broke from the line, within a foot or two of the boat. The enthusiast made a dive for the pike with his hands and missing it was precipitated into the water, his head striking a large stone. His forehead was badly cut, but no serious injuries resulted.

Edward Peterson continues to steadily improve at the Red Cross hospital, and from present indications will soon be sufficiently recovered to leave his room.

CALLED HER MOTHER

By Telephone and Said "We're Married."

Chicago, July 30.—"Hello! Is that you, mamma? Well, we're married, Charlie and I. Don't worry."

It was the long distance 'phone between Chicago and Milwaukee, and Mrs. G. R. Stearns, 29 East Thirty-fifth street, held the receiver at this end of the line. Her daughter, Roxanna, in a Milwaukee hotel, was at the other end.

The "Charlie" of the message is Charles Pope Champlin, son of Mrs. Abbie Champlin, 4342 Drexel boulevard, and member of the family whose matrimonial experiences have obtained considerable publicity.

Although a surprise to Mrs. Stearns, the marriage is declared not to be an elopement. Mrs. Stearns says that she announced the engagement of her daughter to Mr. Champlin as long ago as last December, and tha tthe intention had been all along to have the wedding this summer. When June came both the young people objected to an ostentatious ceremony, and announced that they would go away and get married without any "fuss and feathers."

Yesterday morning Mr. Champlin and Miss Stearns took the train to Milwaukee and were married—where, when, and just in what manner, civil or ecclesiastical, is not known, for the telephone rang off before those particulars were gathered. The young folks are expected hime this morning for a few days, after which they will depart on a honeymoon trip in the East. They will reside at 4342 Drexel boulevard.

Mr. Champlin is 27 years old and a broker on the board of trade. Mrs. Champlin is 23.

PLANTS ARE PROFITABLE

Duluth Water and Gas Plants Discussed By Eastern Paper.

The current issue of the Municipal Journal and Engineer of New York contains the following article on the municipal water and gas plants of Duluth, which while containing nothing which is not already known to the people here, will undoubtedly prove of interest to others:

"Out of the one hundred and thirty-two miles of property which has access to the water system of Duluth, Minn., not over fifty per cent uses the water, and so upon it falls the burden of paying for the extensive system. On this account the water board will not do away with the rental of hydrants which are paid for from the general fund to the water department and affords the only means for making the other fifty per cent pay something towards the expense of maintaining the water supply. The system was made large in order that it might be adequate for future needs of the now vacant property, which contributes nothing to the cost of maintenance. The owners of this property, by their share in hydrant rentals, contribute towards a reduction in the rates of the users of water.

"The water and gas plants have always been operated as one enterprise and water and gas mains have been laid in the same trench whenever extensions were necessary to either systems. This method has been followed since the city bought the plants. The water board requires an income of eight per cent on the cost of laying both kinds of mains and the income has been derived in ninety per cent of the cases from water rates. There are many miles of gas or water mains on which there are few consumers. Superintendent L. N. Case places the total expense of the gas plant, including interest and operating expenses, at $89,-100.05. The earnings amount to $53,411.84. An increase of nearly $2000 was made in the salary list during the last year, due in main part to the eight-hour day and to the increased business of the departments, which amounted to over $20,000 and is growing. The cost of operating and maintaining the water department amounted to $30,961.85; of the gas and water departments, $95,911.96, which, with the interest, aggregated $179,495.72. The earnings were $127,186.01, leaving a surplus of $17,690.29.

"A table given in the annual report shows the savings made by the reduction of rates. These were found by calculating on the receipts of an yone year the percentage of the reduction in the rates in that period. In 1899 the rates by meter were reduced twenty per cent, and the savings were $12,688.01; in 1900 they were $14,434.02. In 1901 the rates were reduced to one-third of the old, and further reductions in rates are to be made just as soon as the finances will warrant it."

CONGRESSMAN

Refuses to Accept An Annual Railroad Pass.

New York, July 30.—In response to a letter sent him by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company, tendering him an annual pass over the road, Representative Robert Baker of Brooklyn has written to the division counsel, George E. Hamilton of that company, explaining why he cannot accept the transportation. Baker says in this letter that he cannot accept a pass, and to do so would be to countenance the efforts of the railroads to prevent the free and open considerations of its plan. He declares that in view of the wholesale issuing of passes to members of congress, he must revise his own views on the subject and believes the company, instead of being the victim of "blackmail," is the instigator of official misconduct. He says he is willing that any other construction should be put upon the company's action, but that to take this pass would mean his acquiescence to a reprehensible practice.

HOLD LIVES OF THOUSANDS.

Men Who Watch the Railroad Danger Signals.

One misty morning about twelve years ago, "Jake" Romer, who has been an engineer on important New York Central and New Haven trains for a quarter of a century, discovered a railroad trestle—the Pelham Bay trestle—on fire, says Harper's Weekly. The fast mail was then due. Romer grabbed a grimy towel that was lying in the cab of his engine and rushed back to try to flag the mail. In a moment it was rounding the turn just before coming to the trestle. Romer yelled, at the same time waving above his head the dirty towel. The engineer saw him and brought his train to a standstill within a few yards of the burning trestle.

Romer had another thrilling experience at Harrison, New York. On one of the rails of the track ahead of him, immediately after turning a curve, he saw a large rock. No locomotive could have struck it without being derailed. The engineer did not think he could possibly bring his train to a stop before reaching it, but he at once applied his levers. The cowcatcher of his engine just touched the rock as the train came to a stop. There were more than 100 passengers on that train, whose lives were saved by Romer's prompt action.

"Bill" Sloane, who pilots a fast train between New York and Buffalo, discovered a landslide just in time to avert a most serious accident one day; and at another time, peering ahead on the track, saw a broken rail in time to stop his train before disaster.

A washout on the New Haven road was discovered just in the nick of time some years ago by "Billy" Walsh, one of the "old guard" of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad.

But one story is the story of all. Every engineer has had experiences where keen eyes and prompt action have saved the day.

Every day of the year in one great city alone—New York, for instance—thousands upon thousands of persons, with never a thought of any possible danger, intrust their lives to these men who watch for danger.

To the marvelous perfection of the signal and switch systems now in practical operation on nearly all of the railroads of any importance in this country is due, in a great measure, the safety of the public in its travels.

Only a few years ago the correct setting of switches was dependent on the muscle of the man in the switch tower. All the switches were "placed" by main force, the operator pulling over heavy steel levers. This physical effort is now entirely done away with. The modern switch tower is equipped with a wonderful piece of mechanism in which pneumatic pressure does all of the work formerly done by muscular effort. This machine is situated on the top floor of the tower, and runs almost the entire length of the tower (which, by the way, is nowadays seldom a tower, but a long, narrow, two-storied house). Several hundred numbered handles project from the upper part of the machine. Behind the handles stand a corps of men awaiting word from the "director," a keen-eyed man seated in a little bay window in the front of the tower, from which he commands a clear view of all the tracks, up and down.

"Forty-two," he quietly says, as he observes the coming of an inbound express. On the instant one of the corps of switchmen pulls out a handle. It moves, without any perceptible effort, about three inches. For a moment it stays at that point, then it suddenly moves out a couple of inches more, of its own accord, and a sharp click is heard. The switch a mile up the track is locked and the road is clear for the express and its human freight. Air pressure did all the work formerly done by muscle. If the little handle had not moved out the extra couple of inches and clicked, the switch-worker would have known that all was not right, that the switch was not locked, that something prevented the complete setting of the switch. Then a signal further up the road would have been set at "danger" and stopped the train.

At the upper end of the terminal signal tower is stationed the train dispatcher. He is seated at a table upon which lie enormous sheets of paper ruled like a timetable. The vertical columns indicate all the trains in transit on the road, while the horizontal columns show the stations at which they stop. The dispatcher is an expert telegrapher, and has several telegraph instruments at his side. As each train arirves at and departs from stations on the route he gets the time from his sounder. It is immediately noted on the sheets before him, and in this way a record is kept of the location of each train on the road.

It would seem, with all the wonderful machinery and devices for signaling, for setting switches, for insuring safety, that accidents on railroads so carefully safeguarded would not, could not, happen. But mechanism cannot accomplish everything in the way of safely carrying trains from one point to another. The engineer's watchfulness and his judgment count for even more than all of the intricate and wonderful machinery designed for providing safety.

"Big Arthur" has for thirty-nine years been in the employ of one railroad. For thirty-four years he has been an engineer. In all that time his train has never had an accident of any sort whatever. He is very proud of the fact. There are not very many engineers in the country with such a record.

"Payin' 'tention to the rules," he said the other day, "that's nine-tenths of it. Nearly all the accidents that happen are the result of engineers disregardin' the rules as laid down. When you don't see your signal you're to take that as a danger signal. That's the most important of all rules. Never take chances. You'll get no credit for doin' it, and God only knows what taking a chance may bring on you and the lives intrusted to your safe keeping. You'll lose a little time, perhaps, but you can always make up those few minutes when your road is clear before you. And if you don't make it up, take my word, it won't go against you.

"Then a man must have judgment. Machinery, signals, switches—they're all right, but they haven't intelligence. They haven't judgment. There are times when a little judgment is worth a million pieces of machinery. When the occasion comes then use your intellect. That's what it was given to you for. And another thing. Never know your road so well that you don't have to keep a sharp lookout. Keep your eyes wide open every moment that you're on duty.

"That's all, I guess. The engineer that knows his locomotive and minds these few rules will have a clean record—there's no two ways about it."

Asked to tell of some narrow escapes his train had had, the old engineer shook his head, and a rosy blush showed through the grime on his face. He stammered and said: "You'd like to make a hero of me, eh? No, I ain't none of them, nor ever was. There ain't nothing of the hero 'bout minding the rules," and he ran off, and, jumping aboard his locomotive, hid himself in the cab.

Allen's locomotive, No. 2923, one of the big Atlantic type, has recently been equipped with a very remarkable signal device. It is an incandescent electric lamp, showing a white light at one end and a red at the other. It shows inside the locomotive the same signal that is shown outside along the track. This is accomplished by a track circuit, through relays, a small dynamo on the locomotive furnishing the electricity.

For nearly a year experimenting has been going on with this new signal device, and the invention is said to be nearly perfected. Within a few months it is expected the system will be in general use. That it will be of the greatest aid to engineers is self-evident, for it will enable them to see clearly in the cabs of their locomotives all signals they are approaching that sometimes may be obscured or partially obscured by smoke or fog.

The number of accidents on American railroads, though still appalling, is yearly decreasing as improved methods of signalling and switching cars are adopted. But there are some accidents no mechanism can prevent—those resulting from broken rails, washouts on the road, landslides, the spreading of rails, and so on. On all the great railroads men are employed to do nothing but walk over the tracks and look for breaks in the rails, for obstructions, for anything that can possibly cause an accident. But in spite of all precautions and of all the new safety devices, like the automatic signals showing in the engineer's cab, it is, after all, the engineers—the Jake Romers, the "Big Arthur" Allens—to whom we look for safety, and in whose hands we trust our lives.

EMPLOYES PICNIC

Duluth & Iron Range Railroad Men to Make Merry Saturday.

Big Event Will Be at Two Harbors—Fine Program.

The annual picnic of the employes of the Duluth & Iron Range road will take place at Two Harbors Saturday, and for the day the wheels of commerce on that line will slow down and practically cease, in order that the men and their families may have the benefit of the outing with minds undisturbed by thoughts of neglected work.

The employes of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road, with some from other lines, will join with the Iron Range men in the affair, and Lakeview park, at Two Harbors, will be crowded by thousands of people on that day.

In the past the picnic has been held by the Iron Range employes alone, but this year, in response to a request from W. A. McGonagle, assistant to the president of the Missabe road, the employes of the two lines will join in having a big time, and it will be called "Railroaders' day." If it is not quite the biggest outing ever held in this section, somebody has miscalculated.

The employes of the Duluth & Northern Minnesota road, which runs from Knife River on the Iron Range to the camps of Alger, Smith & Co., have also been invited, and the special train carrying the Missabe people from Proctorknott and Duluth will take them from Knife River to Two Harbors.

The special from Duluth will reach Two Harbors about 8 o'clock in the morning, where it will meet another bringing the employes and their families down from the Vermilion range. This will bring all of the crowds to Two Harbors about the same time, and things will be doing from then on.

Among the features of the day will be a ball game between Duluth and Two Harbors picked nines, a gun club shoot, a tug-of-war, foot races, bicycle races and all outdoor sports. There will be a large list of prizes in all of the events, and these will be of sufficient attraction to add great interest to the events.

Two Harbors will be in gala attire in honor of the picnic, and short excursions on the lake will be added to the regular picnic features of the day. The park has recently been acquired by the village, and it has been donated to the railroad men for the occasion. Seats and tables have been provided for use at lunch time, and everything has been made as comfortable as possible by the people of Two Harbors.

Committees from both roads have been working hard on the picnic, and they now have the details lined up so that there is little possibility of a hitch. The Missabe road is represented by E. E. Hawkins, chairman of the finance committee; William Brown, transportation; E. Kemp, arrangements; Thomas, treasurer; Conley, sports; M. Maher, arrangements.

The Iron Range committeemen are as follows: Joseph Beck, chief electrician, chairman of general committee; W. A. Doerr, foreman, secretary; D. C. Henton, machinist, chairman of arrangements committee; V. C. Krouzecy, stationary engineer, chairman of finance committee; P. J. Welch, chief train dispatcher, chairman of transportation committee; Hans E. Hanson, chief clerk at ore dock, chairman of committee on sports.

CAMPBELL BOUND OVER

Held to the Grand Jury on a Charge of Forgery.

James H. Campbell, who attempted to pass a bogus $1000 bill on Martin Miles last Saturday, was given a preliminary hearing before Special Municipal Judge Gearhart yesterday afternoon, and was bound over to the grand jury on the charge of forgery.

Martin Miles testified that he met Campbell at the Union depot while waiting for a train to Virginia; that the latter said he could get a position for him, and the two walked up to Superior street, where they met a third party professing to be a drayman. Campbell arranged to have the drayman haul a trunk for him, and flashed a folded paper purporting to be a $1000 bill. The drayman could not change the note, and Campbell asked Miles if he had any currency with him. The young man decided that something was wrong, and he immediately started for a policeman, to whom he described the two men. Campbell was shortly afterward arrested, the worthless bill being found in his possession.

County Attorney McClintock claimed the case was one of forgery, basing it on the clause of the statute which says that possession of a spurious coin or worthless paper with intent to defraud is forgery. He argued that Campbell's questioning Miles as to whether he had any currency, at the same time showing the bogus bill, was an attempt to defraud the young man.

Alexander Marshall, attorney for Campbell, will institute habeas corpus proceedings in district court, on the ground that an affidavit of prejudice has been filed and that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant the defendant being held.

Charlemagne Tower Remembers City Where He Once Lived.

A. Fitger, of Duluth, who is now traveling in Germany and Europe generally, has written to P. S. Anneke of a visit to Charlemagne Tower, the former Duluthian, who is now ambassador of the United States at the court of Emperor William. He says:

By this letterhead you will see that we are stopping at the beautiful Hotel Bristol, "Unter Den Linden."

"I must write you now about my visit today with Charlemagne Tower, our American amabassador. His official residence is right across the street from our hotel. I called on him about 12 o'clock and, as soon as I had sent in my card, he at once received me and appeared to recognize me. He looks the picture of health, and expresses his view on any sensible subject which may come up. Indeed, he is proud to be a representative of our glorious country and to be the successor of such illustrious people as Bayard Taylor, Andrew D. White and others. Mr. Tower does not hesitate to express his admiration of Germany, and scorns the idea of an unfriendly feeling existing between the United States and Germany, which (as he most emphatically said) is not the case. Many European nations are jealous of the good understanding which is now prevailing, and it is the aim and policy of some of the most prominent ones to undermine it, but," he continued, "at this time there are no prospects of any rupture, and I hope there never will be." The harsh words which occasionally appear must be attributed to campaign liars, of which, of course, there are plenty in either country.

"Mr. Tower, of course, knows the present German amabassador, Baron Speck Von Sternburg, whom he likes very much, and he was much interested in my visit at Leipzig with the ambassador's brother, of which visit I wrote you the other day.

"When talking of olden times, Mr. Tower well remembered the struggling little city of Duluth of 1882 and '83. He inquired, among other things, about the old dwelling house near our brewery, which was his residence in those years, and was pleased to hear all the information about the appearance of Duluth today. The good news which I could tell him about all this and our prospects for the near future seemed to interest him very much indeed.

"When leaving, Mr. Tower bade me a very friendly farewell and promised to call on me here at the hotel in a day or two, but unfortunately when he did so the next day we were not at the hotel, and I was sorry not to have had the pleasure of meeting him again.

"While I am writing this it is about midnight, and one would think that life on the street would become more or less quiet, but evidently there is no let-up and I hear twenty-five to fifty vehicles passing the hotel every five minutes. There are now over 10,000 cabs in this city, and they all seem to do a good business.

"We expect to go south from Berlin and will visit Switzerland, Italy, France, Russia and Sweden before our return."

Mr. Fitger and family will return about Aug. 1.

THE BERRY SEASON

Raspberries Ripe and Pickers Are Out In All Directions.

Plentiful This Season But Number After Them Is Large.

Berrying is the thing just now.

Wild raspberries are ripe and ready for the picking, and they are not being neglected.

Every fine morning, on any Woodland or Lakeside car, may be found collections of women and children with their "old clothes" on and accompanied by a liberal supply of tin utensils designed to hold the berries.

Raspberries are very plentiful this year, and they can be found almost any place in the country in and around Duluth. However, those near by are pretty well picked, and those who want to get a good supply of them usually take a lunch and make a day of it, going as far as the cars will take them and then walking until favorable grounds are found.

These little excursions take the form of picnics, especially for the children, for whatever the excuse may be, whether fishing or berrying, it is decidedly picnic-like to don old clothes and feel comfortable and then get out in the woods for a day with an ample lunch to satisfy the appetite that the air of the woods speedily creates.

The season is at its height now, but it will last for several weeks more. The wild berries are daintily flavored, and like the wild strawberries, many prefer them to the cultivated article. The strawberry season is over, but while it lasted a great many went out picking the toothsome little wild cousin of the cultivated strawberry.

THE STAGE

The masterpiece of Augustus Thomas, "Alabama," considered one of the American classics in the drama, will be the offering of the Melbourne MacDowell company at the Lyceum theater this evening, after a week of "Under Two Flags," which had a phenomenal run to most gratifying appreciation on the part of the public.

"Alabama" is to be put on with the full complement used in former big productions, and it is expected that the public will give it a rousing reception, as it merits the patronage of the whole city. Miss Florence Stone will appear as Mrs. Page, a mature sweetheart, and her portrayal is said to be a beautiful one.

The play tells a story of a love affair down in the good old southern state, Alabama, which began before the war, but like other love affairs, it did not run smoothly, and the two sweethearts are separated until years after the war, when they are restored and the courtship is again taken up. The drama is full of the quaint ways of the real "southern gentleman," and of the gentleness of the southern women, with her nobility, beauty and self sacrifice. It is not a stirring tale, as the term is generally accepted, but arouses more sincere emotion and pure thoughts than perhaps any play on the stage today.

It is so simple that it appeals to even a child, while it is a study and a lesson for older folks that is entertaining in the last degree.

The company will give a matinee on Saturday and close the third week of the season with this play.

"The Little Minister" drew a full house yesterday afternoon and another large one in the evening at the Metropolitan. The Barrie play gave much satisfaction to the patrons of the house.

This evening "The Burglar," a play which has for years held a strong place in the affections of theater-goers, will be presented and will hold the stage the balance of the week, with the usual matinee on Saturday. A feature of particular interest will be the appearance of Eddie Gardner, one of the trio of children who have been doing specialty work at the theater for several weeks, in the character of Editha, the child of the play.

CUSTOMS REVENUES

In the Philippines Show a Steady Increase.

Washington, July 30.—A statement prepared by the bureau of insular affairs of the war department shows the customs revenues in the Philippines for the first four months of 1903 to have been $2,931,782, against $2,901,011 in the same period in 1902 and $1,215,657 in 1899. A comparison of the customs revenue under Spanish administration during the ten years from 1885 to 1895, with the period from Aug. 20, 1898, to April 30, 1903, under American occupation, shows the volume of business to have increased about fourfold.

CREW WILL GET $20,000

For Saving Spanish Steamer Ereza Last Year.

Philadelphia, July 30.—For their heroic work in rescuing the Spanish steamer Ereza, in a storm off Bermuda, in February, 1902, the members of the crew of the American steamship Yeoman will receive $20,000. After more than a year of litigation Judge McPherson, in the United States district court, has decided that the services rendered the Spanish vessel were worth that amount and accordingly entered judgment.

IMITATION STONES

Now Made By Chemists Rivaling Real Gems.

New York, July 30.—In connection with recent decisions by the general board of appraisers regarding duty on imitations of precious stones, a well known jewelry expert of this city, through whose hands millions of dollars' worth of precious stones have passed, declares that rubies beautiful in color and rivaling the natural gems are today easily produced from the chemist's crucible.

Superior took a brace yesterday and actually won a game requiring eleven innings to do the turn. Fargo tied the score in the seventh with three runs on four hits, and up to that time had been goose-egged. Fargo's work in the field was ragged, three errors being marked against it while Superior played an errorless game. The score:

Umpire Owens who recently underwent the experience of being knocked on the head with a bat at Crookston and a few days later being hit with a foul tip that temporarily deprived him of his senses, has concluded that life in the Northern league is a little too strenuous and has gone to the Central league.

DID A CAKEWALK.

Well Known London Man Creates a Sensation.

New York, July 30.—For a wager of $2500, a rather well-known gentleman of athletic propensities undertook, says a London dispatch to the Herald, to perform a cake walk from a well-known restaurant to Hyde Park corner and back, between 11 o'clock in the morning and 6 o'clock in the evening.

The appearance of a well-dressed man alternately walking with his knees on a level with his chest and hopping on one foot, followed by hansom cabs containing umpires and backers, caused considerable amusement in the West End. However, he won the wager.

NO EFFECT ON IRON

Pessimism In Wall Street Has Not Reached That Trade.

Although Not Helping to Break Lull In the Market.

Cleveland, July 30.—The Iron Trade Review, in its issue this week, says: The sensational fall in securities the past week and the acute felling of pessimism attending it, have begotten no corresponding sentiment in the iron trade, but naturally they have not helped to break the lull in the market. No noteworthy business has resulted from the revival of the billet agreement, with a price basis somewhat below that recently prevalent, but the spread between billets and rods would seem sufficient to encourage some buying by rod mills. That the steel mills, which have had no steel to sell for months, are now able to offer a certain small fraction of their output on the market indicates that the finishing capacity is not as fully occupied as it might be, even after the shutdowns of the first half of July.

While there are no indications thus far that consumption is to be materially reduced in the near future, yet the effect of the Wall street crash, or rather of the causes that led to it, upon the business interests of the country, is being seriously discussed. Over-extension of credit on industrial operations is apt to be followed by the same sharp scrutiny and sifting as has come to the stocks of over-capitalized consolidations.

The railroads, while not scrambling for early places on the order books of the rail mills, keep on contracting for next year, and it is estimated that close to 1,000,000 tons for 1904 delivery is now booked, including what was originally placed for 1903 that must go over. The investigations by the granger roads into the probable yield in the wheat and corn states have brought them to a conclusion that every car will be needed to meet the demands of the fall and winter.

Pig iron is weaker. Stocks have been increasing, while foundrymen have waited and the large buyers of foundry iron assert that $12 Southern iron is within sight, though reports of a large block being taken at that figure are again denied. Contracts for castings are being taken with every week, for which the pig iron is yet to be bought.

Importations, presumably under old contracts, have been more or a factor than has been generally supposed, being 79,000 tons for June and 882,000 tons for the year ending June 30, or equal to the output of twelve foundry iron furnaces each preceding 200 tons a day.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Young Man Was Instantly Killed By Kick of Horse.

Watertown—The body of Oscar Holden was sent to Egan Tuesday. He was kicked by a horse and instantly killed while visiting at the home of a friend in this city.

Rev. H. S. Justema, the Presbyterian minister, left for Detroit, where he has accepted a pasterate in one of the large churches of that city. Rev. J. M. Daniel, of the Baptist church, has also resigned and will leave shortly for Sioux Falls, where he has accepted the chair of Greek in the Sioux Falls college.

M. O. Poulson, a hardware merchant, took up the brindle bossey of H. P. Horswill for trespass and asked sixty-five cents for their redemption. Mr. Horswill felt aggrieved and refused to pay, going further and instituting suit to recover the cow. The case came up in justice court and will go to circuit court, and several hundred dollars will not cover the costs by the time the difficulty is settled.

H. J. Mowrey, receiver of the United States land office, has been made the defendant in a damage suit for $5000. Mrs. Eva M. Wilkins was thrown from a buggy at Camp Roosevelt during the encampment of the national guard. The horse took fright at Mr. Mowrey's automobile, and Mrs. Wilkins is now asking that she be recompensed for her injuries.

Vermillion—Ole Junker has just returned from a trip to Norway. He does not care to return to the old country to reside and says it would be like being buried alive to go there now, after several years in the land of the free.

A stranger giving his name as Robert Jones, was arrested here today by Chief Sullivan, upon complaint of J. H. Brady, who said the man had endeavored to get into his house early this morning. Jones was able to prove his innocence and was dismissed. He comes from Elk Point, where his father, Ed Jones, resides.

Pierre—The supreme court handed down a decision by Judge Haney rewersing the lower court in the case of the state of South Dakota vs. Lulch, from Lawrence county. Emerth Leaton, of Terry, was admitted to practice on a certificate from the supreme court of Nebraska.

The members of the graduating class of the new law department of the state university were admitted on their diplomas, being Christian R. Jorgensen, Wilmot; John K. Elliott, Forest Park Way, N. Y.; Clyde H. Belknap, Madison; Elva C. Andrews, Vermillion; Neil Stewart, Brookings; Robert D. Walker, Armour.

Parker—The city council has disposed of bonds to the amount of $10,000, which were recently voted for the purpose of extending and improving the local waterworks system. The lucky bidder was L. L. Lostutter of Iroquois.

Sioux Falls—Information has been received of the death near the Ponca sub agency of a venerable Indian named Milk, who was one of the most prominent chiefs of the Brule Sioux tribe.

Platte—At a meeting of Catholics, arrangements were completed for the erection of a fine new church. The contract has been awarded. The church will cost about $3000.

Plankington—Rev. J. A. Derome, pastor of the Congregational church, has tendered his resignation, to take effect Oct. 17, next.

Bryant—Mrs. Peter Lisananti, living about fifteen miles east of Bryant, was killed by lightning. She had raised the curtain to look at the storm when a bolt struck the house. She lived but a few minutes. She leaves a husband and ten children.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Escanaba Man Sues Commission Company For $10,000.

Marquette—Joseph E. Reinger, of Escanaba, filed suit in United States court for $18,000 damages against the Hadden-Redee Commission company, of Milwaukee. The case is a result of the recent disappearance of George Dillon, manager of the Escanaba branch and promises to be sensational. It is alleged by Reinger that he holds a receipt from Dillon showing that he deposited $15,000 with the firm as margins. This amount he now seeks to recover, together with $3000 profits. The alleged deposit of $15,000 is, however, disputed by the company.

A terrific electrical storm, accompanied by rain, which fell in torrents, passed over the city. John Stonebreaker, a carpenter, was struck by a bolt and instantly killed.

Iron Mountain—Company L, Third regiment, of this city, has been mustered out of the service and Stephen H. Avery, assistant quartermaster-general, is in the city and has taken charge of the state's property.

Although the company is mustered out, Iron Mountain may still retain a military company. Some of the most prominent men of the county immediately upon hearing the news, set to work to have the vacancy which now exists in the National Guard, filled again by an Iron Mountain company. A petition was immediately wired to the governor asking that a company of militia be retained here. There has been a $10,000 armory guaranteed if a company is retained here.

Menominee—Quartermaster General Stephen Avery, of the Michigan state militia, has arrived in this city for the purpose of establishing a militia company here, coming from Iron Mountain, where he mustered out Company L, of that city.

Sault Ste. Marie—Some time ago the city purchased of Alderman Forest, of the Fourth ward, several lots of land of the opening of Ord street. At that time the abstracts were carefully examined and no incumbrances were found upon the lots. Alderman Forest also is said to have stated that the lots were entirely free.

Monday night, however, a man named Letcher submtted a statement to the council that he held a mortgage for $1000 on the lots and forbade the city proceeding with the opening of the street until his claims against the lots were satisfied.

Alderman Forest had received his pay for the lots and an error in the abstracts prevented the officials from discovering the mortgage.

Another lot purchased from Forest for the same purpose was a store kept by a Mrs. Stewart.

In an award of the court, valuation was placed pon the lot and building without specifying that this included the lotts and house. Mrs. Stewart says: "Soon after Forest had received his money from the city he came to me and offered to give me $50 for my half of the building."

Mrs. Stewart said she refused the money and informed the city attorney with the result that action will probably be brought against Alderman Forest in the near future. At any rate his resignation from the council will be demanded.

SOUTH DAKOTA CROPS.

Early Wheat Reported as Maturing Too Rapidly.

The South Dakota crop report for the week ending Monday last says:

"It was quite warm during the week, especially in the central portion of the state, the temperature reaching 106 degrees at Pierre on the 24th, and excepting scattered showers the early part, fair and favorable harvest weather prevailed. There were beneficial rains Saturday night and Sunday morning reported over the greater portion of the state east of the Missouri river, but the amounts were light in the most northern counties.

"Because of the high temperature early wheat is reported as maturing a little too rapidly. Some slight blight in the tips of the heads is reported from some southeastern counties, and in a number of localities the heads are not filling as well as anticipated. There has been some damage from rust in the extreme southeastern counties, where also a little wheat has been harvested.

"The oat crop is maturing fast and the harvesting of the early sown is becoming general in the middle and southern counties. Some local damage from rust has occurred in the extreme southeastern counties.

Rye harvest is nearly completed and some stacking has been done. Very good yields are anticipated.

"Barley harvest progressed favorably and is far advanced. The crop, on the whole, is reported a good one, but there was much of it lodged and some discoloration of the berry is noted.

"Corn has made very good progress. The bulk of the early planted is in tassel and much is silking. The warm weather and rains favored the growth of this crop.

"Flax has done well, except on new breaking in some limited northern localities. Considerable of the early planted is in boll.

"Potatoes have made good progress and the crop is on the whole promising. The early planted are maturing in the southeastern counties.

"Haying progressed favorably. While the outlook has improved, only a fair and in some localities light crop is anticipated in some northern and Black Hills counties. The yield in the southeastern counties is good.

"There was some limited local damage by hail in several counties."

RECIPROCITY WITH CANADA.

According to a report made by an agent of the National Reciprocity league who has been making a thorough investigation of the present desire for a commercial reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada, the Chamberlain proposition of preferential tariff has created but little change among those who are desirous of a reciprocal arrangement between the United States and the Dominion. In his report he says that he had a very full conference with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and later with John Charlton, as well as conversations with other Canadians less influential in the direction of affairs. He declares he found it apparent that no change had taken place in the attitude of the Canadian government, and was inclined to the opinion that general sentiment among the people had undergone but little if any change as a result of the proposition of a British preferential. He found the feeling quite general and shared by the Canadian government that such a preferential as Great Britain might offer would not necessarily be incompatible with reciprocity with the United States. It was thought that Great Britain would not offer such a preferential as would be of any value to the eastern and more thickly settled parts of Canada. If it extended only to breadstuffs the maritime provinces and Quebec would have no interest whatever in it and Ontario but little.

His investigations at Gloucester and Boston disclosed that the fish interests of Massachusetts are very much divided in opinion upon the question of Canadian reciprocity. Those engaged in the fish packing and distributing business are very generally in favor of a reciprocity treaty, believing that free fish would bring to them a great increase of business. He found, too, a difference between the fresh fish and the salt fish business in the point of interest which they manifest in the question. All agree that free fish would not injure the fresh fish business, which is growing, while the salt fish enterprise is declining.

The agent quotes one of the leading owners of fishing fleets at Gloucester, who is also a large fish dealer, and who has been for twenty-five years the chief opponent of a Canadian treaty. That person contended that so long as Canada only proposed a free interchange of raw materials they felt that they should stubbornly stand out against the treaty, but their interests being so insignificant in comparison with other great industries of the country they appreciated their opposition would no longer be effective when Canada made concessions in the way of reducing duties of manufactured articles.

"This statement practically presents the real situation," says the agent. "If Canada will give us concessions upon manufactures as she must and as I have every reason to believe she will, a treaty can be agreed upon that will not meet with much opposition from this quarter if from any other. I find that many men in Gloucester who said that under the fisheries treaty which was in force from 1784 to 1886, Gloucester had its great era of prosperity."

If conditions are as represented, and there is no reason to believe otherwise, the joint high commission should be called in session again and an arrangement agreed upon just as soon as possible. There are no closer neighbors than the United States and Canada and they should profit thoroughly by their geographical connection.

TRANSVAAL'S GOLD OUTPUT.

The output of gold from the Transvaal still continues somewhat disappointing to England. It is true it has increased month by month since the Boers laid down their arms, but not nearly as rapidly as desired. The product in June was $4,000,000 as compared with $4,682,000 for May; a fairly good gain, but not what was expected.

In August, 1899, just before the war begun, the Rand mines' output was $9,190,000, which is not far from twice that of June, 1903. It is assumed that July, 1903, will show a gain on the June total, and August will give a still larger output. It is evident now, however, that the figures for 1899 will not be equaled until the latter part of 1903, if they are then. Some difficulty is found in getting laborers to work the mines. Considerable damage was done to some of the mining properties, and their repair has taken time. Political reconstruction is not yet completed, and will not be completed for several years to come. This has an adverse effect on the situation, although probably not to any great extent, for no trouble between Boers and British is looked for.

There is no reason, however, why the production should not ultimately reach its former figures and even increase.

It has been noted that only three of the fifteen members of the famous electoral commission of 1877 survive—ex-Senator Edmunds, Senator Hoar and Gen. Eppa Hunton of Virginia—the two last having been chosen on the part of the house of representatives. All of the five justices of the supreme court who sat on the commission long since passed away. The survivors are probably trying to forget their decision.

Dr. Toyokichi Iyenaga says that Japanese women do not often change the fashion of their dresses, and that there are no such galaxies of old maids as there are in the United States. But is there any connection between these two facts?

The boxing shows in the army will delight the president.

CO-OPERATIVE HOUSEKEEPING.

Co-operation in house-keeping has proved successful in Ontario, California, and there is no reason why it should not elsewhere. Twelve prominent families, whose heads are ministers, doctors, lawyers, bankers and prominent business men, became tired of wrestling with the hired-girl question. As an experiment they organized a "Co-operative Family club," which is proving eminently successful as a labor, finance, and worry economizer. A committee was appointed to make business arrangements. First of all, it selected a house that could be used as community dining-room and kitchen. It was conveniently near the homes of all members of the organization, which are clustered within a radius of eight blocks. The club pays the owner of this building $20 a month rent. The upstairs rooms in this community building are used as bedrooms by the help, while the downstairs rooms are utilized as community dining-rooms and kitchen. Only four employes are necessary to run this unique housekeeping innovation. These four people, whose total wages amount to but $150, do all the work of the establishment and supply the gustatory needs of the twelve families, an equivalent of forty-three people.

A committee of six, the members of which are changed every month, perform the official duties of the organization, regulate all difficulties and complaints, if there be any, and attend to the finances. The women of the club take turns in making out the menus, and in this way each family is suited. The executive committee places restrictions on those who prepare the bills of fare in order to prevent extravagance and regulate the number of courses for each meal. Each of the twelve families has its own individual table, its own table linen, silver and napkin rings, and feels as much at home as in a private diningroom. When the first of the month arrives the statisticians of the club attend to the financial requirements that have accumulated during the month. After paying the bills of the institution they are able to figure out what each family must deposit in the club treasury. According to club estimates, meals cost but 11 cents apiece for each person, and when one realizes that this low figure procures the best of food to be obtained, as well as the best of service, it is a matter worthy of thoughtful consideration by those who are suffering and struggling under the ban of the servant-girl problem.

There is no reason why such a plan should not prove eminently successful for dwellers in apartment houses or flats, so many of which exist in Duluth. A certain section of the house could be rented for the use of the culinary department, diningrooms and rooms for the help. It would not only solve the servant girl problem, but it would reduce the cost of living to a minimum and prove much more satisfactory.

LEGISLATION IN HAWAII.

It is evident that the native Hawaiians are proving apt pupils in the methods of legislation adopted by the legislators of the various states of the Union. The legislature of Hawaii was in session five months before it could be induced to adjourn. The passing of the appropriation bills was concluded only a few hours before the session expired by limitation, and they would have failed entirely had not the governor met the threats of the legislators not to complete their work with the avowal that no extra session of the legislature would be called, and the old appropriations would continue. The average Hawaiian legislator is probably no better and no worse than the majority of the members of legislatures in the states when it comes to honesty. But some of them have very queer ideas of honesty and duty. It was pretty generally admitted by the native members that the work of the legislature could have been finished within the required sixty days, but they wanted the extra session with the $200 salary it brought to each of them. And most of them would like to keep on with the work of statesmanship all the year around, and would have done it, too, if Governor Dole had not at once put a check upon that plan. The scheme was to hold up the appropriations and compel the executive to continue to call extra sessions, as the organic act provides that the old appropriations shall continue "until the legislature shall have acted." Unfortunately for the ambitions of the native members the law was differently construed by the attorney general, so that the scheme was nipped in the bud.

Though the legislature was nominally Republican, it could hardly have been called such except in name. No matter how the politicians desire to twist things, there will never be anything but a native party in Hawaii until the whites get in the majority, a contingency which the Hawaiians will prevent as long as it lies within their power. In the two sessions the legislature distributed about $90,000, or $2000 for each member. Most of this went to the adherents of the native party for interpreting and translating. Just at the close of the session most of the native members carried away everything portable, including inkstands, mucilage and even waste baskets, as well as all the stationery still remaining.

Now that the session is over, the natives are preparing for the fall elections, and from present indications will have little trouble in electing all the county officers under the new law. The natives are organizing all through the islands, and only natives will be elected to fill office. In the opinion of many the time is fast approaching when the political lines will have to be drawn between a white and native party, for that has always been the alignment in the past, though the natives did come under the Republican banner for the purpose of gaining what spoils there are to be distributed by the national party. It is said to be the scheme now for the natives to all join the Republican party, capture the party organization and dominate the party in the territory and at Washington. A few white men are believed to be in this scheme, to secure political control of the islands.

According to the acts for public improvement passed by the legislature the government needs a loan of $2,400,000 to carry them out and Governor Dole has asked permission from the president to raise it. If a satisfactory statement of the territory's finances can be furnished there will not be much doubt but what it can be obtained. If not, the money will be found wanting.

The Anoka Union says: "Sending impecunious negroes, who have fled from the South, to the work house for ninety days, as was done by a municipal judge in Minneapolis a few days ago, is certainly a questionable way to treat these refugees." Indeed it is. Why does he not send them to Anoka?

Now that Public Examiner Johnson has given his opinion at St. Paul on the slump in Wall street, there does not appear to be any reason why stocks should not advance again.

Pittsburg, Pa., has a typhoid fever epidemic, with 112 new cases in six days. As usual, an impure water supply is the cause. Pittsburg should follow Duluth's example and get a pure water supply.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"The Hines Lumber company-Scofield fight, in which S. J. Cusson of Ashland has had his first patrol wagon experience, as I see from the papers," said a prominent lumberman at the Spalding hotel this morning, "is simply the culmination of a long drawn out smokeless powder battle.

"The Scofield people have made it hot for the Hines Lumber company all along the line, and have for a long time now. They were pretty smooth about it, and caused the Hines people to act on the offensive at last, though the Hines contingent had been keeping away from open declaration of war for obvious reasons, until after the mill burned at Superior.

"The Scofield company had men lying on the piles of lumber sawed for Hines over at the old burned mill yards, and had everything ready to stop the Hines men from taking the lumber away.

"The question of the validity of a well understood mechanic's lien is involved in the question which will go to the supreme court now. That is the question in point is whether a man can cause repairs or work of a mechanical nature to be done on his property, and then cart away the property without paying. It is the principal of the man who takes a horse to a horseshoer to get it shod, and tries to take it out without paying. The lien laws permit the workman to hold the horse. This is over lumber sawed from the Hines company's logs. The Scofield company made the lumber and wanted their pay.

"Through the injunctional proceedings the Hines company is now shipping the lumber away, putting up a bond for the value of it.

"As I said the fight has been going on for a long time, ever since the Scofield company started to lose money on the contract, which was a couple of years ago.

"They did everything they could to aggravate the Hines company; they wouldn't saw the lumber the way it was wanted, though keeping within the letter of the contract. There were all kinds of small annoyances, which it is calculated, were purposely perpetrated to get the Hines company to violate the contract in some way.

"The price made by the Scofield company was fair at the time it was made, but the increase in wages to men, and the general prosperity of the times, made a difference of twenty-five or thirty cents a thousand feet from the current prices, and the Scofield company was losing money all the time.

"Then came the burning of the mill, which was a fortunate circumstance if there wasn't a cent's worth of insurance. And then came the claim for damages by the Hines company and the attempt to move the lumber.

"It means litigation that will last for years, probably."

James Conmee, the member of the Ontario house, from the Algomah district, left this morning for his home in Port Arthur, after having spent several days at the St. Louis hotel figuring on a railroad construction contract.

He said just before he left that he had nothing to tell regarding what contracts were up for proposals, but said he would have something to say before long.

And speaking of contracts reminded one of the group of how the Hon. James Conmee made his first stake, and by a clever turn put himself in an exalted position in the Dominion.

It was back in 1887, or thereabouts, when the Canadian Pacific was receiving proposals for the construction of section A, west of Prince Arthur's landing, or what is now Port Arthur, a difficult piece of construction, one of the hardest on the whole system.

A company of which Thomas Marx was the head, was figuring on making a bid, and had no way to estimate for the cost of construction, so they told Conmee that they would give him the ties, culverts and other timber work on the section, providing he would go over the survey and complete an estimate on the work necessary for the construction.

The Hon. James was in the timber business to some extent and took the offer gladly. He went over the survey in company with a sharp, but diminutive Englishman, who was an engineer, and returned in proper time with his figures. It was within but a few days of the time of opening the proposals at Ottawa, and the Hon. James had no contract, excepting the verbal expression of the construction company, that he would get the timber work on the section. He asked for something more tangible and binding, but the worthy Mr. Marx couldn't see it.

"Then you don't have to," replied the redoubtable Conmee.

He put in a bid himself, at Ottawa.

He got the contract.

Well, as soon as he got that contract, the construction companies flew around him, but he warded them back and said he could get all the backing he wanted, and he did, and he built the section and also got into combination of contractors who worked together, and which afterwards gave him a great deal of contract work on the Canadian Pacific east of Port Arthur.

That was the way he got his start, and he made a great deal of money out of it, and laid the basis of a large fortune, which he now possesses.

The company took out about 700,000,000 feet of timber in the years it operated in these parts.

FLITTING FANCIES.

Lustige Welt: "Do you know that sour-looking fellow sitting there alone?"

"Oh! yes, but don't try any of your tricks on him! He's the editor of a comic paper and can't take a joke."

Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune: "Is the prisoner going to plead insanity as his defense?" asked the court stenographer.

"Judging from his selection of an attorney," replied the lawyer who had failed to get the case, "I should say he was."

Boston Transcript: Harry—Blanche says she has insuperable reasons for remaining single.

Horace—Yes, I know what they are.

Harry—Then she has told you?

Horace—No, but I have seen her.

Philadelphia Press: "We're a trifle upset," said the man who lives in a flat. "Had to take all our winter clothes out of the hall closet."

"Why, how was that?"

"To put up a cot in it; friend from out of town dropped in yesterday and spent the night with us."

Washington Star: "So your daughter is engaged to the titled foreigner?"

"I don't know that she's exactly engaged," answered Mr. Comrox, "but I think I may say that we have an option on him."

Chicago News: "Six months ago," said the suitor who had just been handed the frosty digit, "you asked me to wait until you had a chance to know me better and I agreed to wait. Now—"

"Yes," interrupted the maid with the cold-storage heart, "and that's where you made the mistake of your life."

Harper's Bazar: Stella—So she married him to reform him? How did she begin?

Bella—by spending a lot of money. You know how hard it is for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven.

Doctor (aside)—Ah, here's one person who has faith in me!

Life: Playwright—How do you know the public don't like the plot?

Manager—Perhaps they do. But they've gone without one so long that I'm afraid to risk it.

Yonkers Statesman: Bill—It seems strange, but heat comes in waves, does it not?

Jill—It certainly does.

Puck: Nan—Is there any infallible cure for seasickness?

Tom—Oh, yes; when you feel the symptoms coming on, all you have to do is to go out and sit under a tree. You will very soon recover.

Chicago Record-Herald: I propose," said the ambitious young man, "to girdle the earth."

"Oh!" she innocently exclaimed, "why do you begin on such a big thing!"

But he just sat there aand twirled his hat, the foolish fellow.

ONE OF THE HEROES.

Here is a song of a hero:
He is one of the many whose names
Are not and will never be written
On the scroll we refer to as Fame's;
He has never rushed, cheering, to battle,
He has never plunged into the wave
To rescue a child or a woman,
Yet he ought to be named with the brave:
Each night he goes home to a scolding,
To hear the old story again
Of the talent he lacks and the failure
To claim the attention of men.

Each morning he goes to his duties
Still striving to win and still proud,
Still waiting for Fate to permit him
Some day to work up from the crowd;
Each day he goes patiently toiling
And sighing alone, if he sighs—
His sorrows are his and his only;
Hope still is agleam in his eyes;
In spite of the wearisome scolding
And grumbling he goes to at night,
He faces the world in the morning
As though all his dreams had been bright.

With never a mortal to praise him.
For what he has done or has tried,
He still has an honest ambition
And still in his breast he has pride,
With never the hope of receiving
Approval at home he can still,
With his sorrows all carefully hidden,
Toil on with a conqueror's will;
So here is a song of a hero,
But one of the many whose names
Are not and never will be written
On the scroll we refer to as Fame's.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Too many servants spoil the work.

There are no wicked women—they only do wicked things.

A girl can answer a question before it is asked if it is a proposal.

A woman considers that her husband is trying to do better when he is smart enough for her not to catch him.

It is simply beyond the understanding of a man how a woman can see to walk right into his arms when it is pitch dark.

Shortsighted Action.

Indianapolis Journal: A dispatch from Dalas, Tex., says that the labor unions there decline to let members who are also members of the militia take the oath of allegiance to the United States government, and that members of the unions are forced to resign from the militia. Such action by the unions is extremely shortsighted.

A VISIT FROM HER NIECE

By Ex-Congressman W. H. Hinrichsen.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Mr. and Mrs. George Markham had been married five years and were happy in spite of certain eccentricities in which George was willing to indulge. This happiness was due largely to Mrs. Markham's natural good sense, although up to the time of the following incident George hardly realized it. Later he admitted it, if not to the world, at least to himself.

"Florence will arrive this evening" said Mrs. Markham at the breakfast table one morning.

"Florence?" said Mr. Markham, in an enquiring tone.

"Florence Mason, my niece, of whom I have spoken so often," said Mrs. Markham. "You will like her, I know."

"Um!" muttered George.

"She will stay with us a couple of weeks," continued Mrs. Markham. "And, George, dear, I hope you can find time to meet her at the station."

George looked annoyed.

"The train arrives at eight o'clock, and she is a stranger in the city, you know."

"Oh, I'll meet her," said George, resignedly. "But how shall I know her?"

"I have thought of that," said Mrs. Markham, "and I wrote her to inquire for you of the gateman at the station. You can give him your name and stand near. When she inquires for you he will point you out."

"Very well, dear, I'll be there," said George, and received a bright smile from his wife.

At ten minutes before eight George was at the station to meet his wife's niece, and to his annoyance found that the train on which she was expected was at least two hours late. The stationmaster told him confidentially that the train was held up a few miles from the city by a wreck on the B. & B. road where it crossed their line.

"We are sending out a train to bring in the passengers, and the run and transfer will take about two hours," said the friendly stationmaster.

"Can I go out on the relief train?" asked George, on an impulse. "I am waiting for a friend."

"I guess so," said the official, and a few minutes later George was sitting in the train speeding toward the blocked crossing.

"This is better than waiting at the station," he muttered, leaning back comfortably. "Besides, I shall have to find the kid, and there will be no delay."

He arrived at the crossing and accompanied the conductor, who passed through the delayed train announcing to the passengers the proposed transfer. He kept a sharp lookout for his wife's niece. She had never been described to him, but he took it for granted that she was a girl of 14 or 15, with the usual frightened look which girls of that age wear when traveling alone.

The train contained only a few passengers, and the girl was not among them.

"She missed the train, I suppose," thought George, "and my trip is for nothing."

Being good-natured, he gave his assistance to the railroad men in transferring the passengers to the waiting train. He naturally picked up the bundles of the prettiest woman in the train, and, offering her his arm, escorted her around the wreck to the relief train.

She accepted his attentions readily, for he was with the conductor, and she no doubt thought him a railroad official too high in rank to wear a uniform.

He found her a comfortable seat in the waiting train, and, sitting opposite her, they naturally fell into conversation. He did not mention his name, but told her he lived in Chicago, and had come to meet a friend who had evidently missed the train. The lady, a beautiful blonde, mentioned that she was from Omaha and was going to Chicago to visit friends. And so they chatted during the delay and the trip back to the city.

"It is so late," remarked the lady, as the train stopped at the station, "that my friends will have given me up, and I think I shall go to a hotel for the night."

"I shall be glad to escort you wherever you desire to go," said George, gallantly.

"Thank you," said the lady, "I think I shall go to the Occidental."

They were seated in the carriage when George asked: "Have you been to dinner?"

"I have not," she replied, "and must confess to being hungry."

George stopped the carriage, gave a quiet order, and the vehicle proceeded. It soon drew up at a cafe. He assisted the lady to alight, and they were soon seated in a private room of the establishment, enjoying a comfortable dinner, which George ordered.

They talked like old friends, and two hours later when they again entered their carriage they felt very well acquainted. He saw her provided for at the Occidental, and when he said goodbye, asked:

"May I call on you, tomorrow?"

She hesitated, but finally said: "Yes, at 3 o'clock."

"For whom shall I inquire?" he asked.

"I shall be in the public parlor," she said, smiling. "Good-night," and she followed the porter, who had taken her bundles.

It was very late when George entered his own house. Mrs. Markham had lain down, dressed, to wait for her niece.

"Train late and she was not on board," said George, in explanation.

At ten o'clock next day Mrs. Markham's niece reached her aunt's house. She was not a child, as her uncle had supposed, but a beautiful young woman, a little older than her aunt.

There was the usual greetings and in Miss Mason's bedroom there were the usual confidences.

"Are you as great a flirt as ever, Florence?" said her aunt.

"Oh, no," said Florence. And then she added: "I did have a little adventure last night."

"Indeed?"

"Yes," and she told of the handsome gentleman who had been so kind.

"Such conduct is dangerous, Florence," said her aunt, rather severely.

"Oh, you dear old matron," said Florence, shaking her finger at her playfully. "You have quite forgotten the times we used to have together."

"Still, it is dangerous," said Mrs. Markham.

"He was a gentleman," said Miss Mason, "though he was inclined to be spoony at times."

"Did you tell him your name?"

"Oh, no, and I imagine his disgust when he tries to find me at the hotel."

George came home to lunch, and when he entered the parlor was surprised to meet by his wife's side a beautiful young woman to whom he was introduced as his niece, Florence Mason. He recognized her as the lady he had met the night before, and could not avoid showing surprise. She gave no sign, and they went in to lunch.

"Just think, George," said Mrs. Markham, after they were seated. "Florence is going to leave us this afternoon. She says she must return at once, and her reasons are so good that I have not attempted to dissuade her."

In spite of herself a tinge of red spread over Miss Mason's face, and George looked puzzled, but said nothing.

"I shall accompany her to the train," said Mrs. Markham. "She will leave at half-past two."

George thought of an engagement at three, but he said nothing, and went on with his lunch.

Florence has never visited her aunt since that day, nor do they correspond. Mrs. Markham mentions her niece occasionally, but never invites her to visit them. George, after mature deliberation, decided that his wife was a very sensible woman.

Legitimate Business Secure.

Springfield Republican: The worst may be over in Wall street. We trust it is. It does not seem probable that quotations can sink much lower, except in the more inflated spots, without overdiscounting all possible adverse effects upon the country of a period of reaction. We shall weather the storm. There is no question about that. The only question is how much cargo must be jettisoned to keep the ship right side up. Legitimate business and industry will go on to the people employed and returning to the bulk of honest capital some margin of profit. But the business of marshaling bogus capital for the exploitation of the people to the profit of stock jobbers and promoters has been effectually knocked in the head, for a while at least.

"Cat Without Claws In Hell."

New York Sun: A lawyer up at the Tilden club the other night was discussing recent utterances of Mr. Watterson as to the nomination of Mr. Cleveland. Having disapproved of the Kentucky editor's opinion, he said as he ordered up "two more of the same:"

"I don't know whether Mr. Watterson put his remark in quotation marks or not, but if he didn't he plagiarized or came very near it. The opinion attributed to Mr. Watterson is: He (Cleveland) has no more chance of a Democratic nomination for the presidency than a cat in Hades minus both a fan and tail, not to mention claws."

"The original expression is, 'No more chance than a cat without claws would have in hell.' The author of the expression was Emory Storrs, who was the lion of the bar of Illinois.

"Mr. Storrs was addressing a jury in a celebrated case. Opposing counsel had said in closing his address: 'My learned friend who will follow me will undertake to make you believe that my client has no chance in this case. I warn you against his sophistry.'

"Storrs got up and made the shortest speech that was ever made to a jury. He said:

"'May it please the court, and you, gentlemen of the jury, the plaintiff in this case has no more chance than a cat without claws would have in hell!'

"And then he sat down. The jury returned in less than ten minutes. The judge, who was a good deal of a wit and consequently liked a joke, asked when the jury came in:

"'Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?'

"The foreman replied, "We have, your honor.'

"'Has the plaintiff any chance?' asked the court.

"'In a moment the court room was in a roar, and the bailiff was splitting the desk with his gavel. The judge, however, made no correction in his inquiry, and the plaintiff's counsel, who was no other than Leonard Swett, enjoyed the situation to such an extent that he forgot to make the usual motion, and the clerk's entry in the case stands to this day as he wrote it: "'The jury finds in this case that the plaintiff had no more chance than a cat without claws would have in hell.'"

Announcement.

Youth's Companion: Every one admitted that Mrs. Thomson was an excellent disciplrarian. She was a widow with three boys, whom she had brought up to obedience and truthfulness, if not to joy.

"Children, I have something to tell you," she announced one Sunday on the return of the family from church. "On Thursday afternoon I shall marry Dr. Lane, whom you all know and respect."

There was a solemn pause, ended by the oldest boy. "Mother," he asked, "when are you going to tell Dr. Lane?"

Excessive Hospitality.

Lippincott's: The butter was nearly out and an unexpected guest coming to supper! A family council was held, in which it was agreed that the home folks would eat no butter for supper, and so there would be plenty for the guest.

The plan worked well until the small boy in an excess of hospility offered the butter to the guest with the earnest request: "Have butter? Take most all!"

The Careful Man.

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I'll not ask for wine;
Bacilli float in the juice of the grape,
So I want none in mine!
Drink to me, if you will, in milk,
If it's been pasturized,
Or fill your glass with water, boiled,
So you won't be surprised
By coming across a germ that's been Lying in wait for you.
Fill up the breaker, but see that it
Is sterilized, or new!
Drink to me, dear, if you think it's safe
To do it—but otherwise
'Twere better to nurse your thirst, and just
Drink to me with your eyes!

UPRISING ENDED

John Saterlee, a Fearless Northern Minnesota Trapper, Did It.

Bad Indian Who Was Ready to Slaughter Paleface.

Bemidji, Minn., July 30.—From the north woods comes a well authenticated story of how John Saterlee, a trapper, who operates in the region along the course of the Big Fork river, subdued a recent Indian uprising all by himself in a decidedly original manner.

The uprising was not large enough to be of a very dangerous character. There was only one Indian involved, in fact, and he frightened his brother red skins as much as any one else, but, nevertheless, it took strenous measures to subdue the offending buck.

Saterlee makes his headquarters in a log cabin in Itasca county, not far from an Indian reservation. A few nights ago he was awakened by the sound of some one knocking at the door, and as he slipped from his bunk, he heard low and excited conversation from without. Peering out the window he beheld six Indians. They were grouped closely together and kept glancing in a frightened way towards the trail behind them, as though expecting danger from that quarter.

Saterlee fearlessly opened the door and admitted them. The spokesman briefly stated their case. It appeared that one of their tribe, John Joe by name, had taken it into his head that his people were being badly misused by the whites, so he decided to urge the Northern Minnesota Indians to rise up and throw off the yoke of the invaders of their hunting grounds, which could be done, he said, by simply killing off the settlers and then slaughtering any other palefaces who might venture into the region. He had been working on his self-appointed task, Saterlee was informed, for several days, and was, even then executing a lone war dance only half a mile down the trail as a preliminary step to scalping a few whites on the morrow, just to show his brethren how easily it was done.

The trapper waited to hear no more. Dressing and taking his gun he started down the trail, followed at a safe distance by his midnight callers. Soon he saw a small fire ahead. Around it a big Indian, war paint and feathers complete, with a Winchester in one hand and a big hunting knife in the other, was dancing.

Saterlee signed for the Indians behind to remain quiet. He threw down his gun, and, unarmed, ran swiftly forward in a stooping posture, till almost within the circle of light, then leaped to one side of the trail and threw himself flat in the protecting ferns. In this position he crawled forward, silently as a snake, only the slightly moving fern tops marking his progress, and they were quiet except when the dancer's back was turned. He came within a few feet of John Joe without being detected. Saterlee then shot up and out like a great panther, landing on the bare shoulders. There was a frightened whoop and in a twinkling John Joe's knife and rifle were lying on the ground. A brief struggle followed. The Indian is a powerful man, but Saterlee's strength was not to be resisted. He grabbed the warrior by the shoulders and rushed him at a trot down the trail, at every jump kicking him good and hard where is would do the most good. A full quarter of a mile, to the banks of a large creek, the poor wretch was rushed, and then, with a last, terrible kick he was sent sailing in a horizontal position far out into the center of a deep pool. He climbed out on the opposite bank and plunged into the forest. He has not been seen since by either Indian or white man, and it is thought that in his great humiliation he has left the country. Saterlee says the rascal will give no more trouble in any event, and Saterlee knows Indians.

ACTRESS SUICIDES.

Annie Poston Kills Herself In Chicago Hotel.

Chicago., July 30.—Miss Annie Poston, an actress, 24 years of age, shot and killed herself yesterday in a room at the Inter-Ocean hotel. Miss Sally Price, her roommate, said that Miss Poston had been grieving over something for the last two weeks and had made frequent references to suicide, asking what would become of her soul if she destroyed herself. Miss Price replied that such an act would result in eternal punishment. Miss Poston then asked:

"What have I done that my soul should be tormented on this earth and go condemned into the next"?

A muffled shot was heard in the hotel yesterday afternoon, and when the door of Miss Poston's room was broken open her body was found lying across the bed with blood flowing from a bullet wound above the heart.

From letters found in Miss Poston's possession the police learned that she had a sister, Mrs. Hattie Weinn, living in Binghnapton, N. Y.

SCOTCH "HIGH BALLS"

Were Responsible For the Revolution In Panama.

Washington, July 30.—The startling "revolution" which resulted in the brief overthrow of the government of Panama last Saturday night, according to official cables received today, was the result of high balls and not of insurrection.

During the course of the "revolution," Gen. Vasquez Cobos, who overthrew the government for a day, arrested most of the local officers and sent the governor flying in his pajamas into the shrubbery to escape a dungeon.

It now seems that Cobos did not know what he was doing when he overthrew the government of Panama. The incidents in his brief but successful revolution sound much like a comic opera plot or that of a farce comedy.

The truth is that he had dined too well and not being used to Scotch high-balls, lost his head and decided that affairs in Panama were not going to suit him. He accordingly ordered his army of ten men under arms and overthrew the government.

When Cobos awoke Sunday everything looked gray and gloomy. He did not remember what he had done, but he realized that something unusual had taken place, when another officer appeared in his quarters at the head of his army of ten and placed him under arrest. He has been removed from office, and will be tried by a court-martial. All this is told in the cable message received from Panama today.

Gen. Cobos does not seem to have been the only one who lost his head during the boisterous doings in Panama. The state department is wondering what Consul Gudger meant by sending dispatches which treated the matter as being serious. He reported all quiet today, but offered no explanation. The strain seems to have been hard on Gudger, for he accompanied his news with a request for sixty days' leave.

Assistant Secretary Loomis, who has a sense of humor, replied that, in view of the disturbed condition in Panama, he did not think Gudger should leave his post.

THE PROOF LACKING

Michigan Man Who Disappeared Writes Home From Kelsey, Minn.

Tells Pathetic Story of Wanderings Which Fails of Confirmation.

William Rudland, a farmer, of Davison, Mich., who "mysteriously disappeared" from his home, July 7, and who has been heard from at Kelsey, Minn., has been writing his family and friends at home details of a remarkable fairy story, or else he has in reality the buzzing in the head which, he claims to have, in a letter to his wife.

Inquiry was received here yesterday from parties at Davison as to the details of Rudland's story, that he was found sandbagged in a vacant lot, near the Union depot, in this city, on the morning of July 16. The letter inclosed clippings from a local paper at Davison, purporting to give the contents of letters which Rutland had written back from Kelsey.

The first letter was addressed to P. H. Peters, a well known business man of Davison, and in it Rudland said:

"I simply don't know how I got to Duluth, but was found there unconscious, in a vacant lot, sandbagged, they said. Anyway I had a big lump on my head. It is needless to say that I am dead broke. I'll have to work here long enough to get money to come back with.

"It's the strangest thing that ever happened to me, and I'd sooner lose five years of my life than to have had it happen.

"The last thing I can remember before coming in to Duluth is going from Jones' house to his farm, at Fostoria, to see him, for the boy told me he was up there, and I wanted to get that horse, if possible.

"Affairs had been going wrong with me anyway—the chickens were dying off and being taken, the weather was against me, and the old horse I had was not able to do much, and I was worried, many a night never sleeping a wink. I was continually worrying, although I said little, as I realized everyone has their own troubles."

The letter which Rudland wrote his wife from Kelsey, Minn., July 15 went still further into details and read as follows:

"Dear Letta:

"Where are you and the children, and what on earth are you doing and what have you done?

"My head is in a whirl yet over the shape things are in, to be in, and you must be imagining all sorts of things about me. Have you seen me since I started for Jones' to buy the horse? I have been puzzling as to how I got here and I can't understand it at all.

"On Thursday morning, July 16, a night watchman found me lying in a vacant lot near the Union depot in Duluth, Minn., about half past six. He thought I was drunk and tried to rouse me, and then found I was unconscious. He got cold water and threw on my face till he roused me, and when I came to I found some one had gone through my pockets. I had not a cent and my old pocketbook laid near me and two or three of my Maccabee receipts and another slip or two of paper were on the ground close by. How I came there I don't know, and cannot imagine what has happened between my leaving Jones' place and being in Duluth.

"There is a big lump on the back of my head and it aches just awful. The man said I had been sandbagged. He took me to a restaurant and got me some breakfast, then to an employment office and they shipped me to the iron mines at Hibbing, 140 miles north of Duluth. I got there about 6 o'clock in the evening and went to work in a mine yesterday morning. About 3 o'clock some of the timbers gave way on account of quicksand and fell close to me, killing the man working next to me, so I got out of there, and today I started working in an extra gang on the railroad and I'll have to work a while to get money to come back with.

"I can't eat nor sleep at night and it seems as if I must go crazy if I don't hear from you soon. I can see you and Gracie all night long standing by my bed, you asking me to come home and Gracie just saying papa, papa, and it just makes me wild till morning comes and when daylight comes I'm looking for night again. Write to me as soon as you can, for mercy's sake, for I am pretty near crazy. Sometimes I think I must have gone crazy after I started from Jones' house to go to Fostoria to see him, for I can remember walking in the sun and my head almost bursting and then things got dark and I felt dizzy and either laid or fell down. From then it is all a blank till I roused up in Duluth.

"While I am writing I don't even know if you are alive and that's what is killing me, for I am dreading to hear you are dead. If so, I might as well die too. Oh, my God, why has this happened? Write soon or telegraph "All well" if alive.

"YOUR LOVING WILL."

For the benefit of Davison parties who do not seem to take for granted that all Rudland wrote is true, an investigation was made at the Union depot the employment offices and police headquarters yesterday afternoon. No watchman could be found at the Union depot yards or anywhere in the vicinity that ever heard of Rudland, no report was ever made to the superintendent of the Union depot of a man found sandbagged in the yards.

Not one of the employment agencies that were shiping men to Hibbing, or that vicinity, saw or heard of Rudland. No ticket was ever issued to William Rudland from a Duluth office. The local labor offices do not hire men for the mines, but only for railroad or contract work on the range.

No account can be found in the range papers or the correspondence of a cave-in at one of the Hibbing mines July 17 or 18, in which there was a miner killed, in fact, not one of the details of Rudland's story can be confirmed.

The local police never heard of his case and they are rather skeptical of the authenticity of his statements.

CURED OF LOCKJAW.

San Francisco, July 30.—The doctors at the Grand hospital have cured Pietro Raffino of lock-jaw. Anti-toxin was injected in the muscles of the back. No improvement had developed and he was given an injection of anti-toxin in the spinal canal. The next day the doctors drilled a hole through the skull, and injected anti-toxin into the lateral ventricle. This was successful and the man is well.

Chief McKinnon Adds Insult to Injury.

Chief McKinnon, of the Superior police department was in the city yesterday for a conference with Chief Troyer relative to police matters. He explained that the misunderstanding which arose over the playing of McGowan with the police ball team of his city last week was unintentional and very much regretted. Chief McKinnon said McGowan had been on the force in the place of Patrolman Williams while the latter was away, but as he returned in time for the game and McGowan had already purchased his suit, it was not thought there would be any objection to his playing. Chief McKinnon said he meant to explain the situation to Chief Troyer before the game, but it slipped his mind.

"We will not play McGowan in the return game here," said he smilingly, "in fact I think we could have won the game the other day with only eight men."

LYNCHING THREATENED

Because Batson's Death Sentence Has Been Commuted.

New Orleans, July 30.—Alfred Batson, the murderer of the Earl family near Welch, La., twice convicted by a jury and sentenced to death, has had the death sentence commuted by the board of pardons to imprisonment for life. The crime was one of the worst ever committed in Louisiana. Batson, who worked for the Earls, killed Mr. and Mrs. Earl and their four children. The murderer fled to Missouri, where he was captured and brought back.

The action of the board of pardons has caused great excitement in Lake Charles, where Batson was convicted and there are many expressions of regret that the law was not allowed to take its course, and threats that Baston will not be permitted to leave Lake Charles alive. An indignation meeting to protest against the commutation was proposed, but was abandoned for fear it would lead to trouble.

HAD A LONG SLEEP.

Awakens After Nap of Forty-four Days.

New York, July 30.—After having slept for forty-four days, Endicott C. Allen, the extraordinary patient at the Monmouth Memorial hospital, has awakened. For the first time since he was placed on a cot there he came to a realization of his surroundings yesterday, sat up, asked what was the matter and then rose. For the first time in many days he took solid food.

One of the nurses in making the rounds of the wards found Allen apparently wide awake. She spoke to him and much to her surprise he answered intelligently. He has been awake at intervals, but always sank back into deep sleep after several minutes and his mind was always a blank. All he could remember was things that happened during his childhood.

Now he seems to be entirely recovered from his strange malady, which has puzzled physicians and specialists. Treatments of all sorts were employed, and now that he is awake it is not known just what brought about the result. The physicians believe that his recovery is permanent. Electricity has been the principal treatment applied.

Each day he was given three quarts of milk and in this way his strength was kept up reasonably well, although toward the last he seemed to be losing vitality.

Overwork and anxiety are believed to have been the cause of his strange affliction. Allen's home is in Boston. For a week before he was taken to the hospital he had been sleeping.

HEIRS TO AN ESTATE.

Poor Widow of La Crosse Comes Into Estate.

La Crosse, Wis., July 30.—Samuel McCown and Mrs. Mary Scales of this city are found to be the heirs of a rich estate left by John McCown of Rio, Col., a capitalist who died in seclusion there some time ago. The heirs were found and will gain the fortune through a newspaper article. Mrs. Scales, one of the beneficiaries, is a poor widow.

John McCown was lost track of years ago by his relatives. The estate will be turned over by the courts on Aug. 3.

MINNESOTA PIONEER

Died While Fishing On a Small Lake.

Fergus Falls, Minn., July 30.—Charles A. Kempfer, who has resided in the town of Friberg, this county, since 1879, was found dead in his boat on a small lake near his home Monday evening.

He had gone fishing during the afternoon and was evidently stricken with heart failure, falling backwards in his boat and dying immediately. Mr. Kempfer came to Minnesota in 1857, settling near Madella and taking a prominent part in chastising the Indians after the Minnesota massacre.

BEATING A CHILD

Bishop Grant, Colored, Says Senator Tillman Presents Spectacle.

Suggests Possible Remedy For Lynching Problem.

"What would you think of the spectacle of a statesman standing up before a vast audience and jumping on a little child?" said Bishop Abraham Grant, of Indianapolis, of the African Methodist church, who addressed the colored Methodists of the city last evening in the First Methodist church.

"Here is a race that has been but forty years on the road to civilization, and is a child among the races of the world, and yet this man, who calls himself a statesman, and holds the position of United States senator, stands up before the people and poisons their minds against our race.

"What can be gained by it?"

"Give us but 100 years of time and we will show the world what can be accomplished in evolution."

Bishop Grant is the bishop of the Fourth district in the African Methodist church, which includes the states of Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Canada. He is a deep thinker on social problems, and during President McKinley's term of office was frequently called to Washington by the president to confer with him on problems relating to the negro race.

Bishop Grant chose for his text last evening the verse, "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." He preached a very eloquent sermon, touching but once on the social and economic problem of his race, when he referred to Senator Tillman.

This evening Bishop Grant will speak in Superior on "The American Negro."

In an interview after the sermon last evening, Bishop Grant expressed his opinion on the lynching question and particularly on the recent extension of the lynching belt to include some of the northern states.

"So long as the lynching of negroes was confined to the Southern states," he said, "I have looked for the triumph of law and order over mob rule, but since it has spread to the northern states, I am somewhat at a loss to say what the harvest will be. When the people of great states like Illinois and Indiana can organize mobs to put people to death, without due process of law, we reach the place where we do not know what to expect next.

"In no other countries among the eighty-four civilized governments, do such conditions exist. In Bermudas, Barbadoes, Freetown or Sierre Leone, we have never heard of a nameless crime or of a negro lynching.

"I can suggest a remedy for the lynching problem. Let every man who participates in any action by a mob be disfranchised. When we cry out against lynchings, it is not because the victim is a negro, but because the mob is lawless, and we stand for upholding the majesty of the law.

"If people are disfranchised for poverty and ignorance, why not disfranchise them for crime and lawlessness.

"Lynching is a national crime and a national disgrace. It is on the increase, and the nation will have to take hold of it and pass laws to stamp it out."

Bishop Grant, who is a man of Herculean proportions, has spent thirty years of a most active life in preaching and studying how to elevate the people of his race. During that time he has visited all parts of the United States and Canada and the greater number of the civilized countries of the globe. He has gained almost a national reputation as one of the greatest orators of his race and in his address last evening fully sustained his reputation.

THE BRIBERY INVESTIGATION

Thomas G. White Maintains Silence as to What He Has.

The third and last meeting of the council in the Tischer alleged bribery cases will take place this evening in the council chambers. In the previous two meetings Thomas G. White, the employment agent who accused Alderman Tischer of soliciting a bribe, failed to pruduce the witnesses on whose evidence he claims to have depended, and the committee gave him until this evening to produce them.

Whether he has been sucessful in locating them, or will be able to get them before the committee tonight, is a question. Mr. White absolutely refuses to say a word on the subject. He is conducting his own case, and at the meeting a week ago stated that if he had a lawyer he probably would not have talked so much as he already has.

Joseph Lang, the young man employed in Mr. White's office at the time the employment agent claims Alderman Tischer solicited the bribe, was found in Illinois by his former employer, but it cannot be learned whether he will be here this evening.

Alderman Tischer will have ready this evening all of the evidence which he deems necessary to present in his own behalf.

The council chambers will be used by the council investigating committee in the alleged bribery case this evening, but tomorrow evening the room will be given up to citizens who care to take an interest in telephone matters.

THE DILEMMA JUST AWFUL

Into Which Two Minneapolis Young Ladies Were Drawn.

Minneapolis, July 30.—It was to oblige two young ladies that the Minneaolis & St. Louis "flyer" flew backward for six miles Monday morning on its way to Des Moines.

Soon after leaving Fort Dodge, the conductor heard a tapping, "as of someone gently rapping, rapping," on the door of the women's dressing room. "Oh, Mr. Conductor," chirped a face looking out through a low lace curtain, "you are the conductor, aren't you?"

The captain of the train assented.

"Well, we've forgot something, and it's dreadful. There's two of us, you see," replied the face in the lace. And though the conductor couldn't see he replied in a tractable tone. "Of course—is there?"

"Yes, and we can't come out either. We've done our hair, but we can't come out! The very idea! Quit laughing, dear!"

The conductor, like Lord Roberts, "regrets to state" that this appeal was not directed to himself. It was a strategy "aside" to the one within.

"We were going to run right back across the platform there," the little passenger continued, projecting a round chin towards the open door nearby and its sunlit vista of disappearing ties. It was the last end of the last car. "But when we looked out there wasn't any place to run to—only think!"

After thinking the man in blue suggested. "But there's plenty of vacant seats in this sleeper. You can take any one not occupied."

"'Deed we can't! Why, you should just see us—I mean we aren't fit to be seen! We haven't anything, that is, hardly anything—well, we aren't dressed, you understand. We left—everything—over there!"

"Over where?"

"Why, I don't know myself; it isn't anywhere that I can see."

"Well, ladies!" resumed the conductor seriously. "Would you mind starting over again and tell me where you came from!"

The giggling halted also, and the answer was almost plaintive: "Certainly, we came from Minneapolis."

"But this morning, I mean."

"O, yes, this morning; why, we started from our sleeper, and all our clothes are in there, and our suit cases and our box of flowers and our umbrella and our books and—Oh, everything, simply everything, except—well, it doesn't matter what. We've got ourselves here, mostly. And we simply must go back!"

The same idea impressed the conductor, who, with an eye on the landscape, reflected that his train had traveled six miles since the prisoner began to explain.

"But ladies"—in his most official accents—"This is the 'flyer,' you see. We are making specially fast time through to Des Moines. And your sleeper, the Omaha sleeper, was cut off at Fort Dodge up the road. If you'd only gone to your own dressing room!"

"Yes, if we only had, but it was full. But—surely—"The face grew red and wrinkled, the gray eyes winked tears. "You aren't going to—keep—us—away—from—our—clothes?"

Then the conductor's mental vision flashed the company rule—"Notwithstanding the above rules all trainmen will use their best judgment in important emergencies.'

He pulled the bell cord, signalled "back up," and went forward to inform the engineer. The train hurried backwards to Fort Dodge, and the sidetracked sleeper, and the Misses Luella Cotter and Olive Arthur, of Minneapolis tripped across the platform like shimmering fairies, to a sweet reunion with their "things."

YOUNG WOMEN STRIKE.

New York, July 30.—Nearly 2000 young women who compose the Wrapper Makers' union are on strike for a nine-hour day. A crowd of the strikers invaded one shop which the women had refused to quit. They overturned sewing machines and scattered partly finished garments around the floor. Police reserves had to be called to quell the disturbance and several strikers were arrested.

PORTRAIT DECEIVED HER

And Marquette Girl Refused to Be Married.

St. Joseph, Mich., July 30.—Plans of Cupid and a matrimonial journal have gone astray. Because Henry Belknap was not the Adonis mirrored in the photograph sent her, Miss Baldwin refused to be led to the altar. In the meantime the get-you-a-husband-or-a-wife paper is said to be doing business with the same alluring prototype.

If there had not been a hitch in the program Henry A. Belknap, of Elmyra, N. Y., and Miss Edessa Baldwin, of Marquette, Mich., would have been man and wife. Edessa occasioned the hitch when she refused to have anything to do with the man who said he was Henry.

"Why, you are not my Henry," said the young woman from Marquette, when Belknap met her yesterday, according to an agreement made through the "get-married-quick" agency.

"No, but I will be as soon as the parson says the word," was Henry's reply.

"But this picture shows a better-looking man," said the supposed bride-elect, as she produced the photograph of the man she wished to wed.

Henry failed to fill the bill, and Edessa refused point blank to become a wife.

PLANS COMPLETED

For Naval Maneuvers Off New England Coast.

Washington, July 29.—An elaborate program for the maneuvers of the combined North Atlantic fleet off the coast of New England and Long Island sound during the month of August has been prepared at the navy department. From the 3rd to 10th of August the search problem will be developed between Eastport and Cape Ann. This will include an effort on the part of a presumably hostile squadron to enter an anchorage around in the face of the defending fleet.

Following this there will be a cessation of two days, during which the combined fleet will proceed to Long Island sound and anchor abreast of Oyster Bay on the night of Saturday, Aug. 15. They will remain there during Sunday and on Monday they will be reviewed and inspected by resident Roosevelt. From about the 22d to the 29th of August there will be joint demonstrations by the combined fleet against the batteries of Portland, Me. These will continue day and night. When the summer maneuvers are concluded the ships will go south and begin a season of target practice. More than thirty vessels are expected to participate in the maneuvers.

England to Try Again.

During the summer it will be found very beneficial as a tonic, also to keep the bowels regular, without which you cannot enjoy good health. Be sure to give it a trial. It will restore the appetite, purify the blood, promote sound sleep and positively cure flatulency, nausea, headache, sour stomach, dyspepsia, indigestion and liver troubles. FOUND BROTHER DEAD.

John Miller Discovers Sad News In Duluth.

John Miller, who came to Duluth several days ago in search of his brother, George Miller, who formerly worked in a camp near Hibbing, discovered from the coroner's records yesterday that the latter died of pneumonia on the southbound train over the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road, April 23 last. The coroner's note gave a description that answered exactly to John Miller's brother, and the mystery of his disappearance is at last cleared up.

George Miller was placed on the train at Hibbing to be sent to St. Mary's Hospital in this city. He had a little money that his fellow-employes had contributed, but his condition was so serious that death came suddenly before the trair reached Duluth.

THE BROWN MYSTERY

Pittsburg's Former Recorder and His Sudden and Strange Death.

Bulk of His Estate Was Deeded to His Stenographer.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 30.—Special inquiry will be made at the next session of the J. O. Brown inquest tomorrow regarding the disposal made of the former recorder's property, and whether it had any bearing upon his death.

Brown's reconciliation with his wife and that the bulk of his property had been little then left for her to receive.

his former stenographer, at whose home he died, are also to be made matters of investigation.

Recorder Brown, in his last will, gave his property to his wife, but there was formerly in the employ of the McLean

In connection with the property a missing witness is being searched for in Ireland. This is a servant girl who was attempt made by Nattie W. McLean to family, but who left here for Ireland about six months ago. It is said that before she left Pittsburg she talked to some of her friends, saying that she was going back to Ireland with enough money to keep her the rest of her days. She certainly took with her dresses that no girl in her position could afford to have. Her admissions are said to relate to an attempt made by atNtie W. McLean to have J. O. Brown deed all his property over to her.

In her cross-examination before the coroner, Miss Nattie W. McLean said that she had known Mr. Brown for eighteen years and was formerly his stenographer, that while she was his stenographer she received a salary all told of perhaps $100 a year. She said she had property in her possession that formerly belonged to Mr. Brown. She did not know how much it was worth without consulting her books. That, she said, was her private affair and intimated that it was no one's business what it was worth or how she got it. She said she knew of Mr. Brown's relations with his wife, and that he had talked to her a week before he died of his wife, but she refused to say what the conversation was, saying that her lawyer had told her not to testify to any conversations she had had with J. O. Brown.

Col. T. C. Campbell, the famous criminal lawyer retained by J. R. P. Brown, the dead recorder's brother, and Coroner Jesse M. McGeary, Brown's nephew, declares that the examination has cleared away the suicide theory and that it has established the fact that death was due to poison. How that poison was administered or what it was is yet to be developed.

Four of the doses of strychnine that were given to Mr. Brown in the last two days of his life were administered by Miss Susan S. McLean, a sister of Miss Nattie McLean, by order of Dr. W. H. McKelvy. She said she had no training in the giving of medicine or watching for its effects.

J. R. P. Brown believes that some one was criminally negligent in the matter, if nothing more. He says his brother was left all Friday afternoon, March 13, two days before his death, and Friday night without medical attention, suffering, presumably, from the effects of a drug, and no effort was made by any one to counteract its effect or to restore him. All that was done was to take all medicines and the recorder out of his room. No trained nurse was provided for him and none of the usual remedies and precautions used that should have been used in cases of that kind.

In Dr. McKelvy's examination it was brought out that Mr. Brown in his weakened condition had been given in twenty-seven hours nearly one-sixth of a grain of strychnine, which, if the strychnine acted cumulatively, as the authorities often say it does, would have caused death. It was developed that as low as one-twentieth of a grain of strychnine has produced death.

Dr. McKelvy said he had never known any one to commit suicide by taking either trional or sulphonal, and that it would take at least fifty grains to cause death and perhaps more if the patient was used to the drug. On Sunday, he said, Mr. Brown had none of the appearance of a man suffering from the effects of a hypnotic, such as sulphonal, and but very little of that appearance on Saturday when the strychnine was first given him.

Dr. McKelvy said he knew of no reason why Mr. Brown should commit suicide, and had never heard him express a desire to die. He had just effected a reconciliation with his wife, and had on Sunday morning talked very cheerfully of his plans for his trip South, where he expected to regain his health. The doctor said that Mr. Brown's first plan was to leave the McLean house on Sunday evening for the residence of his wife, but that he had changed his mind and concluded not to go until Monday morning.

At the time of his death Mr. Brown had just resigned his position as recorder of the city, and had effected a reconciliation with his second wife, Mrs. Ella Martin Brown, from whom he had been estranged since shortly after their marriage, several years before. He had returned from a trip to New York and Philadelphia on the Friday previous to his death, and had arranged to leave for Washington city and the South on Monday evening or Tuesday morning following.

Mr. Brown had been in poor health for six months before his death, and his friends could see that he was growing weaker and thinner every day, and they thought that political worries were preying on his health. He had often been urged to resign his position and retire from active life.

Mr. Brown arrived home from the East on Thursday morning, March 12, according to the testimony of his wife, and spent Thursday and Thursday night with her at her home on Evaline street. He left her house on Friday morning for the residence of the Misses McLean, on McKee place, where he had been making his home for several years, and arrived there about 8 o'clock Friday morning, according to Miss Nattie McLean's testimony at the coroner's inquest, although that is the hour when, his wife says, he left her house in the eastern part of the city.

Miss McLean says Mr. Brown was so nervous that he could not hold a cup of coffee to his lips, and that she had to hold to it his mouth so that he could drink it. After his breakfast he went to his office in the city hall and remained there until 11 o'clock, when his wife says she met him there and they went out and had lunch at one of the clubs of the city. Miss McLean says he returned to her house about 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, and after having lunch went to his room, with instructions to call him at 4 o'clock, as he had to be at his office to sign some papers.

When 4 o'clock came Miss McLean was unable to rouse him from his sleep. He would wake up enough to answer questions and would move himself in the bed when told to, but would not rouse himself sufficiently to get up. He had the appearance of a man under the influence of a drug. She says she telephoned to his private secretary, Walter R. Black, a nephew, and told him of Mr. Brown's condition and asked that a physician be sent out to the house. No physician came, but after 10 o'clock that night Dr. McKelvey, who had treated Mr. Brown on numerous occasions, telephoned to the house and asked after his condition. Mr. Brown at that time was still in the state of coma that he had been in during the afternoon. His condition was described to the doctor, and he said he could do nothing, but that all medicines and his revolver should be removed from the room and that he should not be left alone during the night.

According to the testimony of Miss Susan S. McLean, Dr. McKelvy paid a visit to the house Saturday morning and found Mr. Brown in fairly good health. He prescribed strychnine for him in doses of one-sixtieth of a grain each, given every three hours, and two teaspoonfuls of brandy every two hours. Four doses of strychnine were given him Saturday afternoon and night. He slept from 11 o'clock until 6 o'clock Sunday morning, with the exception of a few moments about 4 o'clock Sunday morning. When he awoke Sunday morning he was bright and cheerful and appeared better than he had been for some time. Dr. McKelvy called Sunday morning at 10 o'clock and found Mr. Brown sitting in a chair talking cheerfully about his proposed trip to the South. The doctor gave him a dose of strychnine, and at 1:45 Miss Susan McLean gave him another dose of the drug. At 2:15 o'clock Mr. Brown was in a state of collapse, and about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon he died. Just before the collapse, Miss Nattie McLean says, Mr. Brown had been in the bathroom.

Miss Susan McLean, in her testimony before the coroner, said that on Saturday Mr. Brown got out of bed and got possession of a box which she afterward succeeded in getting away from him. The box, it was found, contained cyanide of potash put up in capsules of six grains each. He had taken none of the capsules. When this was reported to Dr. McKelvy he again gave instructions about not leaving him alone.

There was some suspicion that death was not due to natural causes, but a certificate was made out giving heart failure as the cause.

James Ross Porter Brown came on from the West and began an investigation. He had the body exhumed and the vital organs examined by Professor H. S. Sickles, of Philadelphia. The examination disclosed antimony, corrosive sublimate, arsenic and sulphonal in the stomach, but no morphine, cyanide of potash or strychnine. The poisons, except the sulphonal and antimony, it was said, may have been contained in the embalming fluid that was used.

At the first sessions of the inquest the testimony tended to show that Mr. Brown had committed suicide and that sulphonal had been the agent used. It was testified by Dr. McKelvy that Mr. Brown had been in the habit of taking either trional or sulphonal—the drugs are very similar—for some time to produce sleep. The physician said that he had warned Mr. Brown against the drug, as it would have a bad effect on his heart. It was testified that Mr. Brown on Tuesday had purchased about 180 grains of trional at a drug store in this city, and, while the empty box was found, there was no trace of any of the powder. Dr. McKelvy was of the opinion that he had taken all the trional he had purchased, and that, being cumulative in its action, it had caused his death.

VANCOUVER HAS HOPES.

Would Be Headquarters of North Pacific Squadron.

Vancouver, B. C., July 30.—The news that the naval station at Esquimalt, Victoria, is to be reduced in grade from an admiral to a commodore is station causes hope here that Vancouver will be made the headquarters of the British North Pacific squadron. There has long been a naval reserve up Burrow Inlet, just above the city. It is asserted that the North Pacific squadron ought to be stationed here, rather than in Victoria, in order to defend Canada's great Pacific port and trans-Atlantic railroad terminal.

The Canadian Pacific railway is striving to prevent the Great Northern from having direct access to its land on the water front here. It is expected, however, that by the joint aid of the Dominion and the city authorities all necessary facilities will be secured for the greatly needed competing transcontinental railroad.

Up to the present the salmon run of the district, which includes the Fraser river fishery, has been miserably small. The canneries have in all put up only about 2000 cases instead of at least twenty or thirty times that number, and the Japanese and Indians, who now do most of the fishing, have failed, up to now, to earn wages.

CLEMENTS BROKEN DOWN.

St. Paul, July 30.—E. E. Clements, the conductor of the Chicago Great Western freight train, who was missed after the accident last Monday at Vlasaty, Minn., is being taken care of on a farm about five miles from the scene of the disaster. The shock which he sustained at the time of the wreck quite disordered his nervous system, and he is both mentally and physically broken down.

$22.00 Pittsburg and Return.

Aug. 1, 2 and 3, the Northern Pacific railway will sell tickets to Pittsburg and return for $22. Good until Aug. 10, with privilege of extension to Aug. 31, by depositing ticket and payment of 50 cents. For tickets and full information call at city ticket office, 332 West Superior street or Union depot.

QUAY WILL PERSIST

In Effort For Statehood For Arizona and New Mexico.

"Bull" Andrews Expects to Reach the United States Senate.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 30.—Former Pennsylvania State Senator and present New Mexico Territory Senator William H. Andrews, familiarly known as "The Bull" in legislative and political circles in Pennsylvania, departed last Friday for his new grazing field, New Mexico, accompanied by Frank J. Torrance, who is interested with him in a New Mexican railroad scheme. They are also booming several mining projects, which bid fair to place Andrews on a level with the other millionaires of the United States senate—when he "get's there."

"Will I get there?" said Andrews, conversing with a friend previous to his departure, "will I get to the United States senate? Say, son, you go off and put a large wad of yellow-backs on my going to the United States senate."

"Will another effort be made to secure statehood for Arizona and New Mexico at the next session of congress?" he was asked.

"Possibly not at an extra session, but surely at the regular session," and Mr. Andrews smiled as if everything were settled and he had been sworn in.

"And," he added, "it is going to win this time. Senator Quay will again have charge of it, and the best evidence that he intends to win is the fact that he had the measure endorsed by the last Republican convention in this state, and that endorsement is part of the platform. Quay will never let up, and he will have a lot of good ones to aid him."

The suggestion was made that possibly Arizona might elect Democratic United States senators, and Andrews shrugged his shoulders and remarked:

"Nobody don't need to worry over that. Arizona is to be hitched to New Mexico, and that insures two Republican United States senators.

"The Republican vote in New Mexico largely offsets the Democratic vote in Arizona, and when the two are combined into a state the Republicans will have a good majority. Why, down in Mexico, out of thirty-six members of the legislature—twelve senators and twenty-four members of the house—there are only two Democrats, and they are in the house, and must get lonesome at times.

"All of the Mexicans are Republicans, and they vote the straight Republican ticket. A Democratic candidate for the legislature in an adjoining county was telling me of his listening to the counting of the ballots in his town on the evening of election day. He sat near the judge of election for a long time, and saw the judge open a hundred ballots and call out 'Republican straight' until it made him tired, and he quit. He got two votes out of several hundred. That is how New Mexico is Republican.

"And the Mormons down there are all Republicans, too. I don't say that all of the counties are Republican. Some of them are settled by people from Arkansas and Texas, and they are Democratic—couldn't well be otherwise."

"What is an impression up North that the wild and woolly character of the natives is hurting the Southwest and keeping people from settling there. What are your impressions?"

"Such an impression prevails in the North," said Andrews, very impressively, "then it is all wrong. The people down there are as law-abiding a class of citizens as you will find right here in the best wards in Pittsburg. I have traveled hundreds and hundreds of miles by day and night, slept in the open many a time and have yet to be molested or interfered with in the least. The entire seven years of my sojourn there have been pleasant, and I never saw but one man shot, and he deserved it, for he started the row."

"Do you expect to spend the coming winter in Washington?"

"Certainly, and the following winter I will spend there as a United States senator, and please don't let that slip your memory," and "The Bull" said farewell.

GOOD PROFIT FOR HERMAN

In Distributing Money Order Blanks to the Postmasters.

Washington, July 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—If Paul Herman, of Rutherford, New Jersey, succeeds in satisfying the postoffice department that he can be entrusted with the difficult task of supplying the department with money order blanks, Acting Postmaster General Wynne has determined to allow him 3½ cents per book for shipping the books direct to the postmasters. As there will be 1,140,000 of these books the allowance will amount to $39,900, or about $10,000 a year. Although it is well understood that a large profit is made in this distribution, as the cost of shipping the books will probably not amount to more than $4000 or $5000 a year at the very outside, Mr. Wynne is unable to make other arrangements at present, as there is no room at the department for storing and distributing the books and no appropriation available for the necessary clerical work. He might let out the work by contract at a much lower figure if the law made any provision for such a contract, and this defect will be looked into by the house postoffice committee next winter and will likely be remedied.

Unfortunately for the department there was no competition in this bid as the specific allowance of 3½ cents a book was offered in the specifications should the department decide to have the contractors make the distribution. Had there been competition it is probable the department could have the work done for 2 or 2½ cents a book, but Mr. Wynne found himself handicapped by the fact that the allowance is specified, and by the lack of an appropriation and facilities for doing the work at the department. This is a matter, however, which can be easily readjusted by a paragraph in the postoffice appropriation bill giving the department the right to have the distribution done by contract after competitive bidding, and as the department will reserve the right to change the method of distributing these books at any time, it is probable that proper action toward this end will be taken at the coming session of congress and the present defective law modified so that a saving of $10,000 to $20,000 may be effected in this one item.

PAN-AMERICAN RAILWAY

Project Is Received With Interest Throughout Chili.

New York, July 30.—Interest is being shown throughout Chili, according to South American papers received here, in the Pan-American railway project and in the mission of Charles M. Pepper, who has been sent as commissioner to South America by President Roosevelt to secure the co-operation of those governments for the completion of the line.

Senor Augustomatte, who was a colleague of Commissioner Pepper at the Pan-American congress in Mexico, is quoted in El Mercurio as follows: "The undertaking is a gigantic one, but perfectly practicable, and great benefits will be derived by Chili from the close touch which the interior of the country will have with the rich territory of the North. It will mean a boom to the development of our country and will benefit our political and industrial life in general."

TO PUNISH LEADERS.

Danville, Ill., July 30.—Eleven persons ewere arrested yesterday on a charge of participating in the lawless outbreak of Saturday night, when the jail was attacked in an effor to lynch James Wilson, a negro, who, it is alleged, assaulted Mrs. Burgess, of Alvin. The grand jury has been ordered to reconvene on Monday to indict the leaders of the mob. Of those arrested only one gave bond. A guard has been placed around the hospital where five men, who were members of the mo... are receiving treatment for their wounds.

CAR JUMPED TRACK.

Anderson, Ind., July 30.—A derailment on the Union Traction company's line, in the suburbs of Anderson, last night, killed Walter McGowan and severely injured seventeen other passengers. The car was going at full speed when it struck a sharp curve. The brakes failed to work and the car shot from the track and turned over. Mrs. J. F. Carr, of Cleveland, O., was crushed and internally injured. She may die. The other injured persons will recover.

DOWIE WANTS TWO MILLIONS

Has Appealed to His Followers For the Cash.

Chicago, July 30.—Notwithstanding the panic in Wall street and other evidence of financial distress in the profane world, Zion City and its industries are experiencing a season of unparalleled prosperity. So prosperous are they, in fact, that John Alexander finds himself in urgent need of $2,000,000. For this he is now making a frantic appeal to his followers.

This plea was made at the recent meeting of the shareholders in the Zion industries. Someone is said to have suggested that Dowie take the trifle of which he is in need out of the enormous profits, but this plan did not meet with approval. On the motion of Dowie, the suggestion was stricken off the minutes.

Dowie doesn't want the money of the profane world. He appeals to his followers for the cash and promises great returns.

A stroke of financial genius on Dowie's part will avoid, so he explains, the difficulties which beset traders on the stock market. The shares, he says, will be issued at $100 a share and sell at par, no more and no less. If no one will sell for less than par, then, of course, the market value of the shares cannot fall.

In speaking of the recent meetings, Dowie, in the Zion Banner, says:

"Briefly put, the gist of the second meeting was the imperative need of an increased capital in the development of Zion's industries and institutions, because the unparalleled prosperity of these has caused them to literally burst their bounds and larger facilities and accommodations must be provided for them.

"To meet this condition, $2,000,000 worth of stock is offered to Zion people at par. This offer is strictly limited to Zion's own people. Not a dollar has ever been borrowed from the world for Zion, and never will be. Zion does not go begging where she should rule."

A few split infinitives and double negatives make no difference to Dowie. He needs the money and he makes his needs plain, despite his little difficulties with the English language.

MUST HAVE COOLIES.

Labor Problem In South Africa Is Serious.

London, July 30.—The parliamentary correspondence on the South African labor question was issued yesterday.

Lord Milner, high commissioner for South Africa, telegraphed Colonial Secretary Chamberlain on May 21, 1903, urging the employment of 10,000 India coolies for work on the railways, the coolies to be forcibly repatriated at the end of the service. Lord Milner represented the labor problem to be alarming in South Africa. He reported that there was not enough natives there, if all worked, to meet the growing requirements for the development of the country's resources, and that such a dilemma must eventually land the country in financial embarrassment.

Chamberlain replied on May 23, generally approving of Lord Milner's suggestion, but stipulating for the assent of the whole white population in South Africa, and explaining that it could only be done with the consent of the Indian government, which insisted on terms practically amounting to the removal of all restrictions on immigration and the settlement of Indian traders in South Africa.

According to Mr. Chamberlain's statement in the house of commons last Monday, when he declares as long as public sentiment was hostile to the proposition he would not consent to it, but that he believed opinion was changing, the question is still unsettled, probably owing to the reluctance of the South African people to remove the restrictions on Indian immigration.

BLOODHOUNDS

As Criminal Chasers Are Not Always Infallible.

Lincoln, Neb., July 30.—The Nebraska supreme court must decide at the next session whether the bloodhound of commerce can track criminals, or whether the tracing of wrongdoers by dogs is nothing more than a fiction invented by mercenary detectives.

The attorneys for George W. Brott, sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary for alleged burglary, have based their plea for liberty in the incompetency of bloodhounds. The case comes from Nemaha county, where a series of burglaries was committed in one night. Three houses were entered and about $20 taken. Bloodhounds came from Beatrice on the following morning and were placed upon the trail, from each of the houses entered by the thief, and in each instance went to the residence of Brott, ran to his bed room, sniffed the bed and finally went to the place where the defendant was standing, and sniffed and barked. On this evidence and this alone Brott was convicted.

The attorneys for the defense declare that bloodhounds are not competent witnesses because they cannot be cross-examined. Their actions furnish a basis of inference only, and the conclusion is apt to be wholly erroneous.

After arguing the technical points along this line the attorneys make a bold attack upon the reliability of bloodhounds and pronounce the custom of tracking criminals by means of dogs a remnant of ancient superstition.

"The bloodhound of mythology has more sagacity than all the detectives of the world done into one," declares the lawyers. "The bloodhound of commerce is only a dog with a keen scent entirely incapable of performing miracles or conducting an inquiry with even ordinary intelligence. Yet there are people who are willing to regard their own inference from the hound's behavior as sufficient to exclude all reasonable doubt and serve as a basis of summary and irregular execution of the person suspected.

"The trouble about the bloodhound as a witness is that he cannot be sworn. His testimony, therefore, is not to be received in court. As he is not a competent witness it is also not competent to prove by other witnesses the nature of the information he furnishes or is supposed to furnish."

HARD COAL SUPPLY

In the State of Colorado Said to Be Wonderful.

It Is the Great Industrial Proposition In the West.

Lay, Col., July 30.—The great coal fields of Routt county, Col., are now being heralded to the world. The few who have passed over the territory and scratched with pigmy picks the black out-crop have been astonished and bewildered at the multitude of veins and their uniformly large size. At Lay the western out-crop shows between thirty and forty veins, of which twenty-five to thirty are over three feet thick, while a majority will average six feet or over. In fact, the lower seven veins measure sixty-three feet—an average of nine feet to the vein. The lower two veins are four feet or over, then comes a twelve-foot vein of peacock coal, with a vein of kaolin one to three feet thick as a roof. This kaolin, a china clay, is said to be a very pure specimen and worth $15 per ton. Next above this vein 100 feet comes a nine-foot peacock vein of extremely hard coal, which will almost equal anthracite for hardness and carrying quality. Both this and the kaolin are the most beautifully marked with colors, being too pretty to destroy by fire. Next above 100 feet comes a four-foot vein not developed, then a twenty-foot vein of fine coal, divided in the center by a foot of shale or slate. This vein has some peacock and is like the nine and twelve-foot veins below, a good blacksmith coal. These three veins, which have openings of 30 to 175 feet each, are nearly smokeless, slow, long burning and intensely hot coals. They are slightly coking on the surface and will probably develop into coking coals. The veins above these have not been developed to any extent, so their qualities are not known. The vein next to the very top of the belt is twelve feet thick. The veins are inclined a little south of east and at an angle of about 15 degrees, and run southward about three miles, where the formation turns as on a pivot to the southeastward until Bear river, three miles further, is reached, thence continuing in the same direction for eight townships.

Bear river winds through the hills of the coal formation for several townships in a most tortuous canyon. All through this canyon and its tributary sides gulches the coal crop plainly, and in many places firm, solid coal being had upon the surface. Here the formation is like the leaves of a book, "that he who runs may read." Towards the upper end of this canyon the coal formation begins to split up and spread out and so continues to the eastward, whence the so-called three belts in the eastern end of the county. Probably there is no such mass of large veins of such excellent quality compacted into such small space as from Lay southeastward for twelve miles known anywhere in the world. From hasty examinations (which did not fully explore or expose all the veins) there is 200 feet of coal in this stretch of territory. Optimists say 250—pessimists say 150—so that about 200 will probably be developed.

Along the river some of the veins have been burned, which heat in places has formed anthracite coal. Four veins of this have been discovered—a 9-foot vein, a 5-foot, a 4-foot and a 3-foot, making 21 feet of this valuable product. This coal has been tested and is said to be equal to the Pennsylvania product. Also in this territory coals are formed with coking tests.

With the advent of the Moffat railroad, which passes through this section, a great industry will spring up. Greater than any coal camp in the state, as the coal is so available, and its quality will at once push it to the front. Its smokeless quality alone will cause great demand for it, and it will replace much anthracite for furnace use on account of its intense heat and slow burning. Its hardness will enable it to carry "around the world," as an expert coal miner says. The immense veins and the exposure of veins everywhere gives chance for great output and numerous workings with little or no cost.

Taken altogether, this is the greatest industrial proposition in the West. That a vast fortune will be made here is beyond dispute. All elements of uncertainty or chance which often surround propositions are eliminated. Those who see the many million tons can hardly realize or grasp the immensity of it.

Great is Routt county, and greater will it be when the steel rails connect it with the millions of people both eastward and westward. A new rival to the Pennsylvania field is born, and it is only a question of a few years when Routt county will be as well known as Pennsylvania.

To the Editor of The Herald:

With your kind permission, I regret to report that Duluth has had two "hold ups" during the last few days. One at Sixteenth avenue east and Superior street and the other at the court house. The assailants in the first case met the citizen with a revolver, and in the other the citizens were met with a threat of legal action. The first takes the cash out of the citizen's pocket. The second refuses to pay into the public purse (county treasurer's office) the city's just dues. The first hides from the law because of weakness; the second defies the law because of its strength. The first runs from the public officials. The other faces them and gives public notice of contest. The first can be caught, if found. The other is found but cannot be caught. The first cannot intimidate the ordinary officials. The other can intimidate (by political pull) the ordinary official who does his duty. A repetition of the first hold-up only intensifies the enormity of the crime, but a repetition of the second hold-up only strengthens the hands of the robbers, and creates a rule and precedent for future legal action in mitigation of the crime. The first having a personality can be imprisoned. The other having no personality cannot be corrected by imprisonment but may be fined, which it can put on the shoulders of the public by raising the price of its commodities, like the Art company at St. Paul.

Of course the putty men whose eyes are blinded by the golden spectacles of greed will ridicule the above thoughts as vagaries of a diseased mind, but, my friend, ridicule is the weapon of the man who cannot use reason.

Look by him at the record of Duluth and see the proof of the above statement: How the health, wealth and happiness of Duluth have increased since the private water monopoly of Duluth was poisoning, and robbing the city of the health and life of its best citizens for the sake of greed. Also look at the action of the Duluth Telephone company which through the courts took possession of a part of the city's streets and away from the city's control, after years of excessive charges and which money it used to still further club the city into obedience to its greed; and now today we are suffering (and have been suffering for years) from a company which made a formal contract to provide the city with an adequate street car service during the life of its contract, and which (to keep out a healthy competitor on First street) it supplemented with another promise to live up to its agreement, and yet it takes the city's nickels every minute of the day, but at the same time makes us a city of strap-holders by its hold-up proceedings. For I believe it receives more revenue from its unwilling strap-holders than from the seat-holders. And still in spite of the favors conferred on this public utility concern I have seen its representatives stand up in the council chamber when the Duluth-Superior bridge was being built, and club (yes, club) the city into agreeing to its tax (toll) collecting schemes, by threats of using the courts as a means to escape paying its share of the city taxes, by paying an interstate tax.

Now, Mr. Editor, in the light of the above facts which are part of this city's history, is the city highwayman, or the corporation tax-dodgers the city's worst enemy. We can use drastic measures on the first person which will squelch him, but the corporation tax-dodger is like the proverbial flea, "whom you put your finger on him, he is not there, but somewhere else." But while we are casting around for a remedy, I think it would be a good plan to keep an eye on the public officers who do their duty irrespective of consequences, and see that they are returned to power regardless of their political affiliations on the basis of our old K. of L. watchword: "Principle Above Party."

JACK PLANE.

Duluth, July 30.

CORBETT KNOCKS OUT O'NEILL.

Philadelphia, July 30.—Champion Young Corbett knocked out Jack O'Neill, of this city, in the fifth round last night at the National Athletic club. The first three and a half rounds were tame, O'Neill avoiding the champion's rushes. In the fourth round O'Neill hit Corbett three glancing blows on the jaw and was about to deliver a fourth one, when Corbett dropped to his knees to avoid it. This gave the local man confidence in the fifth round, which proved fatal for him. He met Corbett's rushes and, in an unguarded moment, received a terrific right hand punch on the jaw, which sent him to the floor and he was counted out.

THE CANINE CRAZE

Strikes London Stage, Every Actress Having a Pet Dog.

Americans Continue to Win Success In English Metropolis.

London, July 30.—Th dog craze has at length "struck" the stage and almost every actress in London has now a canine pet, ranging from a tiny pug to the stalwart St. Bernard.

Lovers of the British drama assuredly can have no cause to complain of lack of productions and revivals this season. Apart from the newly arranged new Mermaid society series, which started in the Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, a few days ago, with a beautiful revival of Milton's famous masque, "Comus," and is, at this very moment, being succeeded by some performances of the still less often acted idyll, "The Faithful Shepherdess," several highly dramatic works are to be produced.

Among the next "Mermaid" pastoral-play presentations in the Botanic Gardens are two highly representative old plays. One is the witty but, alas, woefully wicked William Congreve's comedy, "The Way of the World," which it is said will be given in an unexpurgated form. The other is Thomas Heywood's grand old play, "A Woman Killed With Kindness." This drama—which might almost be called "a tragedy of manners"—is certain to beguile all present of their tears, for it is undoubtedly one of the most searchingly pathetic plays ever written.

The next great event in the dramatic world will be the Elizabethian Stage society's daring revival of Kit Marlowe's tragedy, "Edward the Second," promised at Oxford the week after the August bank holiday. The third and most interesting of all forthcoming old play revivals is, of course, Beerbohm Tree's gorgeous presentation of "Richard the Second," at His Majesty's. This grand production will be given in September, with Mr. Tree as the bewildered but not too brainy monarch. Oscar Asche, as the proud but no too particular Bolingbrooke, Lionel Brough in the small but very important part of the unnamed gardener, and Miss Lily Brayton as the queen. It was in this character in Mr. Benson's interesting revival of "Richard the Second," at the Lyceum a few years ago, that Miss Brayton made her first "hit" in London.

Miss Billie Burke, who plays the part of Mamie Rockefeller in "The School Girl" at the Prince of Wales', has become famous by her song, "My Little Canoe," with its catchy chorus.

She is a "real" American girl from Washington, D. C. She came to England with her father four years ago, and here learned much that was necessary to know when the time came to join the profession to which she belonged.

She studied singing at Paris and last January twelve months at Ronacher's, Vienna, stood before an audience for the first time. Her father, who is Burke, of Burke & Andrus, now appearing at the Palace in a very amusing sketch, was her first manager, and she made a distinctly good beginning with her little turn as a singer of American coon songs.

She went from Vienna to Moscow and St. Petersburg, and then to London for an engagement at the Pavilion. Last Christmas she appeared in pantomime at the Grand theater, Glasgow, as Beauty in "The Sleeping Beauty," where the offer reached her to come under George Edwardes' engagement. As her ambition had been wholly centered on getting into musical comedy, the offer came as a very pleasant surprise.

Miss Pauline Chase, playing the part of an American girl in "The School Girl" at the Prince of Wales', is one of the real American girls who have found their way into a London theater. She is a native of Washington city, and three years ago at the Casino, New York, made her debut in "The Rounders"—an American version of a French play produced here as "Kitty Grey."

Afterwards she had a dancing part in "The Girl From Up There," and with that piece came to London for its production at the Duke of York's. Returning to America, Miss Chase went to the Madison Square theater for a musical comedy, called "The Liberty Belles," in which she made a big hit. An expert automobilist, she owns and drives her own car, and can boast of having driven the record-breaking motor of the American continent.

Miss Agnes Fawcett, a tall and attractive young lady in the chorus of "The School Girl," is making in that sucessful piece her first acquaintance with the stage. She is a Devonshire girl, but has lived most of her life in Australia.

Other new plays due for West End production in the more or less near future include Hugh Morton's new farcical comedy, "Glittering Gloria," which Frank Curzon will produce at Wyndham's theater, with that excellent comedian, James Welch, in the cast a.n English version of "Le Secret de Polichinelle," also to be produced by Mr. Curzon at one of his fast-increasing number of theaters; Martin Harvey's production (hapily before re-embarking for America) of a new seventeenth century drama, written by John Rutherford and entitled "The Breed of the Treshams;" Mr. Willard's first English production of Louis Napoleon Parker's play, "The Cardinal," at the St. James; Messrs. Seymour and Hicks and Ivan Caryll's two new fairy plays, "The Dog Trainer" and "The Cherry Girl," at the Adelphia and the Vaudeville respectively (on her return from Americo next year) of Paul Kester's romantic drama, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," at the Avenue.

This theater Frank Curzon will redecorate and reconstruct in due course, transforming the now comfortless gallery into a cosy upper circle and the plank-like pit seats into plush pit stalls.

Yet another society formed, by subscription, for the production of plays, old and modern. The name of the newcomer is the Masquers, or, to give its full style, the Society of Masquers. Its object is "to give performances of plays, masques, ballets and ceremonies, and to produce only those works which convey a sentiment of beauty."

Among those on the managing committee are Walter Crane, W. B. Yeates, Arthur Symons, Miss Edith Craig and Miss Pamela Colman Smith; and among the works to be produced are Marlowe's "Faustus," Ford's "The Broken Heart," a translation of Sophocles' "Oedipus Tyrannus," Purcell's Masque of Love," Maeterlinck's "Les Aveugles" and Ibsen's "Peer Gynt."

Mrs. Patrick Campbell did well to replace "The Joy of Living," by Pinero's greatest play, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," for, apart from the absorbing interest of the drama, the part of Paula Tanqueray is one in which Mrs. Campbell is at her best.

Her splendid performance on Saturday proved this once more—it was just as strongly realistic, as tense, poignant and emotionally great as ever, and withal there was something, a deeper subtlety and power, a strange indefinable fascination greater than ever. By comparison with one's memories of Mrs. Campbell's first performance as Paula, wonderful as that was, her portrayal now of the complex and fascinating character seems fuller, more mature.

REFORMERS TERRORIZED

Old Policy of Repression Crops Out In China.

Pekin, July 30.—The Chinese who have been advocating government reforms have been terrorized by the re-adoption of the old policy of repression, as evidenced by the recent arrest of Shanghai editors on charges of sedition.

These arrests are interpreted as indicating that the extreme conservatives are in the ascendancy, and that the government has determined to suppress the freedom of speech which has prevailed since the upheaval of 1900.

The names of forty residents of Pekin who are accused of liberal tendencies were presented to the dowager empress yesterday by the reactionary officers, and were recommended for severe punishment.

This is said also to be true of the native journalists imprisoned at Shanghai, two of whom suggested the assissination of the Manchu ruler as a remedy for China's troubles. All foreigners and progressive Chinese are deeply interested in the decision which the ministers will make on the question of turning over the native editors arrested at Shanghai to Chinese jurisdiction, and they express the hope that technicalities concerning the jurisdiction of the mixed court will be ignored if necessary, and the ministers will refuse, on the ground of humanity, to deliver prisoners to the Chinese for probable torture and execution, as happened in the case of the Chinese spies who were turned over to the Chinese officers at Shanghai during the Japanese war.

Chang Chi Tung, viceroy of Nankin, is credited with the leadership of the reactionary policy, advising such a course to the empress dowager, who willing acquiesced. Prince Ching is reported to favor leniency.

At the meetings recently held at Pekin for the selection of officers, many of the candidates departed from the custom of presenting essays and submitting papers suggesting improvement in the government.

All who pursued this course were refused commissions. The dowager empress is said to blame the reformers and the increasing freedom of speech for the disorders in the South, hence the repressive measures.

Chang Chi Tung has been held to be one of the progressive viceroys. He was appointed on the joint ministry of education, and was recently ordered to revise the constitution of the Pekin university and to form a plain system for the provincial universities. In the latter part of May he was given an audience by the dowager empress after the report of a conspiracy to prevent him from coming to Pekin.

DRIVEN OUT OF TOWN.

Summary Action of Idaho Springs, Col., Citizens.

Idaho Springs, Col., July 30.—After a meeting of business men last night, 500 men of Idaho Springs went to the city jail and took fourteen men, who had been arrested in connection with the blowing up of the Sun and Moon mine building Tuesday night, marched them to the city limits and told them never to return.

The men driven out include Howard Trestddel, president of the local Miners' union; A. D. Alcott, vice president; George Becker, secretary; Peter Bender, treasurer, and two or three members of the executive committee. All the others are prominent members of the union. Some of the men complained that they had no money, and a purse was made up for them. Everything was done in an orderly manner, and not a rough word or act was indulged in toward the men. At the meeting at which the action was determined upon, it is said, fully 80 per cent of the city's business was represented. It was presided over by F. D. Collom, city attorney, and addressed by President Hauchett of the First National bank and others equally prominent.

The other prisoners were taken to Georgetown, the county seat, last evening.

GROUND INTO PIECES.

Horrible Fate of Millman at Crookston, Minn.

Crookston, Minn., July 30.—While Oscar Erickson and Henry Schurmer, both of this city, were at work installing new water wheels at the Crookston waterworks and power house yesterday, the planking upon which they stood gave way and Erickson was caught in the cogs of one of the wheels and ground to pieces. In his efforts to rescue the doomed man Schurmer was also caught, and but for the cool-headed action of Manager Peterson, who was standing near, he would have fallen into the fatal cogs. As it was, he received serious internal injuries and his leg was broken in several places.

BOSTON, June 25, 1903.

The "Force" Food Company, Buffalo, N. Y.:

GENTLEMEN—A rumor having reached me that your product, "FORCE," contained injurious ingredients, I took the occasion to analyze it, in the interest of my own family and of some friends who are liberal users of it.

It may interest you to know that I found it consisted exclusively of Whole Wheat, Barley and Salt, and is absolutely free from any injurious elements whatever.

Permit me to express my sincere regret that such a serious and baseless rumor should gain footing with the public.

You are free to use this letter in any way that will help to do your product justice.

Yours truly,
WILBUR L. SCOVILLE.

Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

BOSTON, June 30, 1903.

To Whom It May Concern:

At the invitation of The "FORCE" Food Company, of Buffalo, I have visited their Mills and made a careful examination of the materials from which "FORCE" is prepared, and the processes which convert it into its finished condition.

I found that "FORCE" consists exclusively of what my previous analysis indicated, viz.: Whole Wheat and Barley, with a flavoring of Table Salt, flaked, cooked and sterilized by 300 degrees of heat.

A feature of the manufacture which impressed me considerably was the fact that the process is entirely mechanical, the food being prepared, cooked and boxed by machinery, without ever coming in contact with the hands or clothing of the mill operatives.

I was also gratified to note that an experienced Chemist daily supervised the entire output, and that each day's manufacture was also tested by an expert cook.

The "Force" Food Company, Buffalo, N. Y.:

GENTLEMEN—In view of the rumors regarding the alleged adulteration of "FORCE," it has been a satisfaction to me to visit your Mills, investigate, and analyze your product.

You are free to publish this statement made over my signature, that I found "FORCE" to be absolutely pure, consisting solely of Whole Wheat and Barley, flavored with table Salt, and free from any injurious substance whatever.

I examined, in detail, the various steps in the manufacture of your product, such as the steam cooking, the flaking and the roasting, as well as the packing, and find all to be remarkably clean and of absolute healthfulness. The final roasting is done at a temperature above 300° F., which, with the steam cooking, completely sterilizes the product, and the entire process, from the first step to the final sealing of the package, is a mechanical one, the product at no time coming in contact with the hands or clothing of the persons handling the machines or packages.

Very respectfully,
HERBERT M. HILL,
Chemist to the City of Buffalo.

See page 148 of "Cereal Breakfast Foods," Bulletin No. 84, of the Maine Experiment Station, a State Institution, which has analyzed "FORCE" with other foods, in the public interests.

Copy will be mailed free on request.

Refer also to Canadian Government Bulletin 84 on similar subject, pages 6 and 29, for analysis showing that "FORCE" consists solely of the most wholesome and nutritious ingredients.

WHEAT IS HIGHER

Market Makes Advance But Fails to Hold High Point.

Export Business Continues Good—Flax Advances and Then Recedes.

Duluth Board of Trade, July 30.—Wheat made a small advance today and throughout the day was above the level of yesterday, but the advances were not well maintained and the market slipped back. The opening was at a strong advance due to the bullish Liverpool and French markets. Profit-taking brought a reaction, but it again advanced on the large export business. The cash demand is the strong feature of the market. New York shortly before the close reported 40 loads worked for export and more working. Primary receipts continue small, running less than half of last year's, but on the other hand clearances are light.

The Duluth September gained ¼c, Minneapolis ½c, Chicago ¼-⅜c, and New York ½c. St. Louis was ⅛-¼c lower and Kansas City unchanged.

The Liverpool market closed ⅞ told higher, Paris ¼ to 2¾c higher, Antwerp ⅝c higher.

Primary receipts of wheat were 521,000 bus, last year 1,148,000 bus. Shipments 347,000 bus, last year 557,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 180,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 133 cars, and at Chicago, 58, a total of 191 cars, against 213 last week and 501 last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¾d higher. September corn in the Chicago market closed unchanged. September oats closed ⅛-¼c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 223,000 bus, last year 211,000 bus. Shipments 132,000 bus, last year 120,000 bus. Clearances were 49,086 bus.

The Duluth market was active. September opened ½c up at 80c fell back to 79¾c at 10:30, advanced to 80¼c at 11:45 and then fell off again closing at 79¾c. This was ¼c up. December also closed ¼c up at 77¾c.

Cash business was dead. Prices continued the same as yesterday, 81¼c over September for No. 1 northern in store, and 5c over for to arrive.

Flax was higher in the early part of the day, September selling ⅜c up to 88¼c but it fell off later and closed unchanged at 97¼c. October and November were ⅜c higher.

There was a decline of ½c in oats to arrive.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat in store No. 1 hard 87¾c; No. 1 northern 87¼c. No. 2 northern 85¼c; to arrive No. 1 hard 85¼c; No. 1 northern 84¾c; No. 2 northern 83¾c. July 87¼c; September 79¾c; December 77¾c. Flax in store 97c; to arrive 97c; on track 97c; July 97c; September 97½c; October 98c; November 98¼c; December, 98¼c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Big Advance In Cables Gave Wheat Strong Opening.

Chicago, July 30.—A big advance in cables caused a strong opening in wheat, and the market was active at the start. September was up ⅜c to ¼c at 79½c to 79¾d, but on the advance commission houses sold freely. This profit taking in connection with the easier tone in corn soon brought about a reaction and September declined to 79¼c. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 133 cars, which with local receipts of 58 cars, nineteen of contract grade, made total receipts for the three points of 191 cars, against 213 cars last week and 501 cars a year ago.

With the selling pressure over, the market became firmer and on a good general demand due to reports of frosts in Iowa and the Dakotas a strong feeling developed and the advance was held until within the first few minutes of trading, when a sudden reaction occurred. The close was firm with September ¼@⅜c higher at 79⅝@¼c after it had sold up to 80¼c.

General rains over the greater portion of the corn belt caused considerable selling at the start and opening prices were barely steady. September being ½ lower to ⅛c higher at 52⅝c to 52¾c. With no supporting features the market turned weak, September selling off to 52¼@⅜c. Local receipts were 140 cars, with 19 of contract grade.

Corn followed wheat in its upward tendency and was firm the latter part of the day. September closed unchanged at 52⅜c.

Trading in oats was very quiet and opening prices were steady, September being unchanged, at 33¼c. Local receipts were 210 cars.

In spite of a firm hog market, provisions opened weak on liquidation by local longs, and there was little change in prices during the first hour. September pork opened 7½ to 10c lower at $13.85 to 13.87½. September lard was off 12½ to 22½, at $7.85 to $7.95 while ribs were down 2½ to 7½, at $8.00 to $8.05.

Close: Wheat—July 79¾c, old 79¼c; September 79⅝@¼c, old 79¾c; December 79⅝@¼c, old 79¾c; May 81¼c. Corn—July 52½c; September 52¾c; December 52c; May 52½@⅝c. Oats—July 35c; September 33⅞@34c; December 34⅜c. Pork—July $13.70, September $13.90; May $13.00. Lard—July $7.75; September $7.97½; October $7.82½@7.85. Ribs—July $7.92½; September $8.1-25; October $7.97½. Rye—July 51½c; September 51½@52c; December 53c. Flax—Cash, N. W. 97c; S. W. 92c; July 91c; September 93c; October 91c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market again active and closed fractionally higher. Liverpool shows more disposition to follow advances here. Export business was moderate, but Minneapolis reports a demand for flour from abroad. There has been no demand of late. Some sections of the Northwest report frost last night. Kansas City and St. Louis report a good milling demand for wheat and prices from ½@1c higher. Market here was broad and active. After several days' advance a reaction may be due, but we still feel that wheat should be bought on the breaks. Primary movement small and we think will continue so and although some increase will probably take place. With bare bins everywhere a good demand should develop.

Corn—The market was but little changed from yesterday. There were rains through the corn belt and lower temperatures. In view of the strength in wheat the action of the market is slow. Receipts continue moderate and demand only fair. Weather still the important factor. There was plenty of good bulls on corn who will take advantage of any unfavorable tendency in the weather.

Oats—The market is dull and unchanged. Receipts are liberal. Threshing returns indicate a moderate crop of good quality and we are inclined ourselves to look for a pretty free movement of oats. We still feel that values prices are maintained by a bull market in corn that oats should sell lower.

Cincinnati Price Current: Corn continues fully maintained, but most sections need rain. The wheat situation is not essentially changed. Moderate disappointment in yield continues. Oats are only a fair crop.

* * *

C. M. Boynton, Waterloo, Iowa: I came from Des Moines to Waterloo via the Chicago Great Western railway, 100 miles. In immediate vicinity of Des Moines the corn crop is very fair. I think the crop in that locality will not average more than ten days late and the bulk of it is very fair height, and probably three-fourths of it silked. Coming further north and east in the vicinity of Marshalltown it is not quite as good. Marshalltown to this point the crop is very much more backward and uneven. Possibly two-thirds of the area is tasseling, but the balance is pretty small and I should say about three weeks late. The corn is a much better height in this section than in Southern Iowa, and while it is not quite up to the usual standard it would look to me as though with late fall we might expect about three-fourths of the average crop of corn in this strip of territory between Waterloo and Des Moines. A fine rain fell over this section last night and was very timely.

Kalb, of Chicago: Our Rosario friend cables us that this week's Argentine shipments to Europe will amount to about 1,000,000 bus of wheat and 3,000,000 bus of corn.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Due to Bear Hammering After Fairly Firm Opening.

Attack on Atchison Was Marked Feature of the Day.

New York, July 30.—The majority of stocks showed narrow and irregular opening changes. Pennsylvania rose about a point and New York Central fell ½. Chicago Terminal preferred jumped 2¼. Des Moines & Fort Dodge rose ½ and then ran off over a point and Evansville & Terre Haute rose a point. There was a decline of a point in Wheeling & Lake Erie second preferred and of ¾ in Louisville & Nashville.

Selling on a large scale in Atchison, New York Central and Copper and they declined a point below yesterday's close. Other prominent stocks yielded slightly in sympathy on moderate offerings. Realty preferred lost 1, Virginia-Carolina Chemical and Chicago & Eastern Illinois 5, Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis, Metropolitan Securities, Republic Steel and North American ruled 1 to 2 higher. Atchison sold at 61⅞, the lowest price reached in the current movement.

The market was depressed by the continued sales of Atchison, which touched 61⅝. Southern Pacific also lost a point. Declines in the general list were moderate outside the specialties. Pullman rose 5, St. Paul preferred 2¼ and Distillers Securities, Railway Investment preferred and Chicago Great Western preferred A 1 to 1½. Des Moines & Fort Dodge rallied 1¼ on rumors of the passing of control. Evansville & Terre Haute reacted 1¼ and the preferred dropped 12 with a rally of 3. Westinghouse Electric first preferred dropped 5, Hide and Leather 4½. Realty preferred 3¾, the common 1¾ and Alton preferred and Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred 1 and 1.½ Bonds were irregular.

Standard stocks were unable to stand th pressure aroused by the severe declines in the low-priced specialties and yielded sharply to the early afternoon. The grangers, Pacifics, some of the Eastern trunk lines and a few of the high-priced industrials are off between 1 and 2 points. Westinghouse Electric dropped 12½, Virginia-Carolina Chemical 5, Realty preferred 4¾, Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis 3⅝ and Cotton Oil 2½. North American extended its rise to 3 and Pullman to 52.

Buying orders were met at the low level of the leaders and the list made a slight rally. Later on Copper was forced down to 40 and selling was resumed elsewhere pulling the market back to the lowest. Rock Island sold down to 22¾ and Reading, Wabash preferred, United States Steel preferred and Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis showed losses of 1 to 1½. Fluctuations were rather sensational in the inactive quarter. Pacific Coast first preferred slumped 20, Westinghouse Electric first preferred 10 and Evansville & Tere Haute 6. Westinghouse Electric recovered 6.

New York Central got 1⅞ under last night, Colorado Fuel lost 5 and rallied 3 and Hocking Valley preferred dropped 4. It became evident that fewer Atchison shares were offering and covering of shorts in that stock caused a practically complete recovery. The market rallied in sympathy. Minneapolis & St. Louis preferred and Metropolitan securities rose 3 and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred 2 and Westinghouse Electric rallied 9 in all. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha lost 4. Buying diminished at the rally. The closing was inert and not far from last night's level.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Dow-Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Stocks opened generally firm encouraged by the tone of newspaper comment over night and absence of any dangerous developments in London. Traders' pressure of the previous afternoon did not seem to have been very successful and more inclined to work favorably in view of recent support. There may be some distribution of stock bought in prote t and it is said in particular that a syndicate made up among large banking interests last week sold stock it bought then. It is probable, however, that the Gould interest has scale supporting orders in Union Pacific. Room traders developed their attack on Atchison and effect of it was to some extent felt in rest of list although selling was not urgent anywhere and market could not have been called weak.

J. S. Bache to Paine, Webber & Co.: The movements of the market today was discouraging to holders of stocks. A moderately firm opening under the lead of London was followed by declines on bear hammering. A considerable amount of stock which was carried over the recent slump has been undoubtedly distributed on the rise. Scale orders were apparent in Missouri Pacific. Atchison was a marked feature of the morning. Many rumors were circulated to account for the decline, but none were confirmed. The market closed unsettled.

Waldorf to Coe Commission Co.: The market views tonight are unchanged, the consensus of opinion being optimistic. The largest commission houses on the Stock Exchange report continued persistent buying of both railroad and industrial stocks and they look for further improvement in prices. One prominent firm with an extensive private wire system, says that all the orders received before the opening today were purchases, an almost unprecedented incident in its experience. Crop advices have taken a turn for the better and despite the rumors of damage to corn from heat there is a confident feeling that the crop has not been seriously impaired. Railroad officials say that the hot winds rarely come in August, July being the usual period for them. They feel pretty certain therefore, that as the corn has gone through the present month unscathed the chances are in favor of a satisfactory outcome. As regards the financial situation, a leading money broker says time money is to be easier. For six months the Union Trust company and other institutions are lending quite freely at 5½ per cent, against six only a few days ago, and the indications point to a further recession to 5 per cent soon. Referring to the day's price movements, large operators say the bear party showed increased aggressiveness, with the result of a considerable enlargement in the short interest, particularly in Atchison, on rumors believed to be unfounded, of a bond issue and a June statement that will reflect heavy losses from floods. It is good opinion, however, that the reaction in this and other active stocks is temporary. Current gossip has it that E. H. Harriman bought 10,000 shares of Brooklyn Rapid Transit this week on cable orders.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Bear traders have been active again today and have subjected the market to some pressure. The closing is steady and the list has suffered only a slight loss. It is a dull market and will remain so for some time. There is nothing new in gossip or conditions. We regard prices as low enough and think stocks may be bought on the breaks for moderate profits.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The question is, has Rockefeller accumulated his line and does he want higher prices. I am inclined to think so. Many evidences point that way. The market ought to advance leisurely to around the end of August and sag off in September. Early in October, stocks will probably be a purchase for the regular winter bull campaign. Investment buying has been going on for the past few days as is proved by "odd lots" selling above the market. This is usually good sign. More or less reaction is due after the advance of last three days. On weakness this afternoon or Friday morning, you can buy any of the leading active stocks. If this reaction comes as expected, prices should advance smartly from Friday afternoon until Monday.

Co.: The market today was unsettled and traders tried to hammer it down. There were a great many rumors, but nothing unfavorable developed. Stocks were fairly well taken. The market closed with a feverish tone.

* * *

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: The fight in Atchison is breaking out again. It has been the weak stock all along. Cannot find whether it is a bear combination or whether they are gunning for a big stockholder. They say the latter, but my opinion is that he has sold all stocks he wants to before this.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, July 30.—This being the last notice day for July delivery, it had been looked forward to as a critical period in cotton, and while not particularly active the market this morning displayed considerable nervousness. July opened 20 points higher at 13.20 and in five sales reached 13.60, a net advance of 60 points, while in New Orleans the bull leader was reported to be bidding for July in blocks of 5000 at 15c without finding sellers. The rest of the list opened easier but immediately firmed up with July under covering on the high cables. The strength of New Orleans and talk of too much rain in western belt.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 20 points higher, middling uplands, 13.45; middling gulf, 13.70; sales, 2700 bales. Cotton futures closed steady: July, 13.40; August, 12.20; September, 10.75; October, 9.96; November, 9.81; December, 9.80; January, 9.90; February and March, 9.80.

Archile Caron Brings Suit For $20,000 Damages.

Archile Caron lost a leg in a logging accident last February, and he has begun suit in district court against the Powers-Simpson company and the Duluth, Missabe & Western Railroad company, for $20,410 because of it.

In his complaint he alleges that on Feb. 5, 1903, he was working at a log landing near Hibbing, where skids were being loaded, and was assisting in raising the logs on the skidway, when some of the logs got loose and rolled over him. He was so badly injured that his right leg had to be amputated below the knee, unfitting him for work.

He alleges that the defendants were negligent in not having the skidway upon a proper foundation. He claims that it was in a swamp that was not sufficiently frozen to be solid, and that the skids were so close together as to permit the logs to sag to one side, thus causing the accident. He sues for $410 for loss of time and expenses of hospital treatment, and for $20,000 general damages. John Jenswold, Jr., is his attorney.

IN MARINE CIRCLES

Montezuma, New Davidson Boat, In Port on Maiden Trip.

Largest Wooden Vessel Now Sailing on the Great Lakes.

The barge Montezuma arrived in the harbor this morning on her maiden trip.

The Montezuma was launched this spring at Bay City, Mich. She was built by Capt. James Davidson of that city.

The Montezuma brought up 5300 tons of coal for the Philadelphia & Reading Coal company. She was loaded to 19½ feet aft and 18¼ feet forward.

In these days of steel vessels, the launching of a wooden freight carrier of the size of the Montezuma is a t event of considerable interest in shipping circles. Those who have predicted the passing of the wooden freighter will watch the record of the Montezuma with no little interest. She will be placed in the bulk freight carrying trade.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

Notice has been given that the schooner Champion, almost in mid channel of St. Clair river, directly opposite light No. 12 at the head of Russell Island, has been abandoned by her owner as a total wreck. Until she is removed by the United States engineer a white light (post lantern) will be shown from her. Vessels navigating the river will be careful when in the vicinity of the wreck.

HARD WORK TO GET GRAIN.

Chicago, July 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Agents of the lines were busy from the beginning of business trying to get enough grain to fill out their cargoes. It was hard work but most of them succeeded by taking small lots wherever they were to be had.

Amherstburg, July 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Spokane, which stuck off Colchester light yesterday, was lightered of about 3000 tons of coal, and left this morning for her destination. The lightered coal was sold to the Pittsburg Coal company and was taken to Sandwich by the lighter Newman today.

CLEVELAND HAS ACCIDENT.

Detroit, July 30.—The steamer City of Cleveland, which left here last night for Cleveland, met with an accident to her engines on lake Erie soon after leaving the river, and was forced to anchor until the tug of Detroit from Cleveland appeared and sent men aboard to help in making temporary repairs. After the engines had been temporarily fixed, the City of Cleveland was headed back for Detroit. It surprised a lot of passengers who found themselves in Detroit when they awakened today, instead of at the dock in Cleveland.

THEY SEEK REVENGE

Duluth Police to Meet Superior at Athletic Park Friday.

Their Nerve Recovered And They Will Retrieve Their Defeat.

"The shades of night were falling fast,
As homeward the Bugville cops fled past;
Troyer's stalwarts had piled the score,
And McKinnon's ringers could play no more."

Thus merrily chanted Capt. Resche at police headquarters this morning as he made up the batting list for the police ball team that will cross bats with the Superior policemen at Athletic park tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

It will be the second game in the series arranged between the two departments and bids fair to be a most interesting contest.

Smarting under the defeat administered by the policemen across the bay a week ago, when the game ended with the score 25 to 13 in favor of Superior, the Duluth policemen have been losing no time in getting their team in fine trim for the game tomorrow. At the practice game yesterday afternoon the local police team showed up in splendid condition, and unless all signs fail there will be mourning in Bugville tomorrow night.

For the Duluth team Steele will go on the slab. He has been pulling around in fine form, and it is claimed that if he can hold out with the speed and curves he showed yesterday the result of the game is a foregone conclusion.

Superior will ring in a change of pitchers this game. Police Secretary Hudson, whose twisters puzzled the locals not a little last Friday, will play first base for the Bugvilles, while Patrolman Altenburg, whom the policemen across the bay say is a phenom, will unwind curves for the visitors. Several important changes have been made in the Superior team since last week, one of them being the appearance of Sergt. Louis Osborne in center field. Osborne is credited with making a home run every time he has come up to bat, but the details of the games in which he has played are lacking.

Following is the line-up of teams in batting order:

DULUTH.
Troyer	Right field
Reewe	Catcher
Wood	Third base

SUPERIOR.
Williams	Second base
McKinnon	Shortstop
Altenberg	Pitcher
Hudson	First base
Halberg	Catcher
Flynn	Third base
McGibbon	Right field
Dill	Left field
Osborne	Center field
Substitute	Sullivan

Claims Royalties Due.

Suit has been commenced in the United States court by Alphonso Bowers, an inventor of San Francisco, to recover damages to the extent of $2,000 from the Lake Superior Contracting and Dredging company.

He claims that the company is indebted to him to that amount for royalties on a part of a hydraulic pump which he invented.

Officials of the Duluth company claim that the plaintiff has no valid claim to the patent.

The case will be heard at the fall term of the United States circuit court.

LOVE, MARRIAGE AND LETTERS.

How old must a young man be, and how big must he be for his age, before a young woman is justified in taking his love-making, and particularly his proposal of marriage seriously? asks the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A good deal depends, of course, upon the young woman, but if the young woman is dependent upon herself, as happens to be the case in the Strong-Noake breach of promise suit, then considerable latitude must be allowed her personal and private judgment, we suppose.

Her attorney lays down the general proposition that, if a young man is old enough to vote and "as big as a house," he ought to know what he is doing when he makes love to a young woman, and he ought to know what it means when he promises to marry her.

This, however, is from the viewpoint of one who is presumably and properly, because professionally, biased in the young woman's favor. From the view-point of the defendant's father, on the other hand, the young man who is barely old enough to vote is only a boy, and he should not be held accountable for an act which, to the parental mind, is simply a youthful indiscretion.

There is a widespread popular interest in this matter, however, aside from its merits. Young men are interested in it, because they are anxious to learn how old they must be, and how big they must be, before they can be held accountable for the love-making they do, and the matrimonial promises they give.

Young women are interested in it, because it concerns them greatly to know haw old a young man must be and how big he must be before they are justified in believing his professions of affection and in accepting his pledge of marriage.

Parents of young men are interested in it because it is of the greatest importance to them, especially if they happen to be wealthy, to learn how old and how big their sons must be before they can be trusted to go out into the wide world where their affections are likely to be ensnared.

Next to the marriage contract itself, the most sacred contract that can be made between man and woman is the promise of marriage, and from time immemorial courts and juries have so regarded it and have so decided it in breach of promise law suits, especially if the evidence for the woman has been in the form of letters.

Court and juries are proverbially sensitive to the influence of love letters. They may be inclined to side with the man up to the moment the letters are produced, but, if the letters are of the kind that the judge and jurors remember having written in the days when their tender emotions held full sway, the chances for the young man, no matter how old a young man he may be, or how big or how little, are very slender.

A THWARTED ORGY.

Two women in black, grizzled and gray, were in a corner at the rofessional Woman's league reception at the Hotel Savoy, says the New York Press. They were "regular" clubwomen, probably charter members of old Sorosis. Presently a waiter approached, bearing punch glasses. The glasses contained brownish fluid, with immoral looking cherries floating on the surface. The first clubwoman tittered and said deprecatingly: "Isn't it awful to have punch at an afternoon reception? I don't know what my husband would say if he knew it." "Oh, let's have a sip or two," said the other old woman in black, leering wickedly as she seized a glass. "No, I will do nothing of the sort. Once I drank a little beer and I felt skittish for an hour. Besides, drinking is against my principles." "But, look at the dear little cherries," persisted the tempter. The first woman yielded. She pressed her thin lips to th glass and sipped gingerly. With a gasp she lowered the glass. "Oh, dear, What do you think? It's iced tea."

ELABORATE EVENT

Will Be Celebration at Monastery at Saroff.

Imperial Family of Russia and Officials Will Attend.

St. Petersburg, July 30.—The ceremonies at the monastery at Saroff promise to be interesting. The relics of St. Seraphim will be exposed for adoration after five days of religious exercises. These relics have been installed in a solid silver casket beneath a silver baladacvhin. The expense of the installation was born by the emperor from his private purse, and his majesty testified his interest by writing the following original note on the act of canonization: "Read with feelings of genuine pleasure and deep emotion."

The monastery, which is the scene of the ceremonial, is a woman's asylum, several miles from the village of Saroff and forty miles from the nearest railroad station. The attendance includes the imperial family and court with many officials and multitudes of pilgrims. Temporary barracks have been erected to shelter the more favored guests, but the great majority of the pilgrims will be forced to sleep in stables or in the open air.

The holy synod has issued a statement that it regards the "appearance of a new miraculous intercession as a renewal of heaven's blessing upon the government of our most exalted monarch, who labors unceasingly for the welfare of the orthodox Russian people, and embraces in his royalty and care all of his true subjects of every class and condition."

Most elaborate preparations have been made for the celebration. All of the pomp and magnificence of the Eastern church, with its most impressive and elaborate ceremonies, its imposing processions and its solemn liturgies will be employed.

The hermit, Prakhor Moshnin, died in 1833 at an advanced age. Belief in his sanctity and miraculous intercession with heaven seems to have been widespread during his life and to have grown steadily since his demise. He entered the monastery of Saroff when only 17 years old. Later in life he spent fifteen years in silent meditation. When he resumed intercourse with the world, it is said that he answered questions before they were put, and letters that he never unsealed; that he revealed the inmost secrets of the heart and foretold future events.

HEAVY MORTGAGE FILED.

Hamilton, O., July 30.—The Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville railroad in process of construction today filed a mortgage here for $4,054,000 of bonds, covering a mileage of 264 miles from Cincinnati to Hammond, Ind.

TROUT GOT DRUNK.

Twenty-seven trout shocked the natives of Oyster Bay by getting drunk, says the Chicago Chronicle. Capt. John Franklin retired from the bridge of the fishing boat he had commanded for a quarter of a century and opened a saloon and hotel at the foot of South street. Capt. John had a flowing well on his place from which runs a constant stream of ice-cold water. A pool was dug and Capt. John used the water to cool his beer.

Five years ago he put some trout in to prevent moss and other vegetation from growing in the pool. Saturday night four kegs of beer were dropped into the pool. From one keg the bung was loosened and the beer escaped into the water where Capt. John's pets were swimming. No sooner did they realize the delights of the beer oozing from the keg than the whole twenty-seven began fighting for it. Not one of the fish remained sober.

Capt. John heard a noise in his fish pond, and on investigation was astonished to see the twenty-seven trout playing leap frog and racing madly about in the water.

BUYING CATNIP.

Certain women are seen in New York's shopping district this month who are never seen there at any other season of the year, says the New York Times. Most of them are old and shabby, and they live in little homes that are the last remnant of "squatter sovereignty." But catnip grows in the rocky gardens that surround their homes, and every woman who owns a pet tabby likes to treat it to a sprig of fresh catnip. It is pussy's tonic, his spring medicine. Few women out shopping would know where to go and buy fresh catnip, but it is a very easy thing to purchase five or ten cents worth from a woman with a basket who stands outside the big stores, where the cat-loving women almost fall over her. Many of the shoppers buy more than ten cents' worth, and give all the cats in their neighborhood (respectable cats with homes) a treat. Cat owners exchange little courtesies in this way and the women who have catnip to sell make enough money for a new carpet, or perhaps a Sunday at the seashore.

CAMPS OF MILLIONAIRES.

Many modern millionaires include a camp in the Adirondacks among their possessions, and find more pleasure in a log cabin near one of the picturesque lakes than in a marble house in Bellevue avenue, says the New York Press. J. Pierpont Morgan set the pace a decade ago, building a comfortable but plain house well away from civilization. John Jacob Astor's dwelling at St. Regis is far more than a camp. Spencer Trask is arranging for a home in the mountains. Of the younger set, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt has a finely equipped lodge near Paul Smith's, and Reginald, his bother, probably will go and do likewise. Miss Mary Harriman, whose father, E. H. Harriman, is one of the Paul Smith's colony, prefers their rugged mountain home to their Tuxedo mansion, and entertains lively house parties there. Almost any morning last summer Miss Harriman could be seen paddling a canoe, at which she is as clever as at riding a fractious cob. William Rockefeller's chain of log cabins adjoins the Harriman camp.

ELECTRICITY FROM COAL.

Attempt That Is Backed By Rockefeller.

One pound of carbon perfectly burned yields enough energy to operate eighty-four ordinary incandescent lamps during one hour. Few electric stations are able to supply more than five such lamps for each pound of carbon in the form of coal hourly consumed, says the Brooklyn Eagle. If all the energy developed could be delivered in the form of electricity, the amount of light obtained from a pound of coal might thus be multiplied sixteen times.

Much of the loss at electric stations is inherent in the nature of their operations. First the energy of the coal must be obtained in the form of heat to make steam, and a part of this heat escapes in the chimney gases. Next, the heat is transformed into the mechanical motion of the engine, and a still greater loss occurs in the exhaust steam. Another change and the mechanical work of the engine appears in part as electricity at the dynamo, the remainder being lost in friction.

If electricity can be obtained direct from coal, these successive transformations and losses may be avoided. If a battery supplied with coal can be made to yield electricity just as a boiler now yields heat, boilers, engines and dynamos alike may find a place in the scrap heap. The prize implied by such results has long been sought by inventors.

Among the latest and apparently best known investigations along this line are those of Dr. William W. Jacques, an electrical engineer of Boston, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of technology and of Johns Hopkins university. Interest has been added to the experiments of Dr. Jacques by the recent announcement in the daily press that John D. Rockefeller has offered to supply capital for their further prosecution. It is now more than ten years since Dr. Jacques began his investigations, and meantime some very remarkable results have been reported concerning them. In Harper's Magazine for December, 1896, Dr. Jacques told the public how, while sitting before an open fire, he had often dreamed of converting the energy of coal into electricity instead of into heat; also how the dreams came true. To quote the words of Dr. Jacques, speaking of nature:

"I surprised her in her secret and discovered the way by which we may abandon even combustion and heat itself, and convert the stored-up energy of coal directly into electricity."

According to Dr. Jacques, his invention consists in a process by which the oxygen of the air is led to combine with a mass of carbon beneath the surface of a suitable liquid, thus generating electricity instead of heat.

In general, the apparatus required to carry on this process includes an iron pot containing molten potash, a rod of carbon partly hubmerged in the potash, an air pump, an iron pipe through which air is forced into the potash at a point beneath the carbon rod, and a furnace in or over which the iron pot is heated. When the potash is kept in a molten state by the furnace, fire and air is forced through the iron pipe to the lower end of the carbon rod, an electric current may be obtained by connecting a point on the pot with the end of the carbon rod that sticks up out of the potash. During this process the carbon rod in the potash is consumed. Dr. Jacques states that the consumption of carbon by its combination with oxygen of the air forced through the iron pipe is the source of the electrical energy obtained.

One thing is certain, the aparatus described does yield an electrical current.

It should be noted that this aparatus consumes fuel for three distinct purposes. First, there is the furnace fire to keep the potash in the iron pot liquid. Then steam or some other source of power must be applied to operate the air pump. Lastly, there is the mysterious consumption of the carbon rod in the potash, which Dr. Jacques holds to be the real source of the electric current. Besides, to the question whether the consumption of the carbon rod in the potash is the true source of the electricity obtained, the most interesting point to be decided in relation to this process is its efficiency. How much carbon rod and how much other fuel must be consumed in order to deliver a given amount of electrical energy?

Dr. Jacques has not left us in doubt on this point. He has stated that a test of one of these carbon batteries of two horse power capacity had shown a consumption of only 0.223 pound of carbon rod in the iron pot, and 0.336 of a pound of coal in the furnace for each electrical horse power hour developed. About 5 per cent of the electric power developed was used in an electric motor to drive the air pump that forced air through the iron pipe leading into the molten potash. From the data given it is not clear whether the electricity necessary to operate the air pump was included in the figures given for the consumption of carbon and coal. Taking the view less favorable to the battery, the weights of fuel named generated one electrical horse power hour including the electric energy used to operate the air pump, of 0.95 horse power hour for other work.

One pound of pure carbon, when it enters into chemical union with the largest amount of oxygen that will combine with it, liberates an amount of heat measured by 14,500 heat units. One electrical horse power hour is the equivalent of 2564.8 of these units. The 0.223 pound of carbon rod consumed per electric horse power hour in the test reported by Dr. Jacques was thus capable of generating 3,223 units of heat. If, as Dr. Jacques contends, the electrical horse power hour said to be delivered by the battery was developed by union of oxygen with the carbon rod, the efficiency of the process was 79 per cent, if no account is taken of the power used by the air pump or of the coal consumed in the furnace. Anthracite coal of the best quality contains about 90 per cent of pure carbon, and on this basis the 0.336 pound of coal consumed in the furnace per electrical horse power hour developed had a heating capacity of 4384 heat units.

Considering the heating power of both the carbon consumed in the pot and of the coal burned in the furnace, also the loss in driving the air pump, the complete apparatus delivered for outside work 32 per cent of the energy of the fuel consumed, according to the figure given by Dr. Jacques. This efficiency of 32 per cent is about five times that attained at electric lighting stations of the better class.

WONDER CLOCK PAINTING.

The following clipping, which appeared in the Philadelphia Record some days ago and was subsequently copied by the San Francisco Chronicle, will prove of interest to curio hunters:

"The most singular painting I ever saw," said Rev. George R. Savage to several men who were discussing art, "was owned by the late T. B. Peterson, the Philadelphia publisher. I have often wondered what became of it after his death, and have often thought that I would like to own it. It wasn't a great work of art as the critic might view it, but it appealed to me very strongly. It was by an obscure painter, whose name I don't even remember. The subject was a German cathedral, with a tower rising in bold relief, and in the tower was a clock. A hole had been cut in the canvas to accommodate the face of the clock. The thing was so skillfully done that in looking at the picture one would not suspect that a real clock figured in it, for it was a very large canvas. But on the hour the clock would strike in such a tone as to give the impression of great distance, to accord with the perspective of the picture. The face of the clock, which was of French make, was quite small, and the deep- muffled tone was very effective." It now transpires, through a remarkable coincidence, that the sought-for picture is the property of a San Francisco family, and has been in this city for a period covering about thirty-eight years. The finding of the owner after such a brief search proves conclusively the modern theorem that it pays to advertise.

The picture hangs now in a quaint little parlor in an out-of-the-way street, where even the most curious seeker might never have found it, for the neighbors generally seem to be unconscious that it is there. It was permitted them to gaze daily upon one of the curios of the century—perhaps because it has been with them so long. The picture is the property of Mrs. Elizabeth Staude, 118 Trenton street. It yas presented to her by her husband, the late John Staude, who purchased it over thirty-eight years ago from the Mr. Peterson referred to in the clipping. Mrs. Staude herself did not realize that the work was anything extremely out of the ordinary until her son called her attention to the reprint in the Chronicle. Mr. Staude, in speaking of the picture, said:

"My father was something of a curio collector in his day, and spent quite a sum in getting oddities of various kinds. Most of the things have been distributed among friends or relatives, but we have always managed to han gonto the clock picture. Mr. Peterson, the publisher referred to by Mr. Savage, went banyrupt shortly before his death, and my father was enabled to purchase the picture for a mere song.

The painting has been faithfully portrayed by Mr. Savage. It is exactly as he has represented it. The works of the clock and the box frame, necessary in order that the front may swing forward make it too heavy for hanging, so it has been screwed into the wall in the most prominent place in the Staude parlor. The walls of the room are covered with pictures, mostly crayon portarits of members of the family. There is no other relic to mate this study of the old cathedral.

The picture was originally brought over from Germany by Mr. Peterson, and, according to his report, is now almost two centuries old. Mrs. Staude was ras henough to have the picture retouched several years ago by a San Francisco artist "because it looked old," and this "John Doe," nothing loath, affixed his own signature to the painting. Mrs. Staude does not know whether the original artist ever signed the work or not. However that may be, no record of his name has been kept.

This retouching and the remodeling of the frame give the painting a modern tinge, but there is nothing modern about the subject. One extremely interesting feature about the clock, which Mr. Savage does not mention, is that when the hour strikes a music-box arrangement inside plays a fragment of an old sacred air, muffled to stimulate the tones of an organ. There is nothing modern about these airs; they remind one more of the chants of the old monks than anything else—the chants that one hears occasionally in the Catholic churches. The workmanship of the clock is excellent. In all the thtirty-eight years it has been in the possession of the Staudes' possession, it has required but one overhauling. Mrs. Staude thinks that it probably needs some attention now, for she says that it does not keep as good time as it did. Imagine a clock keeping as good time for a space of two centuries! And we are willing to buy our modern watches on a five-year guarantee.

When the location of the painting become known, the Staudes will probably be beset on all sides by curio hunters and collectors. In fact, almost any one looking at the picture and hearing the strange bell effect, would wish to own it. But just at present the Staudes seem to think that the picture beyongs pre-eminently in the spot where it has been for almost half a century and show no disposition to unscrew it from the wall.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis. —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, July 29th, 1903.

On reading and filing the petition of Lilla R. Dutton, executrix of the estate of Adelbert W. FOUR NEW INDICTMENTS FOUND AGAINST MACHEN

For Conspiracy Against the U. S. Government.

One Also Found Against Person Yet Unknown.

Washington, July 31.—The federal grand jury here, which has been considering cases arising from the postal investigation, has agreed upon four additional indictments for conspiracy against August W. Machen, the former general superintendent of the free delivery service of the postoffice department and an indictment of another party, a private individual not resident here, in connection with a postal contract for presenting a false claim to the government.

The four new indictments of Machen are based on separate and distinct transactions and are wholly aside from the indictments reported against him several weeks ago by the grand jury for conspiracy.

Machen is now in this city under bond. The fifth indictment relates to the transaction of a man supposed to be in the West, who will be placed under arrest as soon as the officers can find him.

MANILA LABOR LEADER SENTENCED

Manila, July 31.—Dominandor Gomez, president of the Democratic Labor union, has been found guilty of contempt of court and sentenced to imprisonment for six months. When the union declared bankruptcy some time ago, upon investigation of its affairs by the government, a newspaper connected with it was suspended and placed in the hands of a receiver. Gomez took it upon himself to republish the paper, and was promptly arrested upon the charge of contempt, for which he has just been sentenced. Gomez was arrested in May last upon a charge of embezzlement of funds from the Labor union, the government charging that the money stolen was used to furnish arms and food to the insurgents of Rizal province. The union, which has a membership of 15,000, has always been closely allied with the National party and is strongly in sympathy with the insurgents.

BOY INVENTS A WIRELESS SYSTEM

Chicago, July 31.—A new system of wireless telegraphy has just been put to a sucessful long distance test on Lake Michigan.

While Mrs. Emily Piggott, mother of the youthful inventor of this new system, ticked pre-arranged messages from her home in Garfield avenue, Chicago, the son, G. S. Piggott, stood with his father, S. Piggott, on the main deck of the Christopher Columbus and received the messages ticked out by his mother's hand. In this new system, which is Piggott's hope to make commercially practicable, there is no pole at either the receiving or sending station, and although in yesterday's tests the receiver was exposed on the deck of the vessel, the transmitter was in the room of a house. An intensifier makes the poles unnecessary. To prevent interference, each instrument is tuned to respond only to a current of a certain rapidity of alternation.

CHAIN WAS PLACED ON THE TRACK

Houghton, Mich., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The arrest of William Snetter and Albert Rose, 19 years old, of Mason, yesterday, divulged an attempt to wreck the fast passenger train on the Copper Range railroad, near Mason, several days ago, when it was returning to Houghton from Lake Linden with 500 excursionists aboard. A heavy chain had been placed on the rails, and before the engineer could stop the train the front trucks of the engine had passed over the obstruction and the rear cut in two. The shock caused a panic among the passengers, but nothing serious resulted. Snetter and Rose denied all knowledge of the chain incident, but confessed to stealing handcars occasionally to take their best girls home from parties. They were released with a reprimand. The investigation of the attempted wreck will continue.

THE HEARING ON THE LAND OFFICE

Washington, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—W. A. Richards, commissioner of the general land office, is again at his desk, having been absent from the capital since early in June, his prolonged absence being due to the critical illness of his wife. Mrs. Richards is now convalescent, however, and Mr. Richards returns to his duties at the land office. Commissioner Richards said this morning that he had not considered the setting of a specific day in which to hear the arguments of those who desire the land office removed from Cass Lake to Bemidji, but, of course, desires to clear up this case at the earliest practicable moment.

BARK CAPSIZED IN MID-OCEAN

Philadelphia, July 31.—The French steamer Lelion, Captain Erland, from Alicante, Spain, which arrived at Marcus Hook today, had on board the shipwrecked crew of twelve of the Italian bark Vermont, Captain Mariano. The Vermont sailed from Marseilles May 30 for St. John, N. B. Captain Mariano says that his vessel's ballast shifted and she captized on July 4 during a terrible gale. So sudden was the accident that the men did not have time to launch a boat or secure food. When the vessel went over the crew clung to the side and were in almost exhausted condition when sighted by the Lelion on July 27.

TRAIN KILLS MAN IN MINNEAPOLIS

St. Paul, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harvey Wellington 2101 Knapp street, St. Anthony park, was instantly killed on the Great Northern tracks near University avenue and Thirteenth avenue south, early last evening, in Minneapolis. He was walking toward the city on the tracks and just before reaching University avenue heard a train behind him. He stepped off the track and was struck by an Omaha train coming from the opposite direction and when picked he was dead. The body was removed to the morgue, where it was identified by Deputy Coroner Irvine by means of papers found in the clothes. He was 57 years of age.

THE CHINESE WILL WATCH RUSSIA

Cologne, July 21.—The Cologne Gazette says it hears from Chinese sources that after secretly negotiating for permission to make geological research in Thibet, Russia sent several hundred Cossacks into Thibet, asserting that she has Chinese permission to march through that territory. The Chinese government, the Gazette adds, has informed its representative in Thibet that no such permission has been given, and that he must watch Russian movements closely, while abstaining from forceful operation.

HOP GROWERS WOULD HOP PRICES

Tacoma, Wash., July 31.—Prominent hop growers of the Pacific Northwest are endeavoring to secure unity of action among the producers with the object of controlling this season's production and forcing up prices. Of the 50,000 bales produced last year, the growers now hold less than 3000 bales, one dealer having just purchased 3000 bales in Southern Washington and Oregon for direct export to England. Growers are asking 15¼ cents per pound, with standing offers of 15 cents. For several weeks the hop market has been booming. Dealers have large orders which they find it hard to fill on account of the tendency of the growers to hold for better prices.

MURPHY IS SCORED

Severely Denounced By the Judge In Passing Sentence.

Sent to Prison For Six and One-Half Years.

New York, July 31.—Lawrence Murphy, former treasurer of the Journeymen Stonecutters' union, who was arrested last December charged with embezzling $12,000 from the organization, and convicted last Monday of grand larceny, was today sentenced to five years and six months in state prison.

Judge Newburger scored the prisoner severely, saying that he had spent the funds of the union and that his total stealings amounted to $27,000.

In the course of his remarks he said: "I have a letter from John Mitchell in which he states that part of the money embezzled by Murphy was paid in by workingmen who belong to the society to be contributed to the strike fund of the miners in Pennsylvania.

"Twenty-seven thousand dollars is a large sum of money, indeed, and the evidence at the trial shows that it was spent in riotous living and for a trip to Europe."

When the judge had finished, Murphy was cursing bitterly and about to collapse.

"My God," he shouted, "this is wrong. Every one of the officers of the union got a share of the money. There was not one that did not have a finger in the graft."

NEAR VALLEY FORGE.

Attorney General Knox Purchases a Summer Home.

West Chester, Pa., July 31.—Attorney General P. C. Knox, is to become a summer resident of Chester county. He has just purchased a farm here and may occupy it this season. The property is about one mile from Valley Forge and was formerly known as the Harvard farm. In the days of the revolution it was owned by a man named Brown, and during the encampment at Valley Forge of the Continental army one of the buildings upon it was the headquarters of Gen. Knox, an ancestor of the attorney general. He brought his young bride there.

WAS MURPHY'S WIFE.

Widow of Late Police Commissioner Is Dead.

New York, July 31.—Mrs. Mary A. Murphy, who said she was the widow of Col. Michael Murphy, former police commissioner of this city, is dead at her home in Brooklyn, from heart failure.

Col. Murphy's friends in this city knew nothing of his wife until after his death not long ago when the woman presented her claims for his estate and sought to show that she married him in 1855 and that they separated fifteen years later, drifted apart and never were reconciled. Col. Murphy's rise in politics occurred after the separation, so that his closest friends of later years knew nothing of his family affairs and the appearance of the widow caused a sensation.

DELAY IN SUBWAY

Will Not Be Opened Until Next April.

New York, July 13.—Owing to the numerous strikes during the summer by men employed in rapid transit subway, it is likely that New Yorkers will be compelled to do their traveling above ground until the first of next April. It had been expected, until within a few days ago, that the line could be opened Jan. 1.

Contractor John B. McDonald says the tracks will be in place by that date, but he now admits a probable delay of two or three months in starting trains, owing to the backward stage of work on the stations and power house. Today the vast undertaking has been completed as to the tunneling except for three small sections, and twenty miles of track has been laid.

FAVORABLE REPORT

On Philippines Is Made By Commissioner Worcester

San Francisco, July 31.—Dean C. Worcester, a Philippines' commissioner, one of the men entrusted with the task of establishing a civil government in the islands, has arrived here on his way home to The Ford, Vermont. He reports that the terrible cattle pest has been stamped out, that cholera and bubonic plague have been effectively dealt with, that the insular government is making permanent improvements and defraying all its expenses on the proceeds of a reduced import customs duty, and that the land tax is solving the problem of revenues for provincial and municipal government.

THE PLAGUE IN CHILE.

New York, July 31.—There were four new cases of bubonic plague in Iquique on Wednesday and three deaths in the preceding twenty-four hours, cables the Valparaiso, Chile, correspondent of the Herald. Seventeen cases are now in the Lazarretto.

TROUBLE IN SIGHT

Anti-Foreign Attitude of Venezuela Is Very Obnoxious.

The Work of Arbitration Boards May Be Rendered Nugatory.

Washington, July 31.—Semi-official advices received here from reliable sources throw light upon the complications existing in La Guayra, incident to the trouble between the Spanish consul there and the Venezuelan authorities. They also make it appear that serious trouble in that quarter is pending because of the anti-foreign attitude of the Venezuelan authorities. According to these advices the Spanish consul referred to requested the privilege of appearing before the tribunal which was examining the claim of a Spanish subject against Venezuela. He was punished by the Venezuelan government through the withdrawal of his exequatur. The diplomats in Caracas have joined in the protest against this arbitrary proceeding, but so far it is not known that the government's action has been reconsidered.

President Olcott, of the Orinoco Navigation company, a resident of New York, is also having trouble in Caracas. The company has a number of claims against the Venezuelan government, and Mr. Olcott, accompanied by an attorney of the United States, went to Caracas to endeavor to secure a settlement. He sought to appear before the regular judicial tribunals, but found himself embarrassed at every step, and finally it was made impossible for him to secure services of a lawyer. It was feared here that the work of the various arbitration boards now sitting in Caracas will be rendered nugatory by this attitude of the Venezuelan government.

REVISION OF CONSTITUTION

Of Greece Is Desired By Many of the People.

Athens, July 31.—The recently started movement for the revision of the Greek constitution is securing many adherents of all classes. Many societies have been formed with the object of pressing King George to summon the constituent assembly for that purpose, and the revisionist societies have sent a manifesto to the electors throughout the country, in the form of a petition to the king. This document, which is being extensively signed, gives a somber picture of the internal conditions of Greece, characterizes the political parties as iniquitous, urges a number of necessary reforms and declares that a revision of the constitution is indispensable to the well-being of the country.

CRICKET.

Marlebone Club Cannot Come to United States.

London, July 31.—The Marlebone Cricket club has definitely decided that owing to lack of time it will be impossible for the cricket team, which is going to Australia in September, to visit the United States and meet American cricketers.

Cardiff, Wales, July 31.—In the cricket match, which began here yesterday, between the visiting Philadelphians and Glamorganshire eleven, the home players secured 88 runs today in their second innings, giving them a total for the two innings of 180 runs. The visitors, with 176 runs in their first innings, had only five runs to make in order to win, which they did by ten wickets.

ROMAN SENATOR

Attacked By Man Who Had Fancied Grievance.

Rome, July 31.—Senator Malvona, secretary-general of the foreign office, while leaving his home on his way to his office today was suddenly attacked by a man who struck him two violent blows with a stick on his head and then ran away. The senator's assailant, however, was almost immediately arrested. He was identified as an Italian, named Buffa, who had lost his fortune on account of the revolutions in Guatemala, and who had unsuccessfully pressed his claims for compensation. Buffa considered that his failure to obtain redress was due to Senator Malvano. The latter is not seriously injured.

PAINTED TOMATOES.

Unripe Fruit Is Found to Be Colored Red.

Philadelphia, July 31.—State Dairy and Food Commissioner Warren has announced that retail grocers here recently have received among the orders for canned tomatoes, packages which, upon close examination, proved to be a miscellaneous assortment of vegetables, including a few green tomatoes, and red paint, the whole having the appearance of ripe tomatoes. The paint was used in coloring worthless and unripe tomatoes.

BARRACKS FOR SALE.

Washington, July 31.—Secretary Root today directed the sale of the military reservation known as olumbus barracks at Columbus, O., sixty days from date, at its appraised valuation of $80,000. The property is to be sold in one block and not divided as was required by some who desired to be purchasers.

THE CARDINALS HAVE ENTERED THEIR CELLS

ATTEMPT TO BRIBE

Hungarian Deputy to Be Investigated By Diet Committee.

Kossuth Declares the Premier Unfit to Hold Office.

Budapest, July 31.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of former Deputy Dienes, who was charged in the diet Wednesday with having attempted to bribe Deputy Zolman Papp with 10,000 kronen, to desert the obstructionist party and leave Budapest.

The lower house of the diet today appointed a committee of inquiry to investigate the bribery scandal, and adjourned until the committee is ready to report. Prior to this, Franz Kossuth made a speech, in which he declared that in view of the confession of the governor of Fiume, that he alone was responsible for the attempt to bribe Deputy Papp, and that as the governor was closely connected with the government, suspicion must attach to the premier, Count Hedervary. If the latter was unable to completely reassure public opinion he was, Kossuth added, unfit to continue in office.

Replying to Kossuth, Premier Hedervary promised to appear before the committee of inquiry, and said he considered it would be a sin against the country, as well as against himself, if he resigned, as suggested by Kossuth. The premier's statement was cheered by the Right party.

FIRE ON STAR ISLAND PUT OUT

It Took Nearly a Day to Get the Fire Subdued.

Cass Lake, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Major George Stein, deputy fire warden, acting under instructions from Gen. Andrews, state fire warden, called out the fire department to subdue the fire raging on Star island, which is now government reserve. About thirty men responded to the call and left in the steamboat Columbia. There was a high wind and the boat experienced rough steaming for about one mile.

Arriving at the island it was found that the fire was making rapid inroad towards the heavy tall Norway pines and some were blazing. The fire was running fiercely in the underbrush and spreading rapidly. Trenches were dug and with dirt and bushes and water the fire was fought for a long time and then beaten out. At the south side, for nearly a mile in patches, the fire was running and was assisted by a northwest wind. Had the wind been blowing from the other side of the island the pine could scarcely have been saved. It took nearly all day to get the fire under control and men were left to watch the fire all night.

Visitors on the island are moving off, afraid of the fire. The island is three miles across and one mile long, it is thickly wooded, especially with a fine grade of Norway pine. There is on one side a small lake containing bass and so great was its beauty that the government reserved it by the Morris bill. Major Scott recently made all campers on the island procure permits from Dr. Rodwell, the Indian agent here, to camp on the island to save it from fire and great precaution has been used to preserve it, and so far with good results.

ROCK ISLAND DIRECTORS

To Consider Advisability of Bonded Indebtedness.

New York, July 31.—The directors of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad have called a meeting to be held at Davenport, Iowa, Oct. 8, to consider the advisability of creating a bonded indebtedness in a sum not exceeding $250,000,000, maturing Jan. 1, 1988, at interest not to exceed 4 per cent. The proposed bonds will be issued for refunding, redeeming or paying at or before maturity outstanding obligations of the company or constituent companies or companies which may be acquired by consolidation, and for the purchase or ownership of shares of stock or otherwise for the purpose of future development.

WILL FIGHT THE UNION.

New York, July 31.—For the recognition of their union, the pipemakers employed in factories here have begun a series of strikes. The first one just called, involves 150 men. At a meeting of the manufacturers, it was decided to fight the union.

JAIL DELIVERY FRUSTRATED.

Tacoma, July 31.—The prison authorities at Walla Walla yesterday frustrated a desperate attempt of convicts to cause a jail delivery. The outbreak would have been attempted last night or tonight. The prison officials are congratulating themselves that they have avoided a jail break like that at Folsom.

MAYFLOWER NOT DAMAGED.

Liverpool, July 31.—The Dominion liner Mayflower, having on board the Oxford-Cambridge golf team, which stranded yesterday on leaving the Mersey for Boston and was refloated, has, upon examination, been found to be practically undamaged and will resume her journey this afternoon.

Members of Conclave Shut From Outer World.

Will Not Emerge Until a New Pope Is Elected.

Rome, July 31, 5:40 p. m.—By 5 o'clock this afternoon all the cardinals had arrived at the vatican and gone to their cells.

The conclave has been duly installed and its members are now shut from the outer world. Everything is prepared for tomorrow's voting. Shortly after 4 o'clock the cardinals began to appear on St. Peter's piazza, where a small crowd watched interestedly and lifted their hats as the representatives of the church passed. With each cardinal were the servants who will attend his wants during the conclave. Some had bags in the carriages with them, though most of the baggage had been sent on before hand. The majority of the cardinals contented themselves with taking portmanteaus and handbags. At the vatican door the Swiss guards kept back the curious crowd, among whom were many priests. Photographers vigorously snapped the occupants of the black carriages prior to their entrance to what one cardinal called prison.

Rome, July 31.—The ceremony of the entrance of the cardinals in conclave, which is always given as solemn a character as possible, was inaugurated this morning with the celebration of the mass of the Holy Ghost in the Paulin chapel of the Vatican. Before 1879 this mass was celebrated in the chapel of the choir at St. Peter's.

The sacred college, numbering twenty-nine cardinals, the diplomatic corps, the Roman aristocracy, the Knights of Malta and a few outsiders, especially invited, were present, with a profusion of guards, who today had taken off the mourning emblems they had been wearing for Leo XIII.

As is always the case at such ceremonies, there was so much color in the picture that one felt as though witnessing an exhibition of a series of living pictures, until awakened to the grand reality of the religious ceremony by the singing or the Sistine choir.

Cardinal Searfino Vannutelli officiated. After the Veni Sancte Spiritus had been intoned, Monsignor Sardi, from the pulpit, (which was draped in red and stood in the choir), having before him the pontifical cross, read the Latin oration, Pro Eligendo Pontifice Maximo, exhorting the cardinals to make a wise choice in the task before them, so that the one elected to the supreme dignity shall be a worthy vicar of Christ on earth.

Printed copies of the oration were handed to all the cardinals present. After the mass of the Holy Ghost, the cardinals assembled as usual in congregation, in the hall of the consistory, where, contrary to usage, the rules of the conclave were read and each cardinal took the oath to obey them. This ceremony generally occurs in the Sistine chapel, just before the shutting up of the cardinals for the conclave.

After this ceremony the cardinals hurried away from the vatican, to return later with the more or less numerous articles which they deem necessary for their attendance at the conclave. Some of them have made preparations as though for a year's absence, while others were content to prepare for a few days' sojourn at the vatican.

The discomfort which the cardinals will experience by being shut up in the vatican is somewhat lessened by the exceptional weather, which is cloudy, cool and windy, the thermometer reaching only 75 in the shade, while, generally, at this season the mercury reaches as high as 100 in the shade at noon.

The confusion which ensued from the loss of the temporal power of the papacy made it necessary to cut down expenses, and among many other things, the numbers of the noble guard were much reduced, so that now there are only about forty of these soldiers. As it is customary for each cardinal to have a guard told off for his service in the conclave, and there are sixty-two cardinals, it has been decided to press into this service the cadets. The latter are not full-fledged soldiers and were drawn by lot. The question of which cardinal they fall to is a matter of serious import to them, as each guard congratulates his cardinal and wishes him good luck in the coming election, for which good wishes he receives, if his particular cardinal is elected pope, the sum of $10,000, or lucrative employment is given him. The excitement over the drawing of the lots is intense, as the soldiers do not usually get such a reward for a few good wishes.

The marshal of the conclave, Prince Chigi-Albani, having insisted that the number of people who are to enter the conclave must be reduced to a really indispensable number, there will be only about 275 persons present.

The Messagario says that among the petitions for relief out of the money left by Pope Leo is one from Counts Mastai and Ferreti, nephews of Pope Pius IX, who are in extreme poverty. It is rumored in vatican circles that some of the cardinals, especially the foreigners, having announced their intention of voting for Cardinal Ferrati, the latter has been induced to withdraw his candidacy after having been promised by Cardinals Rampolla, Gotti and Serafino Vannutelli that if one of them is elected pope, he will appoint Ferrati secretary of state.

THE UNITED STATES SQUADRON HELPS PORTUGUESE CELEBRATE

Anniversary of the Granting of the Constitution Is Made a Holiday at Which American Warships Dress Ships and Fire Salutes.

Lisbon, July 31.—Today being the anniversary of the granting of the Portuguese constitution and anniversary of the birth of the duke of Oporto, brother of King Charles, the cabinet ministers went to the royal castle at Cintra and congratulated the members of the royal family. The United States European squadron and the Portuguese ships in these waters dressed ship for the occasion and fired salutes. Owing to the observance of this holiday, the luncheon which Rear Admiral Cotton was to give on board the Brooklyn today to the minister of public works was postponed indefinitely. The day on which the banquet is to be given on board the Brooklyn to the Portuguese ministers and local authorities has not yet been determined upon. Portuguese officials continue to visit the American ships and are cordially received.

The attention of the public here has been called to the fact that there are large numbers of Portuguese, formerly belonging to the Azore islands, serving as sailors on board the American ships generally and as musicians on board the flagship Brooklyn. It is reported here that the United States cruiser Chicago will sail for New York tomorrow to undergo extensive repairs there.

CALIFORNIA FRUIT SOLD IN LONDON

London, July 31.—The big shipment of specially packed California fruit which arrived in England on the American liner St. Paul yesterday was sold at Covent Garden, here, this morning. There was a large crowd present and the competition was spirited, partly because of the excellence of the fruit and partly owing to the shortage of the fruit crops in France, Great Britain and elsewhere in Europe. Five thousand four hundred and seventy-six cases of Bartlett and souvenir Duconge's pears sold from 10s 6d to 13s a case. Two thousand nine hundred and forty-two cases of plums were sold for 10s 6d to 14s a case. The prices were an improvement over those obtained in London heretofore.

MET DEATH IN PECULIAR MANNER

New York, July 31.—Miss Birdie Aarons has met death in a peculiar manner in Lexington avenue, near her home. She had called on a girl friend and the two were standing on the stoop of the Lexington avenue residence when a portion of the brownstone coping above them fell and struck Miss Aarons to the ground. Her skull was crushed and she died immediately. Investigation showed that a bolt of lightning had struck the stoop in the heavy storm which had just passed. The shock had fractured the heavy stone and left it hanging by only a small, unbroken part.

The lightning was extremely severe over the entire city and many strange acidents were reported. In Jersey City a bicycle, ridden by a policeman, was twisted into a shapeless mass. The rider was unhurt by the bolt and sustained only a few scratches from falling from the wrecked machine.

We always have to count on a normal season when securing our supply and if the weather places a damper on sales then we even up matters by reducing prices. Thus the backward season is really (to our patrons) a blessing in disguise. NO YELLOW FEVER

Is to Be Feared Now In the Southern States.

Disease Communicated Only By the Bite of Mosquitoes.

Washington, July 31.—"Yellow fever is now a plaything." This declaration was made by one of the members of Surgeon-General Wyman's staff, who has followed very closely the work of investigation of the cause and prevention of yellow fever that was taken up by various scientific departments of the government three years ago.

It has fallen to the lot of the Marine hospital service, of which Gen. Wyman is chief, to pursue this work steadily and persistently, although all of the scientific bureaus have contributed valuable aid to the result which at last has been attained.

By authority of Surgeon-General Wyman a bulletin has just been issued on the subject, which presents an elaborate review of the work done during the past year by the commission of experts sent to Vera Cruz, Mexico, by the Marine hospital service. A summary of this report was given to the newspapers a few days ago by Gen. Wyman, but its conclusions were stated so conservatively as not to convey to the public the true meaning of the report.

Furthermore, Gen. Wyman has forbidden the members of his staff to discuss the subject for publication until certain details have been completed by the commission at Vera Cruz.

It is confidently asserted by the highest scientific authority in Washington that there is no longer cause to fear an outbreak of yellow fever in those portions of the South where the disease in past years has wrought such frightful havoc, both to life and commerce. To Dr. Herman B. Parker, assistant surgeon of the United States Marine hospital service and Drs. George E. Beyer and O. L. Pothier, of New Orleans, are due the credit for demonstrating beyond reasonable doubt three propositions whose practical importance cannot be overestimated.

1. That the cause of yellow fever is an animal parasite and not a vegetable germ or bacterium.

2. That the disease is communicated only by the bite of mosquitoes.

3. That only one genus of mosquitoes, which is classified is Stegomyia Fasciata, is the host of the yellow fever parasite.

The three experts named not only are physicians of high standing, but also are immunes, having had severe cases of yellow fever years before they were commissioned by the Marine hospital service to study the disease at Vera Cruz, which is regarded as its chief center on this continent.

Drs. Pothier and Beyer have had wide experience in combating yellow gever in New Orleans for many years, and were selected to acompany Dr. Parker to Vera Cruz because of their immunity, experience and scientific attainments.

Dr. Beyer is still in Vera Cruz prosecuting the work of the commission. He will be soon joined by Dr. Parker and Dr. Francis of the Marine hospital service. Dr. Francis takes the place of Dr. Pothier, who had to ask to be excused from further service on the commission because of pressing private business in New Orleans. It is expected that within six months the commission will make another report to the government, which will wind up the work, and will so thoroughly cover every point now in doubt as fully to convince the scientific world that yellow fever has been mastered at last because its cause has been definitely ascertained.

The commission from now on will address itself to establish what is known scientifically as the "Cycle" of the yellow fever parasite. The word "Cycle" in this case means that the parasite under observation will undergo a certain development under a law accepted by scientists as no longer in dispute. The American scientists at Vera Cruz have proven the "Cycle" of the yellow fever parasite in the Stegomyia Fasciata, and all that at present remains for them to do fully to establish the theory is to demonstrate that the same cycle goes on in the human being as in the mosquito that is infected with the yellow fever parasite.

The fact of supreme importanec to the scientific world demonstrated by the commission of Vera Chuz is that the theory enunciated several years ago by San Arelli, an Italian, who studied the disease in Cubais that yellow fever was communicated by a vegetable and not animal parasite is wrong. This theory was partially exploded three years ago by Map. Walter Reed and his assistants of the army medical corps in experiments at Havana, during the progress of which one member of the commission, Dr. Lazear, died of yellow fever after submitting to the bite of the Stegomyia Fasciata, and another member, Dr. Carroll, contracted a severe case and came near dying. Dr. Reed has since died as the result of illhealth then contracted, so that the only member of that commisison alive is Dr. Gramonte.

As a result of this demonstration the public health and Marine hospital service of the United States will henceforth direct its energies and resources to fighting the Stegomyia Fasciata. If that genus of mosquito can be kept out of the United States there will be no more yellow feevr, is the firm conviction of the scientific departments of the government. Hereafter steamships and other conveyance that arrive in this country from sections infested with yellow fever will be thoroughly fumigated by order of the government with the view of the killing the Stegomyia Fasciata that may have been brought along.

What is denominated by the commission as the "infectible territory" in the United States extends as far north as the southern border of Maryland. Within this broad expanse of territory the Stegomyia Fasciata has been found at times in great numbers. But all the cities and towns in the area of the infectible territory are not equally susceptible. Charleston, Savannah and Brunswick, Ga., now harbor few if any yellow fever mosquitoes, according to the scientists who have carefully investigated the subject.

Mobile, they say, with its new water supply, is rapidly eliminating not only the chaces but the danger of infection.

But Jacksonville, Key West and Tampa, in Florida, New Orleans, Brownsville, Eagle Pass and Galveston, in Texas, now harbor the Stegomyia Fasciata in abundance, declare the experts in their official report.

BURNED TO A CRISP.

Two Women Lost Lives In Hotel Fire.

Old Orchard, Maine, July 31.—Mrs. Hein Martin and Mrs. E. A. Stevens, sisters, wealthy citizens of West Grafton, were suffocated and their bodies burned to a crisp early yesterday in the fire which destroyed the Sea View house, a small summer hotel, containing twelve guests. Their room was in the third story. Mrs. E. D. Hooper, of Paris, Maine, who occupied a room on the same floor, barely escaped suffocation after making her way to the second story, where she was found by firemen. Several other inmates escaped in their night clothing. The property loss was small.

UNSOLVED MYSTERY

Remarkable Street Fatality Unexplained By Any Tangible Evidence.

Miss Murphy's Fate Recalls a Similar Incident In Cuba.

Pontiac, Ill., July 31.—Inexplicable mystery still veils the death of Miss Marie Murphy, of Pontiac, who was fatally burned at Denver, Col., some days ago. The manner of her death was most extraordinary. Miss Murphy was visiting in Denver the family of N. Q. Tanquary, an old chum of her father. The body was brought to Pontiac for burial by her father and Mr. Tanquary, neither of whom can explain how the unfortunate young woman's clothes caught fire.

Crowds visited the corner of Eighteenth avenue and Broadway, in Denver, and viewed the blackened spot where the greedy flames of such mysterious origin devoured the skirts of Miss Marie Murphy, cooking her flesh and that of those who tried to rescue her, and left an ominous mark on the cement sidewalk. A thousand speculations were offered as to the probable origin of the flames, but the mystery is still unsolved. Miss Murphy herself never knew how her light fluffy skirts took fire. She had been near no one, and for some moments before no one had been on the wide, clean pavement where she was standing when flames suddenly leaped around her and three yards above her head. When the discovery was made that a thickness of Miss Murphy's leather heel had been torn off, search was made for it about the scene of the accident, but it has not been found. Tacks protruded from the broken heel, and some believe that a spark struck from the pavement or an electric phenomena had caused her clothes to ignite. Herbert Whitaker, a bookkeeper, who found a burned match near where Miss Murphy had been standing, probably clears the mystery somewhat, but even then the light, ilimsy material of the victim's skirts must have burned for fully a minute before she discovered it, which seems next to impossible, and burned matches are to be found on every downtown sidewalk.

Just what people think when they suddenly behold a woman enveloped in flames at a spot which is the last of which such sights would be expected, is a subject that comprehends as many different ideas as there are theories on how it could happen.

Another peculiar phase of this remarkable case is the premonition of the unfortunate girl the night before the accident. She was retiring with her hostess, Miss Grace Tanquary, at the latter's home, 1131 Columbine street, when she suddenly sank into a chair and began to cry. To anxious inquiries she replied that she felt as if some dreadful calamity was about to overtake her.

When she had been fatally burned and was carried to a doctor's office, who but a man who had known her as a babe back in her Illinois home should that doctor be? Dr. B. F. Wooding made this discovery after the patient had been taken to the Homeopathic hospital and made free from pain. He is an old friend of the Murphys.

There is but one other case on record in recent years similar to the fatal accident that befell Miss Murphy.

The other case occurred at Havana, Cuba, three years ago this summer. The victim was the wife of Maj. Gen. James H. Wilson, United States army.

Gen. Wilson was at that time the American commandant at Havana, and Mrs. Wilson had just arrived from her home in Delaware to visit him. One afternoon the general and his wife arranged a drive. Their barouche was driven in front of Gen. Wilson's residence and Mrs. Wilson approached it to step in. Just as her husband took her arm to help her into the vehicle there was a burst of flame from her clothing, and before Gen. Wilson realized it his wife was in the midst of a seething furnace.

The general threw her on the sidewalk and rolled her, but as Mrs. Wilson's dress was of light, fluffy material, such as is worn in a tropical climate, there was no putting out the fire until it had consumed the clothing. The blaze came like a flash, and did its work before assistance could be of avail.

Mrs. Wilson was so horribly burned that she died an hour later, and the source of the blaze always remained a mystery.

By some who investigated it, it was claimed that she had stepped on a match. Other witnesses stated that a nail in Mrs. Wilson's shoe struck fire when it came in contact with the carriage step.

Ten years ago a man walked down Vine street in Cincinnati at 2 o'clock one morning and suddenly exploded. The report was like that of a gun and the pieces of flesh and bone flew for a hundred yards. The man had carried a heavy silver watch, and this was embedded in a telephone pole as if it had been shot from a cannon. By means of the broken watch the man was identified a week later, but just why he blew up so was never known. The explosion did not leave enough of him to lead to his identification. Pieces of flesh were spattered above the third story of a building on the opposite side of the street.

MASTERS OF SITUATION

Escaped Convicts From Folsom Succeed In Eluding Pursuers.

Placerville, Cal., July 31.—Although hundreds of heavily armed men are now engaged in the search for the twelve surviving prisoners who escaped from the Folsom penitentiary, the outlaws remain masters of the situation. They have succeeded in eluding their pursuers and the ultimate escape of at least some of the men seems highly probable. Since the fatal fight at Pilot Hill on Monday night, in which one of the convicts was killed; the others have not been seen, unless the story of William Green, a cowboy, who says he met two armed men in Placer county yesterday and afterwards identified them by photographs as a couple of the outlaws, proves to be true. The conviction is growing that the fleeing men are heading for the Sierra Nevada mountains and are aided by ex-convicts, who live along the route.

J. W. Woods, the leader of the escaped convicts, is said to have been a soldier with the United States regulars in the Philippine. According to the story, he deserted from the federal troops and joined the Filipinos. He was regarded as a hero among the convicts, who say he was once surrounded by a detachment of troops and managed to break through their lines at night and gathering a force of Filipinos, captured the United States soldiers and had them shot to death. Later Woods was captured and was tried by a mixed court-martial on a charge of desertion and aiding the enemy. He was convicted, but the secretary of war disapproved of the findings for the reason that Woods being a regular could not be held by the decision of a mixed court.

By some means or other, Woods was never tried again and he returned to America. It is said he led the Filipinos in many encounters.

INDICTED NINE

Bills Found Against Them By the Federal Grand Jury.

All Charged With Conspiracy to Defraud Excepting One.

Washington, July 31.—The federal grand jury, which has been hearing evidence growing out of the postoffice investigation, today returned indictments against the following:

August W. Machen, formerly superintendent of free delivery; John T. C. Cupper, mayor of Lockhaven, Pa., William C. Long, of this city; William Gordon Crawford, also of this city; George E. Lorenz and Martha J. Lorenz, his wife, of Toledo, Ohio; Maurice Unkel, of New York city; Thomas W. McGregor, formerly chief of the supply department of the rural free delivery service, and Leopold J. Stern, of Baltimore.

With the exception of Crawford all of the above are indicted for conspiracy. The indictment against Crawford is for presenting a false claim against the government.

Long and Cupper also are indicted separately for bribery.

Orders for the arrest of all the parties were immediately issued. This batch of indictments does not end the cases before the grand jury and other matters resulting from the postal investigation are pending before that body which may result in indictments against other persons in the near future.

Four of the indictments named Machen jointly with others. Machen, Cupper and Long are named jointly in one indictment for violation of the conspiracy section of the revised statutes.

The indictment sets out that between July 1, 1897, and July 1, 1901, Cupper induced Machen to give him (Cupper) the contract for furnishing materials for and employment in the painting of letter boxes, package boxes and posts, and that Cupper painted these boxes, posts, etc., in Reading, Albany, Scranton and many other cities throughout the country, and in addition painted 17,771 boxes at the box factory at Reading, Pa., and 2098 package boxes at the box factory in Cleveland, Ohio, Cupper paying Machen a commission of 10 cents a box, Long acting as an intermediary. Another indictment against Stern, Long and Machen, based on alleged violation of the same statute, charges that Stern entered into a contract with the government to furnish letter carriers' satchels and letter collectors' satchels for the free delivery service, the satchels to be supplied in each case with a leather shoulder strap. The cost of each of these straps to Stern in complying with his contract would amount to 25 cents. The indictment charges that Machen, in his official capacity, was to procure shoulder straps at the expense of the United States and deliver the same to Stern to be used by the latter in the performance of his contract, in order that Stern might 25 cents on each satchel, delivered to the United States.

It further charges that notwithstanding the furnishing of such shoulder straps by the United States, Stern charged the full contract price for each satchel furnished by him, and that a portion of the saving to Stern should be retained by him and the residue paid to Long, to be divided between Long and Machen. Various overt acts of Machen, such as the procuring of purchases by the United States of shoulder straps and the delivery of them to Stern to be used in this way, are recited. Stern is alleged to have presented bills to the postoffice department without deduction or allowance for these shoulder straps, and various overt acts of Long in the receiving of money from Stern and in the furtherance of the conspiracy, are recited.

A third indictment jointly names William Gordon Crawford, well known socially in this city; August W. Machen, George E. Lorenz and his wife, Martha J. Lorenz, both of Toledo, Ohio, for conspiracy. Lorenz was formerly an official of the postoffice department. Crawford represented the Postal Device & Lock company, which received the contract for furnishing certain of the letter satchels. The contract called for shoulder straps for the satchels, which the indictment charges, were never furnished by the contractors, being supplied, instead, by the United States, under Machen's order, although the contractors received the pay for them. For this concession it is charged that Crawford paid to Machen through the Lorenzes, about thirty per cent of the amount received from the government. The company, it is stated, has received since July, 1902, and up to the present, about $21,000 from the government for the satchels. Of this amount it is charged that Crawford paid the Lorenzes $7000, and that the latter divided that amount with Machen.

Maurice Runkel, of New York city; Thomas W. McGregor, formerly in charge of the supplies for the rural free delivery service and recently indicted in Baltimore under another charge, and Aug. Machen are named jointly in another indictment for a similar transaction in shoulder straps.

John T. Cupper, the mayor of Lockhaven, is charged in a separate indictment with paying Machen a bribe of $800 in August, 1900. Long also is indicted separately for paying a bribe. Crawford was separately indicted for receiving pay for shoulder straps never supplied by him.

Crawford came into court voluntarily this afternoon and was released on $10,000 bond. Long was brought in on a bench warrant. Arrangements for his bail are now being made.

HOSPITAL EMPTY

Smallpox Hospital or Pest House Has No Inmates.

Over 300 Cases Were Treated With Only Three Deaths.

For Rent—As a summer residence, the city isolation hospital. Fine location. No neighbors and bumper crop of hay with plenty of green stuff.

The smallpox hospital is again closed. There have been no new patients in the last six weeks and the authorities have thoroughly scrubbed and fumigated the premises in case any Duluthian wishes to take the place for a summer residence. At the present time a guard is employed to keep the hoboes from breaking into the hospital.

Only two "hold-over" cases have been in the isolation hospital since June 1, and those were sent here following the smallpox outbreak at Hibbing.

The record made by the local authorities and the hospital is a very creditable one. Over 800 cases have been treated there during the past four years, with only three deaths resulting from the disease. The last case was extraordinarily severe, belonging to the "black" or hemorrhagic type. The patient in this case made good recovery.

The house and grounds at the isolation hospital are now in splendid condition, and the health authorities declare that the guard will put the charge of a double barrelled shotgun into any person who attempts to steal the pump.

CONFUSION WAS GREAT

When the Cardinals Passed Into the Conclave.

Rome, July 31, 5:30 p. m.—Exactly at 5 o'clock the official entrance in conclave of each cardinal occurred, and at this hour they are settled in their new quarters, which, it is understood, each of the princes of the church has finally decided shall be for as short a time as possible, as undoubtedly the discomfort will be very great.

It is almost impossible to describe the confusion at the vatican, each cardinal being attended, in addition to his conclavist and servants, by some friends, relatives and followers, to whom he gave his last instructions, besides minor prelates of all grades.

Such was the babel of voices that the vatican officials, unaccustomed to such scenes, showed the utmost bewilderment.

At 5:50 p. m., however, all the cardinals had been assembled together and two and two they moved in procession to the Sistine chapel, preceded by a cross, which was held aloft by a minor prelate and accompanied by the Swiss guards as a choir of male soprano voices, said to be the only ones in Europe sang the "Veni Creator Spirit." The cortege passed through the stately Sala Regia, the sound of the magnificent voices reaching those outside the open windows, and entered the Sistine chapel.

At 7:45 p. m. Dr. Lapponi's duties began immediately after the opening of the conclave, much fear being expressed concerning the health of Cardinals Mocenni, Cretoni and Lengenieux, who are already ill. The first cardinal to be carried to bed was Herrero y Espinoza, archbishop of Valencia, who is 81 years old, and was appointed a cardinal at the consistory held in June last. He is prostrated by over fatigue and the doctors have ordered him to take absolute rest.

The deceased founded the Warsaw National union, which became the official Democratic paper of Kosciusko county. It is believed this action caused him to lose his mind. He was adjudged insane four months ago. He was born in Bicomfield, Germany, sixty-one years ago and leaves a widow.

New York, July 31.—James McCormick, one of the foremost stock exchange traders for Gould, Fisk & Beldon many years ago, and also famous as an art collector, died suddenly at his home in Brooklyn today aged 58 years. He was active on the floor of the exchange till the close of business yesterday when he told a friends he was going home to die.

CANADIAN BOAT

Far In Lead In Seawanhaka Cup Race.

Dorval, Que., July 31.—A fifteen mile breeze due west was kicking up white caps on Lake St. Louis today when the American challenger Kolutoo and Thorella, the Canadian defender of the Seawanhaka cup met at the starting line for the second race of the series. There was no change in either of the crews. The course selected for today's race was straight away to windward and return, two miles to each leg, to be sailed over three times.

The preparatory signal was fired at 1:55 and the little yachts crossed as follows: Thorella, 2:00:00; Kolutoo, 2:00:10.

At the end of the first round the Canadian boat led by five minutes and fifteen seconds.

On the second round Thorella increased her lead by 6 minutes and 27 seconds.

DUAL WAR ROMANCE

Chicago, July 31.—Uncle Sam's navy and army are represented in two romances which have developed in the vicinity of Chicago.

In the case of the navy it was the discovery of the secret marriage five years ago of an enlisted seaman, now in Chinese waters; the army man, on the other hand, was married yesterday after six years of the ups and downs of wooing.

Louis Frouix, son of one of East Chicago's leading families, and Miss Mary McKee, daughter of ex-Adjt. Gen. McKee, of Indiana, were the principals in the naval romance.

When the Spanish-American war began, in 1898, Prouix left Hammond for Indianapolis and enlisted in the Indiana naval reserves. While encamped there he met Miss McKee, who was inspecting the camp with her father, and fell in love with her.

The young sailor's love was reciprocated ardently, but parental objections were interposed and the McKees kept close watch on their daughter.

In a letter received yesterday by the young man's parents it developed that the girl stole away from home and married Prouix before the war called him away. Prouix and his young bride swore to keep the marriage a secret, and he was sent to the United States ship Wilmington, stationed in Chinese waters.

For five years he has stuck to his duties, cheered by his secret wife's letters and consoled once by a sight of her when she visited China with a party of friends.

Prouix's term of enlistment is now almost finished and he is billed for promotion. He will soon leave China for home and he will claim his bride. Then he will take her back to China.

It took Sergt. Richard McPhee, U. S. A., six years to win his bride. Six years ago he was engaged to Miss Belle Ritchie, of Elwood, Ind. When he enlisted in the Twenty-eighth infantry Miss Ritchie broke the engagement, saying she would never marry an army man.

McPhee served in Cuba as a private, but later went to the Philippines, where he was promoted to a sergeancy. A month ago he returned on furlough. The first thing he did was to visit the home of his sweetheart and take up his wooing where he had left off.

Miss Ritchie, pleased with her lover's record in the army, had relented. Not only did she promise to marry him, but she stipulated an army wedding. Wednesday morning they arrived in Chicago, and three hours later were married at Fort Sheridan by Father E. V. Vattman, the chaplain.

Frank Levandowski, hotelkeeper, of South Milwaukee, is in Chicago looking for his 16-year-old daughter May, who has eloped. "Steve" is the only name by which her companion, a former employe of the hotel, is known.

The elopers went stealthily from the rear entrance of the Levandowski home on Sunday evening and made their way to the Goodrich docks. The father followed and arrived at the docks a few seconds before the lines were cast off. He jumped aboard and made a hurried and futile search on deck. Then he jumped to the dock again. The couple in the meanwhile were hidden below the deck.

Now the Chicago police have orders to arrest "Steve" and his bride on sight.

APPLES BY THE CAR

First Large Shipment Arrives In Duluth From Arkansas.

Wild Raspberries Cut Into the Michigan Street Berry Trade.

The first carload lot of new apples was received in Duluth last week.

The apples came from Arkansas and are selling at $4.50 to $4.75 per barrel.

The apple crop promises well, although the Michigan street dealers say that it is still too early to predict the extent of it.

The outlook is bright for a very large potato crop this season. New potatoes are coming in in large shipments, and the price has fluctuated greatly during the past ten days. The price dropped 25 cents per bushel in twenty-four hours, during the early part of the week, and the next day jumped back 20 cents. Since then it has been steadily falling and the tubers are now selling at 60 and 65 cents per bushel.

Wisconsin raspberries are very plentiful at present, but the demand for them has fallen off greatly. The Michigan street dealers do not handle the local wild raspberries, but they report that the ripening of the local crop has a serious effect on the raspberry trade. Raspberry picking is so general during the season when the crop on the hillside is ripe, that the demand for the fruit practically ceases.

California fruit is the feature of the market at the present time. Yellow peaches, plums, pears, apricots and cherries are being received in very large shipments at the present time, and the price is reasonable considering the distance the fruit travels.

Green corn, Minnesota grown, is coming in more freely. It is now selling at 12½ to 15 cents per dozen.

Butter prices are somewhat lower, creamery selling at 21 cents and fancy dairies at 17 and 18 cents.

The poultry market has been active during the past week.

Spring chickens are the feature of the trade at present. The crop of chickens in the vicinity of Duluth has been a large one this year, and they are being shipped in freely. The price has dropped to 16 and 17 cents, while hens are selling at 10 and 11 cents.

There is very little trade in other varieties of poultry.

Meat prices are unchanged this week. Lard remains at the low figure to which it dropped during the last month, and is now selling at 8 cents, or over 2 cents lower than the price during the winter months.

The dealers report an active week's trading, the fine weather having a good effect.

SALT LAKE A GREAT WONDER

The First Bath Is as Good as a Circus.

Salt Lake, Utah, July 31.—Each year the number of tourists and pleasure seekers in their hegira to Europe grows steadily larger. They quite naturally seek the beautiful and historic places of the Old World: The ruins of the Acropolis, one of the seven wonders of the world; the wreck of the vast Coliseum, where great gladiators fought, fell and died before the haughty Romans; the frowning and majestic St. Paul at London, full of historic interests; the old and weather beaten castles of Scotland, where warriors bold held sway; the picturesque Rhine of Germany, the theme for many poets; the great Matterhorn of Switzerland, where the Alpine climbers risk and often loose their lives; the world's beautiful city, Paris, where life is one round of pleasure. These are all beautiful, full of historic interest and should be seen. But we Americans who supply the larder for a vast number of foreigners and increase the dividends for the great steamship lines, often, too often, "hide our light under a bushel" and are utterly oblivious of the beauties of our grand country and fail to appreciate what nature has intended for us to see.

We may safely claim that our great inland "Dead Sea," known as the Great Salt Lake, is one of our chief attractions. Years before the "Mormons" sought the vast wilderness of Utah and made it "blossom as the rose," long before our pioneer and nimrods explored the vast waste of sand and cactus, the Indians were aware of this strange sea which nestled in the desolate silence of the bleak western mountains. Who the first man was to enter these briny waters is not recorded. Little was known of this famous body of water previous to the advent of the Mormans. Bathing was then as it is now, the chief source of enjoyment. The beach was just as smooth and the air just as invigorating, but they did not have, as is the case now, all the necessary adjuncts to comfort that man has now supplied. The modern conveniences are at present in evidence; a railroad making the round trip for a trifle carries the pleasure-seekers to and fro from the city. A magnificent pavilion erected at the cost of nearly three hundred thousand dollars cover an area of many hundreds of feet. The top of the tower is over 100 feet from the surface of the lake. The architecture is Moorish and the dome-shaped roof is of the beehive order. The lower floor is devoted to refreshment booths and lunch tables for families. The second floor is conceded to be the largest enclosed dancing area without the support of pillars in America, and a thousand couples can trip to the waltz and two-step without inconvenience. There are two long wings extending from the main building lined with hundreds of bathhouses, every one of which is equipped with fresh water showers and dressing rooms.

Once in the water and the experience of floating without effort is a sensation that must be realized to be appreciated. The writer, like many fresh-water novices, succeeded in getting the brine in his eyes and mouth when entering the lake and discovered that the burning sensation was terrible. The bathers are all careful after such an experience and never dive as they do on our lake and ocean resorts. The first bath is as good as a circus and the onlookers are much amused to see the beginners splash and splutter with their pedal extremities. Sometimes the head will go down and the heels will pop up like ducks. You cannot "paddle your own canoe" in this water. You simply lie down and float. Many stay in for hours without ill effect and float like a cork with luxurious ease.

But the most beautiful effect is at sunset and fortunate is the beholder who can see it. Bright Phoebus, who seeks the western hills, is going to rest; the mountains on the horizon enveloped in a pink glow that enhances their grandeur and majesty a hundred fold; on the summit of the loftier peak rests the halo bestowed by the parting sun; the water of the lake is basking in the sun's waning warmth in a glow of crimson. Flames leap into the golden ripples and nature's art gallery is exposed. And thus in the greatest pomp and glory that blended radiance and brilliancy and soft delicate tints can bestow, sinks to rest "the unwearied sun."

OPPOSED TO WASHINGTON

Enemies of Colored Orator Create Disturbance In Boston.

Boston, July 31.—An attempt on the part of half a dozen colored persons opposed to Booker Washington, president of Tuskegee institute, to ask questions as a meeting which he was addressing last night at the Zion church almost resulted in a riot, and twenty-five policemen were called to quell the disturbance. Several arrests were made; one policeman received a deep stab from a hat pin, while a man said to be one of those opposed to Mr. Washington received several razor cuts and now is in the hospital.

After the arrests Mr. Washington was allowed to proceed, and spoke for nearly two hours.

Both factions at the close of the meeting issued statements. Mr. Washington said in his statement that the colored people of Boston should not be held responsible for a few riotous individuals, while William Munroe Trotter, one of those who was arrested, stated that the cause of the rioting was the absurd ruling of the chairman, Mr. Lewis, in ordering the arrest and ejection of any person who hissed or manifested any objection to the speaker of the evening.

It is said that the disturbance was prearranged, and after the meeting Mr. Trotter and his friends admitted that that they went there with the idea of asking Mr. Washington a number of questions and to resent any attack that might be made on the New England representatives to the recent Afro-American council at Louisville.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Colored Business Men's association of this city, and W. H. Lewis, one of the United States assistant district attorneys, presided.

RACE WAS DISAPPOINTING.

Albany, N. Y., July 31.—The much advertised trotting race between Major Delmar and The Abbott at Island park today, for a purse of $2500, was in all respects disappointing. It was about the slowest race of the day, and the result was a forgone conclusion. Major Delmar won two straight heats and the race. There was very little money on The Abbott, odds being sold at $25 to $5. The race of the day was the 2:20 class pace, Dobbler Brewing company's purse of $1000, in which both favorites lost to the field. John S. favorite, selling at $50 to the field's $40, was distanced, winning only one heat. Knox's Gelatin Baby, who sold for $10, was the winner.

CLAIMANT IN JAIL

Fight For Estate Ends With Mrs. Driggs a Prisoner.

Now Charged With Showing Trick Photograph to Juror.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 31.—The end of the famous Hill case came with a verdict awarding the fortune to relatives of Salem Charles and declaring the Driggs will a forgery. At the conclusion of the trial Mrs. Driggs was arrested on a charge of attempting to influence a juror.

The story is that, in order to prove her claim that "Charles Hill" was not bald, she had a copy made of an old photograph, and this was so manipulated by an expert that it showed a large crop of white hair on the subject's head. This counterfeit, it is alleged, she handed secretly to one of the jurors. He reported to the court and Mrs. Driggs denied his story. A charge of contempt of court is also pending against her, and her lawyers are investigating a series of "White Cap" letters they have received.

If one feature of the famous Hill will case stood out more plainly than another, it must have been that of the fighting quality of Mrs. Gertrude Driggs, a New York business woman.

It was her reputation against that of the Charles family of Boston and Brimfield, Mass., from first to last, but only the Charleses stood to lose as regarded character, for Mrs. Driggs, by asserting the right of her variety-actress daughter to the fortune, had to confess to the most checkered past any woman ever had.

Worker of the "badger" game and later a member of one of the most desperate gangs of counterfeiters the country has ever known, she maintained silence with reference to the one charge and admitted the other, also admitting that a charge of counterfeiting may be hanging over her head, in the court of Cincinnati.

The Driggses asserted there was only one Charles Hill, a counterfeiter, and the Charleses said only one man went by the name of Charles Hill, and his name was Salem Charles. He was an eccentric representative of one of the first families of the New England states. If there was but one, then he must have been the champion Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, for no man could have lived a more complete double life than he.

This Charles Hill, who dined and left a fortune of $142,000 to be fought for in Los Angeles, was more than 90 years old. He came to California several years ago, stayed awhile at Pasadena, visited at Santa Anna, and was here, there and everywhere.

In May, 1902, he was admitted to the Good Samaritan hospital, in this city. His eccentricities cropped out almost immediately.

He insisted upon having a new stove of certain design in his room, for no other purpose than to heap his threadbare garments upon each night. Although he seemed to be poor, he paid for the new stove and table and paid for his nursing. He had a most complicated suit of underclothing of his own making; it was buttonless, full of puckering strings, and it took him from an hour to two hours to dress and undress. He was bald, had false teeth, and carried an ear trumpet of cheap design.

He died of no particular disease—just worn out. Then surprises came thick and fast.

In one old pocket in his clothes, the coroner and public administrator found $200, in another $2000 and a key, and when the key was fitted in a box at the Union Bank of Savings and turned, there was found in an old chest protector, $140,000 in gold and bills.

Before the public administrator had finished his investigation, the attorney for his office let the fact of the mystery become known, and it was published broadcast in the next few days. Then letters began pouring in until more than 5000 were received from persons who claimed to be the legitimate heirs. Some even went so far as to file alleged wills of Charles Hill for probate.

The attorney for the public administrator opened the battered trunk which Charles Hill had taken to the hospital with him, and there, among a collection of tin cans, kindling wood, hairpins, paper napkins and old papers, he found a Bible, on the fly leaf of which was written with ink that had almost faded the words:

"Salem Charles, 1860, Brim I Massachusetts."

The last line was taken to mean Brimfield, Mass., and hither the attorneys went and soon found the family of Salem Charles, finding that his namesake (nephew) was chairman of the board of street commissioners of Boston, and his niece, Miss Mary Charles, a Boston woman of literary and social prominence.

These relatives knew little of the last twenty years of their uncle's life. When a boy he had run away from home and had not returned until well along in years. He had not been received with open arms, but the family was reconciled when he produced a bank account of many thousands of dollars. He took a fancy to the niece, Mary, and invited her to travel with him.

She came to California with him and they visited many of the places to which he returned a few years ago. The understanding she had with him was that she was to go back to Brimfield and he was to make her his heir. He did this, but destroyed the will when she displeased him later. The Charleses last heard from their uncle in the '80s.

Of the many alleged wills presented, only one was found to have a backer when the case came up in probate court before Judge Shaw and, later, before Judge Curtis D. Wilbur. This was the document presented by Mrs. Driggs. It bore date of Jan. 14, 1888, two days after Salem Charles had been in New York. This discrepancy of two days and their inability to trace Salem Charles during that time was the biggest obstacle the Charleses had to overcome.

The Charles Hill that Mrs. Driggs told of was a member of the counterfeiting gang to which Jim Guyon, George Manning and Nelson Driggs belonged, and of which Driggs was the acknowledged leader, and the scenes of the operations included Minneowa, Minn.; Centralia, Ill., and Dayton, Ohio. They were raided at each place.

At the Dayton "plant" they turned out the famous "Webster head" counterfeit $10 bills, the plates for which have never been recovered. Mrs. Driggs admits she knows where they are, and that she only can find them, but does not propose to do so.

Mrs. Driggs knew Charles Hill, not only as a member of the gang, but as a warm friend of her husband and herself. Hill she said, told her, about the time a child was to be born to her, that he would make the child his heir if it were a boy, and when he returned, Jan. 14, 1888, and found a daughter had been born, he was disappointed, but said he would make the child his heir, anyway.

Pen, ink and paper were taken to him, and he asked Mrs. Driggs to draw up his will and said he would sign it. She started to do so, spilled the ink and made the will with lead pencil. This was the will produced in court here. The witnesses were George Manning and Nelson Driggs.

In 1889 the den was raided by secret service men and Driggs was captured. Guyon and Hill escaped by shooting down one of the detectives. Of the bogus "Webster head" bills, the secret service men foud $280,000.

It was shortly after this that Mrs. Driggs and her husband were taken to Cincinnati for trial. After the trial, which resulted in a disagreement of the jury, Mrs. Driggs returned home, and her husband was rearrested, taken to Illinois and sentenced to Joliet, where he died several years later.

Mrs. Driggs moved to New York city. She said she did not hear from Charles Hill, counterfeiter, again, until she read in a New York paper of the death of the old man known by that name in Los Angeles.

From the beginning of the case, the efforts of the Charleses were to show that the will of Charles Hill was a forgery. Mrs. Driggs brought forward as a witness Katie Castine, who was her nurse and was present when the will was signed. She also presented the depositions of prominent busines men of Dayton and Cleveland, Ohio, who knew of Charles Hill, and one or two of whom had been present at the signing of the will though not active witnesses.

Mrs. Driggs proved that the will was in a safe deposit box in Masonic Temple, Chicago, long before the old man died here. This in addition to the testimony of witnesses to the will, practically forced the Charleses to abandon the original fight for the fortune and turn to proving Mrs. Driggs a bad woman.

They brought witnesses to show her connection with the badger game at Eaton, Ohio, when a girl, and others to prove that she was not only a counterfeiter but had betrayed the gang to which she belonged. Mrs. Driggs did not try to defend herself.

The final battle was over the question of a bald head. Mrs. Driggs, in her original deposition, described Charles Hill, counterfeiter, as having an abundance of white hair. The Charleses laid stress upon the testimony given by the hospital attendants that the Charles Hill who died at the Good Samaritan hospital was bald as an egg. Mrs. Driggs wanted to have the body taken from the grave again, but this plan was blocked by the Charleses, because hair has been known to grow on a corpse long after the body has been in the ground. Mrs. Driggs contended that hair was never known to grow on a bald-headed corpse.

THE SHOOTING OF W. F. STREET

Young Boy Tripped and His Shotgun Was Discharged.

Bemidji, Minn., July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The whole town was inexpressibly shocked Thursday morning at the news which traveled like wildfire of the acidental shooting and death of W. F. Street, Bemidji's foremost business promoter. About 9 o'clock Thursday morning, accompanied by his wife and 15-year-old brother-in-law, Mr. Street went into the woods east of town to pick berries. The young boy carried a loaded shotgun and, falling somewhat in the rear of his companions, and wishing to catch up, he commenced to run. When directly behind Mr. Street the boy tripped and fell. The gun was exploded and the entire contents of the gun struck Mr. Street in the small of the back. A farmer driving by at the time lifted Mr. Street into the wagon and drove rapidly to town, but just as they reached his office door he breathed his last.

The Bland boy, whose gun caused Mr. Street's death, is nearly crazed with grief, and he is constantly watched for fear he will do something desperate. Mr. Street was a man of about 55 years of age and was well known throughout the sate. He was always ready with his money and influence to help out any public enterprise, and has done more for Bemidji than any one man. On June 8 of this year he married Miss Bland, of Anoka, and besides this young wife, he leaves two children by a former marriage.

DESTROYING MOSQUITOES.

Dr. Stilles Will Study Parasite He Discovered.

Washington, July 31.—Dr. Charles Wardell Stilles, chief zoologist of the public health and marine hospital service, will go to New Jersey in a few days to take up seriously and systematically the work of studying the mosquito parasite which he discovered and to which he has given the scientific name "agamomermis culicis," with which he hopes to exterminate mosquitoes. He will undertake his work at the request of Professor Smith, state entomologist of New Jersey.

The Washington scientist is hopeful of attaining such results from his investigation in New Jersey as will justify a recommendation to the government for the propagation of the mosquito destroyer in such numbers as will ultimately lead to the extinction of mosquitoes in localities where they are now the greatest pests.

Dr. Stilles' attention was first called to the parasites while he was a student at Leipsic, Germany, about fifteen years ago. He noticed then that the mosquitoes, which on miscroscopic examination were shown to harbor the agamomermis culicis, were harmless many days before death. He is of the opinion that it is necessary to gather as many specimens of the agamomermis culicis as possible while he is studying the habits of the parasite in New Jersey. He will bring these specimens to Washington and then learn how to propagate them in the greatest number.

When this point is settled it is thought a regular propagating station of the mosquito destroyer will be established here, and from this beginning the parasites can be scattered all over the country under government supervision, with instructions how to apply them.

It is not doubted that an apparatus can be devised for spraying the parasites or eggs by the billion in swamps and other breeding places of mosquitoes, so that the insect will be attacked by its devouring enemy before it gets big and hardy enough to seek human prey.

BRUTALLY TORTURED.

A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equaled. Joe Golobick, of Colusa, Calif., writes: "For fifteen years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me, though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and Kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists.

RIGHT TIME TO HIT

Winnipeg Gets Good One When Needed and Wins From Duluth.

Duluth In Fifth Place Again—Superior Defeats Grand Forks.

NORTHERN LEAGUE.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Winnipeg	47	16	.746
Grand Forks	38	24	.612
Crookston	36	26	.581
Fargo	23	37	.383
Duluth	23	38	.377

Duluth had the game with Winnipeg won up to the last inning when with two men out Cameron hit out a hard one that brought in two runs and gave the game to Winnipeg. Duluth's error column shows up badly, however, six being credited to the Cardinals. Winnipeg had four. Noldin was in the box for Duluth and was hit seven times while Bemis for Winnipeg was touched up for eight. The score:

	R.	H.	E.
Winnipeg ..... 0 1 0 0 0 2 0 0 2 —5	11	4

Batteries—Noldin and Crippen; Bemiss and Rogers.

Superior was on the home ground again yesterday and manifested its glee by giving Grand Forks an awful drubbing, 10 to 4. The game was a slow and dragging one and not marked by any spirited playing. McGaughey twirled for Superior and Lucas for the Forks. A protest was made in the third inning on the ground that a put out was allowed when a baseman was not touching the base. The wrangle that ensued over this caused Capt. Cole to be sent to the bench. The score:

Superior ..... 0 0 4 1 2 2 2 0 0 x —10

Batteries—McGaughey and Howard; Lucas and Muliane.

Crookston and Fargo did not play yesterday, the Crookston team being on the road from Winnipeg.

Duluth is now in fifth place in the percentage column, the loss of yesterday's game throwing it behind Fargo which did not play.

Manager Van Praagh has released Freeman, the left fielder, because of weak stick work.

Fans who journey out to the baseball park tomorrow afternoon will see one of the fastest amateur games of the season between the F. A. Patrick & Co. and Kelley-How-Thomson nines.

F. A. Patrick & Co. while occupying third place in the league, have won every game played during the month of July and are confident of making a good showing tomorrow. The opinion of those who have watched the games closely is that the teams are very evenly matched. The team work of both is good and the dry goods men have shown a wonderful improvement in stick work during the last month. The line-up will be:

JUDGE OVERRULES

A Father's Objections to His Daughter's Marriage.

Reading, Pa., July 31.—Judge Bland, in the Berks Orphans' court, had handed down an opinion of far-reaching effect on marriage and the rights of young women in relation to their parents' wills. He plainly states that when parents fail to act with wisdom the court must step in and see that the futures of daughters are not blighted.

William Rissmiller and Mary Lorah, of Blandon, have been lovers several years. Miss Lorah is but 20 years old, Rissmiller is 25 and earns $3 a day in the Blandon rolling mill.

Allen Lorah, the girl's father, refused to sign an application for a marriage license, and on petition Judge Bland appointed William H. Boyer as guardian, to give the necessary consent. The judge says:

"Some parents seem to think that the whole circle of their duty to their children embraces nothing but the supply of their special needs, and that if they clothe them and feed them and house them they perform their whole duty.

"They seem to be unaware of the fact that all of the value and beauty of life have their seat and source in the soul, and that while the supplying of the physical wants of children is necessary to the maintenance of their bodies, the true cultivation of their spiritual life and character is the highest duty and most sacred function of the parent. There is a significant statement in the answer filed by the father, and strongly persuasive as evidence that the petitioner here has not received that home training to which she was entitled. The answer says that she is too young and not sufficiently acquainted with household duties to enter the bonds of matrimony. A large proportion of women marry under 21 years of age, and there is no good reason why a girl of that age should not have been thoroughly trained in everything necessary to the proper management of a home."

TWENTY LASHES.

Cat-of-Nine-Tails Revived In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., July 31.—At a summary session of the criminal court, here before Police Magistrate McMicken yesterday afternoon, Jean Baptiste Blondou, a French halfbreed, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary and in addition twenty lashes from the cat-of-nine-tails, for robbery with violence.

This is the first time since the amendment to the criminal code of Canada, providing for corporal punishment in cases of robbery with violence, that the sentence has been imposed.

WANT RAILROAD TIES.

Victoria, B. C., July 31.—Representatives of a South African railroad syndicate have been in Victoria inquiring regarding the possibility of securing 2,000,000 hemlock railway ties for South Africa railroads of which nine hundred miles are to be built at once.

EXPLORING FOR IRON

Iron County, Mich., Prominent as Field For Explorations.

Baraboo Range In Wisconsin Is Showing Up Strongly.

Iron Mountain, Mich., July 31.—During the past three or four years four new mines have been opened in Iron county, a record unequaled in any section of the Lake Superior iron mining field except in the Masaba range. In addition exploratory and development work is in progress at several properties which give much promise of becoming large and profitable producers. The four new mines are the Baltic and Caspian in the Iron river district, and the Tobin and Lot three in the Crystal Falls section. The two former are Pickands-Mather properties, the Tobin is controlled by the Corrigan-McKinney people and Lot Three is a Deering Harvester company proposition.

Great surprise has been occasioned at Crystal Falls by the announcement that the district officials of the Oliver Mining company, the ore producing branch of the steel trust, have received orders to suspend all diamond drill work at the various Oliver explorations under their jurisdiction. The showing at the several properties where the Oliver is searching for paying deposits has been considered very encouraging.

It is the opinion of Capt. C. T. Roberts of Crystal Falls, who has charge of the exploratory work being done on the new iron range near Baraboo, Wis., by the Deering Harvester company, that the new field will become a large and important producer of ore, only being exceeded by the Mesaba. In his estimation the range will be found to contain 100,000,000 tons of ore or more. So far the Deering Harvester interests control the major portion of the holdings where work is in progress, but there are other companies who also have made important finds. All the exploratory operations are being conducted by means of drills, the Harvester people alone having five diamond and three churn drills at work, and except in the case of the same interests no shafts have as yet been sunk to open up the ore bodies tapped by the drills. This is because there is a sandstone capping overlying the ore that carries an immense amount of water, and it is first desired to solve the problem of caring for this water before shafts are put down with the risk of drowning out the workings.

At the shaft sunk by the Harvester company a pumping plant with a capacity of 3000 gallons of water a minute has been installed, but as yet care has been taken not to sink down through the water level and the other companies are apparently awaiting the experience of the Harvester interests before putting down shafts.

As a result of the recent deal by which the United States Steel corporation obtained a half interest in the properties of the Clarion Steel company, it has practically secured control of the Champion mine on the Marquette range.

The Fredericks exploration near Iron Mountain on the Menominee range is about to pass into the hands of the Buffalo and Susquehanna Steel company, the negotiations for its transfer having been made at a conference recently held in Cleveland. A large body of ore has been proved up on the property and it is the reported intention of the steel people to install a concentrating mill.

The Breen estate, which still owns the old Breen mine at Waucedah, is planning a resumption of work at the property, to which one crew of men already has been sent to do preliminary work. The Breen was the first mine opened on the Menominee range and at one time was operated by Dr. N. A. Hulet, now with the steel trust, and it is believed it still contains good deposits of ore.

The extraordinary work being conducted by the Oliver Mining company at the old Hancock and Garfield properties near Norway is so far very encouraging in its results. Ore has been encountered at each and from present indications the properties will be added to the producing list.

DELANEY'S BODY FOUND

Indicates That He Was Horribly Burned Before Jumping Overboard.

The body of Patrick Delaney, fireman of the tug Merrill, who was drowned early last week in the channel, off Elevator "H," was found late yesterday afternoon on the bay side of Park Point, about one and a half miles below the life saving station.

The body was taken at once to Durkan & Crawford's morgue, where the funeral will be held next Sunday under the auspices of the Tug Firemen's union. Nothing definite has been heard of any relatives that the decedent had, although it is rumored that he has a brother and a sister in Quebec.

The condition of the body indicates that Delaney was horribly burned, and bear out the supposition that he was crazed with pain when he jumped from the tug. The unfortunate fireman was about to put some coal in the furnace on the day of the accident, when a leak in the combustion chamber stopped the draught, and when the furnace door was opened the flames poured out in the fireman's face. He hastily ran up out of the fire room to the forward part of the tug and jumped overboard, drowning in a very short time and before assistance could be rendered.

The life saving crew dragged the bay for two days, but could not find the body. It was expected that it would rise yesterday or today, and a close watch was being kept for it.

WIRE-WOUND GUN TESTED.

Brown Cannon Does Better on Second Test.

New York, July 31.—Before Lieut. Gen. Miles and other members of the board of ordnance and fortifications, the ten-inch Brown segmental wire wound gun has been fired again on the Sandy Hook proving grounds. It was first tested in 1901. Then the breech block blew off under the strain of 29,000 to the square inch. In the second test, loaded with an amount slightly less than the service charge of 150 pounds of powder, a projectile weighing 500 pounds ricochetted far out to sea. Following this there will be further trials until the maximum strain has been placed upon the piece and 100 shots at least are fired. Except for a slight sticking of the breech block which, it is said, can be remedied, the present trial is declared to be a success. Construction of this gun was authorized in 1897. It cost the government $33,000.

MINISTER UPHELD

For Going to Camp Meeting In Automobile.

Chicago, July 31.—All the evidence is not in yet it is probable that the jury of elders from the First Methodist church of Oak Park will consider the matter later, but at present their verdict is:

First. That John Farson did not commit a sin last Sunday when he went out in his crimson courser, Le Rouge Diable.

Second. That a man may run an automobile on the Sabbath day and still remain a member of the Methodist church in good standing.

Third. That a preacher may sit beside a chauffeur while a horseless carriage covers sixteen miles in fourteen minutes on the first day of the week and continue to be a minister of the gospel.

Fourth. That a puff wagon that does not disturb the peace of the suburb is preferable anyway, to a tally-ho, on which there are many hilarious young men and women and a "tooter" whose horn wakes up the babies.

BEAU LOSES HIS BEARD

By Making Love to a Married Woman.

Chicago, July 31.—No longer is Anton Opellio, a former soldier of the czar, now a South Chicago steel worker, adorned with whiskers. Opellio, who is married, made love to Mrs. Anna Pindros, a neighbor. It is said, she was his sweetheart in the old country. Mrs. Pindros did not encourage a renewal of the love affair and when Opellio asked her to fly with him, she became very angry. Instead of fleeing with him she flew at him, knocked him down and, with a pair of scissors cut off his luxuriant beard.

Opellio, who considers himself quite a beau, declares that the loss of his whiskers has caused other women who looked upon not unkindly, to turn from him. He says he will sue Mrs. Pindors for damages. He thinks $10,000 barely would recompense him.

GOULD AND ROCKEFELLER

Backing the Packing House Project at Pueblo.

Pueblo, Col., July 31.—George J. Gould and John D. Rockefeller are said to be behind the packing house project which the United States Packing company has launched in this city to fight the alleged beef trust.

Russel Harding, general manager of the Missouri Pacific railroad, has sent telegrams to the Business Men's association offering ten acres of land and a bonus of $5000 for the enterprise.

In accordance with this, representatives of the financiers have promised to give the industry constant support, even though it will entail heavy loss in the transportation of beef trust products.

The entire $50,000 bonus for the packinghouse has been raised and the work of establishing the plans incident to the operation of the concern will soon begin.

LAKE SUPERIOR COMPANY

Will Not Go Into Hands of Receiver.

Philadelphia, July 31.—Cornelius Shields, president of the Consolidated Lake Superior company, was busy yesterday conferring with Philadelphia financiers. Mr. Shields said he believed the $12,000,000 bond issue, the response to which is reported encouraging, will prove the salvation of the company.

"There is absolutely no possibility of the Lake Superior company going into the hands of a receiver," Mr. Shields declared. "The published reports to that effect are absurd. If the bond issue is not a success, the only thing that could happen would be foreclosure by the bonding syndicate, which holds the $5,000,000 loan. They would take up everything."

TWO WERE DROWNED.

Chicago, July 31.—By the overturning of a small rowboat on the lake front last night Fred Odett and Albert Monsen, employes of the Western Stone company, were drowned. Two companions of the dead men narrowly escaped a similar death and were completely exhausted when members of the life saving crew reached them. The accident occurred but a short distance from the shore, in view of several hundred persons, who were on the pier at the time, but were unable to render any assistance.

WILL ESCAPE LOCKJAW.

St. Paul, July 31.—Herman Schoberg, the bacteriologist of the city health department, who, on Wednesday of last week accidentally inoculated himself with the germs of tetanus while experimenting on a guinea pig, with serum taken from a lockjaw case, is now considered to have escaped the dreaded results of the accident, and Dr. O'Hage is practically convinced that he is going to escape lockjaw. The accident occurred as Schoberg was attempting to inoculate a guinea pig with the germs taken from a boy who died recently in the city of lockjaw, as the result of a Fourth of July accident.

NEPHEW OF KITCHENER.

SEWER CONNECTIONS.

There should be no time lost in providing the remedy for the defect in the city ordinance regarding the power of the board of health to order sewer connections wherever deemed necessary. It has been generally supposed that the board had full authority to compel property-owners to comply with its orders in this respect, but the claim is now set up that the board is powerless to take any legal action to enforce the penalty provided for refusing to obey the provisions of ordinance No. 54 relative to making sewer connections.

By the terms of this ordinance the board of health is given the power to require all owners, agents or tenants occupying lots adjoining, or upon any street or highway where there is a public sewer, to make, or cause to be made, under the direction of the city engineer, and not otherwise, a sufficient drain for sewerage purposes, and to cause sewer pipes to be laid and connected by duly licensed persons, subject to the approval of the city engineer. It is also provided that a property-owner who neglects to comply with this order is subject to a fine not exceeding $100, and the expense of having the drain and sewerage connections made by the city, the cost to be established as a lien against the property described. This would appear to give ample power to force the making of sewer connections, but on the other hand it is claimed that the penalty cannot be enforced until the city council has, by ordinance, established the districts in which cesspools and outhouses will be allowed, and that the council has not yet designated these districts.

An ordinance covering this ground has been in the hands of the committee on sewers for some time past, but no action has been taken on it. There should be no further delay in the matter. The ordinance should be reported back and passed at the next meeting of the council, and then the board of health should compel all connections to be made on every street and avenue where there is a sewer. This is the season of the year when the connections can be easily made, and it is also the season when cesspools and outhouses which are not connected with the sewers are not only offensive, but dangerous to the health of the community. To the existence of these noisome disease-breeders can be traced numerous cases of scarlet fever, diphtheria and other contagious diseases, and regard for the health of the city demands their suppression.

SUCCESSFUL IRRIGATION.

Irrigators, or in other words those who are interested in the watering of the vast arid regions of the great West, will be pleased to know that the great dam at Assouan near the headwaters of the Nile in Africa, built for the purposes of irrigation, has proved most successful. Last winter it gathered its first stock of water, and the official reports say that the success of all the summer crops is assured as a result of the distribution of the water held in store by that dam.

The Assouan dam, and a smaller one in an adjoining stream, cost nearly $24,000,000, and if it becomes a means of increasing the cotton yield on the arid lands of Egypt the money has undoubtedly been exceedingly well spent. It is said that an acre of land in Egypt produces almost 500 pounds of cotton—while cotton ground in the United States produces only about 200 pounds. The Assouan dam towers 76 feet above the bed of the river and is about 6000 feet long. It will hold in reserve more than 1,000,000,000 tons of water—more than enough for a year's supply to the entire United Kingdom. The benefits to follow this venture have led to the inauguration of other enterprises of a similar character in other parts of the Upper Nile. Engineers are now making plans for the construction of a great reservoir system from which Upper Egypt and the Soudan can be irrigated.

The success of this great undertaking can well serve to point what may be accomplished in the United States when the irrigation systems that are now in contemplation are perfected and in operation. The quantity of water that flows to waste every year from the canyons in the Rocky Mountains is enormous. If this be distributed over the arid districts, and it can be done, it will increase the productiveness of the Western plains to an extent that can not now be imagined.

The "Greater Minneapolis Edition" of the Minneapolis Times, which was published yesterday in most attractive style, ably illustrates the growth of Minneapolis as a national trading and manufacturing center. Minneapolis holds this title by reason of being the flour center of the world, but the flour mills are only one of the many industries that contribute to the growth and prosperity of the city. In this special edition the numerous and varied industries receive special attention, and the large and increasing wholesale and jobbing business is also given much space. The Times believes that Minneapolis is destined to enact as important roles in the iron, wood and textile manufactures of the country in the near future as it now does in the flour business, and the reasons which it presents for this confidence are strong and convincing.

What bank consolidation will do has been illustrated in Boston. Five years ago there were 57 national banks in that city with a stock capital of $49,650,000 on which an average dividend of 2.3 per cent was paid. There are now 37 national banks, with a capital of $33,800,000, which pays 6 per cent.

A 5-months-old baby in New York swallowed a toy automobile, but was not killed by it. Perhaps it is the only way to avoid being killed by an automobile.

THE PENSION ROLL.

According to the way the applications are coming in to the pension department from those who participated in the Spanish war, they will soon offset the natural decrease in the number of civil war pensions and keep the list at high-water mark. Although the precise statistics for the last fiscal year have not yet been tabulated, the data at hand go to show that the payroll of pensioners on account of the war with Spain now approximates $2,700,000. As Harper's Weekly says, compared with the grand total of $137,000,000 that roughly represents the annual disbursements of pensions on account of all wars, this seems an insignificant sum. But when it is remembered that the civil war alone engaged the services of more than 2,213,000 men, and that of these only 1,727,000 survived the close of hostilities, whereas the war with Spain engaged fewer than 275,000 and the losses by death fell short of 2000, the proportion of pensioners for the less bloody contest at arms assumes a larger importance. The war with Spain is not yet five years past. At a corresponding distance from the close of the civil war the disbursements for pensions were a little more than $29,351,000, and this included the pensioners of the revolution and all the other wars through which the country had passed.

The total number of individual pensioners created by all our wars down to the spring of 1898, and still on the roll, may be stated in round numbers at 990,000. The total created by the Spanish war to date will be found, when the full figures are in, to exceed 14,250. The civil war ended thirty-eight years ago, and the pension roll in 1866, representing all wars to that date, contained 126,722 names. Assuming the list chargeable solely to the Spanish war to grow in like proportion—and such things, in a country where the citizen soldier plays so considerable a part in politics, never move backward—we may look for a pension list in 1937, due to the Spanish war alone, of 111,007, or roughly, four pensioners to every ten men engaged; a very large percentage, in view of the non-hazardous character of much of the campaigning.

A comparison which will throw a still stronger light upon these figures may be made with the pension list of 1861, which, after the United States had passed through all its martial adventures down to the out-break of the civil war, contained only 8636 names, nearly equally divided between the invalid veterans and the widows. It is but fair to say that the disparity between the statistics of that remote day and ours is due not wholly to the initiative of the individual veterans who were to become beneficiaries of the system, but in very large measure to the trend of politics and legislation. The civil war differed from its predecessors in the fact that it offered practically the first crucial test of the loyalty of the American citizen to his government. The party that administered the government during the war has shaped legislation for most of the time since; and by way of emphasizing its own attitude and forcing the opposition into a false one, has persistently written into the statute book more and more liberal pension laws, embracing in their scope not merely the veterans of 1861-5, but those of 1812, 1846-7 and the Indian hostilities from 1832 to 1842. This is the sign of least hopefulness on the horizon today as far as economy is concerned.

At what a pace the pensions of the war with Spain have swelled may be seen at a glance in the following figures: Applications granted for the fiscal years 1899, 303; 1900, 1511; 1901, 4212; 1902, 4530; 1903, (incomplete), 4800.

There are now on hand about 45,000 applications; 10,500 have come in within the last twelve months. How carefully these have to be sifted is evident from the rejection of nearly 8000 claims in a single year. It is very evident that many of the claims from the soldiers of the Spanish war are due to the work of pension attorneys, and there is no doubt that a large number of the applications should be turned down.

A SURPLUS OF RECRUITS.

A peculiar condition exists at present in the army, inasmuch as there is a surplus of recruits for that branch of the service. A regiment about to sail for the Philippines recently had about fifty men more than the proper number. The surplus was occasioned by many of the men re-enlisting at once after their periods of service had expired. The department had not counted on so many of them re-enlisting and had forwarded a lot of recruits to fill their places.

Conditions in the army are now very attractive to young men who desire to see something of the world. The rule that a regiment shall serve only two years in the Philippines has made recruiting easy. Young men are not afraid of staying in the East that long. Then again, army life in the Philippines possesses few of the hardships of five years ago. Good, comfortable barracks have been erected all over the archipelago, the men know how to live to protect their health and there is just enough trouble to make things interesting. Many men enlist in the hope of finding some business opening in the Philippines. So plentiful are candidates that the standard of fitness has been materially raised. Only the finest specimens are now accepted, and the rejections are higher than they have been for years. The army is down to the very lowest limit, there being not more than 58,000 men in the service at present.

This certainly is a great change from a few months ago when it was hard work to get men either for the army or the navy.

There are dramatic situations in real life as well as on the stage. John Deringer, a switch operator at Tabor station, near Philadelphia, got into one of them the other night. At work in a lonely tower he was suddenly confronted by a man who yelled: "Four men back there in the woods want to kill me!" The intruder grabbed Deringer, who barely managed to drag the maniac to the telegraph instrument and send a message for help. Officers were dispatched from the Germantown police station on a locomotive, and they rescued Deringer, who by that time was pinned to the wall in the grasp of his excited visitor.

The Irish department of agriculture is endeavoring to establish a new industry in the manufacture from beet-root and potatoes of a low-grade of alcohol or gasoline as a fuel for automobiles. In France a considerable demand has sprung up for alcohol cheap enough to compete with petrol or gasoline as a fuel for automobiles. In France a considerable demand has sprung up for alcohol for this purpose, and it is thought that the great productivity of Ireland in potato raising can be turned to account.

As there are now two bridges across the East river from New York city, although the second is not completed, the aldermen are hesitating about appropriating the necessary $6,523,000 to build a third. But it is needed and must be built in the near future.

It looks as if the star of Newport is setting. It is declining as the chosen retreat of the American aristocracy, and already plenty of villas there are for sale.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Congressman J. Adam Bede is up a stump. He will go this evening with the Finlanders' excursion to the Ishpeming gathering of Temperance workers among that nationality.

That is all right. He will probably enjoy it.

Congressman Bede has addressed or told stories before the chilli, stony front of a Boston banquet board, and caused it to melt into laughter or serious contemplation, as the case might be regarding his theme or topics.

He has been before the Garfield club in Duluth and elicited cheers and applause for his efforts.

He has been in many other places, but always with something to say that would be of interest, and if possible something light and airy that will entertain.

Congressman Bede has a theory that the solid, sound truth, blurted out, is not as pleasant sometimes, nor as effective, when that is desired, as when clothed in some summer frivolity or cleverly turned story.

Now what is causing some doubts and dubious thoughts on the part of Mr. Bede, is that he may have found his Waterloo, for his reputation as an entertaining speaker is now at stake, and he must carry the flag over the ramparts in the face of such a deadly volley as Finnish conversation, though death be nigh.

The congressman looked pale and weak this morning at the St. Louis hotel, when the clerk asked him how long he was going to stay.

"Only a little while," he said, forcing a smile, "I am going to Ishpeming with the Finnish temperance people this evening."

The trouble in the atmosphere surrounding Mr. Bede is that he doesn't know what he can discuss to the members of the society if it turns out that they are not able to understand English.

However, Mr. Bede, with his eye upon the Bright Star of Hope, and baggage on the South Shore train will make the adventure, and leave little Pine City and Duluth to their fate.

Lumbermen are gathering here from various parts of Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota, and the whole gathering will move for Portland, Ore., Sunday or Monday.

One or two of the lumbermen have arrived here and several are making reservations at the hotels, heralding their approach.

It is expected that there will be fifteen or twenty prominent men in the lumber business take for the Pacific coast, where they will inspect the timber lands, with a view of purchasing, if they get what they want.

United States Deputy Marshal F. W. Tufts, of Cass Lake, came to Duluth this morning, and registered at the St. Louis hotel.

W. T. McCarthy and A. B. Choates, of Virginia, and C. P. McClure, of St. Cloud, returned this morning from a trip to the Arcturus mine, where they inspected the work being done under the supervision of H. Jarchow.

The mine is turning out some ore, which is being placed in the stock pile, and the washing machines are separating the ore from the sand, which is found in large quantities in the ore at that part of the Mesaba range.

It is not probable the Arcturus will ship before the middle of next summer, when the Great Northern will build in on the line now running to the Crosby mine.

The washing machines are said to be quite satisfactory, and a valuable thing on that part of the Mesaba range.

Lewis Iselin is traveling over the ranges today in a special car, looking over the mines, while his father, G. Oliver Iselin the managing owner of the Reliance, is working the craft out on the briny deep. The younger Iselin will return here tomorrow noon, and will then hook on to an eastern train and make tracks for New York, for he is rather anxious about those international yacht races himself.

Smokeless Breakfast Food.

The Galveston News is authority for a good story about Gen. Miles' recent visit to that city. While inspecting Fort San Jacinto, one of the men who have the ammunition magazine in charge was standing at the door of the place with two little strips of something that looked like macaroni, they being about the size and length of that Italian delicacy.

"What's that?" said Gen. Miles.

"Don't you know, general, what that is?" said the government official.

"Don't believe I do," said the general, examining a piece of the stuff.

"That's the powder we use in that rifle there," as he pointed to one of the giant 10-inch guns fronting out over the emplacement.

Nobody laughed so heartily as the general himself at the very ridiculous idea of the head of the United States army not knowing what powder was when he saw it.

One of the officers then said: "That stuff is put up in those boxes you see over in that corner there. When the storm hit this fort and scattered our guns and ammunition all over south Texas, it became necessary for us to send out an officer to locate and recover as much of it as possible.

"One day while in the discharge of his duty he came upon an old farmer up the bay somewhere who had been picking up what he could find over in his section of the state. The officer found several of these boxes stacked away in the old man's larder, and he, in the name of Uncle Sam, proceeded to seize the combustible.

"The officer procured a wagon, and as he was leaving the old man's place with his capture loaded on the wagon the old man with some degree of satisfaction sang out:

"'Take your old macaroni. It's no good nohow. Mary boiled some a whole day, and it tasted like mule.'"

RUBBER.

(An illustrated story of human nature.)

This is the man who stopped on the street
And gazed at something beneath his feet:
O

This is the second who stopped to see
Why the first had paused so suddenly:
o O

And this is the third who checked his pace
To watch the others with anxious face:
o o O

A fourth pedestrian comes to a stand
And joins the silent, inquisitive band:
o o o o

In less than a minute, ten small boys pause
To learn what's doing—and what's the cause:

oooo oo O o ooooo

And so the crowd grows rapidly
Until it looks like a lynching bee:

ooooooo
oooooooooooooo
oooooooooooooooo
oooooooooo O ooooooooo
ooooooooooooooo
oooooooooooooo
ooooooo

At last a man from across the way
Asks: "Who is hurt? What's wrong, I say?"

"? ? ! ? ? ? ? ? ? ?"

And the cause of the trouble is heard to call,
"I couldn't remember an errand—that's all!"

* * * * * *

The crowd, disgusted, melts away,
And what do you s'pose they think and say?

THOUGHTS BY PEASE.

Anoka Union (Rep.): Friends often do much harm to a politician.

Too much joshing is not relished by any man.

There is a whole lot of political dead ducks in Minnesota and they don't know it.

There are several men in Minnesota holding office who have fooled the people long enough.

Van and his men are patiently waiting for an excuse for Sam to get in the game. There is a good prospect for it to come.

It's about time for Duluth to trot out a candidate for congressman in the eighth district in place of J. Adam.

The fellow who gets the Republican nomination for governor next year will have to part with many of his ducats.

The political wheel as it turns indicates Joel Heatwole at the hub, and knowing pretty near where the spokes are.

Likely as not the next Republican state convention will be held in the People's church, St. Paul, and to think of such a wicked fellow as Bob Dunn being selected to head the ticket in such a place.

Why He Ate Yolks of Eggs.

New York Tribune: Lady Yarmouth, who was Miss Alice Thaw of Pittsburg, was presented at the court of St. James in June. Since her arrival at the Yarmouth estate she has received much attention from the peasants, and many small presents have been bestowed upon her. She told to one of her American friends who visited her in England the following story, which she got from a woman whose sick child she was visiting.

The woman complained to Lady Yarmouth of her difficulty in getting along, and of an experience she had had with a boarder.

"The first morning this man stopped here," she said, "he began to eat boiled eggs very greedily. Egg after egg he ate, three, four, five, six—and it was only the yolk of them that he swallowed, the white he didn't bother with at all.

"When he dug his spoon into the seventh egg my terror got the better of me and I said in a severe tone:

"'Don't you ever eat the white of the egg, sir?'

"'Surely not, my woman,' he answered. 'The yolk is the bird; the white is the feathers. Would you have me make a bolster of myself?'"

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A wife goes on loving from force of circumstances; a husband from force of habit.

A woman who hasn't trouble enough to satisfy her can always have it by getting more servants.

Sometimes it takes people a long time to make up their minds if they love each other before marriage, but not after.

Right in the middle of trumping her partner's trick a woman is so interested in the game that she pauses to see how her rings look as she lays down the card.

Some Men Have Such Luck.

Chicago Record-Herald: "Fortunate chap, that Dunkley," he remarked. "They say the girl has a million in her own right. I wonder how he ever caught her?"

"I believe," she replied, "that he happened by a lucky chance to recognize a photograph which had been fixed up by a skillful retoucher as a picture of her without even needing a second guess. The picture was really very beautiful."

Our City Streets.

The king of France,
With sword and lance,
And twice ten thousand men,
Marched up the pike,
Or something like,
And then marched down again.

In this respect
We may detect
His likeness to us when
We pave a street
With smooth concrete,
And rip it up again.

He Paid For His Baggage.

A commercial traveler for a wholesale notion house while recently in Atlanta, Ga., approached a stranger as the train was about to start and said: "Are you going on this train?" "I am." "Have you any baggage?" "No." "Well, my friend, you can do me a favor, and it won't cost you anything. You see, I have two rousing big trunks, and they always make me pay extra for one of them. You can get one checked on your ticket, and we'll euchre them; see?" "Yes, I see; but I have no ticket." "But I thought you said you were going on the train?" "So I am. I'm the conductor." "Oh!" He paid for his extra baggage as usual.

THE PIECE SYSTEM

May Be Introduced In Baseball Instead of Salaries.

Stern Necessity May Reduce Players to Day Laborers.

St. Louis, July 31.—One of the biggest "grafts" in the history of non-working salary earners is on the eve of being crushed, says the Post-ispatch.

For a long time it has been supposed that the members of the Olympian gold trust had the biggest cinch ever known to history, but moderns dispute this and say that during two years the best snap on record is that of the ball player.

Never having had a whack at the Olympian trust we cannot say. Literature informs us that all Jove had to do was to go out, burn a little red fire, roll a barrel down Mount Olympus and he had the whole country side kow-towing and coughing up all sorts of negotiable commodities from a gold statue of himself to a peck of potatoes.

The ball player, we believe, can beat this. All he has to do is to write his name to a piece of paper and the magnate coughs up. No red fire, no magnesia lightning and no tin thunder.

Circumstances (over which the ball player has no control, it may readily be believed) have combined to the destruction of this great system. It is sad, but it seems certain.

In the peace agreement, recently renewed at New York at a meeting of National league magnates, the ball player can see his finish.

No spectacles are needed. A plain, unvarnished fact stands out as a conclusion to be derived from the refusal of the magnates to enter into a quarrel with the American league.

That fact reads: "We are magnates. We need the money. Down with the ball players' salaries!"

In the past the magnate has been the important factor. Ever since the Egyptian and Abyssinian stonemasons' unions called off the workmen from a big job of pyramid building and backed up against Cheops, the magnate has been the whole show.

The only result of the great Egyptian strike was a horrible increase in the mortality rate for stonemasons, until the workmen decided they didn't care about eight hours any longer and returned to business, fewer in number, but greater in wisdom.

So a fight between the ball player today and the magnate looks to have only one finish.

It doesn't require a horoscope to see it.

While not making any predictions, there is a possibility that the ball player may descend from an accomplished, high-salaried artist to a plain, ordinary tradesman, paid by the day, or, more probably, by the piece.

The piece system seems destined to popularity.

Under the present regime where salaries are played, there is no guarantee that a $500 player before the season starts, will not hit, run and field like a plain, everyday minor leaguer. He will not manufacture base hits and great stops when you want them, but only when he happens to be in the humor.

But look at matters under the proposed plan. This contemplates payment for every bit of work done, and only for that.

Under this regime, if Burkett goes to bat, and there is a man on base, the manager calls from the bench:

"Make me a base hit right quick, Jesse," and it is then up to Jesse.

If he makes it he gets say $3. If he makes a two-base hit he gets $4 a three-bagger say $5 and a "homer" ought to be worth a ten spot.

This leaves the hitter considerable latitude. He can not go out if he wants to. If he feels tired and don't care about hurrying to beat out a bunt he can take it easy. Only he does not cash. The management is not out anything because it is only paying him for what he does.

On the other hand, he can stand up there and manufacture home runs all afternoon, if he cares to, and the management will not cut down his work. At $10 per throw this is a soft occupation. If a man makes four home runs a day it can readily be seen that his salary for the season on home runs alone will be $5600.

This may sometimes be cut down when the manager thinks a sacrifice hit is necessary. These are worth only $2, but the player again has the option of hammering out a "homer." Sacrifice hits are not insisted upon where home runs are substituted.

In the field the player again has a chance to go to the front. If he works in the outfield where chances are few, about $5 a throw for flies is his share, while in the infield, where they come easier and oftener, they are worth about $2. An assist, a put-out, and all other points of play are to have a value. They are "pieces," and paid for when turned out.

Supposing that the ball player works no harder than he does under the salary system, however, and his income takes a remarkable and unpromising shift.

If he bats .300 he makes a little over one hit every three times he comes to bat, or an average of $5 a day for batting. Most of them never make a home run, so that calculation can be omitted.

On fielding, if he has a good day, he may turn over $10 a game, which would make him about $1400 a year, or a total salary of $2100. This is a mere bagatelle compared to the war prices now being paid some of our most efficient non-hitters.

The battery, having peculiar and special work to perform, will be hired by the day. At present their arduous duties compel them to work once every four or five days. Fifty dollars a game for every winning game and $20 for a losing one would be about the proposition. No restriction is placed upon a pitcher. He can win every contest if he feels that way about it.

There are those who think that a fine would be the proper thing for errors, and that every misplay would mean a "dock," but it is considered that this might discourage fielders from going after the hard ones.

On the contrary, the new system will tend to increase the efficiency of the players.

For example, when a high soarer comes out to left and goes foul, the left fielder will not dally watching it fall. Not he! He will hotfoot to get under that foul and make a fly put-out.

"Get on to that!" he will say, as the sphere comes speeding out. "Here comes my new $5 hat! Me to it!"

Or perhaps a hot drive comes ambling down to the short stop. Instead of sidestepping it, he gathers it in on the basis that it means a pair of $1.50 seats for him at the show next winter.

Eets like that can't be overlooked.

It is easy, however, to figure out much trouble from this system. The first thing that will crop out will be with the ball players' union, which will insist upon the adoption of the association scale—higher, of course, than that of the magnates.

But as without base hits and putouts the ball player cashes no checks, the magnate will probably once more put his heel on the throat of the workingman.

Another trouble will doubtless be with special men, who in place of receiving the scale will be paid extra high rates for base hits, their ability in that line being better than the average.

The general aspect of the situation from the player's standpoint is discouraging. No war is in sight, and the magnates have combined. With piece work staring them in the face, they will actually have to go to work and earn something.

This distressing state of affairs cannot be ameliorated, and should be endured with patience. Remember the ball player has had the inning. It is the magnate's turn now.

At least the wise men say so.

DENIED BY CHAMBERLAIN.

Secretary Never Proposed to Tax Raw Materials.

Manchester, Eng., July 31.—The possibility of the taxation of raw cotton imported into Great Britain from foreign countries, while cotton grown within the empire may be exempted, has greatly exercised the manufacturers of the Lancashire district. In reply to a direct question as to whether the rumor was true that the preferential tariff proposals contemplated such action, Colonial Secretary Chamberlain has telegraphed as follows:

"The statement is absolutely untrue as regards myself. In fact, I have publicly repudiated the suggestion to tax raw materials."

THE STAGE

The first presentation of Augustus Thomas' beautiful drama, "Alabama," by the Melbourne MacDowell company, was greeted by one of the largest first night audiences seen at the Lyceum during the engagement.

The change from the heavy plays to the lighter Thomas drama seems to have been popular, temporarily at least. The audience last evening was very appreciative and with good excuse.

"Alabama" is one of the masterpieces of Augustus Thomas, whose plays never seem to weary American theater-goers. The scene of the play is in Alabama, and some of the scenic effects, representing the magnificent Southern scenery, are most beautiful.

The play brings out the true strength of the company as well as any of its predecessors. Florence Stone increased the popularity which she has won by her conscientious work in different parts before Duluth audiences. As Mildred Page she was charming, and the soft Southern accent tripped most pleasingly from her tongue.

John Milton, as Capt. Davenport, the disgusted son of Col. Preston, acquitted himself with no little credit. The sscene between him and Miss Stone at the ruined gate, was one of the prettiest in the play.

Col. Moberly, a relic of the Confederacy, seemed to have stepped out of one of Opie Reade's novels for the sake of appearing in the piece. He was the pompous, generous, kind-hearted and courteous Southern gentleman of the ante-bellum period and he won instant favor with the audience.

H. B. Carpenter, as Squire Tucker, and Duncan Penwarden as Col. Preston, were equally good and their character parts were well taken.

Edward Carlton made all that was possible of his role as Decatur, the colored servant. The other roles were in excellent hands.

Kate Toncray, who had the principal role among the ladies, outside of Miss Stone, acquitted herself well as Carrie Preston, and the other two parts of Mrs. Stockton and Atlanta Moberly were well cared for.

"Alabama" will be continued tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening.

"The Burglar," that charming drama, which has been before the American people for many years and loses none of its interest for them, was given a fine presentation at the Metropolitan last evening by the stock company, and it promises to be one of the most ssuccessful of the plays given thus far.

Of especial interest was the appearance of Eddie Gardner, one of the trio of children, who have been before the patrons of the theater for a number of weeks in specialy work, in the character of Editha, the little maid, who finds the burglar at work in her home. Master Gardner played the part splendidly, making a sweet and winsome child, and not exaggerating any of the phases of the character.

Gus Forbes appeared in the role of the burglar and was adequate in every way to the demands of the part. In the third act scene, where the burglar meets the child, the strongest of the play, he was fine.

The other characters were well taken by Miss Marshall, Miss Carter, Miss Patti Rosa and Messrs. Franklin, Robinson and Hester.

This evening another performance will be given and tomorrow afternoon and evening performances.

BECOMES COUNTY CHARGE.

John Thelen, Laborer, Suffering With Consumption.

John Thelan, aged 45, a laborer from Hibbing, arrived in the city yesterday, a victim of consumption, and has become a county charge at the Red Cross hospital. Thelan has worked in the mines about two years and has been quite ill for the past two months. A friend furnished him with a ticket to come to Duluth.

Thelen has grown up daughters somewhere and County Superintendent of the Poor A. P. Cook will endeavor to locate them as they may be able to provide for their father.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Warden Traces Escaped Convict Allen to Minot County.

Minot—Warden Boucher, of the state penitentiary at Bismarck, is in the city, accompanied by Mounted Guard Baker, looking for an escaped convict named Harry G. Allen, who was serving ten years from Traill county for horse stealing, but who got away July 15 and is supposed to be in hiding in this vicinity. Allen is ill and cannot be far from here, as the last traces of him were in this county. A reward is offered for his apprehension.

Fargo—The decision of the state supreme court in the case of the Pine Tree Lumber company vs. the city of Fargo holds Fargo for more than a quarter of a million of old paving warrants. The plaintiffs furnished the lumber for the paving and took warrants in payment.

The warrants were based on a speech assessment for paving purposes and when presented there were not enough funds in that department to take them up. The city held that it was merely acting as agent. The lumber company sued and contended the warrants should be paid from the general fund if there was not enough collected on the special assessment. The supreme court decided in favor of the plaintiffs and $250,000 of old warrants will have to be made good from the general fund stock on hand.

Randall, one of the three men sentenced by Judge Adimon in connection with the bail insurance fraud, has secured bail and is at liberty. Miller and Glidel also secured bail. The men have been in jail about a week.

Some trace of the thieves who stole four horses at Wheatland has been secured at Eureka, S. D. It is thought the men are making for the Black Hills country. The authorities in that section have been advised.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Deadwood—The president has appointed W. A. Rankin, of Deadwood, superintendent of the Wind Cave national park of South Dakota. He will assume the custody of the park Aug. 1. Mr. Rankin was appointed on the recommendation of Capt. Seth Bullock, superintendent of the Black Hills forest reserve. He will be subject to the orders of Capt. Bullock and the latter will formulate regulations for the government of this park. Rankin was a sergeant in Capt. Bullock's troop of Grigsby's Rough Riders during the Spanish-American war.

Huron—The Huron stone and cement factory has just started and is turning out stone blocks at the rate of about 130 a day. These are to be used for veneering buildings. After passing through the press, where they are subjected to a pressure of from twenty to thirty pounds, the blocks come out with a rough outer surface which appears very much like stone. The company has another press and a gasoline engine on the way and will be able to make from 200 to 250 blocks a day.

Dr. J. P. Foster, of this city, was robbed of a $75 kit of surgical instruments while at Redfield by a gang of hoboes. He recovered the instruments only through the payment of $20 to the gang.

Evarts—The first artesian well on the Hunter ranch, north of Glenham, is flowing with a hundred pound pressure at a depth of 1800 feet. The second well is being put down. The first artesian well on the cattle trail west of the river is down about 1300 feet.

The corn crop was never known to be as good as it is this year. A big yield will be harvested.

Late rains have put the range in fine condition. Beef cattle are doing well and there will be some early shipments. The pontoon bridge over the river will be completed by Aug. 10. One thousand cattle an hour can be crossed on this bridge.

Aberdeen—Several of the largest insurance companies have notified their agents they will withdraw from the state. The reason given for this action is hostile legislation in the shape of the valued policy law. It is expected other companies will withdraw at the end of the year when their licenses expire.

Pukwana—Preliminary arrangements are being made for a grand celebration the first or second week in September. As planned, the Woodmen will furnish one day's sports, while the Pukwana business men will prepare a program for a second day's entertainment.

Sioux Falls—A Sioux Falls architect has completed the plans for the Carnegie library to be erected at Vermillion this summer. The building is to be 40x52 feet, one story high, with basement.

Platte—The first arrest in the state this year for killing prairie chickens out of season was made by Game Warden Cloud. The prisoner was fined $10 and costs.

HARE GOES TO PHILIPPINES.

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 31.—Charles B. Hare has accepted the appointment of government bacteriologist in the Philippines, at a salary of $1500. He is the young man who contracted the bubonic plague while working in the laboratory of Michigan university with Dr. Noog.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Much Summer Logging Being Done on Upper Peninsula.

Calumet—Much summer logging is being done in the upper peninsula. The Holt Lumber company is operating one camp in Ontonagon county in which seventy-five men are employed. Log shipments average twelve carloads daily. Grading for the extension of the company's railroad three and one-half miles further north is under way.

It is stated that between 2600 and 2700 carloads of logs have been shipped by the Diamond Match company from Ontonagon to Green Bay, Wis., since April.

The Allis estate of Milwaukee has sold the standing timber on 3840 acres of land in the southern part of Ontonagon county to Henry Knowlton of Cadillac, Mich. The consideration was $20,500.

The heading and stave mill of the Menasha Woodenware company at Covington has been shut down for repairs. About five cars of headings are being shipped daily from the stock on hand.

The shingle weavers at Sault Ste Marie have formed a union. J. H. Prince is president.

The Burns & Hicks mill site, including forty acres of land, an inclosed harbor, barns, boarding houses, etc., has been sold to August Spies of Menominee.

The entire family of Con McCullar of Agate Harbor, an isolated settlement north of here in Keweenaw county, narrowly escaped death from poisoning caused by impure water. One daughter died before medical aid could be secured for her, and Mrs. McCullar and another daughter are in serious condition.

Negaunee—While returning to Sands on a hand var and rounding a curve near Goose Lake, William Linger of Cincinnati, O., was instantly killed and another man escaped without a scratch. The accident was caused by a collision with the north-bound fast freight on the Chicago & Northwestern railway, in whose employ they were working on a gravel train.

Escanaba—The extension of the Escanaba & Lake Superior road to the Cascade iron range will be completed in ninety days. To handle the expected increased business the company has found it necessary to secure more rolling stock. Last week an order was placed with the American Locomotive Works for a large Shea model engine.

During a severe electrical storm here a bolt of lightning struck the chimney of F. D. Mead's residence on Michigan avenue, causing considerable damage. In addition a hole was torn in the roof, and soot was blown all through the house. The building did not take fire. Mrs. Mead was at home, and although badly frightened was not injured.

THE GENTRY SHOW HERE

The Parade Promises the Finest Performances Ever Given.

The parade given by Gentry Bros.' dog and pony show brought out the fact that camels, elephants and other wild animals are among the collection of intelligent brutes, the "real actors," as Mr. Gentry says.

The display on the streets this morning was a surprisingly large one and well gotten up. Headed by he genial showman, who drove a small buggy, the small ponies, in pairs and fours, on small wagons and on chariots, and ridden by small, brown-faced boys.

"Little Jim" and "Pinto," two of the trained baby elephants, were in the parade and happy, "Pinto" bringing up the rear, and training his partner by the tail. The camels were also subjects of much curiosity, and the whole carts full of dogs, the best behaved of their kind on earth, drove by. The parade is a splendid pageant, and while there is an abreviation in the size of the individual wagons and animals in the parade, there is no diminution in the length of the parade as a parade. It is as long as a good many more pretentious circuses, and enjoyable every minute. The band wagon is at the head with a score of horses hauling it, and, of course, that was the attractive point for the small boys.

Several cages of monkeys and ourang-outangs were toward the rear of the procession, and these also caused a lot of fun for the thickly lined streets where the parade passed. Then there was a sacred cow, that ran away on First street, the youngster not being able to hold the animal, which wanted to brush flies off her.

The Gentry Bros.' show is being exhibited under canvas at Third avenue east and First street.

CARVING OF CASEY

Casey Himself Tells How Almost Fatal Job Was Done.

John Peterson Also Tells Stabbing Story—Harris Is Bound Over.

Willis Jackson and Peter Staples, the two colored men who are alleged to have nearly carved the life out of Frank Casey, a rival of Jackson's, in an alley off St. Croix avenue, a week ago last Tuesday morning, were bound over this morning by Judge Windom to await the action of the grand jury, on the charge of assault with intent to kill. From the nature of the offense charged the men could not be admitted to bail and were committed to the county jail.

This morning, for the first time since he was injured, Casey was able to leave the hospital and appear against the defendants. He is still feeble, but considering his terrible wounds, his recuperative powers have been something wonderful.

Casey testified that on the morning in question he went home at an early hour and found Jackson in the room with the woman he, Casey, had been living with. He said a general fight between himself and Jackson followed, in which Jackson fell and cut his head. He claims that Jackson cut him on the side of the face with a knife.

Continuing, he said that Jackson left the room, but when he started away, shortly afterward, both Jackson and Staple fell upon him in the alley and began using knives. He claimed that, while he was fighting Jackson, Staples struck him in the face with a rock and knocked him down, also that Staples stabbed him under the shoulder. He said that Jackson stabbed him in the abdomen and gave him two other cuts before they got him down on the ground, when they were frightened away by somebody shouting from a window.

Wm. Batchelor, a night cook at the Northland restaurant, on Lake avenue, and Jake Colstad, who rooms over the restaurant, testified to a fight which they witnessed between three men at the rear of the building the morning Casey was injured. They said it was still rather dark, and they could not identify the men who were fighting. Their testimony was to the effect that two of the men were engaged in a hand to hand struggle, and the third man was throwing rocks, one of the men being hit and falling to the ground, where the other two, after kicking him, left him and ran away.

John H. Norton represented the defendants.

Robert Harris, the colored man arrested by Chief Troyer while trying to pawn a stolen watch, was this morning bound over to the grand jury on the charge of grand larceny, his bail being fixed at $250.

Miss Laura Chandler, of 405 First avenue east, identified the watch and pin as her property. She said she last saw the articles on her dresser last Saturday night, about 12 o'clock. The next morning, when they were missed, she found her empty pocketbook in another room and the window out on a back porch partly open. The watch and pin were Christmas presents, and she gave a minute description to the police before she had seen the stolen property. Harris was represented by P. J. Neff.

Albert Lane, the waiter on the steamer America, who stabbed John Peterson, the wheelman, was this morning bound over to the next grand jury on the charge of assault in the second degree. His bail was fixed at $250, which the defendant is hopeful or raising among his friends.

Peterson, who has been under the doctor's care, with a cut in the wrist, one in the chest and another in the back, was able to appear in court this morning to give testimony for the state.

He testified that the trouble arose over the loss of a $5 bill belonging to his twin brother. He says that while he was asleep Lane entered their cabin and went out again, and that shortly afterward another employe on the boat came to call him to mess. He claimed that after the money was missed he went to Lane and asked him what he was doing in their room and when denial was made by the waiter that he was in the room, the witness called him a liar.

Peterson says the matter was dropped there, but was called up again when the boat tied up to the coal dock and he was engaged in some work. Lane came up and started arguing again until the witness finally suggested they go out on the dock.

He says that when he started off the gang plank, Lane and two companions were following him. He turned around and seized the waiter by the face and claims Lane had a knife in his hand with which he stabbed him in the back and a free-for-all mixup followed on the dock in which Lane's two friends participated. Peterson says he received two other stabs while the fight was in progress and before he could get hold of Lane's arm and prevent him from striking again.

Lane did not go on the stand in his own behalf. His defense was conducted by John Norton.

RAMPOLLA MAY WIN

Correspondent Predicts That He Will Wear the Tiara.

Accomplished Diplomat Who Charms All By His Grand Air.

New York, July 31.—The following letter from Innomita, correspondent of the New York Sun, and a person high in Vatican official circles, was forwarded from Rome on the day of the death of the pope, and gives clearly the ecclesiastical view of the situation in the sacred college:

Rome, July 20.—Political currents no longer divide as they used to do the various groups of the sacred college. Never has the papacy been so much as now a supernational institution, an exclusively religious ministry.

When the newspapers attribute to any cardinal, French, or German, or Austrian, or Italian sympathies, they make a gross blunder. It would be more exact to say that such a state is inclined toward such a cardinal and favors his election and candidacy.

Thus it is true and undeniable that Austria will prefer to propose Serafino Cardinal Vannutelli; Germany, Cardinal Gotti; France, Russia, Spain, Portugal and the United States, Cardinal Rampolla. But these "inclusions" or rather "exclusions" or predilections rather compromise the candidates.

Nowadays external influences are shown to be powerful by the bulls of Pius IX and the regulations of Leo XIII on the intangibility of the conclave. I am sure that Cardinal Gotti would have gladly dispensed with being distinguished by the German emperor, however flattering the distinction was. If governments wish to extend their action to the sacred college they can make use of only a sound policy of silence and discretion.

A mystic, discreet, impenetrable, inaccessible to intrigue, Secretary of State Rampolla avoids coming in contact with men and does not love politics. Brought up gradually to the higher employments by his beloved master, a hard taskmaster and free from personal interests as are great saints, he served Leo XIII and carried out his sublime designs out of obedicnce and love for the pope.

He smiles with his mysterious smile, amiable or contemptuous, which marks the corner of his lips and lights up his pathetic face when he watches the changes of events and the campaigns in the newspapers.

He has never been heard to utter a complaint against the base attacks or the treachery of which he has been so often the object. He fulfills his office as he sings a high mass, out of beauty and piety. His clear conscience and pure intentions raise him very high above the dusty battleground of political intrigue. His motto is, "We must serve only the holy see and the church."

To guarantee the papacy and the conclave against the greedy and eager invasion of parties; to develop the powers of the holy see and Catholicism and to win back the independence of the holy see are his ideals. It is he who will make the pope if he wishes. Will he wish it?

Will he even select a candidate? I don't believe it. And that is the best guaranty of success. Cardinal Rampolla del Tanadaro's candidacy is not put forward directly and is kept in discreet shows. To tell the truth, it is advanced by public opinion because really it is forced upon the attention of the Christian world.

He is, in fact, a sort of vice pope whom the Catholic church has become accustomed to see at the head of its government. He was nuncio at Madrid when the incident of the Carolines occurred, which he turned so skilfully to the moral profit of the holy see. The great success which Germany and Spain left the judgment of their differences to the arbitration of the pope, was due largely to him.

That was toward the end of 1886. Monsignor Rampolla was young—he was not yet 42—but no one was surprised to see him soon after invested with the purple and placed in the position that is prominent above all, that of secretary of state of the holy see.

Those who have had the honor to meet him at the nuncio's palace at Madrid first, and then at the vatican, have always been charmed by his grand air, which is tempered by an amiability and gentleness that are never failing. His modesty is such that when, according to custom, people stoop to kiss his hand, he stretches out his arms instinctively, offering to the visitor only the palms of his open hands.

Yet this amenity of manner does not make you forget the strong lines of the profile, the broad forehead across which a strong will flashes at times and under his usually half-closed lids a keen, intelligent, searching eye before which yours drops respectfully.

Cardinal Rampolla leads a life of asceticism and prayer which accords with the strong and patient will that characterizes him. There is nothing egotistical about him, no avarice; on the contrary, a great deal of generosity which has been shown on many occasions, notably on a certain feast of St. Peter, when he presented 100,000 francs to the vatican basilica, of which he is a rich priest.

The ambassadors of the powers with whom he has frequent relations consider him an accomplished diplomat, who inspires you with his opinions while seeming to ask for yours.

Nevertheless, the secretary of state to Leo XIII will probably be elected, not because he is opposed by a tradition that has been more than once violated, but because the election will be in the hands of his peers; many of whom, perhaps, owe their positions to him.

TWENTY SAILORS

Leap Into the Sea to Escape Death.

New York, July 31.—Twenty men, composing the crew of the tramp steamer Eastry, have had a narrow escape from death. Rushing from a burst of flame, caused by an explosion of sulphuric acid gas in the hold of the ship, which was moored in the Erie basin, the men made their way up black, smoke filled hatchways and, half smothered, plunged into the water.

The generation of inflammable gas, which started hundreds of miles out at sea two weeks ago, and which the captain and his crew had fought in vain, was permitted to go on, it is alleged, because there was not sufficient pumping power in the craft to quench its formation. Early today there was a sudden roar on board the ship and a cloud of smoke and dust poured from the hold.

The crew scrambled to the deck and plunged overboard. They reached the docks safely, and a fire tug, hastily summoned, towed the vessel into the stream. The loss is not known.

SHEEHY IS IN TROUBLE

Before the Court on a Charge of Defrauding Four Workmen.

Joseph Sheehy is in trouble again. Yesterday afternoon warrants were issued charging him with taking money from four different men with the intent to defraud. Sheehy was arraigned before Judge Gearhart, in municipal court this morning where he entered a plea of not guilty and his examination was set for tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock.

The complaining witnesses are James Summerland, James Griemer, Osman Tvedt and Thomas Simpson, all of whom alleges that July 28 Joseph Sheehy represented to them he was a legally qualified labor agent, that he had been authorized to hire men for Knudsen & Eden, to work in the freight sheds at 30 cents per hour. The fees in the case of Summerland and Griemer were 75 cents each, while Tvedt and Simpson claimed to have paid $1 each for their labor tickets.

In their complaint the men state that Knudsen & Eden repudiate Sheehy's statements that he was authorized by them to hire men and they allege Sheehy took their money and made false representations with the intent to defraud.

Sheehy was released, pending his examination, on his own recognizance.

Sheehy as usual, claims the prosecution is another example of the persecution which he says he is being subjected to in Duluth. At the meeting of the committee last evening to investigate the charges made against Alderman Tischer, Sheehy attempted to address the committee but was refused the floor. He declared that he was given no show at all, that he would only be in business here a few more days and they might at least give him an opportunity of telling some things he knew.

BRUTALLY MURDERED.

Soldier Killed In Camp Near Rockport, Ky.

Rockport, Ky., July 31.—John Galloway, a soldier recently returned from the Philippines, was brutally murdered at a camp two miles from here last night, and Robert Carroll, a companion, so badly injured that his life is despaired of. Two masked men appeared at the camp where arroll was alone and beat him into unconsciousness. While they were searching for money Galloway appeared and they shot him. The men secured $200 and escaped.

AT WEST DULUTH

The members of the West Duluth Commercial club are preparing to take an active part in the hearing of the Northern Pacific railroad case, which will be held Aug. 11 at 10 o'clock by the state railroad and warehouse commission at the Spalding hotel.

At last meeting of the council it was suggested by the city attorney that both the West Duluth Commercial club and the Duluth Commercial club be represented. In pursuance to this request a committee will probably be appointed at the meeting of the club to be held this evening.

The citizens of this portion of the city are hopeful that their long fight for the restoration of the service is over, and that the commission will take favorable action in the matter.

The case has been fought through the district court and the supreme court, and has now been referred back to the commission, which was declared by the supreme court to have jurisdiction in the matter.

The city attorney expressed his opinion at the meeting of the council last Monday that the commission would be largely guided by public sentiment in the matter, and that if there was clearly shown that the people earnestly desired the restoration of the service, their wishes would be granted.

A FIERCE RUNAWAY.

Grand Union Tea Company Causes Excitement.

A runaway team belonging to the Grand Union Tea company caused no little excitement in West Duluth this morning.

The team was standing in front of one of the stores on Central avenue. The driver was making some deliveries, and left the horses standing, fastened by a heavy weight. One of them became very restless, being bothered by flies, and kicked out rather savagely. The other animal became frightened and the team dashed up Central avenue.

The wagon swayed and the top of it came in contact with a telegraph pole. The top was listed off the wagon, which was overturned by the collision, and the horses broke the traces and continued their way up the street.

They stopped of their own accord before reaching Grand avenue, and the full extent of the damage done was the broken wagon and the loss of a considerable quantity of tea, coffee and spices, which was scattered over the road.

PAROLED FOR YEAR.

Emile Krohn Has Hearing For Incorrigibility.

Emile Krohn, a 16-year-old West Duluth boy, who was examined for incorrigibility in municipal court yesterday afternoon, was paroled for one year and placed under the care of Humane Officer Withrow.

The testimony of his mother showed that the boy attacked her with a butcher knife because she wanted him to work. She disarmed him before he could do any harm. At another time he attacked his mother with a chair.

The boy claimed that he meant his mother no harm; that he meant only to scare her.

Young Krohn will not be eligible to the state school until his 17th birthday, but he will be sent there unless he behaves himself during the next year.

MORE TIME DENIED

Thomas G. White Not Yet Ready to Produce Witnesses.

He Now Threatens to Go Before the Grand Jury.

The council investigation of the charges made by Thomas G. White that Alderman Tischer solicited a bribe in 1898 when the former's license as an employment agent came up for passage, was closed last evening, and the committee will prepare its report to submit to the council at some future date.

Mr. White again failed to produce any witnesses to substantiate his charges against Alderman Tischer, and the committee decided that it was useless to hold the case open any longer, as the employment agent could give no definite information when he could have witnesses present.

Mr. White, however, protested against the closing of the case, and declared that if the committee would not give further time he would take some matters he has been investigating before the grand jury next month. His threat did not take well, and he was informed that if he had any testimony against a city official it was plainly his duty to go before the grand jury and give it.

When the meeting opened last evening, Joseph Sheehy, who sat outside the railing, arose and asked the chairman if he might saw a few words relative to White's abusing the city council. He said he would be in business a few days longer, that the chief of police already had out a warrant for his arrest, and he wanted an opportunity of telling people what is going on.

Alderman Krumsieg, chairman of the committee, declared that Mr. Sheehy's remarks were out of order and had no bearing on the matter under consideration, so permission to speak was refused.

Mr. White was then asked if he had any witnesses ready, and he replied that several men had promised yesterday afternoon to be present last night, but none of them had appeared. He referred again to Joseph Lang, his former clerk, and stated that he had written an urgent letter to Lang to come to Duluth, and that all his expenses would be paid, but no reply had been received. Mr. White was sure that if he had time to again reach Lang the latter would be persuaded to come to Duluth after he has completed a vacation trip.

After remarking that the absence of his witnesses placed him in an awkward position, Mr. White made the sudden declaration:

"This case is not going to end here, since the council has refused to grant my license I have plenty of time on my hands and I have been investigating along several lines and weaving a web that will surprise the people of Duluth. I will have the facts before the next grand jury, and will then have witnesses that I want."

Alderman Krumsieg—If you have any facts to bring before the grand jury, you would certainly fail in your duty not to do so. You have already failed in your duty that you did not call this matter to the grand jury if your charges are true.

White—I have conformed to the laws in every particular.

Krumsieg—Now, see here, Mr. White, you know you have violated the ordinances relative to the running of an employment office without a license.

White—No, sir, I did not. I have done all that I could just that same as the other agents. Of course I have debts, what business man does not have them? I intend to pay my honest debts. I have refused to go into bankruptcy. No Englishman will go into bankruptcy until all his debts are paid. If it costs me $500 I'll get Joseph Lang here some time.

Krumsieg—The committee have given you three weeks and this has been a reasonable time for you to get your witnesses. If you had any tangible assurance that you could get Lang here we would give you more time, but I don't see how we can keep the matter open any longer.

White—Nobody is going to suffer if you keep it open but myself. I made the statement in open council that George Tischer, July 11, 1898, solicited a bribe in my office. I sprang that on the council because it had held up my license, and I was exasperated over the treatment I had received. I wanted to show how I had been treated by George Tischer.

Alderman George Tischer was sworn. Mr. Krumsieg asked a few preliminary questions as to the stand Mr. Tischer took regarding White's license, and the alderman stated that the first time it came up he voted against it, but that Lacey came to him and asked him as a personal favor to vote for it, that it meant bread and butter for his family. Mr. Tischer said he old Lacey he would vote for it, and did.

Krumsieg—What truth is there in the charge that you solicited a bribe?

Tischer—None whatever.

Krumsieg—White owes you money on a note?

Tischer—Yes, sir.

Krumsieg—Did you, about July 11, 1898, ask him for money on the note?

Tischer—I was not anywhere near his office on that date.

Krumsieg—Was there any talk of paying money on the note or of a bribe?

Tischer—None whatever.

Krumsieg—Did White ever threaten to prosecute you for soliciting a bribe?

Tischer—No, sir. The first I ever heard about a bribe was when he sprung the matter in the council chamber.

Krumsieg—Did Lacey say he would use his influence to get White to pay the note?

Tischer—Yes, sir.

Krumsieg—Did he do so?

Tischer—Yes, sir, but he was not successful.

Krumsieg—Did White ever pay you anything on the note?

Tischer—White paid $10 on the note a long time prior to July 11, 1898, but nothing since.

Krumsieg—Did you ask any alderman to vote for White's license?

Tischer—No, sir. Mr. Trevillion asked me how I was going to vote the last time, and I said I would vote against it.

Mr. White was then given the privilege of cross-examination.

White—You deny you were in my office July 11, 1898.

Tischer—I do.

White—Do you remember what Lacey said at the last meeting?

Tischer—I do.

White—Did not he say he remembered being in my office July 11, 1898, and saw you standing outside of the railing.

Tischer—He said he remembered seeing me there, but did not swear that was the date.

White—You say you have not collected any money on the note since the $10 was paid?

Tischer—I don't remember.

White—Try to remember.

Tischer—I don't have to.

White—Did you not come to my house and collect $5?

Tischer—No, sir.

White—Will you swear to it?

Tischer—If I was as ready to swear as you are I could swear to most anything.

At this point Mr. White read a list containing several dates at which he purported to have made payments. These Mr. Tischer denied and said that White's books might show anything.

White—Did you not state in council that I was a liar?

Tischer—I say so yet.

White—When you and Brewster came to my office July 1, 1897, you wanted to know if I wanted to make a settlement?

Tischer—Yes, sir.

White—We figured it up to see what was due Brewster?

Tischer—I don't remember.

White—You have a deficient memory.

Tischer—It is as good as yours.

White—What did the note call for?

Tischer—One hundred and twenty-five dollars.

White—What note?

Tischer—The note you showed me. You said it was all right, but that you could not pay it all at one time; that you would pay monthly installments.

White—You don't remember quite an argument about the interest?

Tischer—Why don't you ask me something that happened before I was born?

White—You came in, say, fifty times to see about that note?

Tischer—No, about twenty or twenty-five times during the first six months. I couldn't get anything, so I sent you a letter and quit.

White—What was the reason for your long silence in not demanding the payment of the note?

Tischer—Because I wore out two pair of shoes going after it and did not have any more shoes to wear there.

White—Did you put the note in a lawyer's hands for collection?

Tischer—Yes, about a year and a half ago.

White—Who has the note now?

Tischer—Mr. Neff.

White—You did not tell him to present the note to me on the day that the council was going to act on my license?

Tischer—No, sir.

White—If he did it was on his own accord?

Tischer—On his own accord.

White—When Lacey stated at the last meeting that he was in my office July 11, 1898, and remembers seeing you standing against the railing he was not telling the truth?

Tischer—He certainly was not.

Krumsieg—Mr. White, I do not remember that Lacey said he would swear that he saw Mr. Tischer in your office on the date you mention.

White—He certainly did toward the last.

Mr. White then declared that the alderman's memory was so defective that it was useless to ask him any more questions.

A long discussion was then gone into relative to White's method of arriving at the amount of the note he gave Mr. Tischer. At the previous meeting he stated that he only owed Brewster a little over $76 when the note was given, but last evening he said the amount agreed on in the note that was to cover his indebtedness was $125.

Mr. Krumsieg asked White if he could produce the receipts for the payments which he alleges to have made on the note. The latter replied that he thought he could, but that last winter he destroyed a large number of papers and the receipts might be among those.

This answer occasioned laughter among the men in the audience outside the railing.

Mr. Krumsieg asked Judge Hanks, attorney for Alderman Tischer, if he cared to have the investigation prolonged until Lang could be produced. Judge Hanks said his client was very anxious to hear what Lang would testify to, and that if Mr. White was sure he would have Lang here to go before the grand jury next month, that would be time enough.

Mr. Krumsieg declared that there was too much indefiniteness about Lang's appearance, and that he would declare the investigation closed.

Several men were present at the meeting last evening with certificates of deposit issued to them by White which they were anxious that the committee should take up and investigate, but the members of the committee thought that the matter did not have any bearing on the case.

The men were advised to put the matter in the county attorney's hands.

ONE MORE MONTH

Trout Season Nearing the End, Expiring With August.

One of Best Seasons In Many Years For Fishing.

There is just one month left of brook trout season, and then comes the hunting season, to which owners of guns and possessors of that particular brand of sporting blood are looking forward to anxiously.

The fishing season has been a good one, and from all reports that hunting season promises to be exceptionally good, also.

As to fishing, there never has been such fishing around Duluth—for trout—since the early days when the streams were in their aboriginal condition and the growth of the city had not yet crowded out the residents of the streams. It did not take many years of civilization to fish out the little streams in the city, and then for years there was no fishing at all.

A few were left to breed, however, and a few more were planted, and all the while, unsuspected of the people, the process of replenishing the streams was going on. This spring somebody, probably small boys, discovered that there was hardly a stream in the city that did not have a supply of trout in it. Some big catches were made, and pretty soon the streams were crowded. There are not nearly so many trout in them as there were this spring. In fact, most of the streams within the city have been fished out again this summer.

While no very large catches in point of numbers have been made, some splendid trout have been taken from Lester river this summer. Rainbow and speckled trout, as long as two feet, have been caught, and in fairly respectable numbers. Only the other day a local enthusiastic angler took four trout, two rainbows and two speckled beauties, the rainbows 22 and 23 inches long and the speckled trout 16 and 17 inches long.

In the farther streams, along the north shore, the fishing has been good, as usual, for they are far enough away to keep up their stock pretty well. There is still a month in which to fish the trout streams.

Hunters, however, have by this time, in most cases, had all the fishing they want, and are oiling up the guns, and perhaps practicing at the Central Gun club grounds, anxiously waiting for Sept. 1 to come along. Reports from all over the Northwest are that feathered game is plentiful this year. The season on chickens, ducks, geese and similar fowl opens Sept. 1, and the season on partridges opens Oct. 15.

It has been noted by hunters that the chicken and quail districts are working northward constantly.

HE "TALKED SHOP."

Even In His Love Making, But Won.

Chicago, July 31.—Not since "Baby Joe" and "Baby Bill" Pike made their vows as they dissected a broiled lobster has the question of a marriage been discussed as it was by Albert F. Hayden, of Philadelphia, and Gertrude E. Markland, of Indianapolis.

They met in the Saratoga hotel. She had come to Chicago to study dramatic art, he to sell carpets. At dinner he offered to lay his best samples at her feet.

"What do you mean?" she asked shyly, buttering a biscuit.

"That without you life will be like a desert of ingrain carpet; with the wrong side up. It will be rough on me if you refuse."

"I don't see what you mean," said she.

"Love is blind," he answered quickly. "Don't you understand that I am unrolling my future before you?"

"Suppose I don't like the pattern?" said she.

"I can show you something just as good—I mean it will never fade."

"But will your love last?"

"It will outwear anything of the kind on the market," he declared, as he served the entree.

"I fear," she remarked as she reached for the paprika, "that you will change your mind."

"Never! I shall fasten you to my heart with three-quarter tacks of devotion."

And then the waiter brought on the squab.

Fifteen hours later Mr. Hayden secured a marriage license and less than twenty-four hours after they met they were married.

PROFITABLE YEAR

For Fire Insurance Companies In Badger State.

Madison, Wis., July 31.—Fire insurance companies did a profitable business in Wisconsin last year, receiving more than two and a half times as much for premiums as was paid out for losses. This is shown by the annual report of Insurance Commissioner Host, in which the Wisconsin business of these companies is stated as follows: "The amount of business written in Wisconsin by stock and mutual fire and marine insurance companies during the year 1902 was $414,762,277.40, for which $5,993,788.87 was received as premiums, and upon which $2,270,833.42 was paid for losses, making the ratio of losses paid to premiums received 37.84 per cent."

The total number of these companies doing business in the state is 150, a decrease of one since Dec. 31, 1901. They are divided as follows: Wisconsin stock companies, 5; Wisconsin mutual companies, 3; stock companies of other states, 99; mutual companies of other states, 38.

The total expenses of the department for 1902 were $32,464.14, salaries taking $13,020 and the remainder, $19,444.14, going for postage, express, telegraph, telephone, printing and stationery. The total receipts of the department for the year were $468,177.29, the amount received from taxes being $417,783.39, and from al other fees $50,393.90. The largest amount of taxes was paid by life insurance companies, $289,413.77; fire companies paying $114,246.42, and surety and casualty companies $14,123.20. These are the only classes which pay a tax.

THRIVES ON SERUM.

Seven-Year-Old Boy Takes 132 Bottles.

St. Louis, Mo., July 31.—Charles A. Bothum, 7 years old, who fell a victim of tentanus following an accidental shooting on the Fourth of July, is recovering at the city hospital, but at a cost of almost $500 in the purchase of serum to use in the case.

Charlie was received in the hospital on July 16, and doses of anti-tetanic serum was immediately given him in injection every two hours. Each of these doses was a tablespoonful, and up to Wednesday, when the number had been reduced to two a day, he had received sixty-six injections.

From Chicago 132 bottles of the stuff were sent, and one day a week ago he got none, for the supply at the hospital had run out.

He is still being treated with serum, though the boy has passed over the acute and critical stage of lockjaw. For a day or so longer he will get the serum.

STRIKE IS SPREADING.

New York, July 31.—The bakers strike here is spreading, says a Santiago, Chili, dispatch to the Herald. Only a few shops are open. The strikers, becoming aggressive, have tried to burn shops and attacked several bakers' carts. Armed detachments are now protecting the shops. The bakers have thus far refused all overtures to arbitrate.

ZION "DON'TS."

Sign Board Commandments of Elijah the Second.

Waukegan, Ill., July 31.—In order that visitors to Zion City may be aware of the restrictions imposed by the city ordinances, sign boards of warning are to be set up. These signs read as follows:

"Zion City prohibits use of intoxicating liquors, use of tobacco, use of profane and vular language, gambling, circulating of immoral literature, pork raising, secret societies, obscene billboards, doctors, drug shops, hospitals, theaters, dance halls and houses of illfame."

The following things are also prohibited, most of them by city ordinance:

Riding bicycles on sidewalks, driving on or over sidewalks, hitching horses to trees, bathing in the lake on Sundays, using narrow-tired wagons, idling about the streets, desecrating the Lord's day, destroying trees and canvassing or peddling.

EBOLT READY

To Suffer Any Punishment For Wife's Murder.

White Plains, N. Y., July 31.—Martin Ebolt, the self-confessed slayer of his bride of a year, Augusta, has been taken from Mount Vernon and locked up in West Chester, county jail at White Plains to await the action of the grand jury. He was placed in murderers' row.

Never before in the history of the White Plains jail has such a cool and stolidly indifferent murderer been there. He talks very little, but when questioned about his crime he tells the same story that he told to the coroner. Not since he has been under arrest has he shown any sorrow, and says he has forgotten all about his wife.

"She treated me mean," he said yesterday. "She persecuted me and she got what she deserved. I don't care. I don't care what I have done. They can do as they please with me. I am in the clutches of the police. I am ready for my fate."

FROM SAMUEL TO SOLOMON—SAMUEL ANOINTS DAVID.

International Sunday School Lesson For August 2, 1903.

1 Samuel 16:4-13. "And Samuel did that which the Lord spake, and came to Bethlehem. And the elders of the city came to meet him trembling, and said, Comest thou peaceably? And he said, Peaceably. I am come to sacrifice unto the Lord; sanctify yourselves, and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice. And it came to pass, when they were come, that he looked on Eliab, and said, Surely the Lord's anointed is before him. But the Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have rejected him; for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. Then Jesse called Abinadab, and made him pass before Samuel. And he said, Neither hath the Lord chosen this. Then Jesse made Shammah to pass by. And he said, Neither hath the Lord chosen this. And Jesse made seven of his sons to pass before Samuel. And Samuel said unto Jesse, the Lord hath not chosen these. And Samuel said unto Jesse, Are here all thy children? And he said, There remaineth yet the youngest, and, behold, he keepeth the sheep. And Samuel said unto Jesse, send and fetch him; for we will not sit down till he come hither. And he sent and brought him in. Now he was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look upon. And the Lord said, Arise, anoint him; for this is he. Then Samuel took the horn of oil and anointed him in the midst of his brethren; and the spirit of God came mightily upon David from that day forward. So Samuel rose up and went to Ramah."

Golden Text: "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1 Samuel 16:17.

It is a delicate thing to rebuke sorrow; but this ought sometimes to be done. Samuel had set Saul upon the throne of Israel at God's direction. At God's direction he pronounced Saul's doom to be dethroned. This was an exceedingly unpleasant task and it grieved him. He nurtured his grief too long, was perhaps becoming petulant, like Jonah at Ninevah, and God recalled him to his proper attitude. Since God had rejected Saul, it was hardly proper for Samuel to consume himself with mourning for the lost king. Life is always more important than the things that are lost or dead, although this is very hard to realize when the stroke of sorrow is heavy upon one. Activity in the duties of the present is the best remedy for the healing of pain, and the hand of Providence points out the duty to the one who desires to know and do it, even as Samuel was directed to make a new king to supersede the one for whose fall he was in grief.

The relation between Samuel and Saul was peculiar. Samuel had set Saul upon the throne and appears in the role of arbiter of Saul's destiny; but Saul as king had power of life and death over Samuel. Therefore, Samuel had a certain dread of the king that caused him to take care lest he needlessly offend him. This made him careful about his method of proceeding to anoint David. He demurred at first when the Lord told him to go on this errand; but he was bidden to do it, and he knew the doom that had been pronounced upon Saul because of disobedience. With obedience tempered with discretion, he proceeded to the home of Jesse, prepared to make a sacrifice there, as he was no doubt accustomed to do in his rounds of visitation in the land.

Samuel's duties seem to have sometimes led him to rebuke the people for their sins, and probably to convey to them God's condemnation, as he did to Saul. There was a certain stern rigor attached to the person and work of the old prophet that made him feared wherever he went. It was on this account that the elders of the city of Jesse approached him tremblingly, with the question, "Comest thou peaceably"? The question, "Comest thou peaceably"? They were much reassured by his reply that he had come peaceably, to sacrifice unto the Lord. He desired the people to sanctify themselves in preparation for the services of the morrow. By this he meant what Moses meant when he, at Sinai, told the children of Israel to sanctify themselves and wash their garments in preparation for the great events in connection with the giving of the law from the mountain. Sanctification in this sense indicates such cleansing of the person as is careful Christian family indulges in in preparation for the devout observance of the Lord's day or on the eve of any great religious service. It carried with it not only the bodily purification, but also proper mental preparation for the worship of God. Men honor God by punctilious attention to their personal appearance when they come before him, but they also thereby prepare their minds and hearts for approach to the throne of God, unless the physical preparation assumes the nature of a display of vanity.

The mission on which the prophet was bent requiring him to pay especial attention to the family of Jesse. He accordingly saw to it that this family was properly sanctified for the events of the following day. It seems that the act of choosing David and anointing him was performed in the presence of the people of the village, as well as of the family of Jesse, for these people were probably assembled at the sacrifice and feast; at any rate, the elders of the village were bidden to be present. It was a holy day for the people of the vicinity, for the greatest man of God in the land had come their way and had honored them with an especial visit of peace. No one knew exactly why Samuel had come, or why he sought out the son of Jesse, but after the ceremonies were over, all doubtless felt that an important mission was to be put upon the one whom Samuel that day set apart for the work of God.

It is difficult to learn some lessons. Saul had been chosen king because he possessed in a marked degree those physical qualities, which are considered kingly. In choosing Saul's successor Samuel wanted to take the son of Jesse, whose chief commendation was that he possessed the very same qualities that had commended Saul. But Gad said to Samuel "Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have rejected him." In doing God's work, it would be a rare privilege for one to be able to recognize the voice of God at every important juncture. If we only knew the real secret of the religious life of the day of Samuel and could be sure that the voice of God was whispered in our waiting ears, then things might be different with us. No, not so very different, either, for the people of that day were sinners notwithstanding the method of revelation which they enjoyed. Even Samuel, who received thes messages for the people directly from God was not inerrant in judgment; he was much like a little child, and his heavenly Father had to reach down a restraining hand to pull him back from grievous mistakes. Yet Samuel's mistake at the home of Jesse was such a one as any man might have made, for we are apt to choose from outward appearances rather than from the inner qualities of the life and character.

From First Chronicles 28:9 it appears that God's ideal man is one whose heart is perfect and whose mind is willing to do the will of God and who will be faithful to the Divine Master evermore. That God reads the heart of man is asserted over and over again in the scriptures. No man can have thoughts or purposes that are secrets to God. So when we read that God has caused his servant to anoint a man who has been picked because he is after God's own heart, we naturally expect that the man so chosen will develop the rare qualities that shone so brilliantly in David. It is said that David possessed beauty of countenance and other fine qualities of an outward sort; but he was a youth undeveloped and it was not his physical beauty that commended him, but the latent possibilities of his manhood. He was the youngest son and was assigned to the duty of tending the flocks. His soul was full of the sweet music that nature makes on the hills and by the brooks at noon time and beneath the stars at night. But this faculty lay undeveloped and awaited the tutoring care that he received at the hands of Samuel or of those musicians of the school of prophets who guided the youthful enthusiast in the service of God. Much was in the young man which only God could see.

How different man's judgment is from that of God is evident in the fact that it was not thought worth while by the father of David to have him come in from the field for the sacrifice. Not until all the other sons had been rejected did they send for the future king. Thus do men relegate to obscurity those whom God has chosen to be his great ones. It is said of one of the greatest preachers America has ever produced that he was earnestly advised by his college president not to think of entering the ministry because he had an impediment in his speech. But he did enter the ministry, for he felt sure that God had called him, and he proved himself one of God's noblemen. When God's man does come he is at once acceptable for the work he has to do. Although no one had thought it worth while to consider David in connection with the prophet's strange visit, and although Samuel had felt some disappointment that he was compelled to refuse the handsome elder son, yet when David came and the will of God concerning him was made known, an emotion of thorough satisfaction doubtless possessed all those present. The language descriptive of his personal appearance possesses a quality of enthusiasm that assuredly indicates the most thorough satisfaction on the part of those interested in the choice being made.

The secret of David's successful career lay, of course, in a variety of circumstances. To his own native qualities there was added, immediately after his anointing, the spirit of the Lord which "came upon him mightily." This spirit was his guiding star from that time forth. Through a variety of adversities he was called upon to pass, but he was almost always the wise man that the divine Spirit enabled him to be. No more fascinating character has ever crossed the pages of history than David, the sweet singer of Israel. From the moment of his call to his last expiring day he figures as the man after God's own heart. He did occasionally walk the fiery path of sin, his feet were scorched with the flames of lust and his hands were gory with human blood, but his heart was always within easy call of God, and his return from evil was swift and sincere. His sins were the sins of astrong man full of physical health. His virtues were so heroic that one wonders whether he was not akin to the gods of mythic lore. That he was real and that our picture of him is true is attested by the great work he did, which began soon after he was anointed at Bethlehem and has survived the ravages of time to grace the present age with its sweet influence.

SOCIETY IS SCORED HARD

"Snobs" That Hire Policemen to Insult Guests Denounced.

Boston, July 31.—The Evening Record has interviewed a Missouri girl, a school teacher, and one of the 20,000 delegates to the educational convention in session here, last week.

Said the Missouri girl: "When I first arrived everybody on the various committees, and the people I am staying with, in fact everybody I met the first day or two, were invariably so kind and cordial and polite that I made up my mind that Boston's chilliness had been exaggerated, and, perhaps, was a fable.

"But I have discovered by this time that there are at least two sorts of people in Boston. I came in contact first with the teachers, and people closely in touch with educational matters.

"Subsequently, I met quite another set—society people.. I went to a reception. I didn't care much about going, because what time I have left, after convention sessions, I had rather see the ocean, or historic Boston, but some of my friends said we would have a chance to meet some very delightful people, old families, true aristocracy, blue blood of Boston, and all that, so I went.

"Well, I never felt so insulted in my life! Those people actually had policemen, in uniform, and inspectors in citizen's clothes, there to watch us all the time!

"They had sent out just 300 invitations, and I was assured they had been very carefully distributed. But out of the 300 less than 100 attended. They had tea on the lawn, and hardly any time was spent in the house.

"Now, what I'd like to know is: What did those people fear? Did they fear an incursion of Goths and Vandals? Were they afraid of teachers, nineteen-twentieths of whom, at this convention, Prezident Eliot says, are women? Did they think we would steal or destroy property?

"The police were most of them kept out of doors, so it seems to me most likely that they thought we would tear up the trees and shrubbery.

"And these people were so different from the sort we had been meeting. They were not hearty or natural. Some spoke in an affected sort of way, and some regarded us as if we were freaks, and most of them patronized us.

"There was at least one man who was a regular snob. When he went out on the lawn one of the hostesses suggested that if we wanted to be truly rural we might sit on some of the haycocks.

"She said she never regarded an al fresco affair as truly realistic without haycocks, so we followed her suggestion.

"A little party of us went beyond the others, who were in chairs, and sat on the haycocks, thinking we were extra polite in humoring her, though we were in terror of spiders and bugs.

"Well, we brought our cold tea along in our hands, but nobody followed us with any frappe, and as it was hot, it rather made our mouths water to see the others having it; so, finally, one young man in our party—we were fortunate in having one of the few of the species who went to the reception—volunteered to go after some.

"He went over to the table and said to one of the hosts, politely: 'There is a party of us over here on the haycocks. Can I take over some sherbet to them?'

"'Why, if they belong to the party, yes,' said the man in most supercilious manner.

"Well, our friend was about the maddest man you ever saw. He wanted to ask how a man thought any interlopers could get in by the police guard, and to say that we didn't care anything about their old sherbet or frappe, anyway, but for the sake of the ladies he controlled himself, and said:

"'Why, of course they belong to the party. They were told to go and sit on the haycocks, because, I suppose, it was thought there were not chairs enough.'

"'Well, there are chairs enough,' said the man, rudely, and without another word to our friend he went over to us and told us to come over where the rest were. So we meekly marched over, like naughty children caught in mischief.

"I have had all I want of Boston society,' concluded the Missourian; "just come out to Missouri and we'll show you what true hospitality is. We won't post police in uniform nor police spies, nor call out the militia around our houses.

"We won't regard you with suspicion. We won't patronize you, nor look on you as of a new and strange order of beings, but we will take you for what you appear to be, and we'll soon find out what you are!"

"'Well,' said a Maine girl in the party, 'I don't blame you for having such feelings, after such an experience, but my own feelings have been wounded in a different way—by well-dressed people on the streets staring, pointing and making remarks at our badges, and laughing. I am afraid Boston's reputation for dignity and politeness isn't quite the real thing."

SCROFULA A DISEASE WE INHERIT.

Scrofula manifests itself in many ways. Swelling of the glands of the neck and throat, Catarrh, weak eyes, white swelling, offensive sores and abscesses, skin eruptions, loss of strength and weakness in muscles and joints.

It is a miserable disease and traceable in almost every instance to some family blood taint. Scrofula is bred in the bone, is transmitted from parent to child, the seeds are planted in infancy and unless the blood is purged and purified and every atom of the taint removed Scrofula is sure to develop at some period in your life.

Scrofula appeared on the head of my little grandchild when only 18 months old, and spread rapidly over her body. The disease next attacked the eyes and we feared she would lose her sight. Eminent physicians were consulted, but could do nothing to relieve the little innocent. It was then that we decided to try S. S. S. That medicine at once made a speedy and complete cure. She is now a young lady, and has never had a sign of the disease to return.

No remedy equals S. S. S. as a cure for Scrofula. It cleanses and builds up the blood, makes it rich and pure, and under the tonic effects of this great Blood Remedy, the general health improves, the digestive organs are strengthened, and there is a gradual but sure return to health. The deposit of tubercular matter in the joints and glands is carried off as soon as the blood is restored to a normal condition, and the sores, eruptions, and other symptoms of Scrofula disappear.

FIGHT FOR A JOB

Rival Contractors Dispute Over Building of Cement Sidewalk.

Bring Disagreement In Injunction Suit Before District Court.

Rival contractors, spatting as to which is to build a cement sidewalk on Eighteenth avenue east from Superior street to Second street, on the east side, have brought their troubles into court.

Oscar H. Anderson this morning began injunction proceedings against the Paine & Nixon company, F. J. Nixon and J. P. Hayes. He claims he had a contract from the city to build the sidewalk in question, and that he began work July 24. He had placed drain tile for 100 feet and started the foundation of cinders and gravel when, he alleges, the defendants tore out his work and carried away the cinders. He claims that the defendants threatened bodily harm to his employes, and that the defendants, Nixon and Hayes, made an assault upon one David Clough, one of his men. July 27 he again started work, he says, with the same result. He claims that he must go ahead with his work or lose his contract with the city, and he complains that the defendants will not let him proceed. Therefore he wants an injunction.

The Paine & Nixon company has filed an answer, in which it states that it had a contract from A. L. Ordean, owner of part of the property affected, to build the sidewalk. The company alleges that Clough told its men that he was there to make trouble and to prevent the defendants from working. The defendant also alleges threats on the part of the plaintiff's employes.

The application for an injunction was to have come up before Judge Ensign this morning, but the parties stated that the walk had already been built, and that the case would be allowed to rest for a time.

BACK FROM THE ORIENT

Maj. C. B. Sears Settled at His New Station.

James L. Owen, chief clerk of the local United States army engineer's office, has received an interesting letter from Maj. Clinton B. Sears, who has just returned from a month's trip through Japan and is settled at his new station in Nashville, Tenn.

Maj. Sears sent Mr. Owen an interesting souvenir of Japan in the form of a handsome cane, made from a particularly fine specimen of bamboo. The head is from stag horn from the antlers of one of the inhabitants of the famous deer park at Nava. The head bears Mr. Owen's surname in Japanese characters, and it was purchased at Kioto, Japan.

Maj. Sears says: "I spent a month in Japan, and enjoyed every moment. Ever heard of Osaka? No? No more had I, but it is a city of a million people, the site of the imperial mint, arsenal and great castle. Traveling was quick and comfortable, living good and all things reasonable. Hotels excellent, with all modern conveniences, and always the most exquisite courtesy at hotels, on cars, etc. Japan is an intensely interesting country, and the Japanese are a wideawake, energetic, progressive and charming people. I returned to Magasaki from Yokama via the famous inland sea on a Japanese steamer, clean and well and tastefully appointed, very comfortable, with a fine table. I landed at San Francisco after a pleasant ocean trip of twenty days on the U. S. A. transport Thomas."

THE CROP YEAR

Receipts and Shipments of All Grains During That Period.

More Than Sixty-Six Millions—Coarse Grains Increase Heavily.

The crop year of the Duluth board of trade expired at noon today. During the twelve months closing at that hour the receipts of grain at this market were 65,210,743 bushels.

This is an increase over the last crop year of nearly 5,000,000 bushels.

The increase is made up in the receipts of coarse grains in fact they had to make up for a heavy loss in wheat. The receipts of wheat were more than 5,500,000 bushels less than in the crop previous.

Flax, barley and oats jumped enormously during the past year, and the total receipts of those three fell not a great deal short of 30,000,000 bushels.

The figures in detail are as follows:

ORE SHIPMENTS

In July Expected to Make Good Showing.

Cleveland, July 31.—The Iron Trade Review says: The month just closing is not expected to make as good a showing in shipments of ore as did July, 1902, but it is not believed that the total will be far behind. Deliveries on ore sold are now pretty well advanced, no more sales are being made, and sales agents are wondering when furnaces will come into the market to buy to meet their requirements until next year's season of navigation opens. Many furnaces will need ore, but they are postponing purchasing until it is really necessary to do so, thereby deferring the time when payments will be begun. Dispatch at some of the Lake Erie docks has been very slow for a week and consequently there is a scarcity of vessels at the head of the lakes, but there has been no change in freight rates, which are firm at 80 cents from the head of the lakes, 72½ cents from Marquette and 60 cents from Escanaba.

THEY MEET DELAY

Wisconsin Excursionists Are Held Up Couple of Hours.

Crowds Coming Will Exceed the Railroad Men's Estimates.

The excursionists who come to Duluth from Wisconsin points to spend a couple of days at the head of the lakes, will lose a couple of hours of their stay.

Word was received at the office of the Omaha road shortly after noon today saying that a freight train was wrecked at Boardman, Wis., and the excursion train couldn't get by, and would have to wait till the road is cleared up.

The work of clearing up the wreck will be a couple of hours at least, and the train, which was due here at 4:25 o'clock will not be in till 7 o'clock.

A message was received stating that the second train, which comes from Elroy, and intermediate points, has been split into two sections, both of which will be in about 9 o'clock tonight, heavily loaded, and exceeding the estimates of the railroad men by several hundred.

It is now believed that between 1500 and 2000 people will be on the trains.

Committees from the Duluth Commercial club will meet all three trains.

EXCURSION to PORT WING!

LUNCHEON GIVEN

While Boat Is on Bottom of Sea.

Newport, R. I., July 31.—A party of naval officers as guests of Capt. Lake, took luncheon on the bottom of the ocean inside the submarine torpedo boat Protector. The boat remained o nthe bottom an hour and fifteen minutes and was submerged for an hour and three-quarters.

The luncheon was cooked inside the boat while a brisk gale was kicking up a rough sea overhead.

To show the boat's seaworthiness Capt. Lake took the boat outside the harbor, where the short, quick running seas gave an oportunity to show what the craft could do under varying conditions.

In the morning the diving compartment was operated and the bottom door was opened. One of the crew then undressed and passed out and came to the surface to exemplify the method of escape provided in case of the total disablement of the boat.

Those in charge of the boat gave a complete and convincing display of the boat's ability to run evenly at any desired depth, and at one time it was down forty-eight feet, while at other times it ran with only the end of the omniscope a few inches above water.

DONNER ATTEMPTED

To Broil His Wife on Redhot Stove.

St. Louis, July 31.—Matthew Donner, of this city, while in a fit of anger yesterday, attempted to broil his wife on a redhot stove. He was badly beaten over the head with a poker by his stepson, Henry Hoffmeister, who came to his mother's assistance.

Hoffmeister is held a prisoner to await the result of Donner's injuries. Mrs. Donner is at her home under the care of a physician. She is suffering from severe burns on the left arm and body, due to the fact that Donner threw her on the stove.

WON THREE MILLIONS.

Young New York Bear Made Great Killing.

New York, July 31.—E. R. Thomas, the youthful banker, turfman and automobilist enthusiast, has closed out a personal bear deal in the stock market through which he won more than $3,000,000 in cash.

The deal was begun last January. Mr. Thomas took advantage of the crash in prices last week to get entirely under cover. This is the largest stake made thus far in the present downward rush of prices.

Mr. Thomas was fortunate in being able to market absolutely every share he owned on the rise last January. He felt that the top of the wave was reached, and when he found his stocks all gone, continued to sell more whenever the market was strong. When his profits had passed the $3,000,000 mark he could stand the strain no longer, and started to cover in a feverish way.

SUIT ON POLICY.

Modern Samaritans Sued For Life Insurance.

Margaret E. Arine has begun suit in district court against the Modern Samaritans to recover $1000 on a life insurance policy held by her deceased brother, Arthur E. Arine. In her complaint, which was filed in district court this morning, she alleges that her brother became a member of the order Jan. 26, that he has paid all his dues and complied with the conditions of membership, and that he died April 20. Nevertheless, she claims, the order has not yet paid the amount due on the policy. The case was begun in Hennepin county, but was removed to this county on a change of venue. Harrison E. Fryberger, of Minneapolis, is the attorney.

BALLOON ENJOINED

From Falling on a Farm In Nebraska.

Omaha, Neb., July 31.—According to a temporary injunction issued in Judge Dickinson's court, the big balloon that is now making ascensions twice daily from Courtland beach is restrained from "descending on the farm or property of Clause Neelsen, from destroying his crops, or frightening his live stock.

Aerial navigation at Courtland beach has annoyed Neelsen for two years. When the balloon goes up the geography of the vicinity is such that the big canvas, if it escapes the lake, will, nine out of ten times, fall on Neelsen's farm.

Recently Neelsen hit on the plan of charging $1 when the balloon owners showed up to recover the canvas. When they paid that sum promptly he raised them to $2. On Monday he made a further raise to $20. This time the owners of the balloon refused and Neelsen ordered them off his farm and mounted guard over the balloon with a shotgun. The aeronauts secured a writ of replevin, so Neelsen secured a temporary injunction.

IS A CANDIDATE.

Senator Mausten May Run For Governor.

Senator Ole Mausten, of Aitkin, is in the city with his family today, on a trip.

This state senator has an aggrevated attack of gubernaculosis, and is placing a few posts for line fences, which will be erected before long.

"I can certainly beat anyone they have mentioned so far," said the senator. "I am not saying a word just now, though. I'll wait awhile."

The senator said those humiliating words when asked as to whether his longing for the nomination as governor was based upon any reasonable grounds or not.

The senator has not made any fixed plans yet, but he points with pride to his official record at Aitkin, as [illegible] and justice of the peace to state senator.

WHEAT HAS A BREAK

Market Steady Up to Noon and Then Fell Off.

Export Demand Drops Off —Flax Dull and Somewhat Firmer.

Duluth Board of Trade, July 31.—The wheat market was firm at the opening and a little stronger during the earlier part of the session, but about the noon hour it began to show signs of weakness and finally closed with a considerable loss. The export demand flattened out somewhat today and the seaboard reported only 15 loads worked for export. The weather for crops was favorable and cables were lower.

The break in September in Duluth was 5½c, in Minneapolis 9⅜-5½c, in Chicago, 3½c, in New York 3½c, in St. Louis 1½c, and in Kansas City 1c.

The Liverpool market closed ⅛ to ¼d lower, Paris ½c higher to ⅜c lower and Antwerp unchanged.

Primary receipts of wheat were 576,000 bus, last year 1,076,000 bus. Shipments 262,000 bus, last year 585,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 529,000 bus. Argentine shipments this week were 1,408,000 bus, against 1,500,000 bus last week and 32,000 bus last year. Weekly clearances from America were 3,191,142 bus, against 2,781,888 bus last week.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 132 cars, and at Chicago 64, a total of 187 cars, against 176 last week and 511 last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d higher. In Chicago, September corn closed ½c lower and September oats ½-⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 297,000 bus, last year 218,000 bus. Shipments 91,000 bus, last year 263,000 bus. Clearances 67,000 bus. Argentine shipments were 3,489,000 bus last week, against 2,778,000 bus last week and 1,184,000 bus last year. Clearances this week were 928,809 bus, against 1,861,338 bus last week.

For the first two hours of the session the Duluth market was very narrow though trading was active. September opened unchanged at 79¾c and sold at that price and 79¾c. Toward noon it turned stronger and advanced to 80c and then fell off steadily and closed at 79¼c, a decline of ⅝c. December had the same decline.

Cash sales were but a few cars. At the close No. 1 northern in store went off 3¼c and as 47⅛c over September, but during the morning it held at 81⅝c over. No. 1 northern to arrive continued at 5c over.

Flax was dull and firmer. September sold at ⅝c up to 98⅛c and closed at 97¾c. Foreigners sold a little in this market, putting it out as hedges against seed they own. Argentine shipments of flax this week were 320,000 bus against 344,000 bus last week and none last year.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Early Trading In Wheat Pit Exceedingly Tame.

Chicago, July 31.—The early trading in the wheat pit was an exceedingly tame affair and opening prices were barely steady due to rather uncertain cables and favorable weather in the Northwest. September opened a shade to ⅛@¼c up at 79¼@79⅝c, and after selling off to 79⅛@¼c, the market rallied again on a fair commission house demand and September held steady around 79½c. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 123 cars, which with local receipts of 64 cars, 26 of contract grade, made total receipts for the three points of 187 cars, against 176 cars last week and 511 cars a year ago.

The market was nervous and inclined to weakness and during the last hour of trading there was heavy liquidation by longs which resulted in a severe break, September selling off to 78½c. The close was ⅞c lower at 78½@78¾c.

Scalpers sold corn at the start under the influence of further rains in the West and opening prices were easier, September being unchanged to ⅛c lower, at 52⅝@52¾c. There was little support at the first and prices sagged still lower, September declining to 52¼c, but on an improment in the export demand, the market rallied again to about the opening figures. Local receipts were 161 cars, with 18 of contract grade.

Corn followed wheat in its decline and closing prices were weak, with September off ½ at 52¼c.

The predicted squeeze of the July shorts failed to materialize and with nothing to support the bulls, the price settled back to its natural position, declining 11-2 during the day and closing at 39¼c. There was no excitement in

Continued liberal receipts with good trading caused a rather bearish sentiment in oats and opening prices were easier, September being a shade lower at 33½c. The depression in other grains affected this market and more weakness developed as the session advanced. Local receipts were 283 cars.

Provisions opened weak on liberal receipts of hogs and lower prices at the yards. Trading was extremely dull and with little fluctuations in prices. September pork opened 15c lower at $17.75, September lard was down 10c, at $7.57½, while ribs were off 10c at $6.08½.

Celose: Wheat—July 77¼c, old 77¼c; September 78¼@⅝c, old 78⅝@79c; December 78⅝c, old 79c; May 83⅝c. Corn—July 51¼c; September 52¼c; December 51⅝@⅞c; May 51⅝@52c. Oats—July 33½c; August 33¼c; September 33¾c; December 34¼c; May 36¾c. Pork—July $13.30; August $13.45; May $12.85. Lard—July $7.62½; September $7.82½; October $7.65. Ribs—

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Modern Miller: While some of the threshing returns on hard winter wheat are disappointing, the average is up to expectations, and a much larger and better crop of hard wheat than was raised last year is indicated. The movement of this grain from first hands is good and a large amount is going to northwestern spring wheat millers. The tendency of the soft winter wheat movement is to decrease, as farmers are inclined to hold. Mills south of Ohio river and in Southern Illinois continue to draw upon distant sections and accumulative centers, for supplies of wheat.

Snow's report is bullish, giving as yields: Ohio, 14.7; Indiana, 11.3; Illinois, 9.2; Missouri, 9; Kansas, 15.6; Nebraska, 16. Spring wheat has declined, rust in Southern Minnesota and Red River Valley, 10 to 15 points below last year.

• • •

J. A. Patten, Chicago: I still feel very strong on both wheat and corn. We are getting bad reports on spring wheat this morning again. While it has rained all over corn belt for the past twenty-four hours, it makes little difference, as the corn is very backward, tasseling out very short, and in my opinion lots of it can never mature.

• • •

Kalb, of Chicago: Our Liverpool friends cable: "American wheat will be wanted to a small extent. Black sea selling cheaper."

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The general tone of the market is easier and prices nearly a cent lower. The liquidation which began yesterday at the advance has continued. The weak feature of the day is the considerable increase in receipts in the southwest markets. Both St. Louis and Kansas City report a fair milling demand. Only a moderate export demand, is so far reported. The southwest movement and the demand for it are the important factors at the moment. There will of course be some increase, but we do not think the primary movement will come up to last year. After the first advance during the first part of the week, some reaction may naturally follow. We still feel that would rather take our chances on the long side, buying it on the breaks.

Corn—Market was lower. Further good rains through the corn belt and cool weather eased the feeling somewhat. The cash situation is still a slow one and the weather and crop development the all important factor. There has been some considerable profit-taking the past few days by prominent local holders but there is still a rather strong bull contingent.

Oats—Market is heavy and lower. The July deal went to pieces today and the price got to a discount below the futures. Cash situation should now be more apparent that the manipulation is out of the way. We still feel that oats are high enough unless they are helped by a bull market in corn.

RENEWED TALK

Of Financial Troubles Affected Early Trading In Stocks.

Market Hardened When No Business Casualty Was Announced.

New York, July 31.—Early trading in the stock market was attended by renewed talk of financial embarrassments. There was further liquidation in some of the specialties and increased pressure against Atchison. The common stock sold off a large fraction on general selling. There were sharp declines in United States Realty preferred and Virginia-Carolina Chemical.

At the end of the first hour a better tone was shown by almost the entire list. The Rock Island bond issue announcement was without ill effect. Recoveries held very generally, but at midday the market was almost at a standstill. There were marked gains in tractions particularly Metropolitan Securities. Consolidated Gas, General Electric and Tennessee Coal were among the specialties that advanced a point or more, but the pressure against certain other stocks in that group was but little relaxed.

New York, July 31.—Opening declines of ¾ in Atchison, 2¾ in Realty preferred and a point in Virginia-Carolina Chemical gave the impression of a resumption of yesterday's pressure upon the market. Price yielded a fraction all around with a few exceptions. Pennsylvania rose ¼ but fell back to below last night's close.

The early selling forced United States Steel preferred and Kansas & Texas preferred down a point and Virginia-Carolina Chemical 2. Considerable buying of the local tractions and supporting orders for Atchison, Union Pacific, United States Steel preferred and Copper then turned the market upwards. Atchison made a full recovery on short covering despite a decrease in the June net earnings of $641,385. Metropolitan Securities advanced 3, Metropolitan Street Railway 3½ and Manhattan, Brooklyn Transit, Smelting preferred and North American 1@¾. Chemical rallied a point. Leading stocks recovered generally to above yesterday's close, but the demand fell off at that level.

The general list continued to harden but became very dull upon the publication of a circular by Rock Island directors asking authority to issue a $25,000,000 refunding mortgage. Rock Island and Atchison rose a fraction over last night. Metropolitan Street Railway rose 3½, the Securities company 4, North American 2 and Amalgamated and a few other stocks a point. Chicago & Eastern Illinois preferred jumped 20, Pere Marquette 3¾, Virginia-Carolina 1¾ and Evansville & Terre Haute a point. New York Central ran off below 120 at noon with some sympathetic effect elsewhere. Bonds were steady.

The selling pressure relaxed somewhat and the market became semi-stagnant. Atchison fell back to below 62, but fluctuations in other leaders were trivial. Pere Marquette recovered its loss.

Realizing in Metropolitan street railway and Metropolitan Securities lowered them ¼ and 1½. Realty preferred rallied 4, yesterday's final price and Colorado Fuel, after rising 1½ reacted 2½. Republic Steel preferred, New York Chicago & St. Louis second preferred and Railway Investment preferred lost 1½ and Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Rubber preferred gained 1. The usual market leaders were neglected.

The market hardened slightly after delivery hour had passed without business casualty being announced but yielded again. The movement was listless and insignificant. Minneapolis & St. Louis preferred lost 4¼, D. & H. 2¾ and American Car preferred a point. Hocking Valley preferred rose 2½. The closing was apathetic and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The tip was current that if Atchison broke to 62 the whole market would make new low figures. "Tips" that everybody has can usually be "coppered." The break in Atchison looks to me more like a shrewd move of big bears to cover their shorts to advantage in other parts of market. However there are many other stocks more desirable than Atchison. The purchase on weak spots this morning. Practically certain profits can be made by applying the scale system on long side to Southern Pacific, Tennessee Coal and Iron, Union Pacific, New York Central and Baltimore and Ohio, Pennsylvania, St. Paul and Steels.

Dick to B. E. Baker: The American market in London is irregular. An unusual amount of interest is being taken in tomorrow's bank statement and it is expected that the local item will show a very heavy decrease. Should this prove not to be the case, we fear that a fresh outburst of liquidation will ensue and that prices will again seek a lower level. There is no doubt but that the declines which took place yesterday in certain specialties tended to revive the feeling of nervousness which existed early in the week but towards the close a somewhat better sentiment was created by the sharp recovery which took place in Atchison.

Waldorf to Coe Commission Co.: Unbiased observers say that the market has a natural reaction and should soon be on the up-track. Profit-taking has been quite extensive, the short interest has increased and investment buying has taken many stocks out of the street on these setbacks of the past day or two. Coincidentally money has eased and the crop situation has improved. This betterment, both in the technical and underlying conditions, it is believed, should be the basis of renewed strength in the stock market. As is invariably the case after a prolonged decline in prices, sentiment is sensitive to adverse rumors, especially when the latter deal with financial embarrassments as was the case today when professional and timid bulls sold very freely on reports of further failures. It is the opinion of well-informed bankers, however, that these rumors are groundless so far as they relate to important houses or institutions. The bank statement is of more than usual interest this week owing to the question of reduction of loans. One theory has it that in consequence of the paying off of big loans by the Pennsylvania Railroad the forthcoming bank return will show a decrease in the loan account of $20,000,000. It is at least the view expressed in banking circles. It is said that a large part of the borrowings of the Pennsylvania were from trust companies and bankers outside of New York, so that it seefs safe to assume that the clearing house statement Saturday will only reflect to a limited extent the settlement of these obligation. Commission people say that some selling of securities that had been carried in loans gave the bears another opportunity to hammer prices today, but that these operators succeeded in dislodging comparatively few long stocks the latter being taken on a scale down by powerful financial interests. This buying was most noticeable in N. Y. Central, St. Paul, Pennsylvanit, Missouri Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Union Pacific, Reading and Southern Pacific and is believed to have been predicted on the theory that current prices, and in view of the outlook for earnings and dividends, these stocks are cheap.

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.: No attention was paid in the slumping market to progress of Eries earnings, brilliant though the showing was. But the result was an advance in the dividend, a feature that under normal conditions would have given legitimate excuse for the usual process of discounting.

Dick to B. E. Baker: Crop news is generally favorable as the selling movement in Atchison and the Industrials failed to dislodge any railroad stocks, they are likely to be better. Time money is easier tending at 5½ again 6 per cent a week ago. There will be further liquidation in outside stocks but unless something new occurs it will appear that we have been through our worst times.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is dull and prices generally unchanged from yesterday's close. Operations are reduced to a minimum, but the market is without selling pressure except when attacked by the bear interest. Outside investment buying continues on a moderate scale and stocks are being taken off the market by investors. The whole tone and feeling is quiet and steady. Call money is easy. We look for a dull market the next few weeks, and see no particular reason for lower prices on good dividend paying stocks.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market seems to be working into a rut of dullness. There is no pressure either way and we rather expect the market to continue quiet for a week or two to come. Opportunities will offer to sell stocks on rallies and buy them back on reactions at a moderate profit.

Copper was higher in London today, no change is reported in the domestic metal market except that there is said to be heavy buying orders at 127£c, which is lower than any metal is offered. Copper stocks are dull any firm.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, July 31.—The cotton market opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 5 points and on the call showed some further firmness, with August selling up to 12.35, September to 10.51, October to 9.99, and December to 9.81, or a net advance of 1 to 15 points. Later, however, the declining tendency in Liverpool and New Orleans caused liquidation and the list turned weak, losing all its initial gains and declining to a level some 2 to 6 points below yesterday's finals on the new crop while August reached 11.35, or forty points below the high price of the morning and twenty-five points below last night's finals. The decline was in the face of numerous private wires from the south claiming excessive rains and consequent damage to the crop in some sections.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 70 points lower; middling uplands, 12.75; middling gulf, 13; sales, 10,100 bales. Cotton futures closed barely steady: August, 11.97; September, 10.50; October, 9.91; November, 9.91; November, 9.70; December, 9.77; January, 9.77; February, 9.79; March, 9.81.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, July 31.—Close: Money on call steady; lowest ½ per cent; highest 3; ruling 1¾; last loan, 2; closing, 1¾@2. time money steady; sixty days, 4½ per cent; ninety days, 5; six months, 5@6. prime mercantile paper, 5¼@6. Sterling exchange heavy, at $4.85.75@4.85.80 for demand and at $4.83.40@4.83.45 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.84½@4 and $4.87@½. commercial bills, $4.83¾. Bar silver, 54¾c. Mexican dollars, 42⅝. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds, irregular.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, July 31.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve, in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance $227,840,203; gold, $100,200,025; silver, $29,738,331; U. S. notes, $11,588,343; treasury notes of 1890, $83,229; national bank notes $15,896,534; total receipts this day, $2,398,239; total receipts this month and year $48,611,576; total expenditures this day, $1,390,000; total expenditures this month and year $56,493,000; deposits in national banks $155,381,534.

Paying Slowly.

Payments on the Lake avenue assessment for paving are coming in slowly and the property owners along that portion to be paved have only until Monday evening to pay up before the 10 per cent penalty attaches to delinquents. The assessment for the improvement of Nineteenth avenue east will be due Aug. 11 and but little of the $30,839.05 assessed has been paid into the city treasury.

IN MARINE CIRCLES

New Freighter Moses Taylor Brings Big Cargo of Coal.

Bon Ami Is Out Again, Bright and Neat as Ever.

The big freighter Moses Taylor, owned by Mitchell & Co., of Cleveland, arrived in port last evening with a cargo of 7073 net tons of hard coal, consigned to the Y. & L. Coal company, only 615 tons less than the record cargo of 7688 tons.

The Moses Taylor is a modern freighter of 472 gross tons, 416 feet in length, 50 feet in beam and 28 feet in depth. She was built last year at Lorain, Ohio.

Record-breaking cargoes are of almost weekly occurrence this season. The high water in the connecting channels of the lakes has enabled the captains of lake vessels to load their steamers to a greater depth than in previous years. The ore record has been broken several times this season, and the coal record is now the one to go.

The steamer H. W. Smith is another vessel to establish a record, being at present unloading the largest cargo of coal ever taken into Milwaukee harbor. Her cargo amounted to 6850 tons, or over 200 tons less than that of the Taylor.

The Smith is also a new boat, this being her first season on the lakes.

GAGNIER LOCATED.

Is Willing to Give His Wife Money.

Joseph Gagnier, concerning whom H. G. Inman, manager of the Union Towing and Wrecking company, was communicated with by an alleged deserted wife in Detroit, has been located in Duluth.

Gagnier saw an account of his wife's distressing condition in The Herald and went to Mr. Inman to gain further particulars concerning the letter of his wife. Mr. Inman showed him the letter, which asked for particulars of his whereabouts.

Gagnier was much affected by the word from his wife. He claimed that after his arrival in Duluth he had communicated with her and offered to send her money to bring herself and son to Duluth, but that she had refused to come, preferring to live in Detroit.

Gagnier was unwilling to leave Duluth, saying that he could make more money here than in Detroit, and there the correspondence ended, according to his story.

His wife claimed in the letter that she had not heard of him for several months, and that she was in straitened circumstances.

Gagnier is employed in the Criterion restaurant in Duluth, and is a prominent member of the Salvation Army.

He told Mr. Inman that he would immediately forward money to his wife and child to bring them to Duluth, offering the am

TONNAGE SHORT

The July Ore Shipments May Not Reach Last Year's.

Various Obstacles Combine to Hold Shipments Back.

The ore transportation departments of the Steel corporation will feel satisfied if they reach the figures for July of last year, in tonnage for the past month.

Fourth of July, always a set back, of course, came last month, and then the congestion on the lower coal docks has been something of an obstacle.

The Iron Range road has been short of cars for several days now, and it is expected that it will fall short of last year's figures, though not much. The Missabe road received three or four boats for loading this afternoon, and if the others expected will only arrive this road will come up to its figures of last July, or perhaps get above it just a little, which will have to be more than 902,000 tons.

The month of August is not looked for hard to as a promising month for ore transportation, for the congestion on Lake Erie is rapidly becoming harmful to the record makers for shippers, and the boats are being held up there frequently. One day in July not one boat threw out her cable at the Missabe docks, which is quite an unheard of thing for this time of the season.

At the Allouez docks the shipping will be larger than last year, it is estimated, for the boats there have been running in excellent shape, escaping being held back, and always having the ore ready for them.

There were one or two hold backs at the Steel corporation docks last month, on account of the lack of proper grades of ore for certain cargoes.

PAY FULL FARE.

Elkins Law Knocks Buyers' Reduced Rates.

The buyers from the large stores who are making their annual or periodical visit to Chicago and New York in search of the latest and best goods on the market, are paying full fare on the railroads.

Formerly the roads would issue passes for the buyers, figuring on the freight shipment to be routed their way when the buying was done.

The Elkins law put a clincher on the attitude of the roads toward reducing the pass list, and the men who do heaps of purchasing in the East and other places are now paying the same railroad fares as any other mortals.

It was the intention of merchants to ask for a reduced rate for these buyers, but in some way the plan failed to go through.

New York, July 31.—Coroner's Physician Harning, of Brooklyn, stated today in his report on the autopsy held on the remains of Almon Smith, late a sailor on the steamship Havana, that the cause of death was malarial fever, complicated with jaundice, and not yellow fever, as was reported.

TELEPHONE HEARING

Zenith Company's Request For Higher Rates Coming Up.

Indications all point to a large attendance at the citizens' meeting in the council chamber this evening to discuss the concessions asked by the Zenith Telephone company. There is not the least doubt but that the discussion will partake of an interesting turn. Since publicity has been given to the face that a meeting has been called for the purpose mentioned, it is found that there has developed quite a sentiment against granting the telephone company any concessions of whatever nature, not even those which the aldermen have practically agreed on in the proposed ordinance which will give the company the privilege of raising its rates on commercial 'phones.

NEW NATIONAL BANK.

Washington, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The comptroller of the currency today approved the application of C. L. Bishop, E. F. Valkmann, Uriah Hunt, Charles Hutchinson and John Hutchinson to organize a new national bank at Farmington, Minn., to be known as "The First National Bank." The new bank will employ a capital of $25,000.

APRIL TERM ENDS

The State Supreme Court Has Acted on 176 Cases.

Verdict of Anton Schmidt Against Great Northern Overturned.

St. Paul, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state supreme court today closed the April term, filing a decision in the case of Anton Schmidt against the Great Northern.

The decision in this case, which is written by the entire court, overturns a verdict of $5000 for the plaintiff and the railroad company wins a case which has been fought long and hard.

Schmidt sued for $25,000 for personal injuries received by being thrown from a buggy which was struck by a Great Northern train in a collision at a railroad crossing in the town of Osseo, Anoka county. On the first trial of the case Schmidt got a verdict of $5000. The supreme court granted a new trial. On the second trial the plaintiff got a verdict for $6000. The supreme court now orders judgment for the defendant on the ground that the evidence completely establishes the negligence of the plaintiff, who is held not to have used ordinary care in crossing the railroad track.

One hundred and seventy-six cases were decided by the supreme during the April term, of which number 113 were affirmations of the lower court and sixty-three reversed the lower court. Thirty-six per cent of the lower court decisions were overturned, an unusually large number.

There were few cases of very great importance. The one of the greatest public interest was the Ames case. The beet sugar case, the Columbia and Clearwater, the Gallebaugh murder case, the inheritance tax law case, were among the more important ones of the term.

RAW LOOKING IMMIGRANT

Passed $1.000 In Bogus Bills on Minnesota Bank.

St. Paul, July 31.—(Special to The Herald.)—Capt. J. W. Lawrence, United States secret service agent, has in his office a bulky package of 10-kroner notes, purporting to be issued by the Sodermlands Enskilda bank, of Sweden, and which have been returned from the bank to this country stamped as "forgeries." The notes were exchanged at two banks in the northern part of the state, which are nearly $1000 losers on the transaction. They were passed off by a raw-looking immigrant, who claimed to be just over from the old sod, and lay in the vaults of the bank for six months before being forwarded to New York and Sweden for collection.

BIG CATFISH

St. Paul, July 31.—A special to the Dispatch from La Crosse, Wis., says: William Renz went fishing last night in the Mississippi river and caught a large catfish. The fish gave him a battle, and Renz, unwilling to let go, was drawn into the river and drowned. Patrick Dugan, aged 12, tried to rescue him, but failed.

Prelates Grumble at Uncomfortable Beds.

Rome, Aug. 1.—The cardinals all awoke at an early hour this morning, to the ringing of a loud bell, to realize the solemn business before them. Mass was said in the Pauline chapel who afterwards administered communion to each cardinal. The scene was really most majestic, when the members of the sacred college, as humble communicants, advanced to receive the communion from the hands of the camerlingo, who gave subsequently a short address on the solemn nature o fthe occasion. After this each cardinal celebrated another mass, either at another altar or in his own rooms at a moveable altar prepared for the purpose. Breakfast, consisting of a cup of coffee and rolls followed. This was taken privately by the cardinals in their cells. Then the great business of the day was at hand.

At 10 o'clock all the cardinals assembled in the Sistine chapel for the first ballot. Many were the grumblings at the uncomfortable beds, the heat, the odors and other discomforts endured, one cardinal declaring he had not slept a wink because of the mosquitoes. The chapel presented a picture of much animation and beauty. Violet was the leading note of color. Six candles on the altar gave a peculiar light in conjunction with the daylight streaming through the windows and gleaming on the empty thrones and on the long line of seats with their baldachines (canopies) occupied by the cardinals intent upon the business in hand. Everything was symbolic. Even the baldachines, which were now raised over the chairs in the Sistine chapel are a sign that each member of the sacred college has a personal part in the sovereignty of the apostolic see, but when a pope is elected they are removed, the new pontiff alone remaining with this symbol of power.

The cardinals went to the Sistine chapel accompanied by their conclavists carrying portfolios and papers. When Cardinal Oreglia was seated, all the others followed his example, prayers were offered, after which Mousignor Cagiano, the governor of the conclave, called "Exit Omnes," thus announcing to the conclavists and prelates that they must retire and leave the cardinals alone. The voting papers used by their eminences are somewhat different from those of 1878, being a little longer and narrower, but the printed inscriptions are the same, the blank spaces being filled in, at the moment of voting, with the name of the voter at the top and that of the cardinal voted for in the center, and a Latin quotation at the bottom.

Some of the cardinals did not know how to fold their paper, which caused considerable confusion. Cardinal Oreglia, the camerlingo, demonstrated the folding of a ballot to those near him, and they in turn showed others how it must be folded. Each ballot was sealed with no distinguishing mark. The next ballot will proceed much more smoothly and quickly.

Each cardinal in turn, holding his ballot between his first finger and thumb so that every one present could see it, advanced slowly to the altar, where a large chalice was standing, knelt and prayed briefly for guidance, and then, rising, took the following oath:

"I call God to witness, he who shall judge me, that I elect him who I think should be elected according to God. This I promise to do also in the Accessit vote."

So each cardinal dropped his vote in the chalice, bowed before the altar and returned to his place. The balloting took a very long time, as many of the cardinals, owing to their advanced age and illness, moved slowly and were obliged to have the assistance of their colleagues. After the balloting was finished, the chalice was covered, well shaken, and the ballots were publicly counted. Then, passing them into a recepticle placed on the table in the center of the chapel, the two cardinal scrutinizers opened the first ballot and passed it to a third cardinal, who read it in a loud voice, and the other cardinals noted the votes on a printed list of names with which each was provided.

As no cardinal received the prescribed two-thirds of the votes, a supplementary ballot was taken, with no better result. Consequently, at 11:20 a. m. all the ballots were burned, the smoke being seen from the left side of the piazza of St. Peters, where a few curious people, mostly newspaper men, had gathered to record this mute message.

It was said on good authority that Cardinals Herrero and Langerieux were unable to leave their "cells" this morning, so that when the time came for voting, immediately after having taken to the altar his own vote, Cardinal Oreglia showed the members of the sacred college a small empty box, having a tiny slit in the cover. This box was locked in the presence of all the cardinals and the key placed on the altar, after which the three cardinal scrutinizers carried the box to the apartments of the invalids, who, after taking the prescribed oath, dropped their ballots through the slit into the box, which was taken back to the Sistine chapel, unlocked, and the ballots deposited with those of the other cardinals in the chalice on the altar.

STATE LOSES SUIT AGAINST NORTHERN SECURITIES CO.

Bill of Complaint Dismissed By Lochren.

Judge Holds That No State Laws Are Violated.

Rome, Aug. 1.—The second ballot on election of a pope was without result.

St. Paul, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Lochren today, in the United States circuit court, handed down his decision in the case of the State of Minnesota against the Northern Securities company, the Great Northern Railway company, the Northern Pacific Railway company and James J. Hill, as president of the Northern Securities company, and individually, in which he sustained the contentions of the defendants and dismissed the bill of complaint of the state.

He finds that the Northern Securities company has not violated the state laws, forbidding the consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railway, through its ownership of the stock of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads. He refuses the injunctions asked by the state of Minnesota to restrain the Securities company from voting the stock of the two railroad companies, or either of them.

This decision affects the result of the federal government's victory in the circuit court in no way whatever. The federal suit involved the same defendants and the same general state of facts, but was based on a totally different contention of law. The federal suit, in which the Securities company was beaten, was a prosecution for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, passed by the federal congress.

The state suit, in which the Securities company wins, was based on an allegation that the defendants violated acts of the Minnesota legislature, forbidding the consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railways.

The hearing of the state suit was begun Friday, June 5, before Judge Lochren, in the federal circuit court. It followed the submission of reams of testimony by both sides for many months, in which Frederick G. Ingersoll, of this city, acted as referee. The final argument lasted five days, in which Attorney General Douglas, former attorney general, George B. Wilson and Attorney M. D. Dunn, spoke for the state, and George B. Young, M. D. Grover and C. B. Bunn for the defendants. The case was submitted Wednesday, June 10. An appeal to the United States supreme court is now pending in the federal suit.

Judge Lochren, in his decision, says in part: The defendant, the Great Northern Railway company, is a Minnesota corporation, which has, as stated in the bill, acquired the property, rights and franchises and the management and control of various specified railway corporations. The defendant, the Northern Pacific Railway company, is a Wisconsin corporation, which filed its articles of incorporation in Minnesota, and in 1896 purchased and acquired all the railroad properties, railroad lines, right-of-way, rolling stock and franchises of the earlier Northern Pacific Railway company, and has, as stated in the bill, acquired the property rights and franchises and control Uof other specified railway corporations. That said Great Northern and Northern Pacific companies, now, and for many years, severally own, operate and maintain a main line of railway, extending from the cities of Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis, westward, across the states of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington to Puget sound, with many branches along the route or each, and that said two systems of railroad are as to each other parallel and competing lines of railroad; at least between cities and towns reached or traversed by the lines of both of said two railroads, among which are Duluth, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Anoka, St. Cloud, Moorhead, East Grand Forks and several other towns in the state of Minnesota; that a reasonable degree of competition for the traffic between places so situated on both said lines of railway has existed in the past years.

After reciting the act passed by the legislature of 1874, forbidding the consolidating of parallel railroads, also the act of 1881 permitting one railroad company to consolidate its stock and franchise with the stock of any other roads which might be connected and operated together to constitute a continuous main line with or without branches, and calling attention to the fact that the same statute reiterated the prohibition against consolidating parallel and competing lines, Judge Lochren calls attention to the passage of the anti-trust act passed by the state leislature in 1899, forbidding combinations in restraint of trade or commerce between the state of Minnesota and other states and its penalties and then gives a complete history of the merger proceedings. Under conclusions of law the court says, are reasonable or unreasonable; that contracts between divers manufacturers of a commodity respecting their after reviewing a number of supreme court decisions on the Sherman anti-trust act:

The proper construction of the Sherman anti-trust act, so far as it relates to railroad transportation, as adduced from these decisions of the supreme court, appears to be this:

The act applies to railroads and all contracts made between railroad companies for the purpose and having the effect of preventing competition, by fixing rates, or empowering persons to fix them and agreeing to conform to them when fixed, are in restraint of trade and without the provisions of the statute, whether the rates so fixed sales of that commodity to be delivered by them outside the state, having the direct effect of stifling competition and raising the cost of the article to the purchaser is also in restraint of trade and within the statute.

That contracts which do not directly and necessarily affect transportation or rates therefore are not in restraint of trade, or within the statute even thought they may remotely and indirectly appear to have some probable effect in that direction. The state anti-trust act must have the same construction in respect to traffic on railroads within the state.

Neither the Great Northern company nor the Northern Pacific company were parties to, or in their corporate capacity, had anything to do with the formation of the Northern Securities company nor of any of the contracts or proceedings complained of in the bill. The Northern Securities company is merely an investor in and owner of a majority of the stock of each of these two railroad companies. it has done no act and made no contract in restraint of trade or commerce.

The action of the defendant, Hill, in promoting the formation of the Northern Securities company, under the circumstances and for the purposes which the evidence discloses and investing in its stock by the sale to it of his stock in the two railroad companies, involved no act or contract in restraint of trade or commerce or affecting transportation or rates, more than any ordinary transfer of railroad stocks from one person to another.

That my judgment, after most careful consideration of the facts and the law applicable thereto, as construed by the highest court, leads me to the conclusion that none of the defendants have violated the Minnesota anti-trust act, a conclusion apparently contrary to that reached by the eminent judges who, in this court, recently decided the case of United States vs. Northern Securities company, and who will doubtless, in another court, review this case upon appeal and necessarily cause hesitation and careful examination. But the rights of litigants and my own sense of duty alike requires that my own deliberate judgment, guided by my understanding of authoritative law, be given in all causes tried before me.

To epitomize this decision:

It is held that it will be for the interest of the Northern Securities company to restrain trade by suppressing competition between these two railroad companies, and that by coercing or persuading the two boards of directors, whom it has the power to elect, it will certainly cause them to commit highly penal offenses by entering into combinations, contracts and arrangements in restraint of trade, in violation of the anti-trust act, and hence the Northern Securities company is already guilty of these offences that have never been committed or thought of by its officers or promoters, so far as appears; and it must be suppressed and destroyed.

I am compelled to reject the doctrine that any person can be held to have committed, or to be purposing and about to commit a highly penal offense merely because it can be shown that his pecuniary interests will be thereby advanced, and that he has the power, either directly by himself, or indirectly through persuasion or coercion of his agents, to compass the commission of the offense. Decree will be entered dismissing the bill.

STATE WILL APPEAL MERGER CASE

St. Paul, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Van Sant said concerning the decision of the court in the Northern Securities case:

"I do not feel in the least discouraged by the decision of the court this morning. It simply means that the case will have to be finally decided by the court of last resort. The state will immediately appeal and every effort be made by its attorney general and his able assistants to protect the interests of the people. The fight is going to continue until our laws are vindicated and upheld; until it is conclusively shown that by indirection, results cannot be accomplished which our laws were intended to prevent, that the creations of another state cannot be used to accomplish here that which is against the declared policy of this state, that competition shall not be smothered; that it shall be open, active and potential; that dummies shall not be directors, officers and agents to so operate the railroads of Minnesota that our laws shall be nullified and rendered ineffective. I have faith to believe that the final decision will be in favor of the state and that the Northern Securities company will be dissolved.

"In so far as this decision will modify or destroy the wholesome effect of the decision of the court in the government case upon the business interests of the country it is to be regretted."

A FEDERAL CHARGE

George Fox Now In Hands of the United States.

Government Will Prosecute Him For Passing a Counterfeit Bill.

An interruption of almost dramatic interest took place in municipal court this morning as George Fox, the foxy individual whom Chief Troyer picked up on Bay View Heights last Wednesday, was being given a hearing on the charge of forgery brought against him by the state.

The hearing had scarcely begun before Judge Windom when Deputy United States Marshal George J. Mallory appeared and claimed the prisoner under a warrant issued by the United States district attorney at St. Paul, charging him with passing counterfeit money.

This is not the first time that the United States has stepped in to claim a prisoner held for the state, and as has been customary on previous occasions, Fox was released by the state to become a charge of the United States.

Since his arrest Fox has had time to regain a little of the nerve which deserted him when Chief Troyer so unexpectedly came upon him on the incline railroad crossing at Bay View Heights. That meeting was so sudden that he was completely taken aback, and did not regain his composure even after reaching the county jail.

This morning Fox declined to go with the deputy United States marshal until the warrant had been shown and read to him. Even then he showed evidences of planning an escape by continually edging over to the door, indicating that he was in a hurry to get along before the officer was ready. Chief Troyer pointed out that Fox was evidently planning to get outside a second or two ahead of the officer and then skip, so Deputy Marshal Mallory nipped any fond hopes Fox might have had by slipping on the handcuffs.

Fox was arraigned shortly afterward before United States Commissioner Pressnell, and his hearing was set for next Tuesday morning. If the evidence is sufficient he will then be bound over to the next federal grand jury on the charge of passing counterfeit money.

The penalty for this crime is very severe, and the chances are that Fox will be dealt with greater severity by the United States than would have been the case had the state retained jurisdiction over him. Besides, the county will how be saved the expense of his care until the grand jury meets, and the cost of taking him to the penitentiary should he be convicted.

The crime with which Fox is charged occurred last Saturday evening, when he passed a bogus $10 bill on Matt Miller, a hack driver of his acquaintance. The bogus money was made by pasting together two fac simile advertising bills of the Bank of New Brunswick.

SIX-YEAR-OLD ST. PAUL BOY IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY FRIEND

Three Youngsters Were Firing at Target When Revolver Went Off Accidentally, the Bullet Striking Small Boy Over the Heart.

St. Paul, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Robert John Allen, the 6-year-old son of A. E. Allen, 32 Raymond place, St. Anthony park, was shot and killed at 6 o'clock Friday evening by Archie Gray, 15-years-old, 1055 Everett court.

Archie Gray had a 38-calliber revolver, and together with his younger brother, Grant, and the boy who was shot, had been firing at a target in the rear of the Gray residence. They experienced some difficulty in working the pistol, and the Allen boy stepped in front of Gray, who was adjusting the weapon. The pistol was discharged and the bullet struck young Allen just over the heart. He fell to the ground and died a few minutes afterward. The body was remived to the Gray home.

The dead boy's mother was prostrated by the accident and is in a serious condition.

Archie Gray is the son of W. H. Gray, yardmaster of the Minnesota Transfer railway. He is nearly crazed over the accident.

A GREAT DEAL IN ELECTRIC RAILWAYS MADE IN NEW YORK

More Than Two Hundred Miles of Road, Worth Millions of Dollars, Have Passed Into the Control of a Trust Company.

New York, Aug. 1.—More than 200 miles of electric railway, worth millions of dollars, extending throughout Queens and Nassau counties, Long Island, has passed into the control of a trust company in this city. This is probably one of the largest street railway deals ever made in Greater New York.

For some time the Pennsylvania railroad and the interests represented in the subway rapid transit are said to have desired possession of these lines. Eleven years ago the Steinway interests, which then owned the horse car system in Long Island City, began to build a line under the East river. The work came to a disastrous end when a dynamite explosion killed several men and did $500,000 damage. By means of that tunnel the trolley systaem of Long Island could be made a part of the subway system of Manhattan, and several times it has been reported that the electric system of Queens had passed into the control of the Belmont interests.

Whether the trust company represents the Belmont or the Pennsylvania road interests could not be learned.

LOAN COMPANY'S CONDITION BAD

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Justice Herrick, in special term of the supreme court here today, confirmed the findings of Referee James G. Farren, upon the condition of the New York Building Loan Banking company. After summarizing the history of the case Justice Herrick said that with the aid of an expert accountant he had gone over the schedules. "I am satisfied," said he, "that not only was the referee justified in his findings, but the condition of the company is really worse than indicated in the report. I have therefore concluded to confirm the findings of the referee."

The referee's report, made public a few days ago, announced a deficit of more than $300,000, alleged gross mismanagement and recommended that the business of the company be wound up.

THE VICTORIOUS RIFLEMEN RETURN

New York, Aug. 1.—On board the Cunard liner Lucania from Liverpool, which arrived today, were seventeen members of the United States rifle team returning from their recent victory at Bisley, England. The team went abroad to compete for the Palma trophy, and succeeded in winning the match, while many of the individual members of the team also won prizes. The team was in charge of Col. Leslie C. Bruce, of the Old Guard, as captain. Col. Bruce said they had been given a great reception abroad, and were treated royally.

At the pier the victorious riflemen were greeted by Gen. Bird W. Spencer, of New Jersey, president of the National Rifle association; Maj. James E. Bell, of the District of Columbia, and Capt. Goddard, of Pennsylvania. Gen. Spencer made a short speech of congratulation, and Col. Bruce replied appropriately.

CORK WELCOMES THE KING AND QUEEN WITH MUCH ENTHUSIASM

The Whole City Was Brightly Decorated and the Streets Were Filled With Jubilant Sightseers to Welcome Their Majesties.

Cork, Aug. 1.—The firing of royal salutes and enthusiastic cheering welcomed King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the royal party on their arrival at Cork this morning on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, from Berehaven. The port was bright with bunting, the whole town was well decorated and the streets were filled with jubiliant sightseers. The lord mayor and corporation of Cork welcomed the visitors when they landed. Their majestics drove through the decorated streets, which were lined with troops and blue jackets, to the race course, where the king presented colors to two Irish regiments.

The Catholic bishop of Cork was invited to assist at the ceremony of blessing the colors, most of the men being Catholics, but he refused to be associated with the Protestant chaplain.

During the afternoon their majesties visited the exhibition. The royal procession to the grounds was greeted everywhere with the same warmth which marked the previous function during the tour. Addresses were presented by several local bodies, to which the king replied, saying that his previous great interest in the welfare of Ireland had been further deepened by his present visit. He gained a clearer insight into the condition of Irish life, and hoped legislation, on which parliament was engaged, would powerfully contribute to the prosperity and contentment of the Irish people. But good laws alone would not secure that end. There was need of better industrial training for the young, a keener spirit of co-operation among all classes and the creation of new and varied sources of employment for the people.

MINISTRY CONDUCIVE TO LONG LIFE

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 1.—A report of the Theological Seminary Alumni association, given out by Rev. J. H. Dulles, shows the interesting fact that the average minister's life comes close to the three score and ten years mark. The report states that of the forty-one ministers who have died during the past year one had reached 96 years 8 months, two had passed their 90th year, five their 80th, fourteen their 70th, and six their 60th. The youngest died at 29. The average of the forty-one was sixty-eight years.

SEVERAL CLASHES WITH STRIKERS

Pittsburg, Aug. 1.—Joseph Maunds, one of the strikers shot by a non-union workman at the Portvue tin-plate works, near McKeesport, last evening, is in a serious condition, but will probably recover. H. B. King, and Elmer Dolloff, who are charged with the shooting, are held without bail, pending the result of Maund's wounds. During the day strike sympathizers and friends of the non-union men clashed several times. At noon a riot was only averted by the timely arrival of the police. Clark Berguer, a mill worker, caused considerable excitement, by drawing a revolver. Before it was discharged he was disarmed and placed under arrest.

All the mills are closed today, but the company expects to have the plant running in full Monday.

TWO BALLOTS FOR POPE ARE WITHOUT RESULT

Smoke From Chimney Conveys News to World.

Prelates Grumble at Uncomfortable Beds.

Rome, Aug. 1.—The cardinals all awoke at an early hour this morning, to the ringing of a loud bell, to realize the solemn business before them. Mass was said in the Pauline chapel who afterwards administered communion to each cardinal. The scene was really most majestic, when the members of the sacred college, as humble communicants, advanced to receive the communion from the hands of the camerlingo, who gave subsequently a short address on the solemn nature of the occasion. After this each cardinal celebrated another mass, either at another altar or in his own rooms at a moveable altar prepared for the purpose. Breakfast, consisting of a cup of coffee and rolls followed. This was taken privately by the cardinals in their cells. Then the great business of the day was at hand.

At 10 o'clock all the cardinals assembled in the Sistine chapel for the first ballot. STATE LOSES SUIT AGAINST NORTHERN SECURITIES CO.

Bill of Complaint Dismissed By Lochren.

The state anti-trust act must have the same construction in respect to traffic on railroads within the state.

Neither the Great Northern company nor the Northern Pacific company were parties to, or in their corporate capacity, had anything to do with the formation of the Northern Securities company nor of any of the contracts or proceedings complained of in the bill. The Northern Securities company is merely an investor in and owner of a majority of the stock of each of these two railroad companies, it has done no act and made no contract in restraint of trade or commerce.

The action of the defendant, Hill, in promoting the formation of the Northern Securities company, under the circumstances and for the purposes which the evidence discloses and investing in its stock by the sale to it of his stock in the two railroad companies, involved no act or contract in restraint of trade or commerce or affecting transportation or rates, more than any ordinary transfer of railroad stocks from one person to another.

That my judgment, after most careful consideration of the facts and the law applicable thereto, as construed by the highest court, leads me to the conclusion that none of the defendants have violated the Minnesota anti-trust act, a conclusion apparently contrary to that reached by the eminent judges who, in this court, recently decided the case of United States vs. Northern Securities company, and who will doubtless, in another court, review this case upon appeal and necessarily cause hesitation and careful examination. But the rights of litigants and my own sense of duty alike requires that my own deliberate judgment, guided by my understanding of authoritative law, be given in all causes tried before me.

To epitomize this decision:

It is held that it will be for the interest of the Northern Securities company to restrain trade by suppressing competition between these two railroad companies, and that by coercing or persuading the two boards of directors, whom it has the power to elect, it will certainly cause them to commit highly penal offenses by entering into combinations, contracts and arrangements in restraint of trade, in violation of the anti-trust act, and hence the Northern Securities company is already guilty of these offences that have never been committed or thought of by its officers or promoters, so far as appears; and it must be suppressed and destroyed.

I am compelled to reject the doctrine that any person can be held to have committed, or to be purposing and about to commit a highly penal offense merely because it can be shown that his pecuniary interests will be thereby advanced, and that he has the power, either directly by himself, or indirectly through persuasion or coercion of his agents, to compass the commission of the offense. Decree will be entered dismissing the bill.

STATE WILL APPEAL MERGER CASE

St. Paul, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Van Sant said concerning the decision of the court in the Northern Securities case:

"I do not feel in the least discouraged by the decision of the court this morning. It simply means that the case will have to be finally decided by the court of last resort. The state will immediately appeal and every effort be made by its attorney general and his able assistants to protect the interests of the people. The fight is going to continue until our laws are vindicated and upheld; until it is conclusively shown that by indirection, results cannot be accomplished which our laws were intended to prevent, that the creations of another state cannot be used to accomplish here that which is against the declared policy of this state, that competition shall not be smothered; that it shall be open, active and potential; that dummies shall not be directors, officers and agents to so operate the railroads of Minnesota that our laws shall be nullified and rendered ineffective. I have faith to believe that the final decision will be in favor of the state and that the Northern Securities company will be dissolved.

"In so far as this decision will modify or destroy the wholesome effect of the decision of the court in the government case upon the business interests of the country it is to be regretted."

A FEDERAL CHARGE

George Fox Now In Hands of the United States.

Government Will Prosecute Him For Passing a Counterfeit Bill.

An interruption of almost dramatic interest took place in municipal court this morning as George Fox, the foxy individual whom Chief Troyer picked up on Bay View Heights last Wednesday, was being given a hearing on the charge of forgery brought against him by the state.

The hearing had scarcely begun before Judge Windom when Deputy United States Marshal George J. Mallory appeared and claimed the prisoner under a warrant issued by the United States district attorney at St. Paul, charging him with passing counterfeit money.

This is not the first time that the United States has stepped in to claim a prisoner held for the state, and as has been customary on previous occasions, Fox was released by the state to become a charge of the United States.

Since his arrest Fox has had time to regain a little of the nerve which deserted him when Chief Troyer so unexpectedly came upon him on the incline railroad crossing at Bay View Heights. That meeting was so sudden that he was completely taken aback, and did not regain his composure even after reaching the county jail.

This morning Fox declined to go with the deputy United States marshal until the warrant had been shown and read to him. Even then he showed evidences of planning an escape by continually edging over to the door, indicating that he was in a hurry to get along before the officer was ready. Chief Troyer pointed out that Fox was evidently planning to get outside a second or two ahead of the officer and then skip, so Deputy Marshal Mallory nipped any fond hopes Fox might have had by slipping on the handcuffs.

Fox was arraigned shortly afterward before United States Commissioner Pressnell, and his hearing was set for next Tuesday morning. If the evidence is sufficient he will then be bound over to the next federal grand jury on the charge of passing counterfeit money.

The penalty for this crime is very severe, and the chances are that Fox will be dealt with greater severity by the United States than would have been the case had the state retained jurisdiction over him. Besides, the county will now be saved the expense of his care until the grand jury meets, and the cost of taking him to the penitentiary should he be convicted.

The crime with which Fox is charged occurred last Saturday evening, when he passed a bogus $10 bill on Matt Miller, a hack driver of his acquaintance. The bogus money was made by pasting together two fac simile advertising bills of the Bank of New Brunswick.

SIX-YEAR-OLD ST. PAUL BOY IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY FRIEND

Three Youngsters Were Firing at Target When Revolver Went Off Accidentally, the Bullet Striking Small Boy Over the Heart.

St. Paul, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Robert John Allen, the 6-year-old son of A. E. Allen, 32 Raymond place, St. Anthony park, was shot and killed at 6 o'clock Friday evening by Archie Gray, 15-years-old, 1055 Everett court.

Archie Gray had a 38-calliber revolver, and together with his younger brother, Grant, and the boy who was shot, had been firing at a target in the rear of the Gray residence. They experienced some difficulty in working the pistol, and the Allen boy stepped in front of Gray, who was adjusting the weapon. The pistol was discharged and the bullet struck young Allen just over the heart. He fell to the ground and died a few minutes afterward. The body was remived to the Gray home. The dead boy's mother was prostrated by the accident and is in a serious condition.

Archie Gray is the son of W. H. Gray, yardmaster of the Minnesota Transfer railway. He is nearly crazed over the accident.

A GREAT DEAL IN ELECTRIC RAILWAYS MADE IN NEW YORK

More Than Two Hundred Miles of Road, Worth Millions of Dollars, Have Passed Into the Control of a Trust Company.

New York, Aug. 1.—More than 200 miles of electric railway, worth millions of dollars, extending throughout Queens and Nassau counties, Long Island, has passed into the control of a trust company in this city. This is probably one of the largest street railway deals ever made in Greater New York.

For some time the Pennsylvania railroad and the interests represented in the subway rapid transit are said to have desired possession of these lines. Eleven years ago the Steinway interests, which then owned the horse car system in Long Island City, began to build a line under the East river. The work came to a disastrous end when a dynamite explosion killed several men and did $500,000 damage. By means of this tunnel the trolley system of Long Island could be made a part of the subway system of Manhattan, and several times it has been reported that the electric system of Queens had passed into the control of the Belmont interests.

Whether the trust company represents the Belmont or the Pennsylvania road interests could not be learned.

LOAN COMPANY'S CONDITION BAD

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Justice Herrick, in special term of the supreme court here today, confirmed the findings of Referee James G. Farren, upon the condition of the New York Building Loan Banking company. After summarizing the history of the case Justice Herrick said that with the aid of an expert accountant he had gone over the schedules. "I am satisfied," said he, "that not only was the referee justified in his findings, but the condition of the company is really worse than indicated in the report. I have therefore concluded to confirm the findings of the referee."

The referee's report, made public a few days ago, announced a deficit of more than $500,000, alleged gross mismanagement and recommended that the business of the company be wound up.

THE VICTORIOUS RIFLEMEN RETURN

New York, Aug. 1.—On board the Cunard liner Lucania from Liverpool, which arrived today, were seventeen members of the United States rifle team returning from their recent victory at Bisley, England. The team went abroad to compete for the Palma trophy, and succeeded in winning the match, while many of the individual members of the team also won prizes. The team was in charge of Col. Leslie C. Bruce, of the Old Guard, as captain. Col. Bruce said they had been given a great reception abroad, and were treated royally.

At the pier the victorious riflemen were greeted by Gen. Bird W. Spencer, of New Jersey, president of the National Rifle association; Maj. James E. Bell, of the District of Columbia, and Capt. Goddard, of Pennsylvania. Gen. Spencer made a short speech of congratulation, and Col. Bruce replied appropriately.

CORK WELCOMES THE KING AND QUEEN WITH MUCH ENTHUSIASM

The Whole City Was Brightly Decorated and the Streets Were Filled With Jubilant Sightseers to Welcome Their Majesties.

Cork, Aug. 1.—The firing of royal salutes and enthusiastic cheering welcomed King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the royal party on their arrival at Cork this morning on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, from Berehaven. The port was bright with bunting, the whole town was well decorated and the streets were filled with jubilant sightseers. The lord mayor and corporation of Cork welcomed the visitors when they landed. Their majesties drove through the decorated streets, which were lined with troops and blue jackets, to the race course, where the king presented colors to two Irish regiments.

The Catholic bishop of Cork was invited to assist at the ceremony of blessing the colors, most of the men being Catholics, but he refused to be associated with the Protestant chaplain.

During the afternoon their majesties visited the exhibition. The royal procession to the grounds was greeted everywhere with the same warmth which marked the previous function during the tour. Addresses were presented by several local bodies, to which the king replied, saying that his previous great interest in the welfare of Ireland had been further deepened by his present visit. He gained a clearer insight into the condition of Irish life, and hoped legislation, on which parliament was engaged, would powerfully contribute to the prosperity and contentment of the Irish people. But good laws alone would not secure that end. There was need of better industrial training for the young, a keener spirit of co-operation among all classes and the creation of new and varied sources of employment for the people.

SEVERAL CLASHES WITH STRIKERS

Pittsburg, Aug. 1.—Joseph Maunds, one of the strikers shot by a non-union workman at the Portvue tin-plate works, near McKeesport, last evening, is in a serious condition, but will probably recover. H. B. King, and Elmer Dolloff, who are charged with the shooting, are held without bail, pending the result of Maund's wounds. During the day strike sympathizers and friends of the non-union men clashed several times. At noon a riot was only averted by the timely arrival of the police. Clark Berguer, a mill worker, caused considerable excitement, by drawing a revolver. Before it was discharged he was disarmed and placed under arrest.

All the mills are closed today, but the company expects to have the plant running in full Monday.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

DEFECTIVE PAGE

CONDEMNS BLOCKS

More Trouble Develops on the East Superior Street Work.

Sandstone Blocks Along Street Railway Rails Give Way.

A large number of the large sandstone blocks that were placed next the rails in the asphalt pavement between Eighth and Sixteenth avenue east have not proven satisfactory.

In several places the stones have become loosened and have heaved so that City Engineer Patton condemned them and ordered them replaced by new blocks.

Today the employes of the street railway company began removing the loose blocks on the inner side of the rail at several different points along the newly paved street, but mostly near Eighth avenue east. The blocks are not easily removed and have to be broken out with pickaxes.

No definite reason is assigned for the unsatisfactory condition of the sandstone blocks and it is understood that there is a difference of opinion as to the cause of the blocks loosening and heaving.

One reason that has been advanced is that the street car wheels become worn into a sort of double flange and these break off the edges of the sandstone blocks and loosen them. Another reason that is advanced is that the sandstone blocks are not the proper material for the place, that granite blocks could have been used to greater advantage.

One man who has looked over the ground says that it is only the undressed sandstone blocks which have proved unsatisfactory.

The Barber Asphalt company is making rapid progress today toward the completion of the paving on the lower side of Superior street. The widest area to be covered was the intersection of London road with Superior and Eighth avenue east, and this was completed early this morning.

PATHETIC CASE OF INSANITY

Miss Ella Beatty Suddenly Taken With Violent Form.

One of the most pathetic insane cases that has come before the probate court for some time is that of Ella Beatty, the nurse who was found to be insane yesterday and ordered committed to the insane hospital at Fergus Falls.

She is a handsome woman, cultivated and well educated, and no cause can be assigned for her condition, which came upon her suddenly last Friday. The doctors pronounced it acute mania, and ever since last Saturday, until she was taken away last night, she has been strapped to her bed in St. Luke's hospital. When she was taken to the asylum last night she had to be strapped to a cot, hand and foot, and her hands had to be restrained in heavy rubber "mitts." Lucid intervals are infrequent, and last only for a few seconds, and she is quite violent the remainder of the time.

She was formerly a nurse in St. Paul, but for the past twelve years she has made her home in this city, with the family of W. E. Magner. She is 37 years of age. In her madness she is constantly looking for the missing link, and fears her soul is to be lost. She has threatened to kill some of her attendants.

SMALL BOYS ROB A TILL

Two Youngsters Abstract Cash From a West End Store.

Arthur Brandine, a youngster of about 11 years, and Louis Zvey, a little Italian street urchin, were arrested by Detective Terry yesterday afternoon on the charge of robbing the till in Maggie O'Brien's store at 1804 West Superior street of a little over $2. Their hearing has been set for next Tuesday.

The boys are alleged to have slipped into the store when her back was turned and hastily cleaned out the till.

The police department was notified and Detective Terry caught sight of the two boys described as the culprits near the Garfield avenue viaduct avenue viaduct approach. When the boys saw the officer they ducked and began throwing away the money they had, but he caught them and recovered nearly all the coin.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

San Francisco, Aug. 1.—James H. Chaffee, one of the heroes of Bret Harte's story "Tennessee's Partner," is dead at Oakland at the age of 80 years. For fifty-four years he and his old partner, Chamberlan, lived and mined and trusted each other, no shadow ever clouding their friendship and it was the chrivalrous affection which existed between the two men which Bret Harte painted. He lived for years at "Second Garrote," forty miles distant from the Yosemite and thousands of people from all parts of the world who have visited the valley, have met the old pioneers.

DR. MITCHELL

Makes Many New Cures.

A Lady From Michigan Writes a letter

Telling of Her Recovery of Health.

To Whom it May Concern:

"I had been afflicted with catarrh of the stomach for twenty years. I had been thinking about going down to Duluth quite a while before I went. i had a feeling that I ought to go, because from reading the statements made in the papers by people who had been treated by Dr. Mitchell I had gotten a very favorable impression and felt that his treatment for catarrhal disease was just what I needed. I kept on reading the accounts of what Dr. Mitchell was accomplishing, but it was some time before I just got a move on me and went. I think that is the great difficulty with most people. It takes so long to make up the mind to do a thing when something tells us that it is what we ought to do. When I commenced the treatment at last and saw what it was doing for me, I was sorry I hadn't commenced earlier, my health had been completely broken and my system badly undermined by a catarrhal disease or general catarrhal poisoning and impairment for which I had been getting treatment and taking medicines since almost as far back as I could remember. It started in a neglected cold, with an uncomfortable stopped up condition of the nose and head about twenty years ago. I was tormented with all the offensive and distressing characteristics of nasal catarrh till it finally extended to the stomach, and from a mere annoyance became a serious long-continued sickness.

"My stomach was so weak and so inflamed and sore and sensitive that there wasn't a day in years that I was free from nausea, sick headaches, spells of dizziness and faintness, nervous irritation and distress, and all the pains and miseries of catarrhal dyspepsia. My stomach simply revolted at the sight or smell of food, and it seemed against nature for me to sit down to my meals. Of course, my terrible emaciation and wasting away was from lack of natural nutrition. To shorten my story, however, I will say that I had careful medical attention from time to time, but nothing seemed to take hold of the disease. The treatment given me by Dr. Mitchell was different. It was something new and it proved to be the right treatment at last. I improved very rapidly under it and gradually got entirely rid of the abominable catarrh. He treated me ssplendidly and cured me up nicely."

Mrs. John Morris returns to her home at Oacoma, S. D., cured of a fistula from which she had been suffering a number of years. She had been told by a number of physicians that nothing but an operation would cure her. She now recommends Dr. Mitchell's treatment to all sufferers and believes he can cure any disease.

Mr. Gorden, from the range, returns home cured of deafness, being so deaf he could not hear a watch tick.

WISCONSIN PEOPLE

Large Number Arrive on the Omaha Railroads Excursion.

About Equally Divided Between Two Cities—Rates For the Fair.

Between 1700 and 1800 excursionists from Wisconsin arrived at the head of the lakes last evening over the Omaha.

Nearly a half of them left the train at Superior, and Traveling Passenger Agent George Lee, who come up on the trains, said there has never been such a large proportion leave the trains at that place as last night.

The reason for this, he says, is that it is a Wisconsin excursion, and the people of that state are patriotic to their northern metropolis. As a result the city was not so crowded as it might have been, and all who desired accommodations secured them without any trouble.

The train from Hudson, which secured passengers from some Minnesota territory, was estimated at about 300 passengers, but when it arrived there were over 900 on it, and they all came over to Duluth.

The excursionists will remain here till tomorrow evening, and the three trains will leave for the South early in the evening.

The Great Northern road is planning for the entertainment of the large excursion, which they will bring in next Saturday, and announce that there will be three trains, one from Sioux Falls, one from Sioux City and one from Yankton, carrying in all about thirty-nine cars, twelve or fourteen to be tourist sleepers.

Word received here by Northern Passenger Agent L. D. Kitchell, indicates that the excursion will be the largest of the season, and plans are being made for 2000 people.

RATE FOR THE FAIR

Not Granted But South Shore Will Run Excursion.

Members of the Duluth-Superior Passenger association have not yet received word from their recommendation to their general passenger agents for the half rate for round trips into Duluth on account of the St. Louis county fair or the merchants' excursions for buyers.

The South Shore road, however, will in all probability, run its annual excursion from the copper country at a rate of something like $5 for the round trip, at the time of the county fair, which opens Aug. 17. This is one of the big popular excursions of the season, and generally carries a couple of thousand people.

The Northern Pacific will have its turn to bring in an excursion about that time also but the local officers has not been given advices regarding it as yet.

PACIFIC COAST RATE.

The Pacific coast terminal lines opened their $45 rate to the Pacific ocean ports at the northern extremity this morning, and the Great Northern sent fifteen people with round trip tickets on the journey.

The rate will be in effect until Aug. 14, going, and arrangements have been made on both roads here which will take about 100 people or even more, on the trip.

The rate is the cheapest ever offered between this point and the Pacific coast, and it is on account of the Trans-Mississippi congress being held at Seattle.

Payne Says All Guilty Officials Will Be Punished.

Postmaster General Has Long Consultation With Department Officers.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Postmaster General Payne assumed his official duties at the department today. He had a long conference with his assistants during the morning and for several hours talked over the investigation with Fourth Assistant Postmaster Bristow. The postmaster general shows that his trip greatly benefited him and says he feels very much improved. Mr. Payne said that the president, in common with himself and Fourth Assistant Postmaster Bristow, will be glad when the investigation is over, but that none of them wants the inquiry closed until every irregularity has been ferreted out.

Mr. Payne pointed out that inspectors are working on the case in various parts of the country and developments not now foreseen may occur at any time.

Mr. Payne declared that every one against whom any evidence had been found would be treated according to the evidence and that no one will be shielded by the department.

Counsel for August Machen today filed in the criminal court of the district a demurrer to the former indictments of Machen. It alleges that every count in the indictments is fatally defective in that it fails to show that Machen was an officer of the government at the time the offences alleged were committed. Machen withdrew a plea of not guilty.

The demurrer to indictment for bribery against Diller and Samuel A. Groff, in connection with Machen, also was filed. Diller, Machen, the Groff brothers withdrew their plea of not guilty and say every count of the indictment is defective.

RAMPOLLA IN THE LEAD

Said to Have Received Twenty Votes From Cardinals.

Rome, Aug. 1, 8:35 p. m.—Apparently reliable information, which, however, it is impossible to verify, is to the effect that Cardinal Rampolla received twenty votes, Serafino Vannutelli twelve, Gotti seven, Oreglia five, Di Pietro four, Capeceiatro four and Agliardi three, the remainder being scattered.

The balloting this afternoon did not differ in form from that of this morning. From what leaked out from the conclave it does not appear that much progress has been made toward a result, although it is said that the Rampolla party remains compact with a tendency to increase its strength.

The two invalid cardinals are reported to be somewhat better. The afternoon ballot ended at 6:35 p. m., when the ballots were burned. Owing to the lateness of the hour at which the burning of the ballots took place many rumors became current and hope was even entertained that a new pope had been elected.

FUN A-PLENTY AT CONEY.

Of the Mild Sort With Deviltry Cut Out.

If you have an invention or even an idea for an invention of a machine which will place life and limb in jeopardy, take it down to Coney Island, get it attractively rigged up, hire a couple of barkers, charge twenty-five cents a head for chances on life, and your fortune is made, says the New York Sun. What the people who go to Coney island of a Sunday nowadays want is something with the spice of chance in it. Anything will do, so long as the chance is there. Men and women will fall over one another in their anxiety to shoot down slides at lightning speed, with nothing between themselves and the chute but their summer clothes, they quarrel at the entrances to pitch-black pits, the flooring of which is dotted with electrically charged plates of metal; they whirl around fragile-looking wheels, shoot at lightning speed through papier mache dungeons, loop the loops, standing up, sliding down and in every other position, and do a hundred and one things that no sane person would ever think of doing at any place but Coney Island.

If you rigged four ropes across the muddy waters of Gowanus canal, the lower two close together and the upper two a little further apart, how many people could you get to use the contrivance for a bridge? The probabilities are that the first batch of idiots would be arrested, and then a policeman would be placed at each end of the arrangement with orders to suppress all the weak-minded who attempted to use the thing afterward.

In one of Coney Island's amusement resorts they have a contrivance of this kind, and among a large field of amusing and novel things it is by far the most popular. It is stretched across a muddy canal. In which is reposed three feet of dirty water. At each end a crowd of people stand waiting for some one to come along and venture across. They rarely have to wait long. Whether it is a something in the Coney island air or a something in the Coney island beer that inspires men with a peculiar kind of courage, it is a fact that man after man goes out on this shaky four-rope bridge and tries to squirm his way across against the efforts of the crowd ashore to shake him off into the water. For just as soon as a candidate gets out on the ropes, the mischief makers, who haven't the nerve to try it themselves, grab the shore ends of the ropes and swing them for all they are worth. It makes a lot of fun and a lot of laughs, especially when the man falls off into the water, which is very often the case.

Police captains may come and police captains may go, but Coney island goes on forever. There is only one thing about Coney Island that folks used to like to say that they cannot say now, and that is that it is the same old Coney island. It isn't. It is even a very different Coney Island from what it was three years ago. For one thing, it isn't nearly so wicked. For commercial purposes a universal effort is made to convey the impression that everything behind closed doors is risky and ought to be seen. You get a sly wink from the man who exhorts you to step inside and see the houris from the East do a few Delsartean stunts, but after you have paid your quarter and taken a seat wondering how you must have degenerated to feel a secret delight in such degradation, you are treated only to an elephantine exhibition of Terpsichore by a few elderly ladies who must have taken in washing for a living before they became hourls.

On the moving picture machines such alluring signs are to be found as: "Here's a daisy." "Don't let your wife see you looking at this one." "These were taken from life in gay Paris," and a few others of the same sort. Strong men change nickels, dimes, quarters and even halves into cents and go the gamut from "Pranks of the boarding school girls in the dormitory," to "Why Jones' wife divorced him," without seeing a thing that would shock a corresponding secretary of a woman's purity league.

The new wickedness of Coney Island is called "The Devil, the Man and the Maid." Like the other wickedness, it isn't at all wicked. On the contrary, it furnishes a great moral lesson, and persons who have had too much beer should not go to see it at all, because it is a touching story told in living pictures, and moves those who haven't their emotions well under control to tears. The man and the maid seem to be getting along very well together in the first pictures, but along comes old Nick with a bunch of evil suggestions, and for a while it looks as though the man and the maid would tumble. It is a trying moment for the wroughtup audience, especially for the young girls who have taken Coney Island on the sneak and whose mothers think they are somewhere else, but in the end virtue triumphs, the devil falls back into a sea of aluminum and canvas, the curtain falls on the man and the maid, who promptly have a beer and a cigarette to fortify themselves against the next temptation, and the young girls leave full of good resolutions, which they forget half an hour later as they and their young men are whirled through a long dark tunnel in a rowboat at the "Old Mill."

The barker for "The Devil, the Man and the Maid" has no ideas on the subject of great moral lessons. He pries the price of admission out of Coney Island visitors by leers and winks and sly suggestions of hot stuff inside. He remarks that the show would make a saint blush, whereupon a horde of young sports and old fellows make for the ticket box with their money in their hands.

All of Coney island's badness is superficial. Up one or two narrow board walks a few of the old dives still flourish, but they are so well under cover that it would be difficult for a stranger to find them. On the whole it is a pretty clean and moral Coney island compared to the old Coney island, but strangely enough it is a far more expensive Coney island than it used to be. In the last two years several millions of dollars of capital have been put into Coney island and it has been estimated that to see all the things that are to be seen there and to do the place thoroughly, costs about $20 a head, exclusive of the eating, which, by the way, is a wholly superfluous performance at Coney island.

When it comes to reckoning the people that go to Coney island on a Sunday or a holiday, all other judgments defer to that of Geary. Geary as proprietor of Sea Side Life, as unofficial mayor of Coney Island and official statistician of the resort has a marvelously elastic conscience. Geary propelled his fragile form through the maze of the Bowery resorts and in around and out of Luna park on the Fourth of July, and then announced as official:

"There are 300,000 people at the island today."

Two or three reporters reduced the Geary estimate to 225,000 people, which is said to be a conservative estimate. At any rate there were in the neighborhood of 175,000 people at Coney island Sunday, and although there was a cold wind blowing from the ocean the beaches and the resorts were thronged and the show folk, the drinking places and the parks did a tremendous business.

In the Bowery concert halls the young women were thankful for the police edict about long skirts. It saved a lot of them from catching cold in their tights. Shooting the chutes, visiting the moon, and then going next door for a trip 20,000 leagues under the sea, were all popular as ever, and Luna park's big dance halls were humming all day and half the night.

All the bands at Coney Island play "Hiawatha" about once out of three times now, and all the soubrettes sing "I am Wearing My Heart Out for You," which is the latest mournful love song to become popular. Like most popular songs it is loaded to the brim with sobs and aching hearts, and even the soubrettes look distressed as they sing it.

"CAN'T LOSE" THE SUNFLOWER.

"Show us Bunker Hill; that's the first thing in Boston to look at; we want to see the monument," sang the chorus of maidens from beyond the Wabash, who corralled a Boston Herald man on the Atlantic & St. Louis express, as it rolled over the Charles in the mid-afternoon, just five hours late, says the Boston Herald.

"Why, that's it over there, that big stone obelisk," remarked the embowered reporter, looking in vain for an avenue of escape.

"Oh, where Do tell me—I want to look," interposed the little Indian from the Osage, pressing eagerly to the front.

"That big stone column right over the ugly building," replied the matronly preceptress from Kansas, "but what's that building?"

"Oh, that is the Massachusetts state prison," remarked the newspaper man.

"My," said she of Kansas, "isn't the ventillation something terrible. I should think it must be very poorly ventilated, to look at its surroundings."

They were a very jolly company in spite of their three or four days on the rail. Indeed, two venturesome young women from Stockton, Cal., had been a full week in the cars, but they didn't look a bit jaded at that.

"There's eleven cars of us coming chockful from Kansas," said the merry schoolma'am with the yellow ribbon.

"What is this, an ox-eyed daisy?" asked the Herald man, inspecting the badge. His early botany had been sadly neglected.

"Why, say, mister—don't you know a sunflower when you see it?" was the laughing rejoinder. "That's no daisy; can't you see the grasshoppers?"

Sure enough, there was no mistaking the Kansas locust. It is quite a striking combination on that badge. There were six school teachers in the party who had come on ahead of their state delegation, which was left behind at Niagara Falls to pursue its winding journey around through Canada via Montreal and the Grand Trunk, "while we girls just came across country," as the jolly teacher put it. With her delegation is State Superintendent J. L. Dayhoff and Assistant Superintendent Frank Dwyer.

When those Kansas girls had daunted their yellow ribbons and their locusts across the aisle, the girl from Oklahoma and her companion from Montana put their heads together and evolved a unique badge bearing a deftly drawn portrait of a great chief of the Osages and Crows, Miss Pauline Nevitt, of the Osage Indian shool at Pawhuska, Ok., and Miss Mattie Williams, of the National Indian school of the Crow agency, Montana, are both striking types of the modern civilization. They are very bright and entertaining young school teachers, and it certainly was startling when Miss Williams remarked to the Herald man who had at first misunderstood, "Not Sioux. I am of the Crows."

In every city there is one paper favored by local advertisers. In Duluth it is The Herald.

SHALL RATES BE RAISED?

Citizens Discuss Zenith Company's Request.

General Sentiment Against the Sliding Scale.

Nearly a hundred citizens turned out last evening to discuss the proposed ordinance granting the Zenith company the privilege of increasing its rates on commercial 'phones, and also the additional concessions asked by the company, which were for a sliding scale for both commercial and residence 'phones. Only about seven of the sixteen aldermen were present at the meeting, and of these Alderman Moore was the only one to take part in the discussion.

The general sentiment was that the Zenith company should be allowed to increase its rates for commercial 'phones, providing the council is satisfied that its business is now on a losing basis with the current rates, but was against any raise in rates for residence 'phones, or a sliding scale of prices. Some of the speakers went so far as to suggest that, if the council grants the company any privileges for an increase in rates, a string be kept on that privilege so that the city may act at any time when in its judgment the prices can be reduced.

Alderman Wing acted as chairman of the meeting.

By request, W. M. Hubbard, president of the Zenith company, was the first speaker. He said in part

"There are so many phases of this question that it would take a long time to cover them all, but to put it briefly I will say that the experience of the past three years has proved conclusively to the directors and stockholders of the Zenith company that it cannot continue to do business at anywhere near the prices now fixed by its charter. For three years we have been furnishing 'phones at a loss. With the exception of two occasions, when a 2 per cent quarterly dividend was declared, the stockholders have not received a single cent on the investment.

"We were led to believe at the time the dividends were delard that these were on our earnings, as everything seemed coming along nicely with the company. Orders were coming in faster than they could be filled and we had plenty of money in the treasury from the sale of bonds. It occurred to me, however, when I began to sign the orders, that our expenses were heavier than we supposed, and we called a halt.

"It is a difficult matter to go into a mass of figures, and I would not know when to stop, but I am ready to answer any question that you gentlemen may care to ask."

N. J. Upham—I would like to ask what is wanted by the Zenith company.

Alderman Wing—The company's request is for a sliding scale, with an increase of prices for commercial and residence 'phones.

William Harrison, attorney for the company, at this juncture read from a typewritten statement the figures in the schedule for the sliding scale which the company desires, based on the number of 'phones in use, as follows: 1000 or less, $30 for commercial and $20 for residence; between 1000 and 2500, one party commercial line, $36, more than one party, $30; one party residence, $24, and with more than one party, $20. Between 2500 and 3000, one party commercial 'phones, $40; more than one party, $33; one party residence, $21, more than one party, $20.

The schedule was quite a long one, and the prices arranged increased to $42 and $36 for commercial 'phones and $27 and $22 for residence 'phones when the number used was between 3000 and 3500, and between 3500 and 4000 the prices further stiffened to $48 and $40 for commercial and $30 and $25 for residence 'phones.

Continuing, Mr. Harrison said: "I suppose those interested have looked into the matter and know that the cost of operation increases with the larger number of 'phones installed. A small plant can be operated more cheaply than a large plant. The company has about 1800 'phones now in use, and after figuring the matter over for a long time, it has come to the conclusion that it might make a party line rate to keep the expense down to the residence users. Under the party line system we furnish the 'phones cheaper than for single lines. We have added only about 150 new subscribers within the past few months, for the reason that conditions have not been favorable for us to increase facilities unless we can get more money. The company underwent a heavy loss in the fire, a fire that cost it many of its subscribers."

Mr. Hubbard said: "Take the country over you will find that the larger the city the higher the price paid for operation of its telephone system. There may be a few exceptions, but this is the general condition. In Minneapolis the net price is $84 per year for commercial 'phones, in St. Louis $125, and in Chicago, for the old system, the one in use here before the new company came in. In Chicago the full metallic 'phone costs $175 per year. In New York commercial 'phones, with a limit of 600 calls, cost about $150 per year, while those with unlimited calls cost $325. You must remember that these prices were established when it cost you a great deal less to install 'phones than it does today.

"The larger the plant the more the service each subscriber gets. If A can furnish B with a certain amount of service for $10 it stands to reason he cannot furnish him twice the amount of service for the same money.

"We have here a practical demonstration of the economical laws, but the trouble is that few people will place any credence in the working out of such laws.

"I will say this, however, that the larger the plant the more expensive the material that must be used. We must have larger poles, better insulation and more delicate and complicated switchbards. In larger cities the very pavement becomes permeated with the electric fluid and it has been found that to escape that condition, the wires in Minneapolis must be buried forty-five feet and about 100 feet in New York city.

"In medium-sized plants most any sort of switchboard will give satisfaction, but our own experience has shown that in a large system a cheap switchbard will not do. On our present board each operator must be able to connect her particular subscriber instantly with any other subscriber to the exchange. To install a single position costs more than to install the previous position, for instance when you have a board with 100 subscribers there are but 100 drops, but when you add a new position you must add to the first number of subscribers all of the new ones so that the service grows similar to a regular arithmetical progression.

"An exchange of 100 subscribers costs from $3500 to $5000, depending largely on the topography of the country and the quality of the material used; an exchange of 2000 subscribers will cost from $250,000 to $300,000 and an exchange of 50,000 subscribers will cost from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

"In the case of the first exchange there will be, say, two employes at low salaries; with the 2000 exchange there will be forty-five employes at higher salaries; with an exchange of 50,000 there will be from 800 to 1000 employes at the highest salaries. Suppost it were true that we could play even in the prices we charge here, you all know that it costs more to maintain a telephone system here than in Chicago. Is it reasonable to suppose that if the conditions are so very favorable in Chicago that the field for a new company would have remained open so long as it has? You must see that it costs more to operate a larger system.

Alderman Moore—Are the independent companies over the country asking for and getting an increase in rates?

Mr. Hubbard said they were and went on at some length to quote instances.

Alderman Moore—Our information shows that a few of the independent companies are getting a little smaller rate than the company here.

Mr. Hubbard—There is another feature I might mention and that is the difficulty of the independent companies to float bonds. The Bell telephone people have thiroughly canvassed the persons and corporations with money to invest and have so intimidated them that they are difficult to reach for investments in independent telephone company stock.

Wilham Harrison—It should be remembered that while we have 1800 'phones in Duluth we have free connection with 1000 'phones in Superior so that we have practically a plant in service of 2800 'phones. We charge no toll between the two cities.

Alderman Moore—Do you expect to ask for an increase of rates in Superior?

Mr. Harrison—We expect to, but we think one city is enough to tackle at a time.

Mr. Hubbard—In any other city such stations as Woodland, West Duluth, Superior, South Superior, etc., would be toll stations. If we had tolls to these stations we could do business at our present rates, as our returns would be doubled. In the Twin Cities the longest free service is but three miles.

E. M. Moulton, president of the Twin City Telephone company was present and said this point: "There are 6500 phones in Minneapolis, the rates are $30 and $45 and are not considered very remunerative."

T. J. McKeon said: "I come to this meeting as a citizen and a taxpayer not as a knocker. We have listened to the president of the Zenith company and to its attorney and now I desire your attention while I give some reasons why the council should not grant the request for the increase of rates. I have here the record of the proceedings of the council for March 2. Citizens, you will remember that shortly after the holidays the old company proposed to put 'phones in the city hall free of charge. The Zenith company objected and here is the report of the council committee."

Mr. McKeon read a portion of the report in which the committee stated that the company had done much to cheapen telephone rates in Duluth and the council should do nothing to give the old company an advantage over it.

Continuing, Mr. McKeon said: "Now, citizens of Duluth, I believe in doing anything for public good. While I do not propose to knock, in view of the report of the committee it comes in bad grace for the Zenith company to come to the council and ask for a raise in rates.

In its charter the company agreed to furnish a statement showing the cost of the plant. Is there any on file?

Mr. Harrison—Have you asked for it?

Mr. McKeon—No, but I have never heard of one.

Alderman Moore—It is now on file with the city clerk.

Mr. McKeon—The company agreed to furnish a metallic circuit, two wires to each 'phone, but it has been using the McClure system instead and that is against its charter. The company's franchise requires copper wire. It is a well-known fact that the company is using iron wire today. I do not believe that over one-third of the wire strung by the Zenith company is of copper. Think of the difference in cost of the copper and the iron wire. Citizens should be acquainted with these conditions. The Zenith company's franchise expressly states the price to be charged per 'phone. It comes with bad grace after getting its franchise for the company to try to hoodwink us now.

"I say make them live up to what they agreed. If the company had lived up to one-tenth of what it agreed it would not now be so much effrontery on its part to make the request.

"If the Zenith company has bound itself to an unprofitable contract it did so with its eyes open and it is not good business policy to let one party in an agreement back down because he has the losing proposition.

"Gentlemen, the citizens of this city stood by the Zenith company nobly. We all feel kindly toward it for what it has done, but before the council complies with this request for an increase in rates I say make the company live up to its franchise."

Mr. McKeon here quoted figures from the annual statement of the company in its advertising book and commented on the different items, one of them being the loan to the company from E. M. Moulton, of $7560. He declared that Mr. Moulton was too good a business man to loan money if he thought the Zenith company has a losing proposition.

Walter Thompson—I believe the city is unfortunate in having two telephone systems. The council should hold this matter up until the companies can consilidate their plants and give us one good system at prices about what is worth. I would say to the Zenith company "If you cannot do business on the rates you are getting, do as any other business concern would do—quit the field."

Mr. Harrison—I can understand the last speaker, but not Mr. McKeon. If you go clear through the statement that he used it will be clear to anyone where the money went that was expended.

A. E. McManus said: "Mr. Thompson is probably right as to the privilege and right of the new company to quit if it cannot get its rates used. Mr. McKeon is wrong in trying to force the company out of the field. Mr. Thompson is wrong when he talks of the new company's going out and again leaving us to the mercy of the Bell Telephone company.

"I subscribed for a new 'phone and kept it right along when the company had its troubles, when its switchboard was burned out, because at the time when we needed help the new company came in and helped us out of the grasp of the old company. The old company was at that time high in prices and tyrannical in treatment, and it would go to any length to show us that we were its minions. The revolt against the old company was not so much on its rates, but its diabolical treatment. It acted on the basis if-you-don't-like-it-go-to-thunder treatment.

"I would have been glad, we all would have been glad if we could have made a deal with the Bell company on an equitable basis, but the moment we put the Zenith company where it will have to go out of business that minute we will have the old company at our throats. If the council committee says to the council at the next meeting that it finds the new company cannot operate on the basis of its present rates, I say raise the rates.

"Just because the company got a charter shall we compel it to run its business at a loss? If we do that the Zenith company will be forced to do one of two things, sell out to the Bell company or go out of business. Either one of those alternatives we do not want. You know we cannot buy Zenith company's plant, we cannot bond the city to raise the money for it under the present laws.

"With a telephone system extending from hell to breakfast (you can locate yourself to suit), with lines radiating from Duluth to Superior, West Duluth, Woodland, Lakeside and in other directions, I think that a $30 'phone is pretty cheap. I know that it is.

"I am not in favor of a sliding scale. If the new company cannot operate with a little profit.

"Don't forget the trouble before the new company came into the field, if you do, you will repent in sackcloth and ashes."

Mr. Moulton was asked to enlighten the citizens on his connection with the telephone business and he stated that while his business was really that of conducting a savings' bank he had been drawn into the telephone business because of the abuses of the old company in the Twin Cities which practically forced an independent company into the field. His talk in part follows:

"When you talk of having one company and a fair rate just think of the toll rate on the long distance line between Duluth and the Twin Cities before the independent company built a line. Where you were paying 70 cents you are now getting service for 45 cents. The citizens of Duluth are saving about $5000 per year in tolls. It's the same story in nearly every city of the country—one company. high rates, poor service. I know what your fate will be if you drive the Zenith company out, your rates for the other 'phone will go up 100 per cent.

"The rates which the Zenith company are receiving today are not paying. Our rates in the Twin Cities do not bring us a dividend of over 6 per cent on common stock. I did not loan any money to the Zenith company because I thought it was making money, in fact I know it had a losing proposition on its hands and told the directors so. The company did not have any debts, however, and I knew I had good security for my money."

Mr. McManus—I have heard it rumored that there is to be a consolidation of the independent telephone systems of the Twin Cities, Duluth and Superior, is that so?

Mr. Moulton—Not exactly a consolidation in the sense that there is to be but one company. If the Zenith company can be privileged to established a living rate the Twin City company will become interested in the systems here and put money in for their further improvement.

Alderman Moore said: "At the time the Zenith company was organized I was approached with a proposition by Mr. Evans which I did not deem was just right, so I have had a prejudice against the company and have no reason to have any love for it. As to the company's not living up to its franchise. I was a member of the committee that investigated the matter and we found that the statement was in the main correct, nevertheless it seemed to us that the company was doing the best that it could, and it did not seem just for us to ask it to accomplish more than it was able to do. When the time comes when the company is able to do more I will be one member of the council ready to go after it.

"I do not think that the company has approached this question on a sympathy basis. At the time the Zenith company entered the field 'phones were a luxury and not within the reach of the people. The council committee has sexamined the books of the Zenith company and found that in the last year the company has operated at a loss and that in the first four months there was only a bare increase of revenue over expenditures. It seemed almost absolutely necessary to the committee that the company be permitted to raise its rates.

"It is no satisfaction to any of us to do business with a concern that is operating on a losing basis right along. None of us would refuse a man a fair remuneration for his labor and capital. We do not want to see the company go out of business but we do want to see the city keep control of the company so that the people at large can have good service at fair rates. I am prepared to vote for a fair remuneration to the company in its rates." (Applause.)

T. T. Hudson stated that while he has always been a friend of the Zenith company he was disappointed because it did not prepare the annual statement that its charter provides. He said that if ample statement had been made public the people generally would better understand the position the company now claims to be in. He said that if he were convinced that the company is not getting a fair rate of interest on its investment then he would favor a fair increase of its rates.

Mr. Hudson also opposed the sliding scale proposition and said that he hoped the time would come when Duluth will have a representative in state legislature who will say to the people here if you want to issue bonds to buy a telephone system, I will see that an enabling act is passed permitting you to do so.

J. E. Cooley said he could not understand why he was getting the old 'phone both in his office and residence cheaper than he could get the new 'phone in his office. He thought it would be a good thing for the Zenith company to put in party lines and did not want to see the new company driven out of the city.

Frank Crasweller declared that if the Bell company could see the prospect of driving out a rival company it would cut its prices down any length to a ruinous basis. He said the seat of the whole trouble is that no information of the cost of construction and maintenance can be gained from the statement filed by the company, on which to base a higher rate that would be sufficient and fair.

M. B. Cullum called attention to the fact that when the new company entered the field it was given the understanding that it would have an exclusive franchise and that it would not have a hard fight on its hands from the old company.

Alexander Milne thought the cost of operation had not been figured down to an exactness close enough to tell just how much the rates should be advanced so that the company would not operate at a loss.

Mr. Hubbard said that the directors have been investigating and figuring for sixty days and finally came to the conclusion that it must raise money. He explained that the money was obtained from Mr. Moulton, it being represented to him that the company would ask the council for permission to raise its rates. He claimed that the sliding scale prices given in the schedule would not give the company a big profit, and that it would not be able to continue in business on the basis of its present rates.

As to the talk about copper wires, Mr. Hubbard said that the Zenith company had one of the best experts in the country examine the system here and he recommended that the company get rid of its copper wires as fast as possible and use the old No. 12 iron wire, that the results were by far more satisfactory.

Mayor Hugo spoke, saying: "I have no objections to giving a few expressions from the standpoint of a telephone renter, but understand I am not talking from an official stand point. I put in a telephone as an accommodation. It is a question whether I would keep it if I had to pay any more. I do not believe that it would be policy to raise the residence rate. I do not believe there will be serious objection to the raising of the rate on commercial 'phones.

My impression is that if telephones are not brought down to a reasonable cost in a reasonable length of time the people will demand ownership of their own plant as they have demanded and secured their own water plant. In the meantime, until this happens, we are interested in getting the best and the cheapest service possible.

"If the council is satisfied to raise the rates on commercial 'phones to $38 I am satisfied and am sure that the people generally will be satisfied. The matter of itemized expenditures has been a great annoyance to the council because the public corporations have had to be urged to comply."

After a few more remarks by different citizens, the meeting came to a close shortly after 11 o'clock.

FOLK'S BOOM FOR GOVERNOR

Of Missouri Spreading and He May Get Nomination.

St. Louis, July 31.—The gubernatorial boom of Joseph W. Folk, circuit attorney, is rapidly attaining mammoth proportions. Edward A. Orear, formerly state insurance inspector, is one of the latest adherents of the movement to make Folw the Democratic candidate for governor of Missouri in 1904. Mr. Orear is a close friend of ex-Governor Stephen's. He says the sentiment for Folk foar governor is string on nearly every county in the state.

The Democrats of Ray county are preparing to organize a Folk club. A strong Folk club has been organized at Harrisonville, July 29, 1903. First, that it is the sense of this club that Missouri needs for her next governor, a man who has the courage, honesty, manhood and determination to stop boodling in all its forms. Second, that we hereby most heartily indorse the candidacy of Joseph W. Folk for the nomination for governor before the Democratic convention of 1904. Third, that we are for 'Folk and anti-boodle.' Fourth, that we as Democrats believe it the duty of the Democratic party to purify the Democratic party. And we pledge ourselves to use our best endeavors so to do by persistently supporting the Folk sentiment, not only in our own precincts but throughout the state."

A call signed by about twenty-five anti-machine Democrats has been issued in Nevada, Vernon county, for the organization of a Joseph W. Fiik club. There is to be a hot fight for control of the Vernon county delegation to the Democratic state convention and this is the first move to capture it for Folk.

ENDORSING OTIS

Testimonial to the Editor of the Los Angeles Times.

Gen. Otis Replies, Giving His Views on Individual Liberty.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 1.—Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, of the Los Angeles Times, last night made public his reply to a committee of prominent citizens of Los Angeles, who, on July 4, called on Mr. Otis at his home, "The Bivouac," and presented him with a testimonial endorsing his stand on the labor question and expressing appreciation of the stand taken by the Los Angeles Times in its fight for "individual liberty." The testimonial was signed by 300 of the most prominent business men of Los Angeles. The address was as follows:

To Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, Editor in Chief Los Angeles Times. Greeting: Your fellow citizens with unfeigned admiration for your genius as the editor of a great paper, and appreciation of your worth as a man, desire hereby to assure you of their hearty and cordial support, in your battle for individual liberty; under your leadership the Los Angeles Times has fought and won a great victory for equal rights.

That the city of Los Angeles and environment is free from the tyranny of misguided agitators, is chiefly due to the fearless advocacy of the rights of all men and the relentless condemnation of demagogues by the Times.

We are mindful of the fact that the majority of the business men and employers of labor have come from the ranks of the common people, inheriting nothing save love of country and willingness and capacity for work. We believe that the future of this country depends not only upon free schools and a free press, but also freedom of action under the law.

The ambitious youth must not, shall not, be dwarfted in his desire or opportunity, nor hindered in his effort to reach the goal of success, whether in the workshop, the fields of commerce or along the highways of professional life; we demand for our fellows and for ourselves, the individual freedom that became our heritage upon the republic's birth.

We congratulate the city of Los Angeles and the state of California, that through you the principles of eternal truth and justice are presented daily, in the homes of California in the columns of the Los Angeles Times.

In the course of his reply Gen. Otis said:

You and your fellow-citizens have seen fit to commend our course in a just battle for liberty regulated by law, for industrial freedom and the equal right of all honest workers without distinction, to exploit, in a lawful way, every legitimate channel of human activity.

For your voluntary commendation, your substantial support and unexpected praise, I and my co-workers in this field of duty return our best thanks. To be praised by such a body of citizens as the signers of this unique address—fairly representing, as they do, the worth, the strength, the influence and the business solidarity of the city—is an honor indeed. You are our immediate fellow citizens and close neighbors, and know whereof you speak; you are able to place a correct estimate upon the character and to judge the journalistic and personal conduct and carriage of the citizen whom you address—to estimate them more accurately, perhaps, than can any other equal number of men anywhere.

If I have been so fortunate as to render any valuable service to the people of my city—to the cause of industrial pacification and independence here or in the country at large—I am glad indeed. I have performed no more than my duty as a citizen and journalist. No conspicuous success could have been achieved without your powerful backing and fearless aid.

You exalt me and mine by your high approval of our course in the defence of a principle vital to the welfare of society, business and government; yet I do not fail to recognize the truth that your strong and timely words have an application and significance far beyond my own personality. I can well understand that among so many good men, scores and hundreds in number, whose names are signed to this striking and beautiful address, embracing both employers and employed, there must be those who do not fully and means agree with me in other things, and who are able to give reasons for their faith—reasons that I would not undertake to question here. Therefore I appreciate all the more highly their manly and unselfish action in this behalf. They have generously waived differences and joined in commending public utterances and acts demanded by the strenuous needs of the hour, and designed to promote the general welfare.

You, citizens of Los Angeles, were among the first to descry the danger signs in the industrial sky. Your far-seeing sagacity has accurately forecasted the logical, the possible outcome of the prevailing movement in the perilous direction of industrial usurpation and despotism, unless that movement be firmly checked by the mighty power of an aroused public opinion, brought to bear directly against it. For industrial despotism, as we have seen, when once "in the saddle," has no logical halting place; it does not of its own violation stay its march; no "labor leader" has the sense of the patriotism to cry "Halt" to his followers at the supreme moment, namely, before the head of the column has neared the danger line. That perilous march, if not stayed by the power of public opinion, must in the end by rudely arrested by the strang arm of the government, in order that no encouragement shall be given in the future to like attempts as yet further-aggressions upon the inalienable rights of citizens.

By far the worst phase of the labor problem lies in the fact that so-called "organized" labor is so often badly advised and ignorantly led. Too many of its leaders have shown, in conspicuous instances, an utter lack of any accurate conception of the true spirit and genius of our republican system—an utter disregard of the lawful rights of that far larger body of workmen who are not up in the ranks of the labor leagues. They have shown themselves to be not true friends of labor, broadly speaking, but its narrow and deluded enemies. They have proved themselves to be blind, unsafe leaders. They have exhibited small knowledge of the true principles of industrial economics. By this court in promoting strikes and consequent idleness they seem to say to workingmen: "Idleness is better for you than employment; stop work and live off the others." Such advice is folly and madness concentrated. The man who advises another to refuse employment and wages, when he needs them, is a bad counselor.

You have detected the danger line in the monstrous doctrine that the inalienable rights of labor, and to labor freely, shall be confined to the few and not be open to all; that one class of labor, because it is banded together, possesses superior rights; that it can dominate other and more numerous classes of labor for the reason that they are unorganized, that the right not to organize is less sacred under the constitution and the law than the right to organize.

We oppose these imprudent pretensions on the part of those who would establish a labor oligarchy and create an insufferable monopoly in a universal commodity. It is an unjust, an indefensible, a destructive doctrine. Carried to its ultimate conclusion, it would undermine our republican system, sap the foundations of the government, and substitute the uncontrolled will of the few for the lawful rule of the many, for true it is that the great body of labor in this country is unorganized, that it does not seek to organize, and in the very nature of the case must remain unorganized. Even in the ranks of banded labor are countless scores of men who are not there of their own free choice; they are unwilling subjects, and chafe under an insufferable thralldom.

We stand for the better, the more rational and just doctrine that has repeatedly been set forth by me, in the past, in these words:

The lawful right of every citizen to pursue, undisturbed and unhampered, any lawful occupation of his own choice in a lawful way, and to be protected in that right by the whole power of the state and of the nation, if need be.

The right to labor is fundamental and inalienable; it antedates labor leagues and human laws. It is a pre-eminent right of all American citizens, and can never be taken away without first revolutionizing the government. But there will be no revolution; this sacred right, vital to republican liberty, will be protected, defended and preserved by brave free men who prize it; and all who dare assail it will be foiled in their wicked attempt.

Labor strikes, boycotts and picketing, prescription and abuse of other workmen—all these, with their concomitant evils, are indefensible and dangerous, and when accompanied by violence they become conspiracy. The government, though it may travel with leaden heel, cannot tolerate conspiracy or insurrection. It moves, and must move, when the overt act has been committed. In the last resort, when civic and industrial rights are denied and invaded, when the law is defied, when violence breaks forth, when all other measures have failed, then comes the ultimate resort, military force; for the law must be enforced by whatever effort; the public peace must be preserved at whatever sacrifice; insurrection must be put down at whatever cost. The government of the state and of the United States cannot and will not sit supine, an see the edicts of their courts defied, their laws trampled upon, private and public property destroyed, or citizens maimed, murdered and maltreated. If such acts be permitted, anarchy ensues. But there will be no anarchy; ours is a government of law, and in its system resides the power to enforce its decrees.

But how much better it would be could the ultimate resort be averted. How much better for the whole body of law-respecting citizens to so act in such emergencies as we have witnessed, almost without number, within recent years, that the last dread alternative may never become necessary. How much wiser it is to bring to bear, in good time, the tremendous power of a peaceful though terribly earnest public opinion, commanding that law shall have sway; that uniform privileges shall prevail in the field of industrial effort; that unjust discrimination shall cease; that all persons, without distinction, shall have the equal right to labor, and to enjoy, without the burden of private tax, the fruits of their labor; that, in short, industrial liberty and industrial equality shall be the rule of the land, as contemplated by the supreme law.

How much better would such a line of civic action be than to suffer things to drift along to the verge of a common peril. If by general and concerted action peace-loving citizens are able to stave off the sorry day when the rumble of artillery wagons and the tramp of armed soldiers may fret the air of our streets, should, unhappily, these servants of the Republic ever be called to enter upon the grim work of asserting the national authority and protecting peaceful men and women, who shall say that such citizens are not patriots in the best sense, not the truest supporters of the commonwealth, not the best friends of labor itself?

All these having measures are within the possibilities, if brave and free citizens throughout the union will unite, organize and act, as they have already begun to do. Distinct progress has been made in many quarters in New York, Omaha, Kansas City, Los Angeles and other lesser cities. The good work goes forward; it cannot, must not cease till complete safety have been secured.

MEN'S MALADIES CURED

I made up my mind soon after graduating from college that no one man was great enough to master the entire field of medicine and surgery. Many physicians have tried to do this, but they have met with results usually disappointing to themselves and often disastrous to their patients. For this reason I determined early in my professional career to confine my practice strictly to a single line of disease, and to originating and perfecting cures for them. I therefore treat only what I am absolutely certain that I can positively cure to stay cured.

Varicocele, Stricture, Contagious Blood Poison, Nervo-Sexual Debility, Rupture, Kidney and Urinary Diseases

and all reflex complications and associate diseases and weaknesses of men. To these maladies alone the best years of my life have been earnestly devoted, and on them all my facilities are concentrated. Our consultation and operating rooms are thoroughly equipped with every scientific apparatus, instrument and device essential to the most modern methods of practice, and our references, both professional and financial, are claiming the best citizens of this vicinity, who have been cured by us and made happy. I want every afflicted man to freely and fully investigate our treatment. My education, my experience, my conscience condemn all kinds of quackery. I treat each case separately, closely watching it and carefully following its symptoms with remedies verified through every stage. The diseases that constitute my specialty are more fully commented upon below and are well worth the careful perusal of all men in need of medical attention.

THE LONGEST ESTABLISHED, MOST SUCCESSFUL AND RELIABLE SPECIALIST IN DISEASES OF MEN AS MEDICAL DIPLOMAS, LICENSES AND NEWSPAPER RECORDS WILL SHOW.

Varicocele.

Whatever may be the cause of varicocele, its injurious effect is well known. It depresses the mind, weakens the body, robs the nervous system and ultimately leads to a complete loss of sexual power. If you are a victim of this dire disease, come to our office and let us explain to you our process of treating it. You will then not wonder why we have positively cured hundreds of cases of varicocele during the past twelve months. Under our treatment the patient improves from the very beginning. All pain instantly ceases. Soreness and swelling quickly subside. The pools of stagnant blood are forced from the dilated veins, which rapidly resume their normal size, strength and soundness. All indications of disease and weakness vanish completely, and in their stead comes the pride, the power, and the pleasures of perfect health and restored manhood.

Stricture.

It matters not how long you have suffered from stricture, nor how many different doctors have disappointed you. We will cure you just as certainly as you come to us for treatment. We will not do it by cutting or dilating. Our treatment is new, entirely original with us, and perfectly painless. It completely dissolves the stricture from the urinary passage. It stops every unnatural discharge, allays all inflammation, reduces the prostate gland when enlarged, cleanses the bladder and kidneys, invigorates the sexual organs and restores health and soundness to every part of the body affected by the disease.

Nervo-Sexual Debility.

Men, many of you are now reaping the results of your former folly. Your manhood is failing and will soon be lost unless you do something for yourself. There is no time to lose. Impotency, like all sexual diseases, is never on the standstill; either you must master it or it will master you, and fill your future with misery and indescribable woe. We have treated so many cases of this kind that we are as familiar with them as you are with the very daylight. Once cured by us, you will never again be bothered with emissions, prematureness, small, weak organs, nervousness, failing memory, loss of ambition or other symptoms which rob you of your manhood and absolutely unfit you for study, business, pleasure or marriage. Our treatment for weak men will correct all these evils and restore you to what nature intended—a hale, hearty, happy man, with physical, mental and sexual powers complete.

Contagious Blood Poison

On account of its frightful hideousness, contagious blood poison is commonly called the king of veneral diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted. Once the system is infected with it, the disease may manifest itself either in form of scrofula, eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, eruptions or copper color spots on the face or the body, little ulcers on the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, swollen tonsils, falling out of the hair or eyebrows, and finally a leprous-like decay of the flesh and bone. If you have any of these familiar symptoms you are cordially invited to consult us immediately. If we find your fears are unfounded, we will quickly unburden your mind. But if your constitution is infected with syphilitic virus, we will tell you frankly and show you how to get rid of it. Our special treatment for Blood Poison is practically the result of my life work and is endorsed by the best physicians of America and Europe. It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious remedies of any kind. It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces our very particle of impurity. Soon every sign any symptom of Blood Poison disappears completely and forever. The blood, the tissue, the flesh, the bones and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health, and the patient prepared for the duties and pleasures of life.

Associate Diseases.

In curing an ailment of any kind we never fail to remove all reflex complications of associate diseases. If the case is Varicocele, the weakness caused by it disappears. If it is Structure, and has developed into Prostatic, Bladder or Kidney affections, the injured organs are all restored to perfectly healthy conditions. If it is Contagious Blood Poison, any and all Skin, Blood and Bone diseases arising from the taint are entirely and perfectly eliminated from the system. If it is Impotency, the many distressing symptoms following in its train and indicating a premature decline of physical, mental and sexual power are totally removed and rapidly replaced by the youthful energy of robust manhood. Hence all resulting ill and reflex complications which may be properly termed associate diseases, and which, in fact, are often more serious than the original ailment that gives rise to them all, we say, disappear completely and forever with the cure of the main malady.

HELD UP BY MOB

C. & O. Express Train Is Stopped Near Clifton Forge.

Efforts of Crowd to Secure Two Negroes Were Frustrated.

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 1.—A Chesapeake & Ohio express train was held up by a mob of 200 men near Clifton Forge last night and a desperate effort was made to take two negro prisoners from the train.

Over 100 shots were fired by the mob and when the train reached Huntington, twenty bullets were buried in the woodwork of thes moking car and all of the window glass had been shot out.

At Clifton Forge the negro prisoners were taken on board to be brought to Covington, Va., for safe keeping. Engineer Peck, of Hinton, and Conductor Hall, of Huntington, who were in charge of the train, saw lights waving on the track just as the train had begun to gather speed after leaving Clifton Forge.

The train was stopped immediately and Engineer Peck started to get out of his locomotive to find out why the train had been flagged. After the train came to a standstill a mob surrounded the locomotive and coaches and threatened to shoot Engineer Peck if he moved the train. Then they began to climb aboard. Conductor Hall, who had anticipated trouble when he saw the train flagged, was prepared for the mob and as they made a rush for the coaches, he ordered all the doors of the cars locked. The mob, finding that it would be impossible to enter and obtain the negroes, began to gather around the smoking car in which the negroes were under guard.

As Conductor Hall ran through the train calling on the passengers to lie flat on the floor, the mob began to fire into the windows of the smoking car, while the passengers scrambled from their seats to a place of safety from the flying bullets. The firing was kept up for several minutes and bullets whistled through the car windows. While women screamed, the mob outside continued their clamoring for the two negro prisoners. Not a passenger or trainman was injured. Engineer Peck, during the firing, had sat in his cab covered with revolvers. At last, when the main body of the mob had almost exhausted their supply of bullets, those who had been guarding the engineer left, going towards the smoking car, leaving Peck unguarded.

As his former guards turned and ran towards the smoking car, Peck pulled the throttle wide open and the train began to move.

The mob, seeing the turn things were taking and fearing that they might be outdone in their efforts to get the prisoners, climbed on the platform of the cars and attempted to stop the train by turning the angle cock to the air hose, thereby applying the brakes.

Not understanding the working of the brakes, however, they were unsuccessful and as the train was under headway, they jumped from the moving cars and fired several farewell shots into the windows. The train did not stop until Covington was reached, where the negroes were placed in jail.

The negroes are from Lynchburg, Va., and are believed to be the men who seriously shot a white brakeman, Edward Hile, on a Chesapeake & Ohio excursion train between Clifton Forge and Lnchburg a few days ago.

WILL EXHIBIT HOMING PIGEONS

Henry Flynn Will Send Large Number to State Fair.

Duluth homing pigeon fanciers will exhibit at the state fair to be held shortly in St. Paul.

Henry F. Flynn, of East Second street, who has one of the finest lofts in this section of the country, will send about thirty of the birds to the exhibition.

Two or three of the birds will be released each day during the fair and allowed to fly the 150 miles which separates them from their home.

Mr. Flynn has about seventy birds in all, the majority of them being bred from Belgian homers. He has been training his birds for the fly from St. Paul, during the past few weeks by releasing them from Hinckley and other towns along the lin between here and the Twin Cities. The birds are now in fine condition and promise to make the flight from St. Paul in record-breaking time.

One of Mr. Flynn'sc birds, Blue Boy, has a record of 2 hours and 20 minutes for 200 miles. The bird was flown from Pie island, enar Fort William, coming home at the rate of over eighty-six miles an hour.

Blue Boy will probably be sent to St. Paul and his flight will be awaited with interest by the pigeon fanciers of the city.

CLINE LEFT MILLIONS

Eccentric Chicagoan Found to Have Possessed Great Wealth.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Three million dollars' worth of property has already been unearthed by Executor Edwin A. Warfield as belonging to the estate of Col. George T. Cline, an eccentric Chicagoan, who died on July 7, and whose will has recently been admitted to probate. Until the examination of Col. Cline's thousands of letters and papers is complete it will not be known how much more the estate is worth, but it is said to be possible that it will approximate 6$,000,000.

Col. Cline, who was 80 years old at his death, and whose title comes from the fact that he was a civil war veteran, was a real estate operator, and almost his whole fortune was in land. Executor Warfield has already found that he held property in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Ohio, New York, Virginia and Maryland. It is principally in large tracts, with much farming acreage. One extensive piece of property belonging to the estate is at Clark Junction, Ind., near Edgemoor. This consists of 2500 acres.

Col. Cline left his entire estate to his relatives in California and Maryland. One quarter of the estate goes to his sister, Mrs. Mary Yeakle, and one quarter to his brother, Nicholas C. Cline, both of Frederick, Md., and both are over 70 years old.

Another quarter is left to a nephew, Isaac T. Crumb, of Okland, Cal., and the remaining quarter he left to his two nephews, John Cline and George T. Cline, of Los Angeles.

Despite Col. Cline's wealth, he was known to very few in Chicago's financial world. He lived a very retired life.

PARKS AGAIN ENDORSED

Walking Delegate Carried On Shoulders of Enthusiasts.

New York, Aug. 1.—By the action just taken at a meeting of the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's union, rejecting the request of the Iron league for a conference to settle the Building Trades' troubles here, Walking Delegate Samuel Parks has again been unanimously endorsed, and when the meeting adjourned he was carried down stairs on the shoulders of four stalwart delegates. A thousand cheering men marched behind and the police, on hand to act in an emergency, were swept aside unceremoniously. No great amount of building work can be done under the present conditions, as a consequence of their action.

WISCONSIN LUMBERMEN

Make Some Extensive Purchases at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Aug. 1.—A deal has been consummated whereby the controlling interest in the West-Side Lumber company, whose principal holdings are in Tulome county, passed from W. H. Crocker, of this city, to William R. Thorsen, a millionaire lumberman of Milwaukee, and several associates. The West-Side Lumber company owns one of the largest tracts of sugar pine timber in the state, situated in Tulome county, and connected with the Sierra railway lines by thirty miles of narrow gauge road. It is said the price paid was in the neighborhood of $2,500,000.

MORE MONEY FOR FAIR.

London, Aug. 1.—A supplementary estimate issued this morning grants an additional $250,000 for the aid of the royal commission to the St. Louis exposition for the period ending March 31, 1904. An explanatory note says all further contributions will be provided in the budgets of subsequent years.

FAT CUBAN TREASURY.

New York, Aug. 1.—After the payment of the government employes on Friday, says a Tribune dispatch from Havana, the Cuban treasury contained $3,500,000. This is an increase of $400,000 over the balance June 30.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

New York Commercial: Geronimo has joined the church. Gen. Miles ought to receive some credit for the excellent missionary work he performed with this wily old Apache down in the Southwest several years ago.

Springfield Republican: It is thought by Episcopal clergymen in New Haven that the presidency of Trinity college in Hartford will be offered to Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, secretary of the Yale corporation. Time is going to show how well based that thought is. Mr. Stokes has nothing to say, but intimates that his first knowledge of any such talk was gained from a newspaper report.

Exchange: Dr. Buckley, the famous Methodist editor, orator and wit, who was a leading figure at the Epworth League convention held in Detroit, was a speaker at the recent alumni luncheon at Wesleyan. He began, as usual, in a low tone; and, almost immediately, an over-anxious undergraduate, who was looking on from the gallery, called out, "Louder!" Without changing his pitch, Dr. Buckley retorted: "That young gentleman will be able to hear me distinctly if he will only use the full length of his ears."

Nashville American: The ministry seems to be losing its attractions for youn men. The pay of clergymen is better than it once was, though in many instances it is very small yet. The churches are finer, but comparatively fewer people attend them. The simple days of old-fashioned faith and primitive ideas have passed. The Puritan period has vanished. Whether it be science or commercialism or liberalism or education or the freer exercise of thought, any of these or all of these that have influenced religious thought and conduct, there has been a change within the church and without. The conditions that once prevailed in this country, the isolated churches, the itinerant ministers, the far-traveling circuit riders, the periodic revivals, the campmeetings, the muscular and emotional religion and the simple, earnest and intense faith, and other features that characterized a new or a thinly-settled country, have in a large measure been succeeded by other conditions, not less moral or religious, in fact, but different.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Smooth Rascals Find Many "Suckers" at Grand Forks.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Counterfeit and worthless money sharks have been working in this city for ten days, and despite the efforts of the police department on both sides of the river, no arrests have been made. In some cases the $5 and $10 bills passed had been raised from $1 bills. Several $10 bills passed were issued by the State Bank of New Brunswick, which are not forgeries, but are worthless, that bank having gone out of commission years ago.

To date a dozen of the leading business men have been victimized.

Fargo—Joel Peterson, of Ayr, is in all kinds of trouble. Last spring there was a row over some land in which he and his father and F. W. Dickinson were interested. He was arrested and later released. He instituted an action against Dickinson for damages, but the case was dismissed. Peterson was then arrested on a "bootlegging" charge and held on the preliminary examination. He alleges that he merely chipped in with a party to get some beer and that he did not sell. As Judge Pollock sentenced a man some months ago on a like proposition, Peterson's chances do not look very bright.

Charles Rodesell was confined for some time in the jail at Washburn on a grand larceny charge, but recently made his escape. While Sheriff Gradin was chasing him on horseback his horse fell and the sheriff's shoulder was dislocated.

Jamestown—Relatives of W. W. Hamlin, who was wounded by Officer Russell July 4, have been notified that there is little doubt but that he will die of the wound in a short time, and if they wish to see him alive they must come to Jamestown at once. Two operations have been performed, but the patient shows no improvement.

Z. Payne was arraigned in court yesterday on a charge of criminal assault preferred by Rena Pratt and hearing was set for Aug. 12.

The Northern Pacific will not lay any rails on the Edgeley-Dawson extension this year, it is stated. The intention was to put new rails on the Jamestown Northern branch and use the old ones on the new extension. The company was unable to secure the necessary material, it is stated.

Ed Clamp, an employe of the Chase & Grant company, was seriously injured in a runaway accident. He was thrown from a delivery wagon and had one leg broken in several places between the knee and ankle.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Milbank—The city of Millbank, assisted by the various townships of Grant county, is preparing to have the most elaborate harvest carnival ever held in the northeastern part of South Dakota. It will be under the direction of the Milbank Commercial club. It is the intention to get together the very best specimens of agricultural products from the enormous crop now about ready for harvest in Grant county. Liberal prizes will be offered and the best exhibits will be preserved for exhibition at the St. Louis exposition.

Aberdeen—Irving Sargent, a hackman, fell from the vehicle in a faint and the wheels passed over his neck and head, killing him instantly.

Bishop Thomas O'Gorman, of Sioux Falls, has arrived to officiate at Presentation convent. Plans have been completed for the remodeling of Presentation academy.

Woonsocket—Citizens gathered at the home of Mayor J. T. Kean and presented N. B. Reed and A. Kalder each with a gold-headed cane. These men have spent much time in forwarding the city park and lake enterprises. Now that they are completed, the people feel very proud of the work.

Deadwood—Deadwood seemed to be overrun by grafters a few days this week. They are believed to be the advance guard of a circus that is headed this way, and the police have given them a quick shift. They appeared as a band of cripples, with crutches, canes and bandages.

Huron—Governor Herried, with his wife and daughter, passed through here Thursday morning on their way to Pierre. They have just completed a pleasant trip with the railroad commissioners of the United States through all parts of the country.

A carpenter working at the railroad shops was struck by a heavy timber and had his arm and collar bone broken and his jaw smashed.

Centerville—Injunction proceedings have been started against the board of education by several leading business and professional men to set aside contracts which the board recently made for the building of a $22,000 schoolhouse.

At the spring election the question of bonding the district for $14,000, the maximum amount, was warmly contested, and carried by only a small majority. The board sold the bonds, bought a block of ground in a new location in the First ward where the new building would be more central, and figured that by selling the old building and with the cash on hand a total of $19,000 could be realized. The remainder, $3000, could be paid in warrants.

The complaint charges that the proceedings of the board are illegal, and that the taxpayers will be burdened. As about all those signing the petition for the injunction live in the Third ward, and wanted the new building located there, it would look as if the change in location had more bearing on the protest than any other cause.

It May Not Be a Matter of History!

But it's a matter of fact—a fact beyond question that KING ARTHUR COFFEE is today the best coffee sold in Duluth.

And that's a fact. Facts are stubborn things—you can't get 'round 'em.

It means that the best people in Duluth are buying KING ARTHUR COFFEE because it is better coffee than they have been using.

All grocers have it. Packed in one and two pound air-tight cans.

MILES WILL RETIRE

Next Week From the Head of the Regular Army.

Maj. Gen. Young Will Then Become Commanding General.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The retirement of Lieut. Gen. Miles next week will make way for the promotion of a Pennsylvanian, Maj. Gen. S. B. M. Young, to the position of commanding general of the army. Gen. Young will be at the head of the army less than six months, as he will reach the retiring age next January. When he retires Gen. Chaffee will be made lieutenant general, and in the regular order Gen. Randall will be advanced to fill the vacancy in the grade of major general.

An important period for Maj. Gen. Wood will arrive when Gen. Chaffee reaches the statutory age for retirement on April 14, 1905. Sumner will retire in February, 1906, nearly three months before Chaffee. The list of major generals will then stand, assuming that promotions will be made according to seniority, as follows: MacArthur, who retires June 2, 1969; Bates, Aug. 26, 1906; Wade, April 14, 1907; Wood, Oct. 24, 1924; Grant, May 30, 1914, and Bell, Jan. 2, 1920. If MacArthur should be made lieutenant general on the retirement of Chaeffee he would continue in the service for three months after the term of the next president expires.

Army officers assume President Roosevelt will be elected next year, and they are asking, would Roosevelt promote Wood over MacArthur, and Wade to the grade of lieutenant general, in order to make certain that Wood shall have command of the army and become chief of staff?

There is another interesting question being discussed by army officers in connection with the succession to Chaffee to the lieutenant generalship. Gen. Corbin stands next to Miles in rank, and although not of the line of the army, is considered likely to be selected for promotion to the highest rank when Chaffee retires. Corbin's advancement however would not materially delay the promotion of MacArthur, for the reason that Corbin will retire for age Sept. 15, 1906, about six months after Chaffee goes out. This consideration, therefore, does not enter into the problem as to what will be done by President Roosevelt, if elected next year, when required to select a major general to fill lieutenant generalship when Chaffee retires in 1906.

The officials here are somewhat dazed by the plans of those who are promoting the trans-Alaska-Siberian railroad. Their scheme involves a railroad to Russia, with a tunnel under the Behring Strait, connecting the United States and Siberia. The promoters have filed an application for the approval of the proposed route by the secretary of the interior. Col. James Hamilton Lewis, of Chicago, former representative in congress from the state of Washington; Holmes Conrad, former solicitor for the department of justice, and Charles H. Aldrich, of Chicago, are the attorneys for the projectors. A meeting of the representatives of the company will be held in Paris, Aug. 26. It is understood that Col. Lewis will sail for Europe next week to attend the meeting. Secretary Hitchcock has been asked by the attorneys to set a day for a hearing when agents for the company may appear and fully explain these plans. Assurance is given that the incorporators are willing to file a bond for the performance of the work within the territory of the United States, in such manner as shall be required by the secretary.

The petition, it is believed, is a forerunner to asking the United States to neutralize the straits as between nations, so that in the event of war, no advantage will be given the enemies of Russia. Russian officers demand the latter as a condition of the Russian government giving further support to the road and further executing the concessions of land heretofore granted.

Col. Symons, who succeeded Col. Bingham as commissioner of public buildings and grounds, has prepared a report which he will submit to congress urging the necessity for building a new stable for the president. The present stable is located immediately south of the White House and state department, and in addition to being inadequate for present requirements, is a blot on the landscape. The horses and vehicles in the transaction of executive business and those employed by the commissioner of public buildings as well as those of the president are kept in this stable. Col. Symons recommends an appropriation of $60,000 for building a new stable. In his report he says:

"The stables at present in use are inadequate and in no wise corresponding to or commensurate with the splendid residence of the president or his stable needes, or the variety and importance of the business of the executive office and office of public buildings and grounds, which are all accommodated together. The present stable is a low brick structure, built many years ago, and so near the ground as to be damp and unhealthy for horses. It is situated on a plot of ground which undoubtedly in the near future will be selected as a site of a monument to one of the nation's great men."

Officials of the census bureau are arranging to take the census of the religious people of the United States. The census will be on the order of that taken in 1890. The 1890 census of religious bodies was carried out with unusual care and proved of great value, but the newone will be even more complete. It will embrace statistics on the number of religious sects and denominations, the number of their members, the number of churches, seating capacity of churches, number of rented pews and the income derived from them, number of missions maintained, number of orphans and indigent reported, number of ministers and their aggregate and average salaries, number of publications and their circulations, value of property owned, etc.

A special agent who is familiar with this particular work will be assigned to prepare the statistics, and it is thought the work will be completed within about six or eight months. Great interest is manifested in the work by ministers all over the country, and the bureau anticipates but little trouble in gathering the necessary information. Director North is daily receiving letters from ministers asking for the plans of the census, making suggestions, or offering assistance.

Uncle Sam wants some good stenographers—men, not women. They will be sent to the Philippines. There will be a civil service examination for stenographers on Aug. 12 at Boston, Washington, Chicago, Indianapolis, New York, New Orleans, Philadelphia and San Francisco.

The present register for the departmenial and the Philippine service is depleted, and competent men are in demand. Departmental stenographers receive from $720 to $1200, and those in the Philippines from $1200 to $1400. The Philippine civil service board announces that it will appoint at $1400 stenographers who transcribe 120 words per minute and obtain an average of 85 in the fifth subject of the stenography examination. Persons failing in the August examination will be allowed, upon filing new applications, to take the regular stenographer's examinations in the fall.

Mayor Scores a Victory Over the Council of Escanaba.

Escanaba—Mayor Sourwine has scored a victory over the council in his fight against the proposed appropriation for books for the new Carnegie library. Recently, despite the mayor's veto, the council again passed a resolution providing that $2500 be expended for books, but when the first bill on that account, amounting to $267, was approved by the council and ordered paid, the executive refused to sign the order.

The council then instituted proceedings for a writ o fmandamus and the case was argued this week. It was contended by the mayor that the appropriation was illegal for the reason that the charter provides that appropriations of the kind must be made at the annual meeting in September, and that last year at that time $2000 was appropriated for library purposes. The argument was sustained by the court, and pending a further hearing of the case, the case, the mandamus asked for was refused.

One of the largest dredging contracts in the history of the great lakes has just been completed by the C. H. Starke Dredge and Dock company of Milwaukee. For two years the firm has been engaged in deepening the channels about the ore, coal, merchandise and lumber docks, employing in the work three large dredges, eight scows and three tugs, representing an outlay of $180,000. Something like a million and a half cubic yards of sand, gravel, etc., have been removed.

Menominee—Twenty mason tenders went on a strike. They were getting $2 and asked for $2.50 a day. Another gang of men was secured and the work was not delayed more than an hour.

Game Warden Robert Hitchon of Marinette has returned from Lake Noquebay, where he has been searching for the set lines that have been destroying the fish in great numbers. He found one line that was 900 feet in length and had over 500 hooks attached to it. They were all baited. This line alone, if left for any length of time, would exterminate all of the fish in the lake.

Iron Mountain—Mrs. G. B. Tramontine, an Italian resident of Iron Mountain, is dead, the result of a gunshot wound self-inflicted with suicidal intent. She shot herself in the head while standing in front of a mirror at her home and died almost immediately. Gossip circulated by scandalmongers drove her to the deed, according to a letter left by the woman, who is survived by husband and five children.

Crystal Falls—Mike Nybacka, living near Crystal Falls, has been adjudged insane and has been taken to the Newberry asylum. His mind had been affected for many years. He had been working on a perpetual motion device and this, it is thought, deranged his mind. Recently he started in to make a "rough house" at his home at the Dunn mine, where he has lived for many years, and beat his wife until help came.

About a year ago a fellow named Jack Manning shot through a saloon door at Crystal Falls one evening slightly wounding the proprietor. He was arrested and let go on bail, to await examination. Jacob Bauer signed his bond. Before his examination he skipped out, forfeiting his bonds, and had not been seen since. Late last week Village Marshal Hansen of Iron River received a telegram, notifying him to be on the lookout for Manning, as he was believed to be in that village. Manning was rounded up and now again lies in the county jail at Crystal Falls.

AN INJURIOUS COMBINE.

The local butchers' combine ought to be ashamed of itself, if there is any possibility of shame left in it.

The showing made in a local article on another page is a striking arraignment of its greed and rapacity. Though the conditions that created high meat prices a year ago have disappeared, and wholesale prices have gone down all along the line, there has been no decrease in the retail prices of meats, and in fact they are now at high water mark.

There can be no excuse for this except that the combine is able to exact these prices. Such greed is damaging to the prosperity of the city. The cost of living enters largely into all calculations, and manufacturers that might be intending to locate here would weigh this condition heavily against entering the local field. Though the butchers have increased retail prices regardless of wholesale charges, there has been no increase in the payment of labor, and every dollar that the combine wrings from the public, more than it is rightfully entitled to, is a blow at labor and an injury to the city.

If the combine cannot be reached through shame, there may be other ways of reaching it, and if the condition exists too long some other means may be tried. The butchers must be careful that they do not kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

The matter of old age pensions is one on which various views are held in various countries. The question has been discussed more of late than ever before and in some countries is receiving favorable legislation. France is now struggling with the subject and a bill is before the chamber of deputies which provides for the welfare of all persons of a certain age, who have any sort of a disease or indisposition. Whether it will pass or not is yet an uncertain matter. Similar laws are in vogue in Denmark and Belgium although not nearly as far-reaching as that proposed by France. In America, Germany and England, the general idea is that there is too much paternalism in a general scheme to take care of the aged. It is generally conceded that the proper pension scheme is one that maks the individual provide for his future. New Zealand, however, with her advanced ideas, especially on socialistic matters, takes a different view and assumes that the care of old age is purely a matter of justice. In her recently devised scheme of old age pensions the statute establishing a general pension system begins with this preamble: "Whereas, it is equitable that deserving persons, who during the prime of life have helped to bear the public burden of the colony by the payment of taxes, and to open up its resources by their labor and skill, should receive from the colony a pension in their old age." In this view a pension is not a charity, but a debt that the state owes its workers. Although the New Zealand idea appears to have a marked socialistic origin, the difference between it and the German system of compulsory insurance, is not so fundamental. In New Zealand is it assumed that any honest old person "has already worked his share and has practically invested his earnings in state wealth." It is a very taking idea that his toil and skill and good will have been invested in the country's prosperity. Germany, on the contrary, does not regard the work of the average citizen so highly, and has no such confidence in the honesty of her laborers, and therefore assumes to control the citizen's wages and provides pensions out of them.

The New Zealand law provides that $170 is to be considered the average of individual income. The pension is to be decreased $5 for every $5 income in excess of this sum. No pension must exceed $260 a year, and must not be less than $90. It is thought that the applications for the whole colony for pensions will not be more than 6000 at the present time. It remains to be seen, however, whether the system itself will not tend to increase the number of applicants year by year.

The plan looks like a dangerous one on the face of it, but it is perhaps well that New Zealand should make the experiment and other countries may profit thereby.

The Two Harbors Journal says that the candid opinion of the majority of the citizens of Lake county is that Chief Fire Warden Andrews should be relegated to private life. They are of this opinion chiefly because of his agitation of "a forest reserve for Lake county," to which they are strongly opposed. The Journal says that "a forest reserve in Lake county such as is proposed, would practically cut the county in two, it would also take up thousands of acres of land which will in a few years be settled and farmed by a thrifty class of people. For the government to make a reserve of thousands of acres in the central part of this county would be the worst setback the county has ever experienced," all of which is undoubtedly true.

Something seems to have happened to Governor Van Sant's anti-merger suit. Will it necessitate another retainer for Mr. Munn?

SLATE MACADAM.

Property-owners will be interested in the local article in this issue relative to slate macadam and its use in Minneapolis and elsewhere.

The suggestion is made by Judge Ensign and others that the slate macadam should be given a trial on one of the streets of Duluth where macadam can be comfortably and suitably used, and the suggestion seems to be a good one. The slate is right at the outskirts of the city, almost; its cost is small, and an experimental paving could be laid at very small cost. Should the experiment turn out the way the advocates of slate macadam claim it will, the small investment in it will bring large returns.

Nothing could be lost by it at any rate, as it appears to be an assured fact that the paving is a success, for certain thoroughfares at least. And then it has always seemed rather foolish to a good many Duluth people that paving material should be sought from afar, when it comes accompanied by high freight charges, when there are excellent paving materials close at hand. It could do no harm and might do a lot of good to make the experiment, and it should be made.

THE DEMAND FOR DIAMONDS.

The everlasting desire for diamonds, the most precious of all stones, seems to grow as time advances, the demand for them increasing year by year. What the people want is more diamonds, and those not blessed with great wealth are anxious to get them at lower prices, if possible, than those now prevalent. This great and increasing demand has caused much exploring for new fields. German Southwest Africa is now being prospected by the agents of a syndicate formed in Bremen, and it is hoped to open up a new region to offset in some measure the great diamond mines in British South Africa. Another exploration company was formed in London for the purpose of searching for diamonds in the Serra de Frio mountains in the state of Minas Geraes, but its success was only slight.

Borneo is the hunting ground at present of a party of engineers who are looking for diamond mines. This precious stone has long been known to exist in Southwestern Borneo. The rajahs of Pan-embohan possess an immense belt studded with diamonds, said to be from that district, one stone weighing 67 carats. The great Borneo diamond of Mataam, said to weight 367 carats, is believed to be from that same region. New diamond fields have been opened in New South Wales, but the diamonds, though brilliant and hard, are small, and the Australian yield cannot, theretore, become of great importance. A number of diamonds have lately been found in Siberia, but they were small and of inconsiderable commercial value.

Scientists have been making some experiments to determine the action of light on diamonds and other precious stones, in order to assist buyers in settling values. The diamonds which emit the most brilliant gleams of light are not necessarily those that are the most perfectly cut, but rather those that flouresce most markedly in the violet rays of light. Exposed to these rays non-flourescent diamonds show simply a violet color, like any ordinary white object, while the flourescent ones glow with a clear luminous blue. This mode of distinction being so easy of application, has great practical value in the determination of fine stones, the more so as diamonds of whatever quality present no difference as to transparency under Roentgen rays. One experimenter found to his dismay that a fine yellow diamond, after being exposed to a violet artificial light, changed from a golden yellow to a deep brown, an alteration that destroyed four-fifths of its commercial value. Fortunately, however, it recovered its original color in about twenty-four hours.

Diamonds are all right as ornaments and are greatly to be desired, but at the same time there are other things even more to be desired than these precious stones.

THE PANAMA CLIMATE.

In view of the fact that the isthmian canal will, in all probability, be built through the isthmus of Panama, the climate there is of considerable interest to those who may intend in the future to visit the locality of the canal. There seems to be a remarkable uniformity of temperature and in the monthly means of the weather bureau the changes of temperature from hour to hour and from day to day are subject to much less variation on the isthmus than in regions more remote from the equator. Alhajuela is situated in the valley of the Upper Chagres, among the hills which here represent the great mountain chains bordering the western coast of North and South America. Its altitude above tide is only 144 feet and being about midway between the oceans, the locality is well suited to represent the climate of the interior of the isthmus. The temperature at sunrise in the dry season is about 72 degrees; it soon rises rapidly, attaining about 87 degrees at 1 p. m.; after this it falls rapidly to about 81 degrees at sunset, and then subsides gradually to the minimum at sunrise. During the rainy season the temperature at sunrise is about 74 degrees; it rapidly reaches a maximum at noon of about 85 degrees, and then falls to about 80 degrees at sunset, and later to the minimum at sunrise. Thus, during the dry season the daily temperature has a larger range and a later maximum than when rains prevail.

At LaBoca, situated on the Bay of Panama, the minimum temperature occurs later, or at about an hour after sunrise, being then about 75 degrees in both the dry and the rainy season, 84 degrees at about 2:30 p. m. The rate of fall is more gradual than at Alhajuela, the mercury receding at sunset in the dry season only to about 86 degrees, and in the rainy season only to about 83 degrees. In short, the changes on the Pacific coast are less extreme and are later than in the interior, but the daily average is about the same.

An annual rainfall of about 140 inches may be expected on the Atlantic coast, about 93 inches in the interior, and about 60 inches near the shores on the Pacific. There is a well-defined dry season beginning in December and including the months of January, February, March and part of April, a period during which the sun is returning northward from his southern journey to the Tropic of Capricorn, and the locus of heavy rainfall has been transferred southward from the isthmus. This comparative exemption from rain is characteristic of the interior and of the Pacific coast, but somewhat less so of the region bordering on the Caribbean sea.

Compared with the average climate of the United States, it is evident that the conditions prevailing in the isthmus are favorable for the work. Several consecutive dry months are assured and concrete and other work may be rapidly advanced.

A STRIKING ILLUSTRATION.

An illustration of the great change which has taken place in the newspaper business in recent years is furnished by the announcement that the New York Daily News will be sold by public auction on Aug. 21. The News was started in 1855 and as an afternoon paper was a great success. It attained a large circulation and made money rapidly. With the death of its principal owner came a series of dissensions among the other stockholders, and finally Frank A. Munsey, of magazine fame, obtained the controlling interest. One of the first things that he did was to change the News from an afternoon to a morning paper. The result was disastrous, and now the News is to be sold for what it will bring. A splendid property has been wrecked by the unwise change from the evening to the morning field.

There was a time when morning newspapers were in the lead, but as the Milwaukee Wisconsin says, "these are evil days for morning newspapers. Every year makes matters harder for their publishers. It is an age of constantly increasing facilities for collecting and publishing the news without delay. The more these facilities tend to perfection, the greater the advantage of those publishers whose aim it is to furnish the reading world with the news of the day. Narrators of old stories are bores. The morning newspaper which tells the public what it has read in its evening newspaper the day before can hardly expect to appeal to a wide constituency in an age of progress. No wonder that it is losing ground. The advertisers have begun to comprehend the situation, which makes the plight of the morning newspaper more desperate than ever."

FOR PRIVATE BENEFIT.

The first irrigation scheme under the recent act of congress has caused a kick, and a vigorous one at that. This is due to the fact that no public lands will be included in the territory first to be watered by the government. The first project taken up, involves the expenditure of $3,000,000 in constructing a monster dam on Salt river, Arizona, by which some 200,000 acres of land will be regularly watered throughout the dry season. The fact that all the benefit accruing from this scheme will go into the pockets of private land owners is something of a surprise in view of the extravagant claims that were made for irrigation when the matter was up before congress. Much was said in the debates about the desert wastes which were to be made rich and fertile, and which were to be thrown open to the home-maker at nominal cost.

The land was to be cut up into small holdings, no one having more than 160 acres, and the settler was to be charged only his pro rata share of the cost of furnishing the water. Thus congress was persuaded that it would be a good scheme to raise a fund by the sale of public lands, and use the money in making public lands arable and valuable which are now useless. Now as a matter of fact, there is not an acre of public land open to settlement by the homesteader in all the tract to be watered by the $3,000,000 irrigation project on Salt river. It is owned by private holders who are to be the sole beneficiaries in this expenditure.

The officials say that later on other irrigation projects will be taken up, which will improve land belonging to the public and which will be open to settlement in the usual manner. One or two schemes of this sort are under consideration, but it is notable that they are not being pushed with the vigor and enthusiasm that are being displayed in connection with the Salt river project.

THE CATHOLIC MISSIONS.

Roman Catholic contributions for mission purposes are much larger than would naturally be expected from the number of missionaries that are in the field. In the year 1902, according to the New World, $1,319,608.93 was contributed by Roman Catholics in aid of foreign missions. France stood at the head of the list with $771,939.58. The departments of Alsace-Lorraine contributed $79,276.18. All Germany gave less—$67,055.14, still Germany has missions of her own and sustains them. Switzerland gave $18,549.26; Austria, $12,130.70; Holland, $17,712.62, while little Belgium donated $70,054.94, or more than Italy and Austria combined. Italy gave $59,403.32; England, Ireland and Scotland, $28,138.59, of which Ireland contributed $20,199.88; Spain, $31,115.01, and Portugal, $6993.01. Unexpected showings are made by several countries usually considered non-Catholic, if not non-Christian. There was $1082.79 donated by Catholics in the diocese of Constantinople. Burmah and Korea both contributed; Jerusalem gives, $332; Syria, $123.75; India, about $500. Africa surprises by donating $5707.81, being nearly twice as much as given by Canada—$2785.97; and yet Africa is largely heathen as yet. Mexico gave $5466.42 last year. Central America and the West Indies. $922.27; Colombia, $102; Venezuela, $521.38; Guiana, $78; Ecuador, $37.28; Peru, $710.44; Bolivia, $200; Brazil, $1836.23; Chile, $7739.91; Uruguay, $4836.40, and the Argentine Republic, $23,709.94.

Our own republic remains to be considered. The statement may occasion surprise, nevertheless it is true, that in the matter of giving the United States actually ranks next to France. In 1902 this country gave $85,408.44 to the Catholic foreign missions, besides maintaining all her home charities. Certainly there is a great difference between France's $771,939.58 and the United States' apparently pitiful $85,408.44; nevertheless it must be remembered that in our country the salaries of the priests, bishops and archbishops are paid by the people, while in France the state pays these, for the most part. The largest sum given by any diocese of the United States, $28,086.31, was forwarded by Boston; the smallest sum given by any United States diocese was $2.00 by Cheyenne, an amount equalled by Alaska. Probably the smallest amount given by any American diocese was donated by San Jose, Costa Rica, which cheerfully contributed 64 cents.

Kansas now wants freight cars as badly as it wanted harvest hands. The wheat is ready to move.

Is it not time to press the proposed anti-toy pistol ordinance?

HOTEL GOSSIP

Stutley I. Henderson, of West Allis, Wis., is in Duluth, and in his element.

He is one of the strenuous people, and belongs.

Within the past year he has closed one of the largest city building contracts in the history of the West.

In fact, he has practically built a city of 10,000 people and one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country, within that space of time.

It is the city of West Allis, where the new Allis-Chalmers plant is located, just west of Milwaukee, and where a great deal of the mining machinery that is used up in this country and over in the Michigan iron and copper districts is made.

So it is of interest to Duluth people as well.

The new plant is the largest of its kind in the world, and is larger than the old plant, which has been the largest of its kind in the world.

A year and a few months ago Mr. Henderson, acting as general promoter, etc., pointed out to the contractors the proper places to pitch tents for grading camps, and went over the surveys of three railroads into the center of the small wilderness.

There were a few farm houses within a radius of six or seven miles.

Last month, before he left, the place had a population of 10,000 working people. The Allis-Chalmers company had moved its basis of activity to the place, and several other large factories were operating in full blast. Over 2000 men are working in the Allis shops alone.

This is probably a record breaker in city building although there are some instances on the Minnesota ranges where the mushroom growth startled not only the natives but the state as well.

The difference is that within this year or so, the new city is as fully equipped as any old timer, and perhaps much better, as all the public works are new.

Waterworks, sewer system, electric light and gas plants, electric railway on the streets, municipal government of a perfect plan, and other things are all in working order, with paved streets, and just what any old city would have, only it is all new and sleek, and very attractive.

The city has grown so fast that there hasn't been room for the people to come who want to, and it will be half as large again, before it stops the phenomenal growth.

"I haven't had a vacation for fifteen years," said Mr. Henderson this morning at the Spalding. "So I am taking a good one now. I have been haunting the northern lakes for a month now, with my family, and want to go to Yellowstone Park, but am not sure in what we might go down the Mississippi. It is an aimless tour, and we don't care where we go.

"I hate to leave the lake country, because it's going to be frightfully hot. If I had my way, I would stay around here all the time."

"Speaking of theatrical entertainments, the finest thing I have seen for a great many years," said Mr. Henderson, who admitted, however, he hadn't been at a theater for a great many years, "is the performance of 'Hiawatha'—they pronounce it 'Hee-a-wa-tha'—down near the Soo.

"It is put on by the Indians, themselves, and they have the sincerity of the race, though perhaps lacking in the technical training for actors. I saw the play the other day, and it is worth remembering."

S. A. Harding, general manager of the Structural Steel works, at Waukesha, Wis., is in the city, and registered at the Spalding hotel yesterday. He is here in connection with the announcement of opening of proposals for the new aerial bridge over the canal, and will probably remain until Monday, when the bids will be opened.

There are a dozen cigar salesmen in the city today, several being at each of the hotels. J. S. Shrieber of Milwaukee is the latest arrival, and he is at the St. Louis hotel, where he always has made his headquarters, and he has been coming up this way for years. The sudden influx of cigar men is not caused by any especial activity on the part of smokers, but they all seemed to want a little outing at the same time and came to Duluth.

Didn't Seem to Grow.

New York Times: Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller has always shown a marked tenderness for children, and when he visits a city is usually the guest of some institution devoted to their interests. A clergyman of the Presbyterian faith was once showing the justice and his party about an orphan asylum when the children assembled and gave an entertainment for them.

The justice responded in a speech which was marked by applause. A politician who accompanied him spoke in laudatory terms of the address, but added:

"Say, judge, I was much pleased with what you said, and I know you'll do them good, but I'm darned puzzled about one thing, and the more I come to this place the more puzzled I am. Ten years ago, when I first came here, them little fellows was just the height they are now. Why, in heaven's name, don't they grow?"

The justice's reply was not recorded.

HON. CHARLES A. TOWNE.

Hartford, Conn., Telegram: A Washington correspondent is responsible for the prognostication that the Hon. Charles A. Towne, formerly of Duluth, but now a resident of New York city, will be the Democratic nominee for president in 1904. It also states that Lord Salisbury once pronounced Towne to be "America's greatest orator of the present generation."

Since Bourke Cockran was kicked out of Tammany hall by Richard Croker, that organization until recently has had no great orator to champion its cause until the recent advent of Charles A. Towne upon its rostrum. Many of the best politicians and statesmen of the country regard Charles A. Towne as one of the greatest American orators—if not the greatest. The fact that Tammany hall has "picked up" Senator Towne is an indication that his political interests will be advanced by that powerful organization whenever an opportune moment arises for so doing.

Senator Towne says that he is not a candidate for president in 1904, but that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1908. He is a young man possesses a remarkable memory for names and faces, as well as an especial aptitude for making friends. As an orater he is the superior of Bryan, and as a statesman he ranks in the first class—as he is a man of great genius who does not play altogether on one string.

It is the opinion of the Telegram that Senator Towne will be heard from in the Democratic councils in the years to come, especially in view of the fact that he is now the national pet of Tammany hall, the most powerful political organization in the United States. Senator Towne is the antithesis of Roosevelt in one respect. President Roosevelt is popular in the West because he is a cowboy from New York, whereas Towne is popular in the East because he is a gentleman and a scholar from the West.

Senator Towne in migrating to New York and becoming a resident of that state is one of the very few Western or Southern ex-senators who has been taken up by Tammany hall in New York city. For example, such men as ex-Senator Carlisle and Lindsay, of Kentucky, and ex-Governor Campbell, of Ohio, as well as many other prominent Democratic statesmen from the West and South who have located in New York, have been entirely ignored, while Senator Towne has become the popular favorite of Tammany hall, an institution of sufficient political strength to give him pre-eminent standing in the Democratic party. In view of these facts may it not be said that Senator Towne has an excellent opportunity in the years to come of being the real active leader of the Democratic masses throughout the nation? It would seem so from a casual observation of recent events.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A fool and his money are soon margined.

The man who goes on a vacation needs another one to get over the strain of the first.

It's mighty comforting to have a thin wife when you've got to take a long drive with her.

A man doesn't care to have cooking schools run in his house; he wants graduates there.

DOMESTIC IDYLS.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: "Yes," said Mrs. Suburba, "Mr. Suburba and I knew each other many years ago. We made mud pies together."

"So I understand," retorted Mrs. Acidly. "He said the other day that he thought you must have them around the house still, judging from some he had eaten recently."

Chicago News: Mrs. Newed—My husband, I regret to say, is a man of very poor taste.

Miss Singleton—Well, you ought to be thankful that such is the case.

Mrs. Newed—Why so?

Miss Singleton—Otherwise he would still be in the bachelor class.

Puck: "I wish to marry your daughter," said the young man. The old man was a sensible old man.

"Can I support you in the style to which you have been accustomed?" he asked.

Pick-Me-Up: Mr. Potts (to his wife)—My dear, the air is chilly. Fermez in fenetre.

The Visitor (sotto voice)—Why do you ask your wife in French to shut the window?

Mr. Potts (ditto)—Because you are here. If I asked her in English she wouldn't do it, as she won't take instructions from me before visitors. But if I say it in French she gets up and does it at once, so as to let you see that she understands the language.

Washington Star: "Mrs. Binks has a hard time of it in one respect."

"What is that?" asked the woman who had dropped in for news.

"Her husband never goes to baseball games. When the dinner isn't good, she can't say it is all his fault for being late."

Philadelphia Press: Mrs Gable—Mrs. Upton has two servants in her house now, I understand.

Mrs. Hirem Offen—That's nothing. We invariably have two in our house; one going and the other coming.

Judge: Viola—Why did they separate? Myrtle—Nobody knows.

Viola—How dreadful!

Philadelphia Press: Towne—He's very wealthy.

Mrs. Towne—Yes, and very stingy and economical.

Towne—You don't know that. You mustn't judge a man by his clothes.

Mrs. Towne—Certainly not; I'm judging him by his wife's clothes.

Washington Star: "So you bought your husband a stop watch?"

"Yes," answered young Mrs. Torkins.

"How did it work?"

"Perfectly lovely," was the answer. "Charley took it to the races with him, and he says that every horse he was interested in stopped before it got into the home stretch."

PASSED DOWN THE LINE.

The captain casually inquired
If so and so had yet transpired,
And whether, too, beyond a doubt,
His program had been carried out.

The first lieutenant raised his head—
"I gave the order, sir," he said;
Denoting he had done his share
In that as yet undone affair.

The officer who paced the deck
Sweet meditation seemed to check—
"I gave the order," was his claim;
"The boatswain must have been to blame!"

The boats'n, sore with wounded pride;
Forthwith respectfully replied:
"I passed the word—that boats'n's mate
Ain't worth his salt—he's always late."

The boatswain's mate looked much abused
To be so wrongfully accused;
"I passed the word," he answered quick,
"That coxswain must have gotten sick."

The coxswain, looking daggers at
The other, roughly touched his hat
And said: "I passed it—sure I am—
Them boys ain't worth a tinker's dam!"

The stroke oar said he "told the bow
To tell the others—anyhow!"
The others took a higher ground
And swore they hadn't heard a sound!"

And so it happened, plain as day,
When everyone had had his say,
That all were like in zeal intense
And each had shown his innocence.

The captain let his blessings fall
Impartially on one and all,
And mingled with his strong conviction
A sulphuretted benediction!

The moral of this endless chain
Is instantaneously plain—
Just give the order—look astute—
Then nothing more—don't execute!

Don't budge or stir—don't turn a hand
To get the gear or whaleboat manned;
Be firm and zealously avow,
"I gave the order, anyhow!"

A BATTING STREAK

Duluth Wins From Winnipeg, Overcoming a Strong Lead.

Corbett No Puzzle to the Cardinals—Possible Change of Dates.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Winnipeg	47	17	.734
Grand Forks	39	24	.619
Crookston	36	27	.571
Fargo	34	27	.530
Duluth	34	28	.487
Superior	16	43	.271

* * *

Gallant stick work won for the Cardinals at Winnipeg yesterday.

Corbett, the crack twirler of the Champions, was batted all over the lot.

He is certainly hoodooed when he goes in against Duluth. His speed and curves completely mystify all other teams in the league but the Cardinals have found him easy from the beginning, making as high as seventeen and twenty hits off him in a single game.

Gehling pitched a fair game and was given good support, while the Winnipeg team went to pieces behind Corbett during the batting rally in the fourth and fifth innings. The score:

Duluth	0 0 0 5 0 0 0 0 3	8	2
Winnipeg	1 0 0 0 1 2 0 0 0 — 7	9	4

* * *

Fargo got busy with Crookston yesterday and won out by a score of 2 to 1. Burns pitched a fine game allowing but four hits. Freeman was hit hard by the winners. The score:

Fargo	0 0 0 0 0 0 1 1 — 2	10	2

* * *

Many fans made up a "rooting" party for Superior yesterday and saw Bagville whipped in a slow and tiresome game. Sessions had tremendous speed and was only hit safely five times. Hutter getting two of these. Morris was hammered in all directions and gives miserable support. Hanrahan led the batting business for the winners with four safe ones including a double and triple. The score:

	R	H	E
Superior	0 0 0 0 0 2 0 0 0 — 2	5	1

Duluth opens up with a long series at home on Monday. It was expected that the Cardinal uniforms would be thrown away at that time and replaced by the neat and natty blue and white colors, but indications are that the new rags will not be delivered before Tuesday or Wednesday. Owing to the immaculate hosiery of the new uniforms the team will be known as the White Stockings.

Three new players will appear with the team in Monday's game against Grand Forks. A catcher named Cassiholme has been secured to help Crippen whose steady, hard and good work has been appreciated by the management.

Bradley, an outfielder of considerable merit has been secured from the Chicago American league team for the balance of the season, and Moritz, third baseman of the Gunther team of the Interestate league, has been secured to take the place made vacant by Murphy's illness.

Crookston may play all the remaining games scheduled for Duluth at Crookston in this city and it is likely that Superior's week day games with the White Sox will be transferred to this side of the bay.

* * *

Unless two postponed games are played off here the Duluth and Fargo teams have met for the last time this season. Manager Van Praagh is very anxious to have the two games mentioned played off.

* * *

Duluth may pitch Shaw, Noldin, or McCoy in today's game at Winnipeg, while the Champions will use Bartos.

* * *

Manager Cantillion, of the Milwaukee team, has notified the local management that he has ordered Stratton to report here immediately. Stratton is the backstop that figured in the Mueller trade.

* * *

Umpire Steve Cusack has resigned to accept a position as umpire in the Central league.

"Chesty" Cox will join the Grand Forks team if Capt. Cole can induce Superior to lift his "suspension."

* * *

Hoffmeister, the hard-hitting Crookston second baseman, has been suspended for indifferent playing.

* * *

Bradish is the name of a new pitcher signed by Crookston.

* * *

Superior has a promising new player in King, who is now playing short. He hits well and fields nicely.

* * *

Langer tried second base at Superior yesterday and his throwing to first was something fierce.

* * *

There will be an important meeting of the board of control of the Northern league in this city on Monday. It is reported that some of the club owners are not in favor of playing the season through on account of the small crowds that are attending. Duluth and Winnipeg are the only towns that are keeping up the pace, and the local people say that Duluth will take all the games here rather than break faith with the fans by shortening the season.

The above is the standing of the wholesalers' league to date, counting in the games that have been forfeited by the two tail-enders, by their withdrawal from the league for the season.

The game played between the Stone-Ordean Wells and Marshall-Wells teams last Saturday, which was awarded to the latter team by the umpire, as the result of a dispute, has been contested [illegible] grocers and a committee will [illegible] pointed to take the matter up; [illegible] game is still marked up to [illegible] edit of Marshall-Wells in the a[illegible]nding.

But one game [illegible] being played this afternoon, but this promises to be one of the fastest and most closely contested games of the season. F. A. Patrick and Kelley-How-Thomson are the opposing teams, and the result will go far toward determining the final result in the race for the pennant. A defeat for the dry goods men will mean that they are out of the race, while a win will tie the two hardware teams for first place. The Marshall-Wells supporters will be out in force to root for the Patrick team.

While the leaders have not lost a game this season, winning every one played by large margins, the Patrick team will doubtless give them a run this afternoon. The dry goods men have been materially strengthened during the past few weeks and have been winning games with pleasing regularity.

The line-up of the two teams will be as follows:

THE FINAL SHOOT

Closing Contest For the Handsome Panton & White Trophy.

Fulton Has Lead of Seven Birds—Storey and Nelson Follow.

The event of the year at the Duluth Central Gun club will be the final shoot for the Panton & White trophy, which will be held tomorrow afternoon at the grounds of the club, in the East End.

There will be five contestants in the field and the sport promises to be keen.

The winner is entitled to the possession of the cup for one year.

Ten preliminary shoots of fifty birds each have been held, and the final shoot tomorrow will be for 10 birds, the man making the highest score in the preliminaries and the final combined, winning the possession of the cup.

The following are the complete scores of the five contestants who are shot up in the preliminaries, and who will contest tomorrow:

Fulton .48 44 45 43 40 48 46 48 44 44—450
Storey .46 42 45 47 43 43 44 48 45 39—443
Nelson .38 46 42 47 45 48 42 43 46 43—449
Cap.. ..43 43 37 37 41 42 41 41 43 40—412
Bob.. ..40 36 39 35 37 32 39 43 44 36—381

Fulton has been shooting consistently throughout the year and has a clear lead of seven birds over his nearest opponent, Storey. In a 100-bird shoot, however, it is just possible that Nelson or Storey will be able to catch him.

With the exception of the first shoot, when he fell down badly, Nelson has been running Fulton even for first place. He has been shooting in good form lately and will doubtless push the leaders hard.

Storey, the winner in the class A medal event, was but two birds behind Fulton until the last preliminary, when he fell down for the first time, scoring but thirty-nine, and allowing Fulton to increase his lead by five birds.

Cap and Bob, while they have been shooting consistently throughout the year, have no chances of pulling down the big lead of the the three leaders, even though they should win out over them in the final shoot tomorrow.

The Panton & White trophy is a magnificent cup, presented by the Panton & White company, and thes hooting for its possession has been the principal event of the year at the gun club. The final shoot tomorrow will probably bring out the largest crowd of members and their friends, and other interested spectators that has been seen on the grounds this season.

BRILLIANT EVENT

Tennis Tournament Entries Closed With Many Contestants.

Several Outside Cities Represented—Play Will Begin Tuesday.

The grand open tournament of the Endion Tennis club promises to be one of the most successful events, in every way, that was ever pulled off in the history of the game in Duluth.

Between forty and forty-five names are on the entry list, which closed last evening. Among these names appear twenty-eight of the members of the Duluth club, including Graff, Grady, Ingalls, Hopkins, Ames and all of the other men who made good showings in the preliminary tournaments of the club, recently brought to a close.

Of the outside cities, Barron, Wis., which is a stronghold of the game, is the best represented. Among the cracks entered from that city are the Coe brothers, who will make a bid for the Championship in the doubles, as well as in the singles. W. L. Morris, H. M. Coleman, W. L. McKee and W. L. Stone, also of that city, are on the entry list and will endeavor to take the title of champion of this neck of the woods back to Barron with them.

James Fleming, of Cloquet, who has a good local reputation as a player, will come down to make a bid for the championship, as will Dr. J. H. Crowe, of Virginia.

Superior enthusiasts have become fired with an ambition to land the championship of the head of the lakes, and five of the crack Bagville players will come over with the avowed intention of preventing the Duluth men from getting past the semi-finals. Among the Superior men are G. E. Nichols, Clough Gates, A. D. Gillette, Charles Chase, Lauren Kennedy, Walter Kennedy and A. Dissinnotte.

The committee will get together this evening and arrange the drawings. Play will commence Tuesday, and the matches will be run off as rapidly as possible.

There are two events, doubles and singles.

The Class B event of the second preliminary tournament is drawing to a close and the finals will be run off this afternoon. McVay won out over Close in one of the most evenly contested games of the season, the score being 6-3, 5-7 and 8-6. Stone won from Dash, Barthe from Henry and Kitchli from Frezeau, leaving these four men entered in the semi-finals. Play will be brought to a close this afternoon.

Sad Affliction of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Shackelford.

Mary Magoffin Shackleford, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Shackleford, of Frankfort, Ky., and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beriah Magoffin, of this city, died last week at St. Anthony's infirmary at Louisville, where she had been taken for treatment. The Journal, of Frankfort, in speaking of the death, tells of the brightness of little "Mary Goff," as she was known among her playmates, and of the trying days for the parents during the child's last illness and suffering. A number of their friends, prominent people of Kentucky, were with them, and the faithful "black mammy, Jennie, cared for the little sufferer to the end. The funeral took place Monday, at Frankfort.

THE BOAT CLUB

Fine Material Being Developed Under Coaching of Andrew O'Dea.

Prospects Excellent For Some Good Rowing Next Season.

Oarsmen of the Duluth Boat club have been taking regular try-outs during the past two or three weeks and a number of crews are developing under the guidance of Coach O'Dea.

The big eight-oared shell has not been out yet this season, but the fours and doubles have been in constant use. The four that has rowed most together, and that is looked upon as the first crew of the club, is composed of William McLennan, stroke; A. W. Puck, three; Norman L. Leach, two; John H. Upham, bow.

Among the crack crews are Elmer White and W. Le Strange; G. H. Jones and A. W. Puck.

Four different crews of doubles and two fours will be tried out this afternoon and Coach O'Dea will pick a second four-oared crew. Among the oarsmen who will engage in the trials this afternoon, in addition to those already mentioned, are the following: Dan Sinclair, Clayton Smith, F. W. Heimick, George Burns, James Cargill, Frank Hudson, Edward Haines, Miller McDougall, George E. Gibson, W. S. Telford and Charles McBride.

The single shells have also been popular with the club members this season, and prospects are bright for developing some winning oarsmen before next season, when the members intend to take an active part in the regattas held in the state.

G. H. Jones has been showing excellent form in the single shells during the past few weeks, and promises to develope into a very speedy man before next season. He has presented the club with a medal, which will be given into the custody of the oarsmen rowing the greatest number of miles during the season.

The second four, which will be selected this afternoon, will be used to row against the regular four in trial races during the season.

A NOTABLE INITIATION

Fidelity Lodge A. O. U. W. to Have Great Time August 27.

Fidelity lodge, No. 105, U. W., expects to initiate the large class of candidates in its history Thursday evening, Aug. 27, and is preparing to celebrate the event by giving a fine banquet.

This lodge is the largest Workman lodge in the city, having a membership of over 400. It has forged to the front during the past few years, and its officers and members are confident that instead of being the seventh or eighth largest lodge in the state it will be nearer the first in a very short time. Deputy Grand Master Workman Ehle, of Minneapolis, is assisting the lodge in its effort to eclipse all former records, and thus far has succeeded in securing over fifty applications for membership. All of the members are taking hold of the work and grand results are expected. Some of the grand lodge officers are expected to be present, and a grand reunion of the members will be had.

This lodge was instituted on May 3, 1890, with a very small charter membership. Until 1897 progress was very slow, but since that year it has had a very steady growth, until now it has a membership of about 420. It is fully expected that 100 or more new members will be added to its roll as a result of the work now being done. One remarkable feature about this lodge is the average age of its membership, which is a little over 34½ years. Its officers are composed of young men, who are earnest and enthusiastic workers, and they are putting forth their best efforts to make this the banner year, and they are confident that they will succeed. The lodge has very pleasant quarters in the Kalamazoo building, and meets every Thursday evening.

WILL PLAY NO MORE

Lacrosse Team Disorganized By Loss of Several Players.

Cancels All Games and Will Play No More This Year.

The Duluth lacrosse team has been disorganized during the past week and all the remaining games, which were scheduled, cancelled.

After the game played last Saturday with Fort William, Sanders and McW[illegible] of the local team, lefft he city Donald[illegible] the semi-professional team to play with[illegible] These two men were of Port Arthur. [illegible] of the team, and two of the mainstay[illegible] their loss was a serious [illegible]low.

Wink was injured in the S[illegible]day game and decided not to play again during the season, and when the news of the desertion of these three players was made known, some of the other men weakened and decided to drop out also.

Lacrosse did not prove as popular in Duluth as was expected. The weather was unfavorable at most of the home games, and the attendance was barely sufficient to clear the expenses. The team, moreover, being new in the field, was unable to find opponents with whom it might successfully cope, and lost every game played, with the exception of a tie game with Port Arthur. None but the strongest teams in the country, such as Fort William, Port Arthur, Houghton, Winnipeg and St. Paul were within reach of Duluth, and these teams had to be met, or none at all. The result was disastrous, and the repeated defeats of the home team, combined with the poor facilities for playing the game, and unfavorable weather, made it impossible to arouse any enthusiasm in Duluth over the game, which is new to the head of the lakes.

The game has been introduced, however, and another year may see a fast team in the field. The team has not yet been altogether disbanded, and a game may be played with Virginia at some future date.

Next season there will be a promising bunch of youngsters from which to draw. Jack Foreman, formerly the coach of the Duluth team, has a bunch of juniors which he is rounding into shape on grounds in the East End. Several of them have shown considerable promise, and with training will develope into expert players. The lads have taken up the game with no little enthusiasm, and practices are held several nights a week.

STILL ROBS THE PEOPLE

Rapacity of Butchers' Combine Fierce as Ever.

Wholesale Prices Lower But Not the People's.

The merry butcher is still engaged in carving rich, rare pounds of flesh from next the heart of the people of Duluth.

The butchers' combine is as strong as ever in Duluth, and in spite of the fact that wholesale prices here, as well as elsewhere, have decreased considerably since a year ago, the local butchers, far from decreasing the retail price, have put it up.

The charge was repeatedly made a year ago, when there were excuses for high prices and the wholesale prices were away up, that the local butchers were charging too much for meat. Those charges were never answered by the accused.

What will they say of their prices today, when wholesale rates have been reduced materially, and the retail charges are higher than ever?

Meat prices obtained by The Herald from local packers' agents yesterday and a year ago, were as follows:

	July 31, 1903. Cents per lb	July 31, 1902. Cents per lb.
Beef	7 to 8	8 to 10
Lamb	10	12
Mutton	8	8
Pork loins	10	12½
Lard	8	11

Almost everything in the list, therefore, has decreased in price materially since a year ago.

Not a single article for sale by the butchers is selling for 1 cent less than it was a year ago, and most of them are selling at higher prices.

The following prices are charged for meats at retail in Duluth today.

	Cents per lb.
Porterhouse steak	25
Sirloin steak	20
Round	18
Mutton, chops and legs	20
Choice lamb chops	25
Veal cutlets	20
Pork chops	15

In view of the change in general conditions, and the fact that wholesale prices are lower, the consumers of Duluth ought to be getting meat cheaper than they were a year ago. But they are not. Why not? Because the butchers' combine is still in good working order and because they are able to get whatever the people will stand so long as they hold together.

When such prices are charged in midsummer, when people do not naturally turn to meat, and when vegetables and fruits are a much more seasonable diet, what are they going to charge next winter, when meat is needed to supply fuel for the human furnace and to create the heat that is needed?

A worse condition still confronts the workingman. The indications are that wages next year will be lower than they are this year. With the butchers' combine still engaged in its hold-up game, where is the laboring man going to get off? The cheaper cuts of meat that he uses are sold at prices that would have been good enough for the choicer cuts a few years ago. He can hardly afford to eat meat now, when wages are high. What is he going to do if, as seems likely, wages decrease?

There was reason for high prices last year. There was a failure of the corn crop in 1901, and in June, 1902, there was an almost total disappearance of corn-fed cattle. Wholesale and retail prices advanced accordingly, retail prices going the wholesale prices several points better.

Ever since August, 1902, when the corn crop was good, there have been plenty of cattle, and wholesale prices have been low. Retail prices have continued the same and in many cases have advanced.

In the beginning it was a natural condition. Now it is an unnatural one, forced by the rapacity of the butchers' combine.

The people have howled at the coal combine because of the increase in coal prices. An increase of 3 cents a pound on meat means as much to the average householder as a raise of $3 a ton in the price of coal.

Lard is not meat, but the butchers sell it, so it comes in on the same game. The wholesale price of lard a year ago was 11 cents, today it is 8 cents. Yet the retailers have been holding the price up just the same. This condition is a serious menace to Duluth, and it must be remedied if the city is to go ahead. How it is to be done is hard to say. The butchers' combine has no shame, and stops as unblushingly as any highwayman ever did. It will continue to teal—the word is used advisedly—until it is stopped. The law does not seem to cover this particular sort of theft. Perhaps it may get to the stage where lawlessness has to cover it.

ODELL HAS RETURNED

From the West and Discusses Political Matters.

Salt Lake City, Aug. 1.—Governor Odell of New York, accompanied by Gen. Francis Greene, police commissioner of New York, arrived here yesterday from Yellowstone Park.

Governor Odell laughed at the candidacy of William R. Hearst for president. He was doubtful of the re-election of Mayor Low.

"Will you be a presidential candidate in 1908?" he was asked.

"Well, every man has aspirations," was his reply.

Governor Odell continued: "Nothing whatever has occurred between Senator Platt and myself. Our relations are most friendly and that story which stated that serious disagreement had occurred between us was a creation of a New York paper.

"It is a little early to forecast the result of the coming election and I will not venture an opinion as to whether Mayor Low will be re-elected or not. His administration is improving.

"Alton B. Parker seems to be the Moses of the Democratic party of the east, just at present, and it seems probable that he will play an important part in the Democratic convention.

"While in California, I heard considerable said of the possibility of William Randolph Hearst, proprietor of the Hearst newspaper syndicate, becoming a candidate for the renomination. It was all news to me. I do not believe his chances of capturing the convention would be any bitter than those of hundreds of other young Americans."

ATE POISONED CANDY.

Woman Gave Child a Piece and He Died.

Bunker Hill, Ill., Aug. 1.—Ewart Checkfield, the 6-year-old son of James W. Checkfield, local manager for the Union Dairy company of St. Louis, died Wednesday night from spasms under which suspicious circumstances that a coroner's inquest was held. Undeniable evidences of strychnine poisoning were found.

Little Ewart Checkfield was the only son of his father and invalid mother. He made regular morning and evening trips to the milkhouse for his father, and each time got his bucket filled with milk. Wednesday evening he departed from his home on his usual errand, swinging his bucket to and fro in childish lightheartedness. At 7:30 he returned home running and crying.

His father anxiously inquired what was the matter. The boy replied that a woman had given him a piece of candy which was bitter.

Not attaching much importance to the child's story his father gave him a glass of milk and a piece of celery to take the taste out of his mouth. In a few minutes, however, the child became alarmingly ill. Before a physician could be summoned the boy was in convulsions and in fifteen minutes he was dead.

SOUR MASH BOURBON

Can Be Made For Eight Cents a Gallon.

Milwaukee, Aug. 1.—A process has been devised for distilling whisky from sorghum molasses and Robert O'Brien of Freeport, Pa., is in Milwaukee assisting Professor Luche in experiments. They are reported to have succeeded in making a sour mash bourbon which could scarcely be told from the genuine and could be produced at a cost of 8 cents a gallon. Mr. O'Brien thinks that the discovery will revolutionize the sale of that brand of whisky.

August N. Grau of the National Distilling company does not believe the assertion and says that one might as well try to make white bread out of rye as bourbon whisky out of molasses.

Rev. Louis Fenwick, pastor of a negro church, charged Louis Boss, another negro, with stealing two revolvers from him. In making the complaint he said that the revolvers were necessary in his business.

In replevin proceedings brought by the pastor's church recently to recover Chicago property, four razors were scheduled as part of the property.

REVENGE IS SWEET

Duluth Police Get It Plentifully In Game With Superior's.

Bob Smollett and Joel Dwyer Aid With Their Rooting.

Aided by the rooting of Bob Smollett and Joel Dwyer, Duluth's finest triumphed over Superior's slowest yesterday.

The policemen played great ball at times, the Duluth officers taking the lead in the first inning and holding it.

The Superior coppers say they could not stand the terrific noise that came from the top of the Duluth bleachers. At first they thought it was a combination between a steam calliope, a boiler factory and a series of dynamite explosions, but investigation showed that it was only Officer Smollett holding a lung to lung confab with a brother officer from Bugville who was on the lowest seat of the opposite bleachers,

At one stage of the game the Duluth officer was accusing his brother officer of being a porch climber, and the Superiorite got back by insinuating that the "rooter" was something of a second story man himself.

Joel Dwyer enjoyed the game almost as much as the Superior bunch. When Chief Troyer drove out a three-bagger it required the united efforts of five or six men to keep Dwyer from nominating him for president or handing him three months' salary in advance.

Officer Stewart, the Duluth right fielder, was the dazzling performer of the occasion. With three men on bases and two out, Officer Halberg, of the Superior team, broke off a long drive to right that looked good for anything from a three-bagger to a home run. Officer Stewart was quietly walking his beat out in that direction. He noticed the horse hide acting suspiciously as it came toward him, and he decided to "pinch" it. There was a joyous chase for a moment and it looked as if the ball would get away, but Stewart reached up and got it, and now he is being talked of for promotion without the formality of a civil service examination.

The Duluth officers scored nine runs in the first inning, and after that simply played with the Superior bunch. The score:

Duluth.		Superior.
Towe	catcher	Halberg
Steele	pitcher	Hudson and Aldenburg
Blackwood	first base	Aldenburg and Hudson
A. Schulte	second base	Williams
Woods	third base	Flynn
F. Schulte	shortstop	McKinnon

DRIVEN FROM TOWN

Because He Returned Home With a Bride.

Dubuque, Iowa, Aug. 1.—James McAleer, who represented Dubuque county in the state legislature two years, was married in Cherokee, Iowa, a few days ago, and when he returned to Epworth with his bride he looked forward to a reception. He had been keeping company with a young woman of Epworth, and she alleges that he promised to marry her.

When the girl's brother and relatives learned that McAleer was returning with a bride they organized their forces and marched to the station to meet the train. The bridegroom was mercilessly assaulted, and the bride was made aware of the deceit of her husband and informed of his promise of marriage to the young woman who was verbally assaulting the former representative, while her brothers and relatives were using their fists with effect. McAleer was then marched out of town and warned never to return. His bride went with him.

McAleer had been prominent in politics in Dubuque county many years. It is understood that the Epworth woman will institute suit against him for breach of promise.

HAS LOST FIFTH HUSBAND.

Perkins Layman Considered Life Too Strenuous.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 1.—With love outlived in four months of married life, income eaten away to the last crumb and several creditors still hungry; casting away a position of trust won by a nine-years' climb from the bell boy's bench, and secretly taking his personal effects from his new home, Perkins A. Layman, the handsome young chief clerk of the Vannuys hotel, has deserted his bride, formerly Mrs. Grace Snell Coffin, who is for a fifth time minus a husband. She was the daughter of Millionaire A. J. Snell, of Chicago, whose murder has always remained a deep mystery.

Mrs. Layman is a woman of striking beauty, tall and well formed, and extremely stylish in dress and deportment. Layman's marriage to her was as sudden as his departure, and was the talk of the town for weeks. She is much older than he, and the mother of several children by former husbands.

REMEDY FOR HAY FEVER.

After Trying Other Treatments Hyomei Was Used With Perfect Success.

Prior to the discovery of Hyomei, the only advice a physician could give to a hay fever patient was to go away from home, but now anyone who expects the disease can, if Hoomei is used, stay at home without fear of the annual attack of sneezing, watery eyes and other discomfort.

J. F. Forbes, a well-known Western railroad man, whose home is at McCook, Neb., writes: "I have never had relief from any remedy for hay fever, even temporarily, until I discovered the merits of Hyomei. I will always recommend it whenever occasion requires."

There is no offensive stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. It is a reliable remedy for the cure of all diseases of the respiratory organs and is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, so that the air taken into the throat and lungs is like that of the White mountains or other health resorts where hay fever is unknown.

S. F. Boyce, who has the local agency for Hyomei, advises all who are subject to hay fever to begin its use two or three weeks before the time of the annual appearance of this disease and thus prevent the attack. If, however, Hyomei is not used until the sneezing and other disagreeable symptoms have shown themselves, it is necessary to use the treatment more frequently, at least half a dozen times daily, and Hyomei Balm should be rubbed into the nostrils both morning and night.

The fact that S. F. Boyce agrees to refund the money to any hay fever sufferer who uses Hyomei without success should inspire confidence in its power to effect a cure.

THE AERIAL BRIDGE BIDS

One In Up to Present Time—To Be Opened Monday.

Bids for the aerial bridge over the Duluth ship canal are to be opened next Monday by the city engineer, but up to the present time only one bid has been submitted. Some others are expected today, as there have been numerous applications by bridge building concerns for the plans and specifications. Some of the specifications have been returned by the applicants, with the notations that it would be impossible for the concerns to handle that particular kind of contract.

The amount of money which can be raised for the bridge is limited by legislative action to $100,000, and no bid that exceeds the amount can be considered.

The design and details of the bridge have been left entirely to the contractors, and curiosity has been aroused as to the plans that will be submitted. The bridge must be ready for use July 1, 1904.

SHIPMENTS OF ORE

Total For Season to Date Ahead of Last Year.

July Shipments Gain About Hundred Thousand Over 1902.

The total ore shipments from the head of the lakes for the month of July were 2,474,791 tons, as against 2,367,023 for July in 1902. If the fleet of ore boats expected at the Two Harbors ore docks had arrived yesterday instead of today, the gain over July of last year would have been considerable. As it is, the increase is something less than 107,000 tons for the month.

The Iron Range road has delivered over 900,000 tons of ore at their docks at Two Harbors, and the boats alone were necessary to bring that road's total up to that of the Missabe road, which sent away 913,304 tons up to midnight last night. This was 12,500 tons more than in July last year.

The total shipments for the year up to Aug. 1 have been from the head of the lakes, 7,676,759, as against 7,303,212 up to this time last year, making the total increase to date this year 373,547.

The members of the ore transportation department of the steel corporation are not looking for large gains for the month of August, owing to the congestion in Lake Erie, which has been overcome during the past month, but which is expected to be troublesome this month.

If the ore had been moving freely all of last month, the gain for the month would have been in the neighborhood of half a million tons, it is said.

The shipments by roads for the year up to Aug. 1 are as follows:

	Aug. 1, 1903.	Aug. 1 1902.
Dul., Mis. & Nor	2,745,885	2,634,230
Dul. & Iron Range	2,852,600	2,810,400
Great Northern	2,078,214	1,858,583
Totals	7,676,659	7,303,212

The shipments for July by roads are as follows, and the comparison with July, 1902:

	July, 1903.	July, 1902.
Dul., Mis. & Nor	$13,309	902,000
Dul. & Iron Range	877,100	846,675
Great Northern	684,387	618,948
Totals	2,474,900	2,367,023

ASKS DAMAGES FOR TRESPASS

S. P. Morterud Claims Timber Was Cut From His Land.

Swen P. Morterud comes before the district court in a suit begun this morning, and charges Lammers Bros. and the Northern Lumber company with causing $1100 damages to property belonging to him, and he sues to recover that amount.

According to his complaint, it appears that he owns a charming bit of ground on the shores of Pike lake, a body of water famous for various things. The property is described as lots 4, section 36-51-16, and he asserts that it was covered with a fine growth of timber and shade and ornamental trees and shrubs. All this made it very desirable for a country home or summer resort, for some Duluth magnate loaded down with lucre.

That is the way he claims it was last summer. Now, however, it is vastly different. He alleges that between November, 1902, and April, 1903, the defendants entered upon the land, the same being trespass, and cut and destroyed a lot of trees, made the property a barking ground and the roadway for a logging railroad, and left a large amount of bark and debris. All this he says caused him an actual damage of $250, and under the law governing malicious trespass he asks treble damages of $750. Also, he claims that the defendants wrongfully cut from his land 24,800 feet of his timber, for which he sues for $350. John Jenswold, Jr., is his attorney.

FOR ASSAULT BY LARGE DOG

Charles Holm Sues Capt. Richard Trezona, the Mining Captain.

Charles Holm has begun suit in the district court against Richard R. Trezona, the well known mining captain, to recover $3100 for the effects of an assault upon him by one large dog.

He alleges that on April 21, 1903, and for a long time prior thereto, the defendant owned a large, ferocious and vicious dog, accustomed to bite, attack and injure mankind, of which propensity Capt. Trezona had full knowledge, and yet continued to permit the animal to run at large.

Holm claims that on April 21, while he was passing lawfully along a street in Eveleth, the dog attacked him with great violence and force, jumping upon him and throwing him to the ground. As the result of this attack, he says his right arm was broken and he was otherwise severely injured, laying him up for a considerable period. Medical attendance cost him $100, and he sues for that and for $3000 general damages. Marshall & Whipple are his attorneys

DULUTH PROOF:

Mr. A. Ebmer, of 331 Fifth street east, says: "A heavy, dull, persistent aching pain through my loins was most distressing for I could not rest well and no position seemed comfortable. I tried a great many different times to get relief, but no medicine I could find gave me any material benefit. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, procured a box at W. A. Abbett's drug store and used it. I obtained relief right away, and since then I have never had them fail to relieve me promptly whenever I had a slight recurrence, say from catching cold or straining myself."

AT WEST DULUTH

At the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club held last evening, H. H. Phelps was appointed to represent the interests of West Duluth in the hearing of the Northern Pacific case before the state railroad and warehouse commission to be held Aug. 11.

A number of the other members of the club will also be present, and the sentiment of West Duluth citizens in the matter will be decisively shown. The members are determined that the long fight of the West Duluth Business Men's club and the West Duluth Commercial club shall not be in vain. The case has been fought successively through the district and the supreme courts, and they believe that a decided expression of their feelings in the matter will lead the commission to render a favorable decision, and compel the railroad to restore the former service to West Duluth and the West End.

MANY WILL ATTEND.

A large number of West Duluthians are planning to attend the picnic of the Scandinavian Benevolent society, which is to be held at Zenith park, tomorrow afternoon.

The society has a large membership in West Duluth, and the members will turn out in force. The picnic promises to atract one of the largest crowds of the season to the park.

The association has chartered the steamers Mary Mann and Balcom to carry people to the picnic grounds.

The Balcom will run from the Tower bay slip, carrying Superior members of the association, and the Mary Mann from the foot of Sixty-first avenue, making a trip every fifteen minutes.

A program of sports has been arranged for, among them being a ball game.

FINE AMATEUR GAME.

One of the best amateur ball games played this season will be the game tomorrow afternoon, between the Freimuth team and the West Duluth nine.

The game will be played at Athletic park.

Both teams have had a very successful season, winning the large majority of their games, and the match tomorrow will be a closely contested one.

Larson will be in the box for the West Duluth team, and the remainder of the line will be about the same as in former games.

Freimuths will have one of the strongest teams they have placed in the field this season, and are confident of a victory.

The engineer of Whitney Bros.' beautiful gasoline launch had his hand crushed yesterday at Zenith park while attempting to start the engines. Two of the fingers were caught in the cog wheels of the engine and they had to be amputated.

Disgusting Scenes.

A reader of The Herald at Arnold complains that the most disgusting affair that ever took place in that vicinity was a picnic held there last Sunday. Beer and whisky flowed like water and was served alike to men, women and children. Many were more or less intoxicated, and as evening drew on fighting and brawling became the order of the day and continued until late into the night, winding up with a field fight in which beer bottles and rocks played a lively part. He thinks there should be some measures taken to put a stop to the Sunday carousals at Arnold.

BOLD DIAMOND ROBBERY.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—While the jewelry store of Louis Weber, at Clark and Harrison streets, was full of customers last night, robbers entered the basement of the place and cutting holes through the floor and the raised platform between the outer and inner show windows, stole two trays of diamonds valued at $5000. Gaining access to the basement through a vacant store in the rear, the thieves sawed a hole in the floor back of the show window large enough to permit a hand to be passed upward, where the jewels lay. The plush covering of the raised floor back of the window was cut away with a knife.

SOLICITOR ARRESTED.

Troy, Ohio, Aug. 1.—George A. Williams, a newspaper solicitor, formerly of Lexington, Ky., and wanted at Detroit, Mich., for alleged embezzlement, was arrested here today at the request of the Detroit authorities.

APPROPRIATION DEFEATED.

New York, Aug. 1.—By a vote of 41 to 24 the board of aldermen has, for the second time, defeated the appropriation of $6,532,600 for the Manhattan bridge, the opposition being to the proposed eye bar construction which had been suggested in place of wire cables.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS PAGE

Guinea Fowls as Burglar Alarms.

BY FLORENCE A. DAWSON.

"Well, well, it's good to have my two daughters home again!" said Dr. Witherbee, as he chucked to old Dobbin, and the family buckboard rolled away from the station.

"It's good to be back, too," said Elsie, as she drew in a deep breath of the sweet country air.

After six months' absence their simple country home seemed to both a paradise, with which the fashionable boarding school in New York city was not to be compared. As the buckboard rolled on they exclaimed with delight as first one familiar object and then another caught their eyes. At last both sprang to their feet and waved their handkerchiefs and kissed their hands toward an old fashioned homestead with a broad lawn in front and a bit of orchard behind. This was home, and there was mother on the porch waiting for them.

As Bobbin turned in the gate, however, a sudden screech above their heads startled the girls so that they both sat abruptly down again. And the screech was followed by a chorus of discordant, alarmed cries.

"Goodness! what is it?" exclaimed Marie and Elsie together.

The Doctor laughed. "Do you mean to say that two country raised girls don't know what guinea hens are?" he said. And looking back at a tree which overhung the drive, the girls beheld a number of these birds among the foliage.

"How horrible! Where did they come from?" they asked.

But before any explanations could be made the carriage had drawn up at the porch and Marie and Elsie had leaped from it into the arms open to receive them.

It was not until they were sitting at that delightful "home supper" and the cries of the guinea fowl again broke shrilly forth that the girls remembered about them.

"Some patient to see me, I suppose," said Dr. Witherbee. "We don't need a doorbell since your mother has made pets of guinea hens." And he went out to see who the caller might be.

"Oh, mother! Not really! They don't always scream like that whenever anyone comes, do they?" asked the girls.

"Not in the daytime," replied Mrs. Witherbee. "But at night they have taken to roosting in that tree, and they are the most wakeful creatures imaginable. No one can come in or out of the gate without their rousing to proclaim the fact. It's most amusing, and has come to be quite a joke among the neighbors." Then noticing that the girls looked rather dismayed by these facts, their mother added: "You won't mind the noise after you get used to it. No one around here keeps guinea fowls, but when I was a girl father always had them and I learned to love them dearly. When I was deserted by my two daughters this winter I thought I should not be so lonely if I had some of them again as pets. And you've no idea what a comfort they have been and how sorry I have become of them."

After supper the three Stanford boys, who lived opposite the Witherbees, came over to see the girls. As they tramped up the path the guinea hens sounded their discordant chorus, and the boys mimicked the harsh cries, thereby exciting them still more.

"Good evening, girls. Glad to see you home again. Welcome to Guinea Hen Ranch," the boys called gayly.

And this was only the beginning. On that and several succeeding evenings crowds of jolly young people walked or rode from all over the countryside to welcome the Witherbee girls home, and not a single arriving or departing guest escaped the vigilant outcry of the guinea hens. This afforded endless amusement to the callers. One merry party thanked the girls for having such a beautiful bagpipe orchestra proclaim their arrival. "Quite like sending a brass band to meet your guests," they said. Others likened the harsh voices of the birds to alarm clocks. Everyone had some joke to crack on the subject, or some new ridiculous application with which to dub them.

But though the girls tried to take the fun as good naturedly, as it was meant, both were deeply mortified, and learned to fairly hate the fowls, who, they thought, made both them and their home ridiculous. They racked their brains for some means by which they might get rid of them without offending their mother, whose heart was evidently wrapped up in these new pets. No plan presented itself until one morning Mrs. Witherbee unexpectedly announced her intention of spending two weeks with their Aunt Susan.

"It seems too bad to leave you now, when we have no cook," she said, "but Susan has written that this will be the most convenient time for her to have me, and you'll appreciate me all the more when I come home."

"To say nothing of how I'll appreciate you after a course of fashionable boarding school dinners,'" laughed the doctor.

The girls thereupon decided that they would surprise their father by the excellence of the dinner they would prepare him that night, and they went into the kitchen early to begin it.

"Now that mother is away we must seize the opportunity to get rid of those guinea hens," said Marie as she pared the potatoes. "We'll carry them out, few at a time, in a basket and sell them for what we can get."

"But mother would be heartbroken," protested Elsie.

"No, she won't mind when she gets home and finds them already gone," said Mamie. "It's only the idea of parting with them she hates. And we'll buy her something pretty with the money they bring, to console her."

The doctor came in hurriedly as they were dishing the vegetables. "I'm sorry," he said, "but Bennet's little girl is worse. I'll have to drive right over there, and I think I'll stay all night. They are so poor and don't know how to nurse typhoid. I don't want to leave you girls alone specially as it is well known that I am a poor patron of banks and keep a great deal of ready money here in the safe. I think I'll ask Mrs. Stanford to keep you for the night."

But the girls protested there could be no danger. Don, the watchdog, would frighten any chance robber away. And who would know they were alone?

After their father had departed they ate their dinner, feeling quite important. Later they found that Don was missing.

"Bad dog. He has slipped off after father," said Elsie.

Still they were not a bit afraid. When bedtime came they carried the iron safe containing the money into their room, locked up carefully and went peacefully to sleep.

About two o'clock that night Marie suddenly awoke under the impression that day had come, and blinked incredulously at the moonlight flooding her room. Everything seemed alive and stirring. Then she realized that it was all the guinea fowls. Their harsh, discordant voices were piercing the air in wild fright.

Elsie opened her eyes the next moment. "Something has wakened the guinea hens," said Marie.

The girls sat up in bed to listen. There was a heavy tramp across the hall below and footsteps began to ascend the stairs. The girls stared at each other with white faces and could not move. The footsteps reached the top of the stairs.

"The girls must know where it is. Let's find their room and make them tell us," said a gruff voice without.

Marie and Elsie sprang from bed and ran to the window. At the same moment a hand turned their doorknob.

"They're awake. I heard them moving," said a second voice. "Come now," the man continued, rattling the door, "you girls tell us where to find the money. We know your father left some here. Tell us and we'll go away without any trouble."

"Shout for help," whispered Elsie frantically.

The man caught the words. "Don't do that!" he called, threateningly. "If you scream we'll break in the door and shoot you both."

At this moment the guinea fowls, who had gradually subsided into silence, broke into fresh cries of alarm. The next minute there was a shout beneath the window.

"Hello, there, girls! Anything wrong? Those guinea hens have been kicking up such a racket that we came over to see what was up."

"Oh, Mr. Stanford! Oh, boys! Hurry! Robbers!" gasped the girls.

"Be quick; they are breaking down the door!" screamed Marie.

The robbers, indeed, in rage and disappointment, had flung their whole weight against the panels, but, as the door withstood their onslaught and as they heard the rescuing party rush through the hall below they turned and escaped by the back stairs.

"We have two new names for your guinea hens now," said one of the Stanford boys the next day. "They are a combination of burglar alarm and policemen's rattle."

This time Bessie and Marie did not mind the joke. After their experience of the previous night they had decided that the guinea fowls should remain and might make as much noise as they wished. So when Mrs. Witherbee returned, two weeks later, she was greeted with an unmelodious song of welcome by her pets in the treetop.

HOW THE BEAR LOST HIS TAIL.

The bear is not as smart as his friend, the fox. Long, long ago the bear used to have a long tail; but one winter's day he met his friend the fox, who sat on the bank of a river, just finishing a meal of fish.

"Give me some," said the bear, "for I am very hungry."

"That was all I had," said the fox, swallowing very fast; "but if you will give me some honey the next time you find some I will tell you how to get the fish."

"I will," said the bear.

Then the fox told him to go to the river and cut a hole in the ice, drop his tail in and wait for a bite.

So the bear went to the river and did just as he was told. Shortly after he had stuck his tail in it turned very cold and began to freeze the bear's tail in with the ice.

Not knowing any better, however, master bear still sat patiently on the ice waiting for the fish to bite. At last he thought he would get up and walk around a little, as he was tired of sitting in one position so long. As he started to move he felt a tug at his frozen tail, and, thinking it was a big fish, he gave a mighty jerk, when off came his tail.

Ever since that time the bears have all had short tails.

Four Boys and A Boat.

(CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.)

After a while we went up the river to a deserted old mill, Joe suggesting that we might find something there to help us out of our difficulty; but we found nothing except a battered old felt hat, which George picked up and held out to the rest of us with:

"Here, one of you fellows take this. It isn't fair that I should have everything. I am dressed in a collar already, you know."

The road leading by the mill had been seldom used after the mill was deserted. No men nor boys were at work in any of the fields that we could see from the mill windows. Nearly all of the farmers were accustomed to taking Saturday afternoon for a half holiday, and most of them went to town. After about half an hour Lew proposed to go through the timber to the wagon road and hide somewhere until someone came along to whom he could call for assistance.

We supposed that any person of humane instincts would be willing to go to the nearest farmhouse and borrow clothing for us to wear home.

"Maybe you can find something lying around in the woods," said Joe. "I have seen old castoff things lying around like that."

"So have I," said Lew. "I saw an old hoopskirt in the woods by our house yesterday. If I can see another today I'll give it to you, Joe."

Lew was gone about ten minutes when we saw him coming toward us at full speed, swinging his arms and tossing his head wildly. He dashed swiftly into the mill and we asked in one breath, "What did you find?"

"A blamed old yaller jacket's nest, that's what! Get some mud and daub it on me in about fifty places or I'll be as lumpy as a summer squash!"

Of course we laughed, but we got the mud and applied it to Lew's many and fast swelling wounds.

"I had got out to the road," he said, "and crawled into a thick clump of bushes to hide because I thought I heard someone. There was a little grassy place in the bushes and I lay down on it and on the yaller jacket's nest at the same time. Cracky! didn't I catch it?"

"And you concluded not to wait?" said Joe.

"I make it a rule never to stay where I am not wanted," said Lew.

In ten minutes he was so swollen and lumpy that George said:

"Really, Lew, you might go to some farmhouse yourself, for your own mother wouldn't know you now."

Another half hour passed. The sun was getting low in the west, and George said:

"I don't see but what we will have to stay here until night, and then go home clothed in darkness."

"I don't like the notion of going even to my own home clothed in that sort of a rig," said Joe.

"I'll tell you what we might do," said George so seriously that our hopes rose.

"What?" we asked.

"There's lots of old barrels here; we might each put one on and"—

"I've a notion to pitch you out of the window into the river!" said Lew.

"That's my thanks for being the only one in the crowd with a helpful idea," said George reproachfully. But please don't pitch me into the river. I haven't a change of clothing with me, and I might take cold."

"There's no use waiting here until dark," I said. "We might as well start home now. There are no houses very near the shore of the river, and when we come to one we can take to the water and swim a little ways. Let's put out for home."

The others agreed to this and we started. We were five miles from home, and we had gone about a mile when George, who was some distance ahead of us, came running back and said:

"Boys, I guess we'd better call a halt. There's a picnic party eating supper on the grass right on the river bank just outside the timber."

"Then we'd better get back to the mill," said Lew. "I always did hate a picnic and I don't care to attend one today. Let's skedaddle for the mill."

"No, we'll go back to that empty little old log cabin we saw a short distance from here."

We went back to the cabin and stayed there until sundown. Then we started once more.

It was not very late when we reached "Lew's" home. The rest of us hid behind a haystack while "Lew" went up to within a few feet of the house and called out:

"Father! O, father!"

The farmhouse door was open and a light was burning in the front room. Mr. Hyde came to the door and listened.

"Father!"

"Is that you, 'Lew'?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where in the world have you been? And where is your uncle's boat? Do you know anything about the Morley boys and George Hare? Their folks are worried about them. Where are you? Why don't you come into the house?"

"Because—I—I—will you please bring me my—my—something to put on?"

"What on earth do you mean? Haven't you anything on now?"

"No, sir."

He strode out to where Lew was, and in a moment we heard him roaring with laughter that brought everyone in the house to the door. Mr. Hyde went back to the house and soon peal after peal of laughter greeted our tortured ears.

Mr. Hyde brought Lew some garments and then came over to the haystack where we were.

"You look nice, now, don't you?" he said, and then fell to laughing again. Presently Lew came out with garments for the rest of us.

The next Monday's issue of the Farmington Gazette contained the following notice:

"A small green and white boat containing a quantity of boys' clothing was found floating in the river by David Harper, the ferryman, on Saturday. There are fears of foul play or of the drowning of the owners of the four suits of clothes, and the authorities propose investigating the matter."

Lew's uncle had gone down to Farmington that day and in the evening he came rowing up the river in the boat, bringing our truant garments with us.

Well, Hardly.

"Say, pa?"

"Well, what?"

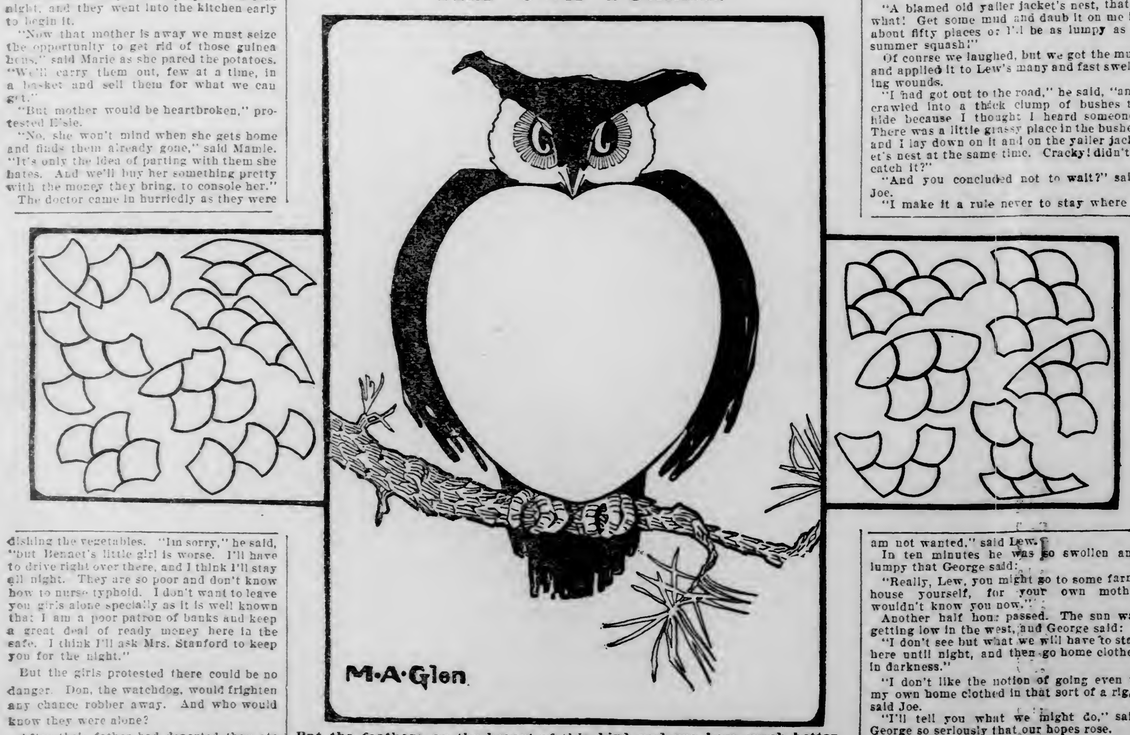

"If the President of the United States dies, does his wife's second husband become president?"

Finding Contentment.

BY NATHAN M. LEVY.

My wife has red hair, a plentiful supply of freckles, belongs to two sewing societies, has a fondness for expressive plaids and is subject to rheumatic twinges in the left arm. But that's nothing. I hear that Crasher's wife has a triple chin; that she wears what was once someone else's hair; that she subscribes to six fashion journals and haunts the bargain counters, and, moreover, that she has a fondness for painting indescribable things on black satin ribbons.

I'm kept indoors by a gouty leg now and then and am periodically bothered with liver complaint; unfeeling creditors constantly dun me; I'm given to the vice of laziness, have an excellent appetite and smoke all the cigars my friends are kind enough to give me. But look at Jones—he's dyspeptic, works like a beaver, settles his bills promptly, pays for his own cigars and worries more than a wardheeler with the aldermanic bee in his bonnet.

I fell over the malignant remains of a banana the other day and showed a bad bruise on my left shin and a cut on my left arm as the results of my flighty disposition. But what of that? I read in the newspapers this morning that a fellow got into an argument with an impulsive trolley car and sustained a compound comminuted fracture of the skull.

My favorite daughter eloped with a barber last week, and, though she wasn't accustomed to porterhouse steaks and mushrooms under the parental roof, I hear that she is living on love and canned meats and taking things as she can borrow them. But I know a rich young woman who married what she thought was a wealthy count, and after he relieved her of her hoard came back to her pater's house for one of her old dresses and a bite to eat.

My brother has eleven children and doesn't care if school keeps or not; he named his eleventh after the famous Governor of his state and sold the letter of congratulation the Governor sent him to an autograph collector for a tidy sum. He believes in any old way of making money, and his conscience, or what there is of it, never troubles him. Now, there's Thompson, with fourteen children, with no teet at all, poor but honest, and meditating eighteen different ways of shuffling off this mortal coil.

I have a sister living with me. You ought to hear her sing "My Old Kentucky Home" or "In the Gleaming." Your tender sympanum and your sensitive cochlea will suffer somewhat, but it's all in the family. But not long since Robinson told me in the flat above his there is a "musical" family—the son of the house plays various instruments (the flute and bassoon), and plays everything with variations; the daughter of the establishment has grand opera aspirations and does the jewel song from "Faust" and the mad scene from "Lucia" ten times a day, and twelve times every second day for good measure. The mother of the conservatory puts a hand in herself, flirting with a house organ that is a little tired and rheumatic from chills and old age.

The moral of all of which is: Be satisfied and you will be happy!

A HAYMAKERS' PIG-NIC FOR JULY.

For the girls and boys spending their summer vacation in the "real country" there is no form of amusement more enjoyable than a haymakers' picnic. The big hay wagon is pressed into service, the girls making it very attractive with festoons of wild flowers and green leaves. Nothing but the seating portion of the vehicle is left undecorated. If the horses or oxen are sufficiently gentle they, too, can be decked out in floral finery. In this festive looking cart the girls and boys, arrayed in genuine country fashion, are conveyed to the hay field. The girls go in for sunbonnets and gingham aprons, the boys wearing broad brimmed straw headgear similar to that adopted by the real farmers, and with overalls tucked into high boots, as the haymaker is always pictured.

Once in the field the frolic begins, with which is combined some real help to the farmer, as the heaped up hay wagon soon shows. The luncheon, which has come later in a less fantastic wagon than the haymakers' chariot, is eaten in some shady spot, the seats being fragrant mounds of hay. No table is spread, the sandwiches and fruit being eaten from the hands. A big can of cool milk or buttermilk is the only beverage, and this is served in a tin dipper by an obliging farm hand. When it comes time for home going all ride on top of the load, which is not as easy a feat as it looks, for the hay has a curious way of slipping from under, suggesting a trip on a camel's back more than the ease of a cushioned seat.

If at night a dance in the barn can follow the picnic the day will be complete. For this lanterns furnish the lights, those which the farmers carry when they go to do the chores being preferable to the pretty Japanese ones, when the inflammable nature of the surroundings is considered. The stalls of the horses should be decorated with flowers. The orchestra for the occasion, to be quite in keeping, need only be an accordion, a fiddle or a mouth organ, played by some young country man who has done so before at dances of the real haymakers.

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Started Steady and Ruled Strong and Advancing.

Flax Trading Was Quiet and the Market Irregular.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 1.—The wheat market started out firm and bullish this morning and, except for a temporary break near the close it ruled strong throughout the session. The strength was ascribed to the unfavorable crop reports received yesterday and to a cessation of the liquidation which has recently been in progress at Chicago. The reports of disappointing yields in South Dakota which has been considered to have the best condition of the three Northwestern states this year, was the chief bullish influence. The export demand was light, the amount of wheat reported worked being only 10 loads.

Duluth led in the advance, advancing 2¼c for September. In Chicago the advance was 1⅞-7⅜c, and in Minneapolis 2. The Southwest was not up with other markets. St. Louis being up only ⅞c and Kansas City 1⅝-½c.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 159 cars, and at Chicago 90, a total of 249 cars, against 246 last week and 459 last year.

The Liverpool market was closed for a holiday and Paris ¼c lower.

Primary receipts of wheat were 622,000 bushels, last year 1,051,000 bushels. Shipments 114,000 bushels, last year 486,000 bushels. Clearances of wheat and flour were 325,000 bushels.

In the Chicago market September corn closed ¼d higher and September oats ⅝-¾c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 359,000 bushels, last year 179,000 bushels. Shipments 215,0000 bushels, last year 80,000 bushels. Clearances were 16,-215 bushels.

The Duluth market was active and pushed steadily upward without a recession until within the last half hour before closing, and it afterward regained all it lost. September opened 1c higher at 79⅝c bid and the first sale five minutes later was at 79¾c. It then worked upward to 81c at 11:27, fell back to 80¾c ten minutes later and advanced again closing at 81¾c. This was an advance of 2¼c. December could not keep pace with September today although it has done so all week. Its advance was 1⅝c.

Cash business was very dull. Prices were 5c over September for No. 1 northern.

Flax was quiet and though stronger early fell off. September sold ¼c up to 88c, fell back and closed 7c off at 87½c. October was unchanged and November ¼c up.

There was an advance in rye of ½c.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat—In store, No. 1 hard, 86¾c; No. 1 northern, 86¾c; No. 2 northern, 84¾c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 86¾c; No. 1 northern, 86¾c; No. 2 northern, 84¾c; September, 81¾c; December, 78¾c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Unfavorable Crop Reports Cause a Bullish Sentiment.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—There was a bullish sentiment in the wheat pit today due largely to the unfavorable crop reports of yesterday and with a cessation of the liquidation which had been in progress the past few days, the market became decidedly strong soon after the opening. Initial sales on September were a shade lower to a shade higher at 78½@78¾c, but within the first half hour the price had advanced to 79¾c on a good commission house demand. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 159 cars, which with local receipts of 90 cars, 20 of contract grade, made total receipts for the three points of 249 cars, against 246 cars last week and 459 cars a year ago.

There was a good demand throughout throughout the entire session with St. Louis & Southwestern houses leading in the buying and prices were strong. Reports of blights in South Dakota were the main bull features. September sold up to 80¾c, and closed at the top with a gain of 1⅜@1⅞c.

Corn opened easier on favorable weather throughout the corn belt. September being unchanged to ¼c lower at 52 to 52¼c. The advance in wheat had a strengthening influence early in the day, the market becoming a little firmer, with September selling at 52¾c. Local receipts were 145 cars, eleven of contract grade.

The market heif firm on the strength in wheat and September closed with a gain of ¼c at 52½c.

There was a fair trade in oats at the opening with considerable for sale, but with a good demand. The strength in wheat was a bull factor and the market became firmer after opening about steady. September was off ¼c at the start, opening at 32¼c. Local receipts were 38 cars.

Provisions were quiet at opening, but prices were firm with a fair demand for ribs. September pork opened 10c higher at $13.70, September lard was up 5c at $7.87½ and ribs 2½c higher at $8.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Grand Forks Herald: E. W. Kneeland superintendent of the Duluth Elevator company, for a long time a resident of Grand Forks, was in the city yesterday, having just returned from an inspection trip over the Red River valley, on both sides of the river. The inspection was as thorough as Mr. Kneeland could make it, and he is convinced now that the valley farmers are not nearly in as bad condition as many claim. To a Herald man yesterday Mr. Kneeland stated that he believed that the Red River valley would produce more wheat than it did last year. The yield last year was cut down in many sections to a very low yield by several hail storms, something that has done but very little damage this year so far.

"The weather could not be better than it has been for two weeks," said Mr. Kneeland, "for growing crops. Wheat is filling nicely and while the straw will be light the yield will be surprising. The crop is spotted, and there is some that is hardly worth harvesting, but there is much more good wheat than there is bad, and I would not be surprised to see a yield over the state of from 10 to 12 bushels to the acre. The railroad companies keep pretty close tab on the crop situation and the Great Northern officials have received reports that have been sufficiently encouraging as to convince them that there will be a ten bushel tonnage from the state this year. This would mean that ten bushels per acre will be shipped, in addition to the home consumption and what will be retained for seed. This would mean a yield of between 12 and 13 bushels to the acre. In a whole the situation is very promising and the past few weeks has added much to the chances of the state for a fair crop. There is no state in the Union in which crop conditions can improve so readily as in North Dakota."

W. H. Laidley & Co., Chicago: There was a little wheat for sale early, probably induced by yesterday's slight weakness, but unfavorable crop reports from the Northwest and higher prices at Duluth and Minneapolis started a new buying movement and prices shot up one cent a bushel in a very short time. The tendency seems to be a shortening of an already short crop and higher prices seem inevitable.

Corn. The strength in wheat influenced corn sympathetically and price rallied a little but trade was dull, commission houses were sellers. It looks as if the bulls in corn needed some fresh stimulus. Would sell it on all hard spots.

Oats. Elevator men were free sellers but the market showed a firm undertone especially September which advanced half cent easily, deferred futures lagging. The indications are for lighter receipts and possibly some further rally when we would sell again.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market was active and higher. The decline yesterday created some short interest which was covered today. Crop advices continue unfavorable. It now seems likely that the next government report must materially reduce its former estimates. The Southwest movement naturally shows an increasing tendency. The cash markets are dull. We see no reason to change our position or views in respect of the market. We regard lower prices as unlikely and higher prices probable. We would, therefore, buy wheat on the breaks.

Corn market is firm and higher, but in sympathy with wheat. The West and Southwest has had further good rains, accompanied by the low temperatures which are not desirable. There is nothing in the cash situation except moderate receipts and moderate demand. The weather is the important factor. As conditions are today it looks as if it would require something almost miraculous in the way of weather to mature even a fair crop. There is an active bull contingent which makes it look as if for the time being it is safe to buy corn on the breaks.

Oats—The market is higher. Strength in wheat and the advance in corn are partially the cause. The sharp break in the cash price, due to the collapse of the July deal, has improved the shipping inquiry. We still feel that oat prices will need the support of a strong corn and wheat market.

C. M. Boynton writes from Creston, Ia.: I left Fort Dodge, going to Council Bluffs over the Illinois Central and Northwestern, it got dark before I reached the Bluffs, so I could only see the corn part of the way. The greater portion of the distance corn was about the same as I reported from the north portion of the state. Near the Missouri river prospects are a little better, but all are late and backward. I came through Southwestern Iowa this morning and noticed that fully one-third of the corn area has not tasseled yet. While corn will do that tassels after August 1st. I am unable to determine. Taking Iowa as a whole, I consider the prospects very poor.

Grand Forks Herald, 31st: The wheat harvest will begin today. While it will not be very general, there are many of the farmers on Minnesota Point who were in the city yesterday and stated that their wheat was just in proper shape for the harvesters. The farmers on the Point are usually a few days ahead of those in other sections of the country. Among those who will begin today are M. Lynch and F. J. Duffy, both of whom have very fine crops. Thomas Driscoll, who was in from his farm east of the city yesterday, stated that he would begin cutting wheat the fort part of next week, provably Monday, and that the wheat in that direction was generally about ready to be out. The present cool weather is not hurrying the ripening of the grain, being just the sort that is desired at this time, and it is stated all the grain is well filled, the kernels being plump and fine, and well-known farmer who was speaking of the matter yesterday predicted that if the weather remains fine the quality of the wheat this fall will be better than has been raised generally for several years.

SLUGGISH TRADING

In Stocks and the Price Movements Were Narrow.

Northern Securities Jumped Four Points on the Curb.

New York, Aug. 1.—There has been scattered selling of stocks hypothecated in loans this week, but not of so general a character as recently. Prices have consequently recovered somewhat, but the market has shown a progressive tendency towards dullness at the advancing level. The money market has grown easier as a result of the liquidation and also as a result of light demand for credits. Reports of railroad traffic and of general business have been favorable and no serious harm has been reported to crops. An extremely conservative tone, nevertheless, dominates the stock market and the depression will not react upon the general business situation.

New York, Aug. 1.—The majority of prominent stocks moved sluggishly upwards at the opening on very light dealings. There were a few exceptions which made the tone slightly irregular. Rock Island was down a small fraction and Realty preferred a point. North American rose 1¼.

Price movements were narrow, but the tendency was rather drooping for the important stocks during the first hour. Rock Island and Realty preferred felt the pressure most and yielded 1 and 2 points respectively. Rock Island preferred also lost a point, Metropolitan Securities 1¾ and Evansville & Terre Haute preferred 2. Inactive stocks made a better showing. North American advanced 2¼ on the taking over of holdings of one of last week's failed stock exchange firms. Pullman improved 3 points, Consolidated Gas 2⅛, New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred 1½ and Mexican Central, Chesapeake, C. C. C. & St. Louis, New Jersey Central, Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred, Colorado Fuel, Virginia-Carolina Chemical and Leather preferred 1.

The decision of the Northern Securities company in the suit brought by the state of Minnesota caused a four point jump in that stock on the curb, but the general market was indifferent. People's Gas rose 1½ on the dividend declaration; International Pump preferred jumped 6. Disappointment over the loan increase disclosed by the bank statement carried prices to the lowest. North American reacted 2, Virginia-Carolina Chemical 1⅜, Hocking Valley lost 3 and Pittsburg, C., C. & St. Louis 2½ and rallied 2. The selling was not pursued and the market steadied. Pullman rose 7 points. The closing was lifeless at the recovery.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The big bears have got tired of selling and the big bulls do not seef quite ready to put prices up, hence as the public is doing nothing a dull market results. A good deal of stock bought by banking interests to support the market last Saturday and Monday is being sold and the big bears have been covering for some days, which makes many good judges think that though the big decline is over we will not get much advance at present. My opinion is that present year will prove no exception to the general rule of a leisurely advance through August. I do not see how you can lose at these prices on a scale and taking profits automatically. The market may or may not sag off some, but the trend is pretty certain to be upward till around Labor day.

* * *

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is dull and unchanged. The volume of news was unimportant. Market is without selling pressure and the outlook dull. Bank statement was favorable. Our own view is that the apprehension of bankers as to the demands for money to move the crops during the next few weeks are not well gounded. The corn crop is still in doubt and the market will very likely be subjected to bear pressure at times. We feel that good dividend-paying stocks bought at these prices need not be sold at a loss.

* * *

Waldorf to Coe Commission Co.: "This is a traders' market," said a leading broker tonight, "in which standard stocks are a purchase on recessions. That about voices the sentiments entertained by conservative houses generally. There is not enough volume to current business to encourage hopes of a broader speculation right away, yet large operators seem to be quite confident that in the near future dealings will increase and prices advance. They argue from precedent that sentiment in Wall street changes quickly and that because it is very gloomy now is no reason why it will not be buoyant a month hence, or to put the thing in another way, never change for the better, that is the most likely time for a change. Some observers believe that the truth of this proposition will be illustrated in an impressive way before August is over. Although further scattered liquidation is reported in new industrial stocks, brokers say that there is no longer any forced selling of good railroad shares. The latter seem to have been thoroughly liquidated. This is especially true of stocks like Union Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Missouri Pacific and Reading. If there are important weak accounts left in these issues they have yet to be uncovered. Even in Atchison, which has been depressed by the large offerings of an operator who suffered severe losses by the drop in Consolidated Lake Superior, rugent selling of long stock is thought to be pretty well exhausted. The fact that the indicated gain of cash by the banks this week over $8,000,000 leads to the belief that the bank statement tomorrow will be a strong one. Bulls are counting so confidently on this that if the return should be disappointing much realizing is probably. But commission people say that easy money makes the bank statement a negative factor. Moreover, the banks can manipulate the statement about as they please. Specialists say that the day's transactions were without significance. Operators for a decline have increased their lines in St. Paul on the decrease of $101,000 in net earnings for June, and in New York Central on the reported sale of bonds in London. In these and other railroads, however, there was good buying, inspired by the reports of heavy rains in the corn belt. The latter helped Atchison and the corn carriers, though it is remarked that no special effort was made to put them up. The effort of the day was the other way.

* * *

J. S. Bache to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was at a standstill at the opening, although the tone was firm. Short covering was apparent in a few stocks. The dullness was accounted for by the holiday in England. Atchison acted fairly well and for the present the bears seem to have given up their campaign in the stock. There is a big demand in the loan crowd for the stock and it would not be surprising should Atchison make a sharp upturn. Bank statement not considered favorable. The market sold off moderately after its appearance and the closing was quiet with firm undertone. Baltimore and Ohio, Norfolk, Erie preferred, Pennsylvania and Reading are cheap at going prices, but from the investors' standpoint industrials and specialties should be avoided.

* * *

W. H. Laidley & Co.: The bank statement was only fair and decision in favor of the Northern Securities company seemed to have no favorable effect, prices yielding. The market looks like a trading affair, investors only buy at tempting declines and rallies meet enough profit taking to spoil the market and check advances.

* * *

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Lord Strathcona tells his friends in London that Northern Securities is worth nearer $200 per share than $100. James J. Hill tells his friends in St. Paul that to date the Burlington is turning into Northern securities $7,000,000 annually or 1¾ per cent on entire $400,000 of Northern Securities and furthermore if the company is forced to liquidation he believes he can liquidate it and return $140 per share.

* * *

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was steady and very dull. No commission busisss and many traders not on the floor. Before the close there was some profit taking, the decision in Northern Securities should have had better effect than it did. Money remains easy. We look for a dull and uninteresting market for some time to come and expect to see it drift into dullness.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Coppers continue to be very dull with little change in price. The metal is somewhat stronger with lake 12¾@13. We understand Calumet made a large sale at 13 and is now out of the market. The Parrott-Anaconda mines will start work again the last of August. Our copper market will follow the lead of Amalgamated up or down and on any soft spots we would buy Osceola, Mohawk, Amalgamated and Utah.

A WOODSMAN IS DROWNED

Walked Off Dock at Superior and Fails to Rise.

Albert Runden, a woodsman, aged 30, missed his footing on the dock at the foot of Banks avenue, West Superior, last evening, and was drowned. He went down Banks avenue to reach the Duluth ferry, which lands in the Tower avenue slip. He did not know of the existence of the slip and walked off the dock.

The steamer Moses Taylor, which had just arrived at Northwestern coal dock No. 3, was tied up, and one of the men on board heard a splash in the water shortly before 9 o'clock. He was making a line ready to throw when Runden sank, and did not rise again.

The body was recovered half an hour later, and though every effort was made to resuscitate him, it was ineffectual work.

Runden roomed at 111 West First street, in Duluth, and he left a friend yesterday afternoon, saying that he would send for which he had saved, to his wife and three children in Sweden. He had but 25 cents in his pocket when he was drowned, so it is supposed that he had done this. He had a brother-in-law, Oscar Johnson, working in the woods, and he was expected to arrive today or tomorrow to take care of the body. Runden had been in this country but a year.

In the professional contests the following prize winning scores were made out of a possible 165: H. Waters, Baltimore, 159; F. Riehl, Alton, Ill., 158; H. G. Hirschey, Minneapolis, 156; C. IN MARINE CIRCLES

Line Boats Do Not Attempt to Raise the Grain Rate.

Business Very Light—Tug Abbott Sent to Ashland.

As the shippers perdicted, the line boats did not attempt to raise the grain rate above 1½ cents today. They are, in fact, begging for grain to carry rather than thinking of raising the rate. With the decrease in stocks of wheat this week, the total in store will fall below 300,000 bushels. Some flax may be shipped, but the outlook is for very light shipping during the month of August.

ENLARGING ITS FLEET.

Great Lakes Tug Abbott Goes to Ashland.

Ashland is to have a second tug to assist the tug Crosby, which hitherto has handled all the towing business of that port.

The tug Abbott, of the Great Lakes fleet at Duluth, will leave this evening for Ashland, where she will be stationed in future. The Abbot has recently come out of the "boxes," where she has undergone a thorough overhauling. Capt. Lyons will be in charge of the Abbot and John Mundt will be the chief engineer.

Several additional contracts recently secured by the Great Lakes company have necessitated the sending of the second tug to Ashland.

The Duluth fleet will not be decreased in size, however, by the departure of the Abbot. The tug Helm, which has not been in commission this year, has recently been overhauled and repainted, and on the departure of the Abbot will be put into commission. The crew of the Abbot will be transferred to the Helm, while a new crew has been engaged for the Abbot.

FIREMEN CONDUCT FUNERAL.

The funeral services over the body of Patrick Delaney, the fireman of the tug Merrill, who was drowned in the harbor last week, were held this morning.

The funeral was conducted by the Tug Firemen's union, and one fireman from each of the tugs in the harbor attended. A number of the friends of the deceased was also present.

Solemn mass was held in the cathedral, after which the body was taken to Calvary cemetery for interment.

THE WEEK IN THE REALTY MARKET

Dealers Well Satisfied With the Tone of Business and Outlook For the Future—Indications Are For an Increased Amount of Building.

Local realty dealers are taking on a most optimistic view of the present situation of the market and the immediate prospects for better business. While sales for the past week have not been specially active, there has been a great more inquiry than noted for a long time past, and the indications are that the inquiry is of a nature bound to be followed by negotiations sooner or later. Outsiders who have invested heavily in real estate in cities larger than Duluth are now investigating the situation here with a view of purchasing local property for an investment, some for improvement and investment. The consummation of deals with certain outside moneyed men is anticipated with almost certainty by some of the local dealers.

One of the most important changes in the local building situation of late is the drop in prices along almost every line of building material. During the spring and summer the price of building material scared out many an intending builder, but it is claimed that, since the prices have been shaded, inquiry has been stimulated to a great extent, and a great many local parties are now planning on completing plans for houses whose construction they abandoned earlier in the season.

* * *

A. Fitger has purchased from Emmanuel Swanstrom the property at Garfield avenue and Superior street, described as the east half of lot 259, block 58, Duluth proper, Second division. The consideration was $4500.

* * *

Samuel Croll has closed the sale to Samuel Nesbitt, through William M. Prindle & Co., of the partly improved property on East Superior street, between Third and Fourth avenues, and described as part of lot 18, block 5, Portland. The consideration was $3600.

* * *

Among the West Duluth sales of the week was that of the property on lots 3 and 4½, block 190, Seventh division, from F. P. Tims to J. E. Sullivan. The consideration was $2500.

* * *

G. H. Crosby, of George Crosby & Co., reports the largest week of inquiry from outside parties that the firm has noted in over a year. He says that a large number of outside moneyed people, who are acquainted with the conditions here, have been in the city this past week with a view of placing investments, and he is sure that some good business will result very shortly from the visits.

* * *

Stryker, Manley & Buck report a very fair week's business in smaller property sales and trades.

* * *

J. D. Howard, of J. D. Howard & Co., reports a steady though quiet business for the week, and good indications of a better movement soon.

* * *

Mr. Lyons, of William Prindle & Co., says the week has witnessed a few trades and what might be considered good business in the smaller classes of property. He reports inquiry as strong and promising.

* * *

The largest reported sale of local realty this past week was that of the Brown row, corner of Sixth avenue west and Third street, from Charles W. Bishop to Addie E. D. Baldwin. The property was sold for $12,000. It is described as lots 97 and 99, block 34, Duluth proper, Third division.

* * *

There is a rumor current that the Battle Creek sanitarium interests are negotiating for the purchase of the Craggencroft school property at Woodland. While nothing definite can be learned as to the extent of the negotiations, it is not considered an improbability that the sanitarium people will enter this field and establish a first-class sanitarium at Craggencroft, a location that could not be excelled anywhere else in the Northwest. The property has been on the market for some time, and on one or two previous occasions came near being sold to denominations seeking a new location for a school.

Hill & Bray, architects, are preparing the plans for a fine double brick residence in the East End for local parties whose names are withheld. The building will cost about $10,000.

* * *

Young & Nystrom are getting out plans for a flat building that will be erected for C. Sanders on the lower side of Fourth street, between Second and Third avenues east, and the estimated cost of which is about $18,000. It will be one of the most elaborate and complete flat buildings in the city, a three-story brick structure, 69 by 50 feet, with a highly ornamental front, including verandas on every floor, hardwood interior finish and every modern improvement throughout. The heating plant will be for hot water, and will also furnish hot water to the bathrooms. The new building is to be ready for occupany by Jan. 1 next.

* * *

J. J. Wangenstein has completed the plans for a two-story brick store and flat building for Charles Tengblad, to be erected immediately at the upper side of Superior street and Garfield avenue.

* * *

The Northwestern Steam Boiler Works and Manufacturing company began this week the rebuilding of the plant that was destroyed by fire on Garfield avenue last winter. The new building will cost about $20,000, and will be much larger than the old plant. All modern facilities in the way of machinery are to be added to the new plant.

* * *

H. C. Marshall's new residence at Fifth street and Twenty-third avenue east, is fast nearing completion. It is of the massive type of Colonial architecture and very handsome in every respect.

* * *

WEST DULUTH BLAST FURNACE

Work on the Improvements Is Now In Active Progress.

The New Coke Ovens Are In Process of Erection.

Whole Aspect of the Bay Front Is Being Changed.

Few residents of Duluth who have not had occasion to visit the bay front in the vicinity of the plant of the Zenith Furnace company during the past few weeks, realize the transformation that is taking place in the locality.

The bay front at this point is a hive of activity. A large crew of men has been at work for weeks past excavating, dredging, building and preparing the ground for the new coke ovens which are in the process of erection. The whole aspect of the bay front is being changed.

Thousands of square yards of ground have been made by sand dredged up from the bottom of the bay, while in other places ground is being dredged away to form a channel.

A powerful pile-driver is at work snatching up the huge logs and driving them deep into the earth to form the foundation for the piers on which the ovens are to be erected.

Men with wheelbarrows are at work laying the concrete foundations of the new structure to be erected. Temporary side tracks have been constructed and trains of box cars have been backed in, to unload the stone, asphalt and other material used in the construction of the new plant.

Up to the present time the work has consisted of the laying of the foundations. It has been a very expensive and arduous undertaking and one that has required the most constant watchfulness on the part of those in charge. The work is being carried on in an atmosphere of activity which promises well for its early completion. An onlooker watching the animated scene which is presented, feels that the work is being carried on with the intention of bringing it to the earliest possible completion. Expense does not seem to have been spared, where good workmanship and promptness are at stake. The crew of men is large. Vast quantities of material are on the ground. All the appliances for accomplishing the work, including the dredges and the pile-driver, are of the most modern type.

In charge of competent engineers, and men who are thoroughly familiar with the construction of coke ovens, the first part of the work has been very thoroughly done. From this time forward there will be more to show for the money and labor expended upon the construction of the mammoth plant. The foundations have been laid and the work will commence to take shape.

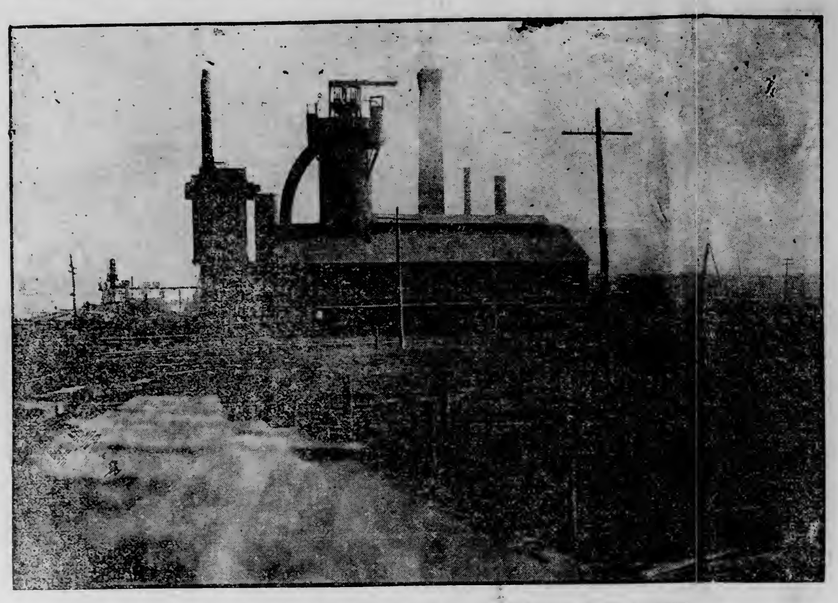

Meanwhile the big furnace continues in full blast, employing its full quota of men and manufacturing its daily output of iron.

When completed the Zenith Furnace company will have one of the most up-to-date furnaces and some of the most complete coke ovens in the country. Residents of Duluth and West Duluthians in particular look upon the big industry on the bay front as the backbone of the prosperity of that portion of the town, and as the nucleus from which may spring more works of a similar type. The addition of the coke ovens has raised the hope of many that Duluth may yet become an important iron manufacturing center, and they hope to see even larger things to come, as a result of the pioneer work that is being done by the Zenith Furnace company.

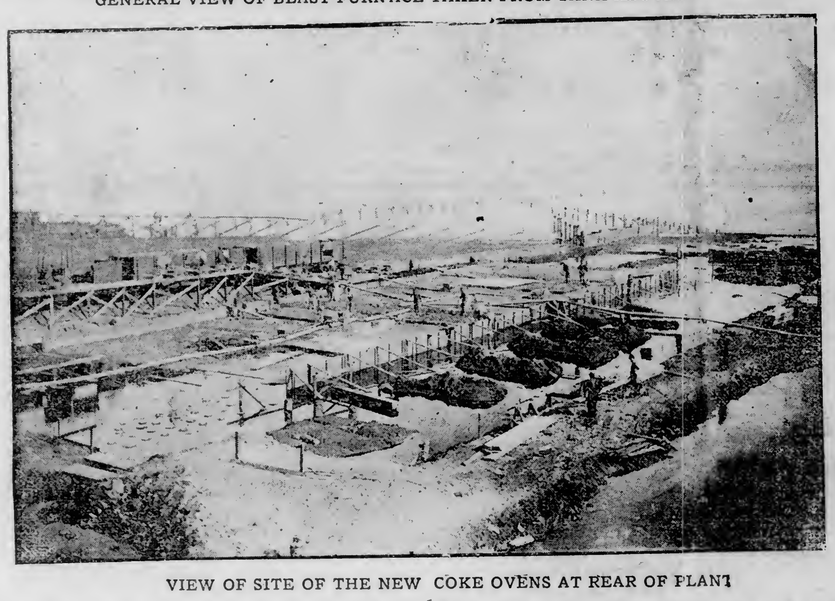

The effect of the plant on the prosperity of West Duluth was clearly shown last fall when the furnace was closed on account of the scarcity of coke. Business men of all kinds in West Duluth complained of the slackness in trade, and a marked betterment was noticed as soon as the furnace resumed operations.

The addition of the coke ovens will give employment to as many more men, and when completed several hundred families will derive their living from the industry.

This is not the only benefit to be derived by West Duluth and the city at large from the additions being made to the plant. Cheap gas and plenty of it in all parts of the city where it is needed is to be one of the benefits, and West Duluth will be the principal gainer from this department, as the mains will be run through West Duluth, and the residents will be able to procure this means of illumination, which they have never had before.

SLATE MACADAM PAVING

Sentiment That Some of Duluth's Streets Should Be Paved With Home Material.

Slate macadam is a subject that you can get people that have looked into it to talk about with much enthusiasm.

There are abundant deposits of slate at Thomson, Minn., on the St. Louis river, within a short distance of Duluth, and while Duluth has as yet used none of it, Minneapolis has completed a street with it as the sole paving material, and it is giving the greatest satisfaction there.

There is sentiment in Duluth that at least some of the streets that are to be improved should be paved with home material, and a number of prominent citizens favor an experiment with the slate. Judge J. D. Ensign, for one, spoke very enthusiastically about it the other day to The Herald.

It is likely that if the city decided to make such an experiment, material could be obtained very cheaply, as the owners of the slate quarries would be anxious enough to make the entering wedge here to make it an object.

Numerous advantages are claimed for the slate macadam, both over ordinary macadam and over other pavements.

For certain purposes macadam pavements have been highly satisfactory, in Duluth and elsewhere, and the city has had no more value for its money out of anything else than it has had out of its macadam roads, like London road and First street.

One great advantage of slate over rock macadam, according to its advocates, is its cohesiveness. Crushed trap rock makes a fine macadam, but it never pounds or rolls down into as compact a mass as slate, which seems to adhere together in a mass that is almost like cement, though, of course, nothing like so hard as concrete.

Still another advantage is its capacity for retaining moisture. Were it not for this fact, slate would be very dusty. It is said, however, that a single sprinkling in each twenty-four hours will lay all the dust and keep it laid so that even strong winds cannot stir it up.

Cloquet has used the slate on its streets and roads to excellent advantage. Streets used to haul heavy loads of lumber, before the usefulness of the slate was discovered, used to be full of ruts and holes, so that teaming was perilous business. Finally a layer of crushed slate was laid over them, and they have been serviceable since. The same thing has been done with outlying roads, and they have been vastly improved. The slate was not rolled in these cases, but simply left for the wagons to roll it, which they have done.

The Minneapolis Journal of last Saturday had a picture of a very pretty street, and underneath it was the heading: "A Great Street; Since This Street Has Been Paved It Has Become the Most Popular on the East Side." The accompanying article was as follows:

"The new macadam pavement along Seventh street southeast, between Central avenue and Fifteenth avenue, is a favorable example of cheap and attractive paving. Automobilists already favor the new street, bicyclists travel from adjoining thoroughfares to enjoy the swift resiliency of the slate macadam, teamsters find the new road 'easy hauling,' and the fire department has made Seventh street southeast a regular route to fires within the adjacent district. Taking, as it has, the place of a mere 'dirt road,' alternate dust and mud, the new pavement affords special satisfaction to Seventh street residents. 'We think we've got now,' said a property owner yesterday, 'one of the best pavements in Minnesota.'

"The street is certainly handsome. As the accompanying half-tone shows, there are tasteful homes on either side, well-grown shade trees, ample lawns and boulevards, concrete sidewalks and cement curbing.

"And the new pavement is cheap. It is among the cheapest of good pavements. The crushed slate, laid, without special foundation, to a depth of six inches at the 'crown' or middle of the street, and diminishing to a depth of four inches at the curb, will cost the city about 75 cents a square yard. This includes the price of the slate and the expense of labor for hauling the slate, distributing it, sprinkling and rolling. Such macadam thus costs less than half as much as asphalt, and one-quarter less than usual rock macadam.

"The slate paving is almost noiseless, more elastic than any road except the natural earth, and very clean. The smaller particles of slate, when moistened and rolled repeatedly, form a cement or 'bond' without the use of sand or gravel. The finished pavement becomes smoother and cleaner the more it is used. Dust may be prevented by very light sprinkling. The durability of slate macadam has been proved by years of trial on many roads in other states, especially in Pennsylvania. A three years' test has shown excellent on Sixth street southeast, near Central avenue.

"This slate paving on Seventh street southeast was begun two months ago under the direction of E. R. Dutton, assistant city engineer. The macadam, thirty-six feet in width from curb to curb, extends a mile and a quarter. The slate is supplied by William C. Sargent, of Duluth, from quarries at Thomson, Minn., close to the Dalles of the St. Louis river."

In speaking about the matter the other day, Judge Ensign said that in his belief an ideal pavement could be made cheaply and easily by laying a good foundation of crushed trap rock and covering it with a layer of crushed slate. This road, he believed, would be pleasant, serviceable and practically indestructible.

LABORATORY KITCHEN AND SEWING ROOMS

For the Normal School of Duluth For Which the Women's Council Is Working—The Studies Will Be Scientific and Practical.

As Herbert Spencer well expresses it, "there are laws of action and reaction in nature that readjust all abnormal phenomena." This is strikingly exemplified in the social and economic questions of the present century. There is a passing of the labor strikes, as it has proved to be a sword that cuts both ways, injuring the employer and the employe. The pendulum of industrial development is swinging back into its place, and in social economy the laborer is worthy his hire. He is now receiving the wage of the worker in the fine arts.

The newspapers and magazines are teeming with examples of the return to primitive pursuits by both men and women, only under differetn or changed aspects. During the past few days The Herald has contained a number of articles, running thus: "Harvard students fresh from their alma mater passing as deck hands on the lake boats en route to the harvest fields of Dakota." "A bunch of five Columbia university students on a 'Bummel' pass through Duluth." The last are for the same destination as the first, having worked their way through New York and Ohio, after the manner of Professor Wyckoff, when he was preparing his noted work, "The Workers."

Again we see demonstrations of this readjustment in the desertion from the private ranks of the soldiers at Fort Snelling and other army posts throughout the country, which is accounted for by the fact that these soldiers have seen active service, and the dull, monotonous life of the garrison grates on them. They, too, go West to the harvest fields, where at this time they receive much larger pay than they would if they remained in the army. There are also similar facts noted in the Eastern papers. The Baltimore American recently contained an article on "Harvesting As Against Haying," and said: "If the precedent established is followed and students take to working on farms in lieu of haying, to spend their surplus energy, life in the university and college towns may become a grand, sweet song."

When an army of harvest hands is wanted for garnering the golden grain in the Northwest, and there is ample work for ablebodied men and women until late in the autumn, and at the rate of $2 to $3 per day, besides specially reduced rates of transportation, even the most fastidious cannot reject it. Heretofore the "wants" column of the newspapers have been full of advertisements for clerical positions, which will now no doubt begin to decrease in number since both men and women are finding that manual labor and domestic employment are equally as remunerative.

The public-spirited men of many of the Eastern cities have for some time been noting this change in the economic world, and few of the public schools have failed to meet this demand for the domestic training for the young. Manual training for the boys has been closely followed by domestic science for the girls. Duluth, therefore, is not a pioneer by any means in introducing into our normal school the department of domestic science. The spirit of the times demands it, and the women of Duluth should feel proud that it is nobly through them that this fact has been recognized, and that one of the most complete laboratory kitchens may be installed before the beginning of the school for the fall term. The committee from the Woman's Council are steadily working for this end, and have every reason to believe that the amount necessary for the purpose will be on hand and the work commenced by the middle of August.

The committee of women will spare no effort to make the equipment of this school, and the instructions therein, the very best that modern standards can produce from artistic, sanitary and scientific standpoints.

There will be no extravagant expenditure of money, but the women are studying various plans so that the result will be beauty and utitlity in a high degree.

The room set aside for the laboratory kitchen is about 20 by 30 feet, lighted by three large windows, and well ventilated. The laboratory table will be in the form of a hollow square with complete equipment for sixteen pupils. The front half of the table will be of hardwood and the back half covered with zinc to afford protection from the individual gas stoves. Each pupil will have a small cupboard and several drawers for utensils and food supplies. There will also be a teacher's demonstration table fitted with deep drawers, where chemicals and chemical apparatus will be kept. There will also be one or two porcelain lined and nickel trimmed sinks. A number of chairs and tables for use when guests are entertained and when luncheon is served daily for the normal students and scholars. For the luncheon a very small charge will be made to meet the expense of the wear and tear of the equipment.

The latest and most approved system of heating, lighting, ventilating and plumbing will be installed. The working equipment will contain tin, granite and iron ware, small utensils and cutlery, woodenware, crockery and glass.

The studies in this department will be scientific and practical. The studies will embrace "The Hygiene of the Home," "Materials and Their Adulterations," "The Theory of Bacteria Applied to Food," "The Purchasing of Food," "The Planning of Economical Dietaries," and "The Chemistry of Cleaning and the Proper Care of the Kitchen and Its Appointments." This doe not mean merely the training of the hand and brain in the subject of cookery, but it means the training of all the faculties to obtain and transmit useful knledge.

The individual method will be followed entirely and each class will accommodate sixteen pupils. The lessons for each class will average two per week for the normal students and the seventh and eighth grades. The women generally of the town may also take lessons by paying a small fee for them. The mistress and maid will, no doubt, avail themselves of this fine opportunity to study along scientific lines, which renders work less laborious and untidy.

The committee having in charge this work is composed of some of the ablest women of the town from the various women's clubs. They are: Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president Women's council; Mrs. James Dow Morrison, Outlook club; Mrs. A. M. Miller, Magazine club; Mrs. Francis H. Barnard, Saturday club; Miss Elizabeth Anderson, Literature class; Mrs. Stewart, W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Williams, Lester Park club and Miss Statham, Twentieth Century club. These ladies will be glad to receive names for the subscription list and any amount will be acceptable. It requires $800 to equip the rooms. They hope that the people generally will feel enough interest in this progressive undertaking to contribute something however small the amount.

This department of domestic science in the normal school will effect a great deal of good if it only succeeds in teaching the younger generation economy and thrift and to occasionally lend a helping hand to the overworked mother or head of the household.

Contract Laborers Denied Admission at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Aug. 1—Eighteen British subejcts, two Italians and one German, were denied a landing by United States Immigrant Commissioner North, on the ground that they had come to this country as contract laborers. They said their fare had been paid to this city from Nanaimo and Ladysmith, B. C., and that they were on the way to Coos Bay to work as miners. Upon this assertion they were refused admission, and will be deported to British Columbia.

AN EARLY MORNING RIDE

Chief Justice Alton Brooks Parker on His Virginia Hunter, and Judge Werner of the New York Court of Appeals Taking Their Daily Ride Before Breakfast.

Chief Judge Alton Brooks Parker is noted for his rugged good health, his untiring energy and his ability to resist fatigue. The duties of his important office as chief justice of the court of appeals impose upon him hours of labor over books, which in itself means close confinement. Born on a farm at Cortland, N. Y., raised in the country and being himself a farmer at Esopus on the Hudson, the chief justice loves fresh air. Soon after his election to the greatest prize in his state, he was compelled to reside in Albany, and he determined to snatch a breath of fresh air every morning. Rain or shine Chief Judge Parker is to be seen riding his Virginia hunter at Albany. Sometimes alone, more frequently with an associate judge. On Friday evenings he returns to his farm anr remains over Sunday, laying out work for the coming week and noting the progress made during his absence. Chief Judge Parker is a breeder of red poll cattle. The cattle are large, deep red and have no horns. His herd is now famous in the state.

Judge Parker's great popularity founded on a spotless and brilliant record, a generous and never-failing good nature is intensified by his great personal magnetism. Last autumn he refused to allow his name to go before the Democratic state convention at Saratoga, and since then he has been proclaimed as the next leader of the Democratic party in the coming national campaign. The chief justice can not be induced to talk politics. Newspaper men find Judge Parker affable and courteous as of old, but wonderfully adriot in turning leading questions off onto discussions about weather, crops and the charms of judicial life. In fact, no man seems to be less interested in politics than this self-same farmer and justice.

When studying law, Judge Parker was a student at the Albany law school. Although his duties are laborious and leave him little time fore recreation, Judge Parker lectures twice a week to the students. With them he is wonderfully popular. He vividly remembers now he felt when he was a student and he appeals to their heads and to their hearts. It is said that he not only aids them to master the law, but that he inspires them with hope and confidence in their profession.

HOP DRESSES FOR SUMMER BELLES

One of the Most Becoming Is the Evening Shirt Waist Siut, Made With Two Waists—Very Wide Embroidered Collar Needed.

New York, Aug. 1.—This is to be a great year for the belle of the season. In the simplest way she can get the most charming results and effects, and the direct result is that the size of her wardrobe is doubled while its beauty is increased many fold.

At Saratoga's first garden party there appeared a tall, pretty girl in a white organdie so exquisitely trimmed that it might have passed for a French creation made by hands that never grow weary. Its foundation, which was entirely of organdie, was trimmed with lace which was set in around the skirt in a band twelve inches wide. Above this wide band of insertion there came an application of Mexican wheels, as large as trade dollars, and these were buttonholed to the goods at intervals of a few inches. Above the Mexican wheels there came triangles of lace which were set upon the skirt in such a way as to outline a hip yoke.

The waist was similarly treated and a wide white ribbon stock with a ribbon belt completed the very pretty picture.

But the particular point of the story is this: Under this dress of organdie the pretty girl wore a pink satin corset cover and, under the organdie skirt, she wore a pink taffeta petticoat, the pink showing through the organdie in a very pretty way. One could imagine that a bright buttercup yellow would have looked still prettier, and that blue, by evening light, would have been seraphic. Of course, the pretty girl had, in her summer trunk, half a dozen slips, and, of course, she wore them under the same gown, getting always a pretty and a different effect.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland, who is one of the prettiest women to be seen anywhere today, wore on a short traveling journey a blue etamine gown with the skirt trimmed with narrow bands of blue taffeta, no wider than a quarter of an inch.

The etamine, which had a tiny stripe running through it, was worn over a drop skirt of black, thus subduing the blue. Her waist was a washable blue mercerized shirt waist, while her coat was a very smart three-quarter directoire, with a white enameled belt. The lapels and the cuffs were embroidered in white and blue flowers.

Mrs. Cleveland's favorite tones are white, blue and rose and their combinations.

The Newport belles have taken to embroidery with a fervor that speaks ominously for their eyesight later on. Of an afternoon you can see them, seated upon wide verandas or in cozy corners under the trees, hard at work embroidering the fronts of shirt waist gowns. The favorite color is white and the favorite embroidery a white cotton thread, rather coarse and washarble.

A still prettier shirt waist suit is made of blue, and the materials can be lawn, linen, butcher's linen or any other of the blue cotton wash stuffs. The pattern can be perfectly plain, a well-fitted gored skirt and a waist cut on the shirt waist pattern, with a little pouch over the belt and with a pouch at the back of the sleeves.

The very simplest styles, carried out in shirt waist suits, are as good as the elaborate ones, for the gown depends more upon its fit and its trimming than its material.

But speaking of the "hop"gowns to be worn by the belle of the season, many things are possible for her who is industrious and full of taste. And no young woman need despair, even though her supply of gowns be limited to half a dozen for the entire summer.

One of the most becoming of hop dresses is found in the evening shirt-waist suit, which is made with two waists, one high in the neck and the other low, one very fancy and the other rather plain. This gives the owner a chance to make a change and provides her with two dresses instead of one.

At Bar Harbor a dancing girl appeared in one of the loveliest evening dresses of the season. Its material was a fine white linen and the skirt was plain, except for a panel of narrow tucks down each side of the front. Then came the embroidery scheme, which consisted of a little embroidered vine running down each seam and a large embroidered pattern upon the front breadth.

The waists, for there were two of them, were made of linen and lace put together in strips, with embroidery running through all. One was cut rounding to give the decollete effect. The other was high, with a very clever lace stock finishing the neck.

The belle of the season will want this year a very wide embroidered collar, one t obe wor nwith any gown. And, to make such a collar, she will find it necessary to cut out of brown paper a pattern that will just fit her neck and shoulders.

The collar must open in the back, where it is fastened with small pearl buttons. In the front it comes down to a long point over the bust. Upon each shoulder it terminates in a point which projects over the shoulders. All around the edge there is an embroidered vine. It is thuns a square collar with the points coming in the middle of the front, the middle of the back and low upon each shoulder.

The decoration of the square collar depends upon the taste of the owner. And in this respect the French modiste advises the sort of embroidery which was once in vogue for the flannel petticoat of sacred memory.

The embroidered flannel petticoat has gone out, but that same style of embroidery which made the petticoat an old-fashioned work of art is now placed upon the square linen collars which are worn around the neck of the belle of the season. Nor is one feature missing. There is the scalloped edge with its embroidery; there is the little flower running around the collar; there are the eyelet holes; there is the braided design, and there are the countless little knots and twirls and tiny leaves which formed so important a part of the old-fashioned embroidery pattern.

The summer belle must possess the charm of fascination, or she cannot hold her belledom; and the chief attribute is found in her dress, which must be charming in every respect, delightfully chosen, beautifully fitted and appropriate at all times and in all places. Without good dressing she can hardly become a belle, much less can she hold her belledom for any length of time.

The summer belle gets her results this year by the very most trivial methods, and you would be surprised—were you to make a critical study of her dress—to see how naturally and how simply she draws beauty out of her gowns.

It is the chief aim and ambition of the summer girl to make the shoulders wide and sloping to narrow the size of her hips. Anything that will do this is eagerly sought by her, for this is the fashionable figure of summer.

Hips are fitted until they can not be fitted any more closely, and the waist, while not squeezed, is drawn down and flattened in the front to make it appear smaller. The shoulders, on the other hand, are padded out, if the belle is not sufficiently broad, while the long slope of the shoulder is encouraged.

The most fashionable shoulder is the Gibsonian shoulder, which is very wide, and, to secure it, the woman who is slender should lay plaits upon the front of her waist, pointing toward the shoulder line, and, if she be very slim indeed, she can lay one plait over the other, so as to make the shoulder still wider, for it is this broad effect which is so very beautiful in a woman's dress.

If you would gain an insight to the fashions of the summer, just take a look at the fashion plates and see how admirably they show the best features of summer wear. The distinguishing traits of the summer gownsl are these:

Hips that fit snugly, whether the skirt be plaited or plain.

A skirt that is very long, sweep length being preferred.

A belt that is very wide and cut to a pointed girdle in the front.

A waist that bags over the belt, making a full blouse in the middle of the front, while the sides and back are snug.

A wide, full bust, profusely trimmed with lace and applique, tucking, hem stitching or other pretty needlework.

Bands of insertion running across the front to make the bust seem fuller, deeper and wider in gut.

A long shoulder line with the shoulder seam cut low to give the shoulder slope.

Trimmings that project over the shoulder, such as lace collars, epaulets, silk trimmings, cords and ends and embroidered shoulder caps.

Embroidery here, there and everywhere. Insets of lace, insets of Mexican wheels and insets of all kinds, including little insets of hand-painted taffeta and hand-painted linen and lace.

A preponderance of trimmings that are small compared to the rather large designs of last year.

How delightful it is to study the Newport gowns this season! Coming as they do directly from Paris, straight from Vienna and by direct delivery from the leading dressmakers and designers of the whole universe, they display not only the present and prevailing modes, but they forecast those that are to come. Judging from a morning's study of the handsomest gowns for beach and piazza, one cannot help noting certain features as predominating over all the others.

One of the most popular of trimmings is the wheel trimming which is seen upon all the nice gowns of the season. Wheels are done by the women of Mexico in thread and are sent North and sold by the dozen. They vary in size from a dime to a silver dollar and on up to a few as large as a butter plate.

These wheels are used in all sorts of decorative schemes and in all capacities. They are admirable, whether as insets or as simple trimmings, or placed in points of vantage upon a gown, forming the yoke of the waist or hips, or decorating the full waist pouch.

Wheels of silk and wheels of panne velvet are equally popular, some of them overlaid with lace, others put on plain, like great eyes, to stare at you naively from the waist. Circles of black velvet, each circle buttonhole stitched around the edge, are a feature of the French gowns, for they give that note of black which is so much admired by the French. They are used to outline the yoke or are set above the skirt flare.

Another very noticeable feature of the summer dress and of the gowns that will be worn next fall is the style of trimming which, for lack of a better description, may be called the hanging trimming. And of the hanging trimmings it might almost be said that there is no end. The most conspicuous are the crocheted drops which hang from frogs, from passementeries and from decorative ornaments of all kinds, including metallic buttons.

Silk waists that fasten in the back are prettily trimmed as to the front with silk frogs that finish with ends and loops and balls and queerly tied cotton and silk ornaments. These are very decorative, and if carried out in white, are extremely dainty, giving a finishing touch to the waist.

And what a season it is to be for the woman who is anxious to transform her wardrobe from time to time into something new and attractive. And what a season it is for the summer belle who either keeps a maid or is handy with her own fingers.

She can take her old shirt waists, a little shrunken, a little the worse for wear, and a great deal the worse for sun and wind, and cover over the faded spots with handsomely designed cord and tassel ornaments that hang as low as the waist band, and which dress up the gown, until it looks as though it were crispy new.

But for the most part the hanging trimmings are shown in the handsome ornaments that are used in place of buttons, and you also see them upon the cuffs and upon the collar, where they give a finishing touch to the gown.

When the fall comes in you will behold corded ornaments used in front of the belt in the place of the buckle; you will see them finishing the backs of stocks; you will see them placed along the upper part of flounces and you will see them forming panels, vest trimming of every description, used in every possible place.

A gown that made a London sensation was worn by the duchess of Marlborough. Its foundation was white taffeta with glazed surface. Its skirt was the very plain skirt that flares gradually to a sweep length, with hips that fit as snugly as possible.

The waist was a white chiffon with a very deep white taffeta ruffle around the low neck. The sleeves were elbow sleeves of chiffon, terminating with deep ruffles at the elbow, also of chiffon, but thick that they inclosed the arms, instead of falling free from the arm, as so many of the new elbow sleeves are planned to do.

The bright particular feature of this gown was its trimming, which consisted of panne silk in a shade of turquoise blue shading a very little on the green. Leaves of this blue panne were cut in little branches, five leaves upon a branch, with a delicte stem.

taffeta in a very net way, one almost touching nother, until the whole gown was trimmed with them. The effect was something like a brocade of white with raised blue figures standing out far upon it, yet it was prettier than any brocade, as the leaves were arranged in a sort of patern, pointing this way, so as best to set off the delicate slender figure of the wearer.

After all, it is the figure that counts. If she be too stout, too dowdy, too indolent, and too listless to preserve her figure and hold herdself well, she can never be made to look nice, no matter if all the modistes of the seven centers of the world were to work upon her. Women spend too much time looking up dress patterns and too little time studying the problem of how to make them up fashionable so as to bring out their own best lines.

A unique figure, recently introduced at Newport, is that om combining lace and tassels. A lace flounce which was set around a low neck was caught here and there with silk cords, which were tied into knots and from which hung tasseled ends. This made a new kind of trimming and quite a pretty one.

It is predicted that, soon, there will be no such thing as untrimmed lace. With the coming in of novelty laces women are taking liberties with cheap lace, such as they would never have dreamed of taking with the old expensive varieties.

Lace is hand painted, lace is embroidered; lace is appliqued with figures large and small, and lace is now cut into holes while bits of chiffon are set in the openings, and lace is also cut out in pattern wih pieces of taffeta set in the holes thus made, and tastefully embroidered. On the whole the cheaper kinds of lace benefit by this kind of treatment, for they are given body, and they are also given style and stiffness, making them ideal as a dress trimming.

And the fact that lace is now hand embroidered and appliqued, and treated to insets of silk, leads to some curious combinations. You frequently see very expensive silks trimmed with very cheap laces which have been embroidered until they are works of art. It is no unusutl thing at Newport, where women wear silks that cost $5 and more a yard, to see such gowns trimmed with lace that costs less than $1 a yard. But the lace is so exquisitely hand embroidered, so embellished with French knots, so treated with tiny triangles of taffeta, and so otherwise made beautiful, that one does not wonder that it is placed in such a position of distinction.

A NEW PARIS HAT.

The hat itself is of plaited tulle over the wire frame, with lace laid over the wide brim and low crown. The back is bent close down on the hair, the front standing straight out over a bandeau. The trimming consists of two garlands of blue velvet forget-me-nots, and two French tied bows of black velvet ribbon, long ends falling over the back.

BLUE SICILIENNE COSTUME.

Sicilienne is a handsome and useful material. It has a great vogue in all colors. This costume is of sapphire blue, the tabs being bound with darker silk, the lacings of silk cord matching the binding. The folds above the deep shaped flounce as also the tucked vest, are of the silk. The smart ready-to-wear hat is of dark blue and white straw, the sunshade also harmonizes.

CREPE TOQUE, WITH VEIL.

Mourning materials are rich and handsome in themselves, and if made up and arranged with taste and style are really becoming. This model shows one of the newest crepe toques, with a fine grenadine veil draped on the back in artistic folds, the bow on arrangement giving a youthful, chic touch.

THE "BANDEAU" HAT.

This pretty model is made of champagne-colored straw braid sewn in a large flat, which is draped with handsome lace, caught on top with an ornament and some rosettes of ribbon to match, the whole being superposed on a wreath of exquisite roses, sewn on a bandeau. The roses shade from pale straw color to deepest orange tints.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT.

Gold Bearing Veins Increase In Value With Depth.

Colorado Springs, Aug. 1.—That the gold bearing veins of the Cripple Creek district increase in value with depth has been proven beyond doubt. Engineer George J. Bancroft, after a careful study of existing conditions in that district, ranging in depth to 1500 feet, nineteen are in good ore at their lowest depth. In most instances the ore at the lowest levels is the best in the history of the properties. There are numerous instances where blind veins have been encountered at depth, or veins barren above, have developed a good grade of ore below. Engineer Bancroft describes the showing in the various workings, giving facts not generally known, and proves on the contrary they improve to a remarkable degree. The tapping of the flow of water by the drainage tunnel will mean the opening of new ore at depth in many mines.

Active renewal of mining is seen in many parts of the district at points where idleness has been the rule for several years. The interest which is shown at various outside points is indicative of the general revival which began several months ago. On Big Bull mountain, merely prospected hitherto, the Queen Rose Mining and Milling company has commenced the installation of a steam plant capable of operating to a depth of 800 feet. Various leases have been granted and work already begun on Straub mountain, Rosebud, Womack and Tenderfoot hills, all of which have been considered until lately as being in the barren zone. Almost every hill in the camp is dotted with one or more cyanide mills, which shows a determination on the part of mine owners and lessees to treat the low grade ore of the camp.

The El Paso, Beacon hill's big shipper, it is reported will declare a dividend during the first part of the coming month. The property of the El Paso company is in excellent shape, and the company is putting away a nice surplus every month.

William Hamilton Osborne's work is nowadays seen everywhere, but his story in the August "10 Story Book" is the hit of the month as a bit of humorous satire. "The Discomfiture of the Faithful Steward" shows how the race is not always to the swiftest.

Paris Fashions for Outdoor Wear.

Now that is it fashionable to spend the greater part of the day in the open air there is a noticeable and tremendous change in the fashions for the so-called outing gowns, which include the gowns worn to play tennis, golf, to drive, ride horseback, to ride in motor cars and so on: in fact, what might be called the sporting gown, which, be it remembered, must needs include a shooting costume. There is no doubt that tennis grows in favor all the time, and much attention is paid to a smart tennis costume and a becoming one as well, for no longer is it thought requisite for a woman who plays tennis or golf to attire herself in some old short skirt, shabby waist, with sleeves rolled up to the elbow, and the most unbecoming hat that can well be devised. Now the gowns for golf or tennis, but especially for tennis, are as carefully made, as carefully fitted and carefully chosen as a ball gown, and the question of headgear is most earnestly studied, so that it shall meet the exigencies of the case, shade the face, and at the same time be becoming.

All white is the favorite color for a fashionable tennis gown. White linen, white pique, white duck, white mohair, white serge, and, for very cool days, light weight white cloth are all used. The skirt is cut short enough to clear the ground, but not short enough to be unbecoming, and this style of short skirt is one that taxes the cleverness of the dressmaker and tailor to the fullest extent, for it must be so cut as to be becoming, the same length all around, fitting smoothly over the hips, and made with inverted plaits at the back, with decided flare and no ripple effect, such as is seen on some of the cheaper styles, and with a deep hem.

A smart costume has a three-quarter length coat, half fitting and a perfectly plain skirt, no strapped seams of machine stitching, while another favorite style, more popular although not quite so smart, is in plaits, both skirt and coat. There is a narrow belt of either white or black leather worn slipped under the plaits in front of the coat to give rather longer lines. Both the side plaits and the box plaits are fashionable and of different widths, and there are some few skirts that have the false plaits, circular in shape in themselves and then with the plaits stitched on. The blouse waist of fine lawn or of plain linen is worn with these skirts and coats and there is one style that is exceedingly plain of white linen, quite fine, with only a hem stitched cuff and stock collar that is very pretty and becoming and has the advantage that it launders very well: for many of these fine waists do not wash well and really require to be cleaned.

White India silk is a delightfully cool material for a tennis gown and on the shirt-waist order. The gowns are also made of India silk and with a long coat to match that can easily be donned when the game is over, and the whole gown itself can be laundered as well as can the linen or pique. The mohair and serge gowns have the coats lined with India silk and are intended to wear in cooler weather. The pique linen and duck have no lining. Oddly enough, the homespun coats are all lined: that is, the smartest of them are. But this probably is because homespun has a way of pulling that causes a coat to lose shape easily, something much to be avoided, if possible.

The model of the skirt that has many gores that toward the foot flare and have additional material put on is rather a favorite one, and if a more trimmed skirt is desired this can be made more elaborate by straps of the material fastened with buttons just above where the flare begins at each seam. Then the strapped linen costumes can be further elaborated by rows of machine stitching. This, however, is more noticeable in the colored linens than in the white.

There are quite a number of smart outing gowns in mixed effects, the homespun already mentioned, the cheviots and the colored linens. They are all made on the same lines as the white, with long coats or the three-quarter length. There are very few with short jackets. The skirts are plain or plaited, and have no trimming, and are to be worn with either the embroidered or plain style of shirt waist.

For every day use, or when economy has to be consulted as regards laundering, the darker ones are the most economical, and can be made very smart and becoming. But it must be admitted that the all-white have for the moment the leading place in favor.

The correct style of dress to be worn by the spectators at the outdoor sports is quite a different one and is as elaborate as would be chosen for a garden party. Every material is possible—in fact, it might be said it be a resume of all the fashions of the season. If the day be cool there are the smart cloth or silk costumes, as well as the veiling or crepe de Chine, while if the day be warm then is the opportunity for all the thin materials and such fabrics to be displayed to great advantage, and the flower hats and lace hats and all the accessories of the fashionable costume of this summer, as well as the very severe cloth costume or the elaborate one made of the pale colored cloth, are worn indiscriminately, it might be said.

Among these same cloth gowns was an exceedingly attractive one of pale yellow. The entire shirt and waist were in bayadere tucks, over which fell flat bands of the material fastened on the skirt quite near the foot, with three silver buttons where each strap stopped, and with a shoulder cape of the plain cloth fastened to the waist with the silver buttons again.

There are entire gowns of lace, white or black. Just here it may be said that the black lace gown is becoming more and more popular all the time, and is made of the most expensive quality of chantilly, with a black lace hat to match, enlivened only by a spray of yellow flowers at the side, making a note of contrast that is most attractive among all the light costumes.

Light colored mohair gowns are very smart this season, and indeed are rather smarter than the white. They and the pongee are the best in the light color and in the rather lighter weight materials that can be worn in cool or warm days alike. The plan of the all one color is again seen in these costumes, and with the coat and skirt of mohair or pongee is worn a silk waist of India silk or of muslin as near as possible the color of the material of the costume. Made simply as are the coat and skirt, the only trimming is in the stock collar and the pointed yoke of lace or embroidered linen and the turned-over collar and cuffs.

The changeable silk taffetas are also made in this style, but are worn more by older women. There is one shade of gun metal that is very good, exceedingly hard to get and that is very attractive for this sort of costume, but has the objection of not being always becoming, in which case, either white or black must be introduced into the trimming to break the rather dull monotony of it. There are also narrow bands of black velvet with gilt buttons or of black braid with the same buttons that are put on narrow bands of white cloth. These are in each seam and are used for revers and collar and in this way make the gown becoming.

ACCEPTABLE PRESENTS FOR INFANTS.

It is often difficult to choose a gift for the advent of an infant. As a rule anything that is the work of the donor is much more appreciated than if it is merely a matter of entering a shop and expending money.

Of course, certain things can only be obtained in that way, and these as a rule do not require to be duplicated, whereas articles of wearing apparel may be without number and not be superfluous. With the simplest forms of expenditure in view, there are bootikins, bibs or shirts. The bootikins may be knitted or crocheted, or they may be quickly made of elderdown. If it is a summer baby they should be thin, but an infant as a rule needs bootikins of some sort. They may be made of Shetland wool or silk. A simple way of crocheting these is to commence at the toe with several chain stitches, then crochet round them with two stitches into each loop, and when a cap is formed continue, enlarging at regular intervals, making double stitches until the front top of a slipper is reached. From this point omit the middle, crocheting only the sole and sides until there is sufficient, then join the two sides together at the back of the heel, drawing the middle stitches slightly toward a sharp corner at the heel.

Make the upper part more lacy, picking up the inside stitches from the shoe edge and working upward to the required height for a sock. It is very pretty if a color is used for the shoe part and white for the sock, and it is an improvement if an additional edge be worked round that of the shoe. To make them of elderdown is exceedingly simple. Each half of the bootikin being cut out flat, they are joined together the seam edges being finely herringboned with silk and featherstitched over the seam on the right side, as also all round the edges of the open part above the small notch. They are made to tie in the front with washing ribbon half an inch wide. The same idea may be carried out in wash silk, preferably Japanese quality; the bootikin of double silk, wadded with a very thin layer of wool or mull between, and otherwise featherstitched and finished like those of elderdown.

Few persons realize how easy bibs are to make and what pretty work the making is. The interlining should be cheesecloth and the outer material mull, nainsook or washing silk. Medallions of fine embroidery and small pieces of insertion may be used effectively in this way, the design being accentuated by the stitching which keeps the materials together. The neck edge is corded and the outer one trimmed with Valenciennes lace or fine embroidery edging.

A simple design is illustrated to show what can be done with parallel lines of stitching, a medallion, a few small stripes of insertion and a little feather stitching. Plain bibs may be made pretty by stitching and feather stitching only, or little daisies may be worked in alternate squares formed by plain quilting.

A knitted wool blanket makes a pretty and useful present. To make this it is necessary to cast about one hundred and sixty stitches of soft firm wool in white. At a little way from each end two strips of color are knitted in to form borders. The color are knitted in to form borders. The length should be about thirty-nine inches, plain garter stitch, and the ends bound with ribbon.

Then there are little kimono jackets, very simple and so pretty; also full length wraps. A pretty design for one of these is shown in the sketch. It is of cream challie, with a Persian border around the lower edge, and is lined with pale blue, pink or white silk. It has a little yoke, pointed back and front, the edge of which, as also the collar and front, is bound with wash ribbon, which is secured by one side of the featherstitching; bows of ribbon finish the shoulders and tie in front. This pattern may be carried out in various ways.

Another pretty form of wrap is a square of cashmere or any preferred soft double width material lined with silk, the edges embroidered or trimmed as desired, and one corner, rounded, is arranged with running string to form a hood.

An extremely pretty cover for a bassinette may be made by using lace beading and baby ribbon.

The beading is that which is procured in several rows to the width of the strip. A sufficient number of strips about thirty-six inches long are joined together to make the required width. Pale blue or pink baby ribbon is run through and left in loops at each end, over which one strip of beading is placed. A flounce of footing trimmed with the ribbon borders it all around and the whole is interlined with wadding in a small casing and faced with silk to match the color of the ribbon.

A large bow of satin ribbon decorates one corner, using about two yards, while ten pieces of baby ribbon are required for the beading.

MANNISH SHOES FOR WOMEN NO LONGER IN STYLE.

The new fashionable footwear indicates that toes are becoming narrower, and that in spite of all that is said against them heels enjoy favor commensurate with their height. In the matter of heels, however, there is plenty of choice, and one will not be conspicuous whether she wear the Cuban, Louis or military heel.

Most shoes for dress occasions have the glossy finish. There is a decided liking manifested for sandals, which may have from one to nine straps and be as ornamental as one pleases.

It is the fad to use ribbons for lacing Oxfords, soft ribbons that will pass readily through the eyelets, which are made a little larger than the ordinary ones.

All in all, there is a decided tendency toward making women's shoes daintier and more in keeping with the present elaborate frocks with which they are to be worn. The mannish shoe seems to be passing.

Antony Was a Brave Man.

Cleopatra was complaining on her barge.

"Ever since my rowers read that poem of Kipling's they want to run my business. What would you advise?" she asked.

"Let them go galleygher," responded Antony.

Delighted at his powers of diplomacy, she coyly asked him to lead the next german.

Care of the Refrigerator.

The refrigerator is one of the important household appanages for which the chatelaine must hold herself directly responsible. Servants are prone to be phenomenally careless in this respect, and a refrigerator in bad condition is a menace to health. The position of the refrigerator is important. It should not be kept in the cellar or other damp location, but should always be placed where it can be well lighted and ventilated. Never allow the drain pipe to connect with the sewer. A new refrigerator should be allowed to stand from twelve to twenty-four hours after the ice chamber is filled before any article of food is placed in it.

In up to date houses there are separate refrigerators for milk and butter and meat, with still another compartment for fruit and vegetables. The vegetable and milk compartments are lined as well as shelved with heavy glass. Where one has no separated and quarantined divisions neither fish, cheese, cabbage, onions, nor bananas should be kept in the general refrigerator. Their flavor will not only affect the other food, but will render the butter, milk and any gelatinous preparations absolutely unfit for use. When artificial ice is used care must be taken not to let fish come in contact with it, as the ammonia used in the freezing affects the fish. Meat should never be laid directly on the ice, natural or artificial, as it extracts all the good meat juices.

Ice should always be washed and aid carefully in the ice box, not thrown in. Most housekeepers, contend from their own experience that ice wrapped in a thick coating of newspapers lasts longer than when left uncovered, but the manufacturers say it should not be wrapped in anything, as that prevents the free circulation of cold air. The inference is plain. If the saving in the ice bill is the main object to be achieved, wrap the ice. If, as in extremely hot weather, there is danger of the food spoiling, uncover. One woman thinks she has simplified matters by covering the outside and top of her ice box with a heavy blanket lined with newspapers.

In getting ice it is a matter of economy to put in as large a piece as possible at first, in order that the refrigerator may become thoroughly cooled, then keep full, or nearly so, as a small quantity of ice will melt much faster. In a small icebox, twenty-five pounds put in three times a week will last better than a smaller piece put in daily. In taking ice from the refrigerator for table use no more should be picked off than is needed on account of its melting so much more rapidly. Covers and doors should always be kept tightly closed. Food must never be placed in the refrigerator until thoroughly cooled, as it occasions moisture. Neither should food be kept in the refrigerator without ice and with cover and doors closed. Chemicals of any kind must be kept out of the icebox and all hooks should be heavily tinned.

Once a week is often enough to wash the refrigerator, if ordinary care is given to the articles stored in it. Take everything from the interior, put the shelves in a large dishpan and wash in hot soap suds in which a pinch of soda has been dissolved. Rinse with cold water, wipe perfectly dry and put out doors in the sun to dry for an hour. Wash the sides of the refrigerator in the same way, using a flexible wire for the drain pipe and skewers for the corners and grooves. Also pour warm water in the waste pipe to clear the slims that accumulates from the ice.

Just Following the Welsh Rabbit.

Shakespeare was asked why he had put the donkey into "Midsummer Night's Dream."

"Well," explained the bard, "you must remember it was just following Welsh rabbit."

Rejoicing that he had escaped from Avon it worse, they begged him to go on with the play.

Eating.

Doctor Pillem—You should never go into the water after a hearty meal.

Mr. Strong—I don't. I generally go to a good restaurant.

Sweetbreads Served in Various Styles.

No matter what form your sweetbreads are to take at the instant of serving, the first thing to be done with them in every case is to put them to soak in cold water for about two hours. Then take them out and boil for about five minutes in fresh water. Take them from the boiling water, drop them into cold water, and cut away all the windpipes and fibrous nerves. This operation finished, you go about preparing them after any one of the following directions, or according to others which may please your fancy most.

A dish that eminent authorities on the subject of cooking are pleased to call an aristocrat of sweetbreads is a delicious compound and not very difficult of preparation. You boil the sweetbreads till tender, then when cool, you cut them up into slices. These slices sprinkle with pepper and salt, and fry in a little butter. When you take them up put on a slab to cool, putting a light weight over them to press them into shape. Then with a round cutter cut them into rounds; cut also some cold boiled beef tongue into rounds of the same size, and also some mushrooms. Put these all together and cover with a thick, rich stock, highly seasoned. String on little wooden skewers, then sprinkle them over with breadcrumbs, lay on a baking sheet, moisten with melted butter, and brown in a rather hot oven. Remove the skewers before serving.

Of all the delicate croquettes that can be put before a diner those made of sweetbreads undoubtedly excel in delicacy of flavor. You chop them finely, of course, and you season them very lightly, adding a suspicion of onion juice. With a little cream you moisten them, then shape into croquettes, roll in egg and crumb and fry. No sauce with these sweetbread croquettes, and nothing to be served with them that can infringe upon their rights to the most distinguished consideration.

Some care very much for an addition of curry to sweetbreads, and a particularly good way to add it is the following: Cut the sweetbreads into dice shaped bits and cook till done in a little white stock—either that of chicken or veal. Cook with them an onion, too, and as they are about done take out the onion, leave only enough of the stock to moisten them well and add the curry powder in the proper proportion. Just a few drops of lemon juice may be added, too, and the dish be the more pleasing to a good many.

If you have very tender, young green peas you can easily form a combination, between them and sweetbreads that will give you satisfaction in the eating. You just cut some blanched sweetbreads into rather sizable slices and fry till brown in butter. On a dish you arrange them in a circle, and, having boiled the peas and drained them, you heat them well in the butter in which the sweetbreads were fried. Then you put them in a little heap right in the center of the sweetbreads.

If sweetbreads creamed make your favorite dish a great deal is to be said in praise of your taste in the matter. And is this the way you like them? Boil the sweetbreads till tender, then cut up into small pieces. Just a bit of butter should be put in a frying pan and these pieces of sweetbreads fried in it the slightest little bit. Then cover with rich cream, thicken a very little and pour over hot slices of toast which have been freed from crusts.

Arrange on a dish. Into the pan in which you fried them put a little stock, heat it and add truffles cut in small pieces. Over the sweetbreads put this sauce. Just a little cayenne pepper and a few drops of lemon juice might reasonably be added to the sauce.

In broiling sweetbreads you might want them blanched first, then dipped in oil, salted and peppered a bit and then broiled.

Sweetbreads and bacon get on beautifully together, too. A simple way for preparing them is to blanch them, fry in bacon fat and surround with thin slices of fried bacon. Just a few slices of fried cucumbers used as a garnish for this dish make it a trifle more acceptable perhaps.

Sweetbreads, with mushrooms in combinations, are always a happy contrivance for appealing to those who like good things to eat. You may fry the sweetbreads and fry the fresh mushrooms also, if you like blending them together with a bit of cream, or you may broil both sweetbreads and mushrooms and arrange them in a pretty fashion on a dish. In either instance, if you have a sure instinct for the using of wine in cooking, you may add with pleasurable results some white wine.

THE EPICURE.

Reuben at the Fair.

Once upon a time Reuben mounted his likely gray mare and went to the fair in an adjoining village, hoping that he might find an opportunity to make a horse trade that would be to his advantage.

He met a dapper, smooth-tongued man, with a high-stepping, showy horse, who invited him to dinner. As they ate they talked of the merits of their horses, and the dapper man finally agreed to make an even exchange in consideration of the friendly feeling that he had for Reuben.

When Reuben got his high-stepping horse home and tried to put him to some practical use he found that he possessed most of the defects that horseflesh is heir to.

Moral—A fair exchange is sometimes robbery.

High Value.

Knicker—I thought you wanted a peach-blow vase.

Bocker—So I did, but I spent all my money on a jack pot.

A Misapprehension.

Doctor—You say you can't bear the smell of gasoline. Why don't you stop automobiling, then?

Patient—But, doctor, my business is cleaning gloves!

THE MAN WHO MET HIMSELF

By Edgar Welton Cooley.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

As the bus rattled over the pavement, Archibald Demming found amusement in staring at his dim reflection in the mirror at the further end. There was no lamp in the bus, and the only light that illuminated the interior was such as struggled through the mist and the night from the shop windows.

However, Demming's eyes gradually adjusted themselves to the gloom and presently he noticed what appeared to be a mirror in the front end of the vehicle. This mirror apparently hung at a different angle than did the one he had seen first, for the reflection from it was of the side, rather than of the front of his face.

While he sat idly gazing at this mirror, he suddenly noticed that, while it reflected perfectly his features, it did not reflect any other object.

His curiosity aroused, Demming leaned forward, the better to scrutinize it. Then he drew back, astonished.

He had moved—had moved at least a foot. But his reflection in the glass had remained perfectly stationary.

"Umph!" he exclaimed aloud, "that's queer."

At the sound of his voice, the side view of himself in the mirror suddenly changed to a front view. His eyes seemed directly gazing at himself.

He could see his reflection in both mirrors now, side by side. But in the one—in the glass he had first noticed, his brows were contracted, his lips were pressed tightly together, a gleam of belligerment covered his face; in the other, his eyes twinkled merrily, the lips were slightly parted as though he were about to laugh, his face was aglow with amusement. Yet in other respects the two reflections were precisely the same.

There were the same deep-set eyes, the same aquiline nose, the same heavy mustache, the same prominent jaws and square chin, the same carefully parted hair, even to one stray lock that hung down over his forehead.

Demming leaned back against the cushions and stared at the two mirrors in silence.

He could imagine how the angle of reflection in the one glass might have changed so suddenly. It were possible that the mirror were suspended in such a way as to allow it to turn, as the bus swung and swayed.

But he could, by no possible theory, explain how two mirrors might at the same instant reflect one man's face in such opposite moods.

Suddenly he heard a man's voice say: "Rather a disagreeable night, isn't it?"

For a full moment Demming enjoyed the sensation of doubting his own sanity. He was positive he had heard his own voice; therefore, he must have spoken. Yet he was not conscious of having done so, and his thought had certainly not been upon the weather.

Then the bus swung under the brilliantly lighted shed of the Grand Central station. He had thought himself alone in the vehicle, but he now saw, instead of a second mirror, a man sitting on the further end of the seat.

Demming stared at him in abject bewilderment, for the man's apparel—his closely buttoned coat, his trousers, his tie, his gloves, his hat, his shoes, even his valise—were exact duplicates of his own!

It was not until his fellow-passengers had arisen and stood, valise in hand, waiting for him to disembark, that Demming realized the bus had stopped and that an attendant had opened the door.

Having finally managed to stumble out, he stood in the glare of an arc light and watched the Other Man alight and mingle with the throng. And slowly there crept through him an indistinct impression that he, himself, was only his own spirit, and that his Other Being was his mortal self. He wondered if the soul of a dead man must not experience a like sensation, in case it is allowed to hover around the mortal remains and witness the grief of its living friends.

However, once in the Pullman, on the Denver limited, and divested of hat, gloves and storm coat, his fatigue convinced him that he was still in the flesh, and seeking his berth, he was soon in a refreshing slumber.

When he awoke the first gray streaks of morning were slowy brightening the bluffs of the Mississippi valley.

It was, as yet, too early to arise, so he lay, gazing out upon the flying landscape and thinking of the woman who was awaiting him in Denver; of the wedding that was to be; of the contemplated wedding tour; of the cozy home he had prepared for her in the east.

Finally the sun came up, shooting its scarlet darts across the hills and dispelling the mists upon the lowlands. Then he dressed and went forward to complete his toilet.

When, after breakfast and a morning smoke, he returned, he found one-half of his section occupied by his fellow-passenger of the bus.

He did not experience any surprise at this; nor did it occur to him as being out of the ordinary. Yet, it annoyed him.

He picked up a paper, but could not read. He seemed to feel the other's eyes resting upon him. So he laid his paper aside and glanced, rather defiantly, at his fellow-traveler.

The other was looking directly at him and he saw the same features that he had mistaken for his own reflection in the bus.

The face was aglow with amusement; the eyes twinkled; there was the suggestion of a smile upon the face.

"How far west?" Demming managed to ask, finally.

"Denver," the other replied.

Demming winced. He realized that in strength, tone, pitch and quality, there was not an iota's difference between his voice and the voice of the Other Man.

"Do you reside in Denver?" he ventured, after a pause.

"No, sir," the other replied, "my home is in Cleveland."

"Cleveland?" Demming faltered, beginning to feel uncomfortable. "Why, I live in Cleveland, also."

"Indeed?" replied the other, smiling. "Then perhaps we will become good friends."

Demming did not reply, and the two gazed out of the windows at the green bluffs rolling backward, like gigantic waves, from the broad river.

Finally the stranger, without removing his eyes from the landscape, remarked:

"From Cleveland to Denver is rather a long journey for one to take for the purpose of committing matrimony, don't you think?"

Demming stared and glanced at the other, half fiercely.

"How did you learn I was going to get married?" he demanded.

"You going to be married?" the other replied, innocently. "I did not know it. I mean that is what is taking me to Denver—to get married."

"You—you are—" began Demming, pinching himself. But the other interrupted:

"We seem to be two souls with but a single thought, as my Uncle Charlie Bashford wrote when he eloped with—"

"Have you an Uncle Charlie Bashford?" Demming broke in, leaning eagerly forward.

"Yes, sir," returned the other. "He resides in Paducah—Paducah, Ky. Why?"

"Nothing." Demming replied, much with the air of one who is crushed; "only that I—I have an uncle who answers to that name and he, also, lives in Paducah."

He paused a moment, as though debating a great question and then the light of sudden understanding flashed across his countenance.

"That is to say," he resumed, "I did have an Uncle Charlie Bashford—before I died."

"Before you — what?" the other asked, visibly startled.

"Before I died," repeated Demming. "I must have had heart-failure or something and didn't know it. At all events, I am dead. I died very suddenly in a bus. I recognize you now, of course. You are my spirit. I first saw you in the bus at the time of my demise. I see that you are reluctant to leave me. It is very kind of you, indeed."

The other gazed at him, affrightedly. It was quite evident to him that Demming was a lunatic, and he glanced uneasily around, as though measuring his chance of escape. His hands shook with fear, and a coin, which he had been fumbling in his fingers, dropped to the floor.

Demming stooped and picked it up. It was a German piece of ancient coinage, and through the edge a hole had been bored.

"In the name of God!" he cried, excitedly, "if you are not my spirit; if you are mortal and in the flesh, where did you get this coin?"

"I assure you," the other replied, calmly, "that I am not your spirit; that I am 'of the earth, earthly.' I have had that coin for years—ever since I was a babe. To the best of my knowledge it is the only one of its kind in existence—save one. But why do you ask?"

For reply Demming thrust his hand into his pocket, then drew it out, and the other saw a coin upon the open palm.

He laid his own beside it and compared the two. They were precisely alike, even to the small hole in the edge.

"I understand," the other said, finally, and a smile spread over his face. "This is the other one of which I spoke."

But Demming paid no heed to his words. His face had grown pale; his lips were close-pressed; his eyes were rivited upon the other's.

"In God's name," he cried, hoarsely; "what are you—man or devil?"

"I am a man," the other answered, his eyes twinkling; "whether or not I am a devil is as men judge me. My name is Archibald Demming."

For a moment, Demming stared at him, helplessly. Then a gleam of pathetic hopelessness crept into his eyes, and he bowed his head.

"Then," he said, a tremor in his voice, "it is as I feared. I am dead."

"No," he replied, "you are not the late lamented. You are only mistaken in your identity. You have been known, practically all your life, as Archibald Demming, when in reality you are Ferdinand Randolph. Do not interrupt me, but listen:

"You and I are first cousins, and, virtually, of the same age. When we were babes in arms, we were so much alike our parents could not tell us apart. A relative—an enthusiastic numismatist—gave our mothers these coins, and they fastened them on chains that we might wear them around our necks.

"One day there was a church picnic, or something, and our mothers, planning to attend, agreed that one of us should not wear our chain that day. This would guard against any possibility of getting us mixed. It was a good arrangement and was spoiled only by our maternal sires very carefully leaving both our chains at home.

"The expected happened. When our mothers returned from that picnic, each had the other's child. From that day to a few years ago, when I learned of my true identity by reason of failing eyesight, which is hereditary in the Demming family, I have been known as Randolph. Since that I have been searching for you. That we are residents of the same city is a coincidence, of which I did not dream. But it is fortunate—"

There was a violent jolting of the cars, the sound of brake-beams locking tightly, the noise of screeching engines, and then—

Demming heard a roar like the crack of doom, the snapping of timbers, the hissing of steam, the grinding of steel on wood. And he felt the sensation of falling, of tumbling, of rolling, over and over. Then all was darkness and chaos, and the air was filled with the voices of men, women and children raised in agony—voices pleading, praying and cursing.

It was several moments before he realized that the train had plunged down a bank and that he was pinned beneath the wreckage, but was uninjured. He struggled to free himself, and touched a human hand that seemed reaching to him from beneath a mass of iron.

It was pulseless, but the fingers still clasped a curious, old Roman coin.

In the Denver papers the name of Archibald Demming, of Cleveland, twice appeared—once in the list of those killed in the wreck of the Denver limited and once among the wedding announcements.

HIBERNIAN HALL

Project For Erecting Building For the Order Under Way.

Finds Much Favor Among Members—Meeting to Consider It.

Duluth will probably have a new hall building, which will be known as Hibernian hall.

Division No. 1, A. O. H. has had the project under consideration for some time. An opportunity has been offered it now to have a building of its own, with a fine hall for meeting and social purposes, and it is likely that it will be vailed of.

A special meeting of the local division of the Hibernians has been called for tomorrow afternoon to hear the proposition and plans for the new haul building. It will be held in Catholic Association hall.

A number of the members of the order are very enthusiastic over the contemplated building, and are willing to do everything in their power to make it an accomplished fact. The Hibernians of this city are building up an excellent division here and they feel that the time has come when they should have their own exclusive hall for society and other purposes.

It is the intention, if the project goes through, to have a hall fitted up in a manner convenient for lodge meetings and the business of the order, and also to have a reading room and library where papers and books of interest to the members will always be found. Other societies of a kindred nature to the A. O. H. will be formed, where Irishmen can meet and discuss matters appertaining to Ireland. Irishmen and their descendants in this city have felt the need of such a meeting place, which would be a great benefit to thec ity, as it would help to locate many of the Irish emigrants to this country in this city and the adjoining territory. The location of the proposed hall has not yet been decided on, but it will be undoubtedly in the central part of the city.

IMPORTS OF IRON AND STEEL

Into the United States Last Year Largest on Record.

Washington, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Importations of iron and steel into the United States in the fiscal year 1903 are larger than in any preceding year since 1891, and with that a single exception are larger than at any time within the past twenty years. In only seven earlier years in the history of the country have the importations of iron and steel been as large as those of the fiscal year just ended. The total value of iron and steel imported in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1903, as shown by the figures of the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics is $51,617,312, against $27,180,247 in 1902, $17,574,739 in 1901, and $12,100,440 in 1899. Running back through the import record from 1850 down to 1903, the only years in which the value of iron and steel imports exceeded those of 1903 are 1872, when the total was $55,540,188; 1873, $80,308,452; 1890, $57,744,068; 1891, $60,004,477; 1892, $67,976,897; 1893 $53,495,244; and 1891, $53,544,272. These large importations of iron and steel have occurred, it will be seen, in periods of exceptional business activity, but on no former occasion base such large importations been made in the fact of so great home productions of iron and steel. In 1891, when the importations were two million dollars greater than in the year just ended, the total home production of pig iron was only eight and one half million tons, while that of 1902 was over seventeen million tons, or double that of 1891. In the period from 1880 to 1883, when the importations of iron and steel were larger than those of 1903, pig iron production only averaged about four million tons per annum; or less than one-fourth the annual production of the present time; and in 1872 and 1873, when the importations slightly exceeded those of 1903, the pig iron productions averaged only two and one half million tons annually, against seventeen millions at the present time.

This large increase in the importation of iron and steel is chiefly in the partially manufactured grades. Pig iron increased from 155,000 tons in 1902 to 956,000 tons in 1903, the value being in 1902 less than $3,500,000, and in 1903 near $17,000,000. Bar iron increased from 49,000,000 pounds in 1902 to 96,000,000 in 1903; and steel ingots, blooms, slabs, billets and bars, from 202,000,000 pounds to 350,000,000, the value increasing from $3,500,000 in 1902 to nearly 10,000,000 in 1903. Steel rails increased from $371,452 to $2,874,188 and scrap iron and steel, fit only for remanufacture, increased from $758,753 to $2,019,258. These five classes of iron and steel—pig iron, scrap iron, bar iron, steel rails and steel ingots, blooms, billets and bars—when combined show an increase in 1903 as compared with 1902 of $21,256,427, while the total increase in all imports of iron and steel during the year is $24,437,065. The once class of importations of iron and steel which shows a marked reduction is tin plates, of which the total importation fell from 199,000,000 pounds in 1902 to 110,000,000 pounds in 1903, and the value from $6,000,000 in 1902 to a little over $3,000,000 in 1903.

AMONG MINE OWN.

"And he said unto him. Say now unto her * * * Wouldst thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, I dwell among mine own people."—II Kings, iv. 13.

"Among mine own!" This Shunamite
Knew all of rich content;
She knew that through the day and night
The roads forever went;
That they led to the city wall
Where merriment and moan
Were mingled in their rise and fall—
She stayed among her own.

The many roads that lead away
Stretch far and fair to see,
On some the pipe and tabor play
And ring with revelry;
Down one the glow of glory waits
For him who fain would roam
The many roads that hold our fates—
They also lead us home.

The roads that tempt the wand'ring feet
Lead on through scenes that change;
Lead on to where we long to meet
One face that is not strange.
Perchance they skirt the desert sand
Or meet the flying foam—
But, lead to whatsoever land,
They also lead us home.

The Shunamite—'twas hers to go
Where jewels flashed as fire
Amidst the broidered garments' glow,
Yet she had her desire.
The subtle harmonies that blent
In cadence round the throne
Dimmed in the carol of content
She heard among her own.

"Among mine own!" Where friendly eyes
And friendly hands are mine;
Where humble songs of pleasure rise
And there are bud and vine,
And honey bees to search the sweets
Upon the breezes blown—
There, satisfied, the heart repeats
The croon: "Among mine own!"

A Misunderstanding.

New York Sun: First Stork—You look sad; what's the trouble?

Second stork—Terrible enough; I have an extra child on my hands.

First Stork—How's that?

Second Stork—I took around triplets to a family and they refused to take the third child, saying that they had ordered twins.

Pledges and Performances.

Philadelphia Record: The state department at Washington declines to modify by one word the announcement made respecting Manchuria and this despite the publication of dispatches from various sources discrediting the reported agreement. The Chinese government, which gave pledges to open Moukden and Tatung Kao, is regarded by the state department as the sovereign authority in Manchuria, and, even if the assurances from Russia denying any intention of putting obstacles in the way of an agreement with China have been intended to be taken in a Pickwickian sense, this government prefers to give them a liberal interpretation and fully intends that the promises of both Russia and China shall be kept. The diplomats of Pekin and St. Petersburg are evidently "up against" something with which they are unfamiliar, the directness of the state department's methods cannot be parried by tergiversation and the tenacity of the former will probably prove a match for the favorite oriental practice of wearing out an opponent's patience.

What the Boys Learned.

St. Louis Republic: Those eastern college students who hastened to Kansas, under the rosy representations of interested parties, to enjoy a month in the western land, who are now stranded 2000 miles from home, have at least had their education forwarded to the extent of learning that "distance lends enchantment to the view."

Irish Politeness.

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle: In the struggle between Irish politeness and Irish patriotism that has been occasioned by the visit of Edward and Alexandra to Ireland, politeness has easily won. To a good many of their hosts the king and queen are anything but welcome guests, but, being guests, their hosts are determined that nothing in their reception shall give them the least hint that they are unwelcome. The proverbial courtesy and hospitality of the Irishman have once more been conspicuously illustrated.

THE NEWEST SUMMER GIRL

Moth-ball my raglan, mother, and pat away my hat
With feathers all around it—I'll have no need for that;
My muff and furs, dear mother, pray put them on the shelf,
For I am ready, mother, to innovate myself!
The gentle spring is coming,
And in a chirping whirl
The merry birds are calling
The newest Summer Girl!

Pray hustle out my straw hat, my belt and shirtwaist suit,
For summer's coming, mother, and I must be a "beaut!"
Dig up my last year's "trillies" and polish them anew,
And don't forget my fan, dear, for it has
work to do.
The seashore time is coming,
When on the crowded beach
I must be designated
A seasonable peach!

Where moan the wild waves, saying the things they've often said,
I must be out for conquest, dear mother,
on the dead!
It's naught to you, dear mother, for you have got your man,
But I must make my lucky this season,
if I can!
So wake me early, mother,
While yet the shadows stalk;
I must be up to practise
A captivating walk!

I must get up on rules, dear, to start the season's race,
For time is fleet, dear mother, and I wax old apace;
So wake me early, mother, and don't neglect to set
Your clock for, say, four-thirty, lest you perchance forget
That gentle spring is on us,
And we must unfurl
The banner that announces
The newest Summer Girl!

Last, But Not Least.

Buffalo Commercial: Dr. W. N. McVicear, bishop coadjutor of Rhode Island, tells a funny experience at a recent visit to Boston. He saw some boys trotting down Tremont street and keeping close together. One of them kept saying "Chug! Chug! Chug!" and another occasionally said "Toot." The bishop asked what they were doing and was informed they were playing "automobile." The one saying "toot" the chauffeur, and the one saying nothing was a friend taking a ride. The auto moved on and the bishop noticed a fourth boy, running along about fifty feet behind the others, and asked him what he represented. "O, I'm the smell," was the perfectly serious answer.

A Page of Interest to All

Desert Tent Life for Women The Latest Cure for "Nerves."

Tent life on the desert calls for neither fussy frocks nor floating frills. Hence its charm.

Worn to a "frazzle," with all the complexities of an involved and highly convoluted civilization, bristling with pomps and vanities, the woman who elects to throw it all over and betake herself to primitive surroundings and primitive ways, until the tired nerves straighten out once more, and eyes that have forgotten how to sleep close themselves at sundown as naturally and sweetly as a babe's, will never feel that she has made a mismove. The only possible objection to the desert nerve cure is that the habit holds. Once a desert dweller there is always the call to come back.

Men have long appreciated the mental and physical healing that comes from an occasional creeping back to Nature's heart and becoming for the time being primitive man; but it is a new departure for women. That it has found favor and is rapidly becoming popularized is attested by the growing number of camps and camping outfits in our own Southwestern deserts, to say nothing of the nitra-fashionable element that has taken to the deserts of Egypt for the same object.

Not every woman cares to try the camp life alone. Usually it is mother and daughter, husband and wife, sisters, aunt and niece, or a patient and her nurse. Yet occasionally the desert dweller comes alone, and this from choice. "I was so nervously worn out," said a California woman, who spent four months alone last summer in a tiny camp near one of the Tusayan cliff villages in Arizona, "that I felt that I must get away from even my nearest and dearest or else go wild. My husband and friends offered to go with me, but I said 'No.' So they helped fit me out, and I went my way alone, with only my dog and my horse for company.

"On the long trail across the Painted Desert I had to have a guide, who also drove a small pack train with my camp supplies, but that was all. When I reached the Moqui village he helped the Indians put up my tent and two vathws, or brush sheds, one for me and one for my horse, and then he left me, and I have been here alone ever since. I am near enough to the Indians so that they can 'pack' the water up the trail to me every day from the springs a half mile below. I can watch the primitive village life from a distance, and all the time I have the most wonderful panorama in the world spread out before me.

"Afraid? Oh, dear me, no! I have been used to camping trips all my life. My husband and I have covered almost every part of the Territory at various times, spending months in the Grand Canyon country, so that the desert is home to me, and I am happier in it than in any place in the world."

The site of the little camp was indeed idyllic. Just on the edge of a high, rocky plateau it stood, the Painted Desert, with its magnificence of coloring stretching out for miles below until rimmed in the distance by the background of garnet, wine red, terra-cotta, sapphire blue, bright lilac or fire red mountains capped with snow or tipped along their serrated edge with a running line of gold. Across the desert marched the whirling phalanxes of sand storms, meeting, passing, fighting for precedence, lifting long columns of dust skyward, or turning half the heavens into a luminous red, while in the sky, from day to day, the mirage hung its wonderful picture gallery of dissolving views. "Small wonder," she declared, "that the Indians cling to these cliffcries of their fathers, although the government has tried repeatedly to induce them to migrate to the plains below, where their tiny cornfields lie spread out in green checker-like squares."

The tent was small. On the floor was a Navajo rug. A cot covered with the same soft rugs and plenty of pillows spoke of rest. On the walls were a number of the gay colored Moqui pitiques and lovely Navajo bride baskets. Outside, under the protection of the brush shed, were the camp stove, the Arizona ice box, which has no fee, but depends upon evaporation to keep things cool; the big olla, or water jar, of native pottery; a box with curtains for the paper ewer and wash basin, a cupboard for necessary dishes and cooking utensils (and these were but few), a trunk covered with another blanket, a home made table, a hammock and a chair. On a fork of the cottonwood post which formed one of the supports of the brush shed hung the saddle and its trappings, the lantern and a little shelf for a half dozen books.

Similar camps, some more elaborate, others less so, may be found all over the Territory. In the winter it is on the desert hemming in the Salt River Valley that the white tents spring up as rapidly as the fabled crop of dragon's teeth.

In the summer it is in the pine clad hills about Prescott, in the Grand Canyon region, about Flagstaff, and in this one case upon the Painted Desert itself.

The desert being no man's land, it is never necessary to ask permission to camp. Squatter sovereignty prevails. Most campers prefer to be near enough to a ranch or other base of supplies to insure a plentiful supply of water, milk and fruit. For other things distance does not matter so much, for desert roads are almost uniformly hard and level, and almost every one prefers to keep a horse. As horses, for saddle or driving or both, can be purchased from five dollars up (the "up" ones are better) this does not mean a great expense, especially as they nearly always can be sold when one gets ready to leave.

Tents may be large or small, with or without a fly, purchased or rented. Prices vary according to the season or the demand, but are seldom exorbitant. The absolute essentials for housekeeping are limited in the extreme. An old Arizona saying is to the effect that "the woman who can't keep house, given plenty of gunnysacks, baling wire, empty beer bottles and boxes, is no housekeeper," and is not so far wrong after all. The less one has in the way of household goods the less one has to look after, and if ons is going to hark back to primitive living superfluities must be lopped off. There is one thing, however, that most women cannot stand, and that is the desert fly. To escape from his attentions the tent must be screened. Fortunately there are no mosquitoes, and as the flies cease troubling at sundown the sleeper out of doors (and every one sleeps under the stars for the most part of the year) has nothing to disturb her repose unless she objects to the eerie "Ha! ha! ha!" of a prowling coyote, the plaintive call of the desert hoot owl or an occasional call from one of the wandering herds of Indian ponies feeding for their living on the desert.

If one longs for the fleshpots of Egypt to stay him in his desert sojourn, they are not difficult to obtain. Artificial ice may be had at all nearby villages, while in the larger cities the most delicious beef and mutton in the world, the entire roster of fruits indigenous to the tropics or temperate zones, the very apotheosis of melons and the choicest of groceries are to be had for prices not much in advance of those obtaining in New York. In the matter of meats they are indeed much less.

When it comes to clothing, oh, what joy for the women tired to death trying to decide what to put on! Here no choice is necessary. A short corduroy skirt for cold weather, and serge or brilliantine for hot, plenty of plain shirt waists that do not require ironing, a sweater and a warm steamer wrap for the cool evenings when one sits round the camp fire, high shoes, a sombrero for riding and a tall crowned Mexican hat for a desert walk in the sun, a Mexican belt that fastens with a cinch, plain underwear of gauze or with a cinch, plain underwear of gauze or with a cinch, plain underwear of gauze or

OFFERINGS AT THE DULUTH THEATERS

"Cleopatra" By the Melbourne MacDowell Company At the Lyceum All Next Week—"The Three Musketeers" and "Fanchon the Cricket" At the Metropolitan.

Duluth will be given the biggest offering within the capabilities of acting next week, when Melbourne MacDowell and Miss Florence Stone will appear as joint stars in Sardou's famous spectacular tragedy, "Antony and Cleopatra."

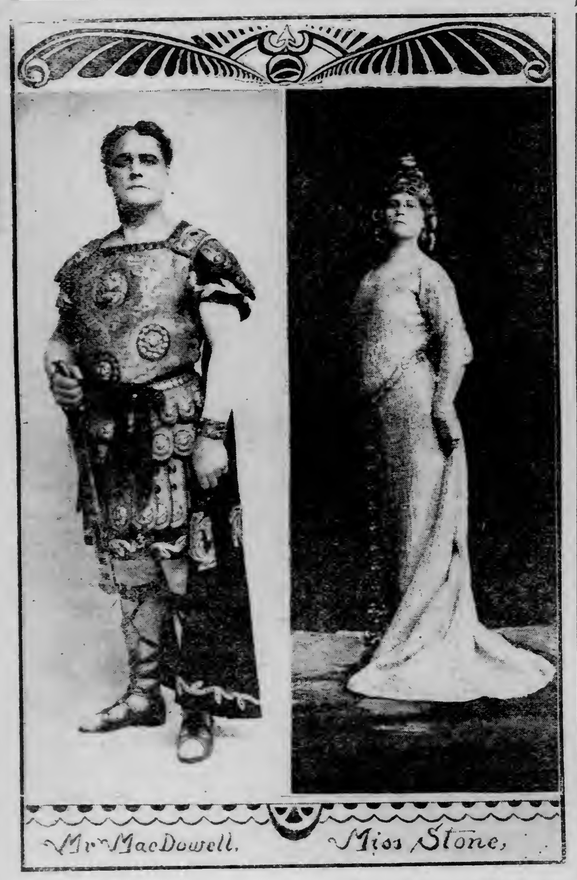

Mr. MacDowell returns to the theater much refreshed and improved by his vacation of the last week and a half, and his performance of Marc Antony may be expected to literally stir his audiences in response to his acting.

The production will be an immense one, with more than forty people on the stage, and the setting will be the same used in the big productions made by this company in all the large cities at prices vastly in excess of the summer prices charged at the Lyceum in Duluth where they are playing.

The return of Mr. MacDowell to the cast will be the event of the most tempting offer the company has made this season, and it will crown the success attained up to date.

The production of "Cleopatra" will be the interpretation of the late Fanny Davenport, who was Mrs. MacDowell in private life, and with whom Mr. MacDowell first scored his remarkable successes. His Marc Antony is one of the most finished pieces of acting on the stage today, and the manner of presentation of the play cannot be bettered, even with a far more expensive dressing.

Miss Florence Stone is not without laurels as Cleopatra, and has scored heavily in the part wherever she has been seen, and Eastern critics have given her the warmest words of praise, even though she is aspiring to comparison with one of America's greatest actresses, Fanny Davenport.

Mr. MacDowell. Miss Stone.

The two eminent actors, in character, who will present Sardou's "Anthony and Cleopatra" at the Lyceum Theater, beginnig Monday night, crowning their successful engagement with a week of Sardou, previous to offering other pretentious stock performances of popular plays.

The coming of "Cleopatra" will not alone be the event of the summer theatrical season, but it will be a long time before a more valuable entertainment appears in Duluth in the regular season. It is a magnificent spectacle, and a gorgeous exhibition, as a play, and a record-breaking week for attendance is a foregone conclusion.

The scenic portion of the play is not a small part, by any means, and has been constructed by a master. The first act shows the tribunal of the Romans at Tarsus, with a vista of the Cyndus river bearing upon it the luxuriant barge of the Egyptian queen. Thence the action shifts to the palace of the Ramesis, a beautiful spectacle, and from there the audience is transported to the celebrated Memphian temple. Here Cleopatra is descried in the foreground, seated upon a raised couch or dias, while the Nile stretches away in the distance. Moonlight illumines the nearer landscape, and beyond loom the outlines of ancient Egyptian temples.

The fourth act passes in a palace at Actium, fronting the shore of the Asiam gulf, where Cleopatra, hidden by a curtain, is forced to listen to a love scene between her paramour and his Roman wife.

Then comes the storm in the fifth act—a triumph of stage mechanism. In response to the appeals from royal supplication on the part of the sorceress, the skies darken, the thunder rolls and the lightning flashes, until the tempest is at its height. From this point the inevitable doom of the poor, impulsive Antony is worked out to a tragic and harrowing end.

The heavy acting scenes of the play are in the fourth, fifth and last acts, in which the story of the passionate love of the Lady of the Nile for the robust young Roman. The first offshoot from the quiet or gorgeous pleasantries of lover-like tranquility is when the queen conceals herself in Antony's palace and listens to herself being repudiated to Octavia Caesar, his bride, in no flattering terms. But she has faith in herself when Octavia departs. Things begin to get theatrical when she coldbloodedly commands her attendant Kephron to sacrifice himself, saying:

"Teach me how to kill this thought by killing thyself. Take thy death from my hands and prove to Antony that thou art no more to thy queen than a grain of sand in the desert, a drop of water in the Nile."

He takes the poisoned cup, but is prevented from drinking it by Antony with the words:

"Thou has justified thyself, thy faith. Antony asks thy pardon."

In the act of the storm Antony is angered at the scattering of his fleet, and things are looking badly for the lovers, and the storm only muddles things for Antony. His quietus comes in the next act, where he is stabbed by the Roman soldiers, when other lives are being contemplated. The queen then gathers her royal robes, crown and scepter and little asp about her and in all the panoply of her former state coaxes the little serpent to bite her, and the curtain descends upon her peaceful demise.

In this part Miss Stone is invested with a charm which, while portraying this merciless and tiger-like creature, softens the murderess and wanton into something of a woman who is likely to be loved by a brave Roman like Antony.

Fanny Daverport deemed this the greatest of all Sardou's plays, and said: It is essentially spectacular, and the action sweeps onward with an accelerating speed which ends in a whirlwind of passion and death, carrying with it the personality of the woman who ruined Egypt and gave Octavius the scepter of the world.

"The vices of the characters are apparent, but not hideous; the passion wins forgiveness by its greatness and sincerity; while the death of the guilty lovers gives rise to pity rather than condemnation for the woman and for the warrior who deserts his country, wife and honor for a foreign mistress."

"Cleopatra" will be played for a whole week, and the regular matinees will he given Wednesday and Saturday. It is the heaviest production made, and probably the most popular the company has in its repertoire, but it is not always blessed with theaters large enough to hold the magnificent staging that will be used in the Lyceum theater.

The MacDowell company will play at the Grand Opera house, Superior, tomorrow night, presenting "Alabama."

AT THE METROPOLITAN.

"The Three Musketeers" and "Fanchon, the Cricket."

"The Three Musketeers" and "Fanchionteh, the Crieket," will be the plays presented during the coming week by the Metropolitan Stock company. These are two plays that bid fair to take the city by storm, as they have always done when seen here. There have been many requests made for them. Ever since the present engagement opened, the management of the house has been announcing its desire to have patrons of the Metropolitan Opera house make suggestions and requests for plays, agreeing that if it were at all possible to secure the plays most generally asked for, they would be presented. Hundreds of requests have been sent in, most of them by letter, and a great many made in person by people who have seen the stock company play and have liked it.

"The Little Minister" and "The Burglar," played this week, were secured because of the many requests made to see them, and the result was a fine success. Next in order, according to the number of requests wade, were "The Three Musketeers" and "Fanchion." A number of other plays were asked for, some of which will be presented later, and some others that the management has not been able to secure as yet, but is making every effort to get.

It is no surprise that the "The Three Musketeers" was asked for so generally, and so universally popular is it. It is liked better than most dramas, and has stood the gales of dramatic life probably because of its hero and because it combines what is best in melodrama with lively and piercing wit. With all its melodrama it is not burdened with blood and thunder and strained situations, but is intense, brisk, keeps its audience in ssupense, and relieves them in startling climaxes. The hero does not get out of tight scrapes by somebody reaching him "in the nick of time," making a long speech and rescuing him. The hero in this drama gets out of his numerous corners by his own efforts and wit.

Those that attend the performance of "The Three Musketeers" will be treated to a display of excellent fencing, for those that take part in the fighting scenes are all good swordsmen. Mr. Forbes, who will play the part of D'Artagnan is skilled with the sword, and of all parts that he has played it is expected this will prove his greatest. He is graceful, all will agree, and carries himself in D'Artagnan, which he has played before many times, with a dash that fills the part and would make it the prominent one even were the piece not so written. Miss Marshall will play the part of Miladi.

Miss Louise Carter will be able to display her talents in "Fanchion, the Cricket," to better advantage than in any piece the company hag yet put on. Miss Carter will play the title role. She has placed herself in a strong position with the Duluth public since coming here, and has made herself a great favorite in every role she has assumed.

"Fanchion" is a pretty comedy of the highest type. It arouses feelings of delight, sympathy and love. Fanchion is a character that wins all hearts. The story tells of a feud between two families and the complicated results.

The Metropolitan Stock company is making a remarkable success. Every performance shows a gain over the last preceding one, and the growth is steady and shows that the company has reached the public.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Plays and Players During the Heated Spell.

New York, Aug. 1.—If ever a young woman on the stage had cause to thank her lucky star the same was Miss Eleanor Robson. When, a couple of years ago, she was playing in "Arizona," she never dreamed of the good fortune that was so soon to come to her. Of course, much of her accredited success has been due to her own ability, but fortunate circumstances have played a very prominent part in shaping her career. Signs of the trouble that was ultimately to separate Miss Viola Allen from the management of Liebler & Co. became apparant a year ago, and the managers cast about them for a star to take Miss Allen's place. It so happened that Miss Robson was next on the list, and no opportunity was lost to push her ahead. The culmination of these efforts is contained in the cabled announcement that Miss Robson is to support that great tragedian, Tommaso Salvini, when he appears here early next year. Miss Allen was Salvini's leading woman some eighteen years ago, and it would be interesting to know exactly what she thinks of the change. Meanwhile Miss Robson is in London, where is appears she has recently given a charity performance of the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet," supported by Gerald Lawrence. Her reception by the English public was most flattering for so young a woman. Before the Salvini tour begins Miss Robson will be seen here in the latitle play, "La Valliere." For some time it was a toss-up as to whether she would open in this or in "Agatha," which was written for her by Mrs. Henry Wall and Louis M. Parker. George Tyler has finally decided to give her the more imposing production of the French play, and she will be starred with all the enthusiasm that marked the career of Miss Allen.

There is a pretty how-to-do over Miss Marie Cahill and "Nancy Brown." When that piece was produced Don Arthur took Henry B. Sire in as a partner, but later shifted his allegiance to Miss Cahill, whom he married. Sire's nose was so out of point that he has appealed to the courts, alleging that Miss Cahill, as a bride, is by no means as profitable an attraction as she was when single, and he insists that a receiver be appointed to protect his interest: It is needless to say that neither Miss Cahill nor her hubby now walk on the same side of Broadway with Sire.

Miss Mazie Follett is an attractive young woman who has made the most of that fact in the front row of the chorus and among the show girls exploited by Weber and Flids, George W. Lederer and other managers, too numerous to mention. That she is preparing herself for higher theatrical flights is evidenced by the fact that this week she had herself photographed with a baby hippopotamus in her arms. She explained, with some show of coyness, that she had grown tired of pug dogs and kittens and felt that she yearned for something far more distinctive. She took a trip to the Zoo and tried to buy the baby hippo, but the hard-hearted superintendent declared that she could not unless the board of aldermen gave their consent, which they never would. Miss Follett, unenrolled her grief sufficiently to hie herself to a photographer and pose before his camera. Inasmuch as the baby hippo weighed twenty-seven pounds the minute he was born and has been growing at the rate of a pound a minute ever since, it is feared that Miss Follett has been dreaming.

Dexter Liebler is a true son of his father when it comes to stage matters. The Lieblers recently purchased a summer home at Riverside, Conn., and young Dexter, who is 13 or thereabouts, promptly proceeded to enthuse the youths of the neighborhood on matters connected with the footlights. The first thing his father knew was that Dexter had written an Indian play which he called "Hiawatha," and had been rehearsing every youngster he could impress in his service. Then he coolly informed his father that he expected him to furnish the costumes, and all work on the forthcoming Liebler production had to be stopped until the necessary Indian regalia and scenery was complete. The first performance will be given next week for the local charity.

Miss Fay Templeton keeps a unique scrap book. It is filled not altogether with clippings or notices regarding the comedienne and her work, but with notes and letters on various topics received from persons the world over. No matter what the source of the correspondence, if Miss Templeton feels interested in the note or its writer, into the scrap book it goes. It may be a flattering notice of her performance or a criticism—and the number of people who write personally to well-known actresses is astonishingly large—or it may be some peculiar request for assistance. The letter may be typewritten by some busy man or woman; or it may be penned by childish fingers. It may be the business like offer of a manager or a gushing note from some matinee girl. It may be written in fluent English or tangled up in a forlorn dialect, but it evidently reaches the same resting place, and this scrap book forms a remarkable record of Miss Templeton's professional life.

The spirit of the real old-time Harrigan farce music will dominate the auditorium of the Murray Hill during the presentation there of "Under Cover." George Braham has written the music, and he is a true possessor of the broad range talent which so characterized his father, Dave Braham, the composer of nearly all the old-time popular Harrigan music, and therefore one is not surprised to see on the newly issued "Under Cover" cover songs bearing such titles as "A Coon Will Follow the Band," "What's the Use?" "When Mamie, Sweet Mamie's a Bride," "The Fringe of Society," "Linderick's Running Yet," &c., &c., all songs to be sung in the Harrigan new play. There is a decided suggestion of a new 'Maggie Murphy's Home' among theso titles," says Isidore Witmark, who is getting out the music for "Under Cover," and, he added, "there is also the promise of a good old coon song caper of the true Harrigan type, such as the public has not seen for many a day."

Klaw & Erlanger are trying to arrango for the Rogers Brothers to appear at the Knickerbocker Theater, and for Nat Goodwin to open the New Amsterdam. The completion of the New Amsterdam has been delayed, and it is not certain that Mr. Goodwin will be willing to postpone the beginning of his season.

"The Shogun" is the name of the new musical comedy that George Ade and Gustav Luders have written for Henry W. Savage, and which will be seen in New York next season. The scenes are laid in Cuba, where the Shogun is a person of much importance.

The great Lafayette has broken entirely away from vaudeville. His show, in which he stars himself, will be a "mystery" with a musical adjunct, a chorus, and, after this season's tour of America, he will return to his own Paris and other foreign capitals.

Miss Cecilia Loftus got back to town last week and left the next day to take four week's vacation. She will spend most of it at Deal Beach, where she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sothern. "I am just tired out," she said, "for I have worked steadily for eleven months without a break. You can see how it is, I opened on the other side with Sir Henry Irving, playing Marguerite in his production of 'Faust,' and then I set sail for this country in December. I can't call those seven days at sea a vacation in any sense, because the sea is a restless affair in December, and when I wasn't praying for death in my bunk I was being buffeted about on deck. Then I was hurried off to Pittsburg, where on the day of my arrival I played Ophelia to Mr. Sothern's Hamlet. From that night I have had no rest, for we played steadily to the coast in 'Hamlet' and 'If I Were King,' closing in Duluth last Saturday, and then I had the journey to New York."

Messrs. Hunter and Bradford went into management on their own account this summer and put a stock company into Worcester, Mass. They were making money, enough of it to lead taem into making a production on their own account, and Monday night saw the first performance of "E Pluribus Unum," a new comedy written by Leo Ditrichstein. It made quite a hit, especially with several New York managers, who made the trip from this city, and it is very probable that it will be seen here during the coming season.

Miss Adelaide Manola has become an actress despite the fond hopes of her mother, Marian Manola, who, in order to keep her off the stage, put her in an Eastern convent. Some six years ago, however, Marian Manola and Jack Mason, then her husband, were about to appear in a Chicago house in a vaudeville sketch which was so promising that some local organization had contracted for the entire house at the first performance. Unfortunately that day Miss Manola was taken seriously ill, and one hour later Miss Adelaide happened in at the hotel heartily tired of convent life. Mason was struck by the marked resemblance to her mother in the girl's face and figure, and suggested that she try the role for that one night. She went through it without a break, and so well was both she and the play received that the Chicago papers on the following morning were unanimous in declaring that her work showed "the genius of experience." The story of the substitution I have not told until now, but it settled the question of convent life on Miss Adelaide, and she has finaly adopted the stage as her profession.

Already the air is full of openings for next season. Rehearsals are going on in almost every theater in town, and the first house to open its doors will be the Third avenue on Aug. 1, with "The Game of Life;" the second will be the Academy of Music, on Aug. 6, with "The Christian," and the Fourteenth Street Theater will follow ten days later. James T. Powers wil open the Broadway in "A Princess of Kensington" on Aug. 31, and George W. Lederer will produce "My Lady Lola" at the Victoria on the same evening. The Weber and Fields company have received orders to report for rehearsals on Aug. 8, and Wille Collier's company will assemble to begin work on "Personal" at the Bijou five days earlier The West End Theater, now under Weber and Field's control, will open on Aug. 22 with "A Gentleman of France."

ROMANCE OF A CORSET

By Belle Maniates.

(Copyright 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Life was certainly roseate hued to the Willets. Their income, health and habits were all defined by tae word "good." There had been naught to mar in their 730 days of wedded bliss. Neither had there been the slightest suggestion of the gay Lothario in Paul Willets. His character was speechless. His wife was convinced of this fact and yet he could not have quite attained the standard of Caesar's wife in her eyes. For one day she was consumed by a fierce fire of inordinate jealousy.

It happened in this wise. Willets had been to Chicago on a business trip for his firm. When he returned to his home city he had gone direct to his office and had sent his dress suit case to the house. After the manner of wifely wives Mrs. Willets unpacked her husband's belongings, remarking upon the extraordinary order with which they had been folded and arranged.

Suddenly her eyes grew big and a little hectic spot appeared in each cheek. At the bottom of the suit case was a pair of white, silk, lace-trimmed, monogram-embroidered corsets that exhaled a faint odor of violets and a decided air of adventure.

After much gnashing of teeth, raging of thoughts and violent language her fenzy expended itself, leaving her in a cold, hard, let-down frame of mind and spirits. Willets hurried home anxious to greet his sweet little wife. To his bewilderment she did not respond to his affectionate overtures, but with coldwave manner and tone displayed the corsets.

In vain Willets denied, expostulated and entreated. Her only rejoinder was Othello-like. "The corsets!" He could not explain for he had no explanation. He had never seen the corsets before and he had not the slightest idea how they had come in his luggage. His denials made not the slightest impression upon his wife. Her theory was that his inamorata, the wearer of the fatal corsets—the beautiful corsets whose like Mrs. Willets had never seen nor expected to possess—there was the sting!—had concealed them in a moment of triumph among his effects.

Out raged and relenting she took up her abode with her mother and commenced "proceedings."

Meantime Willets, injured, sullen and discouraged, sought his house and arranged for an exchange of routes with the foreign buyer. It was not until the second day out that he aroused himself from his lethargic listlessness sufficiently to open the daily papers that he had thrust into his pocket the night he left home.

Startling, sickening and sensational headlines greeted his vision. His name, his wife's, the name of a second-rate or obscure actress and that disastrous word, "corsets," all danced before his shocked, surprised eyes. It was some time before he could read comprehendingly. Then he was informed that his wife had begun suit for a divorce; that on January 29th he (Willets) had occupied room 54 at a Chicago hotel. On the same date the same room had also been assigned to an actress, Olive D'Arbigny; that the said Olive D'Arbigny had been confronted by the wronged wife and the monogram corsets. Calmly and unblushingly the actress had owned to the ownership of the corsets and the occupancy of Room 54.

The paper further stated that the the guilt-stricken husband had ignominiously fled. Paul Willets was a man of action, but there was nothing for him now to do but to pace the decks and vow vengeance on Olive D'Arbigny—whoever she might be, the papers, the hotel attaches and the corsets.

Immediately upon setting foot on foreign soil he cabled his house that he would return next boat. After his return to St. Louis he learned that his wife's suit for divorce would be called the next week. She had sued on the grounds of faithlessness and desertion. He engaged a lawyer who had interviews with the hotel people and Olive D'Arbingy, who was playing night after night to well-filled houses. Se had cancelled her engagements elsewhere in order to play in this city where the Willets were so well known. On the night after the scandal had been aired in the papers the theater where Miss D'Arbigny was to appear was crowded. Hitherto unknown, she had now reached success at one leap and was discovered to be talented as well as beautiful.

An enterprising corset factory firm had paid Miss D'Arbigny a fabulous price to copy the design and style of her corset and had named it the Olive.

The day set for the hearing of the divorce case arrived and the courtroom was as well patronized as the theater in which Miss D'Arbigny played.

Mrs. Willets, surrounded and supported by sympathetic relatives and friends, wore an air of excitement and triumph. The entrance of Paul Willets, tall, pale, grave and composed, accompanied by his lawyer, caused a sensation. It was supposed that he was still in retreat.

Mrs. Willets' heart beat still faster when the once beloved form of her lord and master came into her vision and her unstable, woman's heart would have weakened but a chorus of attending friends whispered "the brazen wretch," and again she fortified herself by a sense of her wrongs.

First came the testimony of Mrs. Willets, given in a still, small voice. She related the facts of her discovery of the corsets while unpacking her husband's luggage and his failure to account for their presence; of her obtaining from the Chicago hotel register the name of the woman who had occupied Room 54; of her call upon that woman, who had admitted the fact and demanded the return of the corsets.

The clerk with the register was introduced in evidence corroborating her statements.

Then—and all eyes were eager—Miss D'Arbigny was called. Graceful and at ease she raised demure, beautiful eyes to the questioning attorney and frankly admitted that she had occupied Room 54, Hotel ——, on the day of January 29th.

The famous corsets, marked "Exhibit A," were produced and there was a craning of feminine necks to see this dainty, damaging piece of evidence. She identified them as hers and said that she had them with her in aforesaid room on aforesaid day.

Then Mrs. Willets' side rested and the defense had their innings. The senior member of the firm with which Mr. Willets was connected took the stand, testifying to the good character, etc., of the defendant and to the fact that he had been sent to Chicago on the 29th day of January, but had been recalled to St. Louis by telegram soon after his arrival in the former city.

Then the hotel clerk, who was personally acquainted with defendant, swore that Willets arrived at 11 o'clock on the forenoon of the 29th of January and had been assigned to Room 54, which had just been vacated by Miss D'Arbigny, who left in a huff because the bellboy hadn't been Johnny on the spot when she rang. He further swore that defendant had gone to his room and had come into the office an hour later. While in the office he was handed a dispatch. Defendant read it and after consulting his watch announced that he had just time to catch his train home. Defendant then called a porter and gave him a dollar and asked him to pack his things and send them at once to the station.

This testimony, which could not be shaken, was the first turn of the tide in favor of Willets.

Then Miss D'Arbigny was recalled and asked if she were acquainted with the defendant. After bestowing an amused but friendly scrutiny upon Willets she coolly announced that she had never seen him before.

Profound sensation.

Further examination elicited that she had arrived at the hotel early in the morning of January 29th, had unpacked most of her baggage, but the service was so poor she had repacked and gone to another hotel at about ten o'clock a. m. Later she had missed her pet corset, made after her own design. She had inquired at the first hotel where she had stopped, but a search in Room 54 failed to reveal her property and she had not been at all sure that she had left them there.

When asked why this statement and explanation had not come sooner and why she had given Mrs. Willets the impression she had, she frankly acknowledged that she had met with no success as an actress on this her first season and had failed to win recognition from theater-going people. She realized that she needed advertising. She had no jewels to lose; so when a jealous woman of social prominence had come into her presence frantically waving her lost and mourned-for corsets, she had an eye to business and made the most of the adventure.

Willets' triumph and vindication were cinched by the testimony of the next witness, the porter of the hotel, who stated that defendant gave him a dollar and directed him to pack his things, which he did. That in the wardrobe of Room 54 he had found a corset and supposing it to be the property of defendant had placed it in his suit case.

Undivorced, crushed and remorseful, Mrs. Willets left the courtroom. She cast a timid, entreating glance at Paul Willets, but further deponent sayeth not.

THE AUGUST MAGAZINES

The midsummer holiday Century is characterized by articles on unknown regions, by a varied personal interest and by an appeal to artistic taste, both in color work and in black and white. The most out-of-the-way articles are "New Light on Lhasa, the Forbidden City," with unpublished photographs, taken by a Kalmuk pilgrim which Mr. Rockhill, the Tibetan traveler, in a prefatory note, pronounces "of extraordinary interest, and "An Artist in the Antarctic," by F. W. Stokes, whose pictures are the first news in color from that still mysterious region. Other outdoor subjects are Yellowstone Park ("A Place of Marvels") by Ray Stannard Baker in "The Great Northwest" series, illustrated by Blumenschein, and "An English Game Park," with text and pictures (antelope, rabbits and foreign animals) by the artists, Gleeson and Knight. The personal articles comprise letters of Walter Scott, recounting his "Later Days," with much variety of detail; "Chapters From a Diplomatic Life," reminiscences of people and events by Andrew D. White, and "Wesley's Days of Triumph," a pen portrait of this great preacher and interesting character, by Professor Winchester, supplemented by an editorial article, "Wanted: Another Wesley."

* * *

Pearson's Magazine for August has even more than the usual amount of clever fiction. There are eleven bright short stories—"The Ghost of Guadalupe," by Gen. Charles King; "Uncle Benny's Sedative," by Elizabeth A. Moore; "How Don Q. Outwitted Don Luis," by K. and Hesketh Prichard; "The Black Hands," by Albert Bigelow Paine; "Cupid in the Elevator," by Carroll Watson Rankin; "Heroes Both," by Walter E. Grogan; "Such Stuff As Dreams Are Made On," by Gisela Dittrick Britt; "A Powerful Blend," by Claudia Ashton; "The Story of the Retired Car Conductor," one of the tales of the Pinkerton's; "A San Francisco Night's Entertainment," "The Adventures of the Persian Prince," by R. E. Venegle, and "The Squire's Ride," by E. L. Ross; also Cyrus Townsend Brady's fascinating serial—"Sir Henry Morgan—Buccaneer."

The August number of The Smart Set is the best yet published of that most successful magazine. The total of its contents—in story, poem, essay, humor—is admirable both for its literary worth and for its interest, while the variety offers sufficient for the best taste of every reader. Mrs. Burton Harrison contributes the novelette, "Sylvia's Husband," which is perhaps the most fascinating piece of fiction this author has written. The story is delightful, absorbing and done with peculiar charm. Among the short stories of the number is one by Gertrude Atherton, "The Bell in the Fog," which is a soul-study of profound power. In wholly different vein is "The Wire-Tappers," by Arthur Stringer, stirring, astonishing, unique. Other notable stories are contributed by James Branch Cabell, G. B. Burgin, Ella W. Peattie, Anne O'Hagan, Prince Vladimir Vanlatsky and Theodosia Garrison.

American cities presetn the most remarkable feature of the rapid growth of this continent in population and riches. There has been nothing like it in the whole previous history of the world. The stories of Terre Haute, Columbus, Youngstown and Harrisburg, briefly told and fully illustrated in the National Magazine for August, drive this fact home in the mind of even the least observant. These articles tell how these cities began, what they are and what they are doing. Charles Ferguson's article on "The Rise of Free Cities Under the New Industrial Order," in the same number, makes clear the larger meanings of this rapid city growth in America. The August National contains also six brilliant short stories, a dozen illustrated articles on various phases of American life, and the usual chatty departments, with numerous illustrations.

Lippincott's Magazine for Augus provides a feast of fiction for idle days. The opening novel, by Elizabeth Duer, is called "The Green Dragon," and possesses all the qualities desirable in a magazine novel. There is not a dull paragraph in it. Through an opportune spill out of his automobile the "Greek type" chauffeur is cast upon the hospitality of an engaging widow, who sees it her duty to take him in and do for his broken hip-bone until it mends. By that time lots of unexpected things happen, not the least of them being a bit of burglary which is specially thrilling in the telling. Needless to say, the end is love. Marion Harland outdoes herself in the powerful story, called "The Seventeenth of August, 1844." The title smacks of history, but the pathetic tale is pure fiction of the most appealing sort. An adventure story by William Le Queux, called "The Man With the Black Spectacles," is a rousing good one about a royal disguise and what comes of it.

The fiction number of McClure's for August is a triumph of editorial selection, and a clear case of the survival of the exceptionally fit. The beautiful cover showing a still lake landscape viewed from a cool white portico of marble pillars is an invitation not to be resisted. The leader is a delightful little story of child life by May Kelsey Champion. "The Method of Charles Stuart," with illustrations in color by Jessie Wilcox Smith, of exquisite charm and feeling. Then follows an altogether novel brace of love stories by Mary R. S. Andrews, called "Two Sides of a street," the idea of which is that a husband awaits the heroine on either side of Fifth avenue. To cross or not to cross is the question. Both stories are told as if they were true, and to the reader is left the choice.

The fiction number of Leslie's Monthly has a remarkable list of authors on its cover: Irving Bacheller, Henry Harland, John Luther Long, Howard Pyle, Roy Rolfe Gilson, Harry Stillwell Edwards, David Belasco, Marion Hill and Judge Shute, among others. There are stories of all kinds, and of all varieties of feeling, ranging from the delicate sentiment of Harlan and Gilson to the strong, verile feeling of John Luther Long's story, which is really a novel in disguise, and from the quaint humor of Bacheller's new stories of Eben Holden to the jubilant fun of Judge Shute's "Real Boys," and the broad farce of Edward's darkey story and Marion Hill's picture of modern kindergarten methods.

The Great Round World has changed its name to the Week's Progress. The new name was selected as the best from more than 3000 that were submitted in competition by readers of the magazine. Strangely enough, the name was sent in by only one person, Esther T. Bergland, of Moline, Ill., to whom the Wilson company, publishers of the Week's Progress, have awarded $250. Small awards were made to several others whose name suggestions, although not altogether acceptable, contained valuable points. The magazine, which is a weekly news journal of high merit, has adopted a new dress of type. The new cover design is a striking conception, beautifully symbolic of the character and aims of the publication.

Country Life in America for August is a most refreshing number. The cover design and double page represents a most attractive marble swimming pool which makes one long to go a-swimming. "The Race for the America's Cup" is an excellent historical and comprehensive article with thrilling illustrations. "The Fox Terrier" is of exceptional interest to dog fanciers. "Gardening With Thomas" is a most amusing story of a gardener from the "owld country" and practical withal. "Angora Goats as a Source of Profit" gives the successful experiences of nine practical people from every quarter of the Union. The photograpns are unique and unusually beautiful even for Country Life. "A Suburban Place of Four Acres," which describes a Brookline home with the landscape art of a great estate with exquisite photographs, has many practical hints; "The Pleasure of a Private Swimming Pool," by Dr. Horace Jayne, beautifully illustrated by photographs of his own exquisitely appointed marble pool, tells how to duplicate this luxury.

Ainslee's for August appears in a cover which well sustains the artistic standard of the series which has preceded it. William Gordon-Perez is the author of the novel, entitled "An Unwilling Guest," and, though a new contributor, he has taken a high position in this story among the writers of the long short-story. We have had romances of the South American revolution, and we have had society novels, but this is the first one that has attempted a combination of the two; and the author has succeeded in producing a thoroughly interesting and dramatic story, which is also, and above all, fresh and ingenious. H. B. Marriott Watson, author of "Heart of Miranda," etc., has a bright, picquant story of the first achievements of a young debutante in "Lady Molly Calverly." The delightful style and cheerful good nature that makes "The Red House" so charming pervades E. Nesbit's story, "The Force of Habit." Ainslee's readers who remember "The Lie Absolute," in a late number, will eagerly welcome this new story of this gifted writer.

The August number of the Woman's Home Companion begins with a keen article by William Allen White, on "The Typical American Girl." There is a wealth of short stories by such writers as Eden Phillpotts, W. L. Alden, Gelett Burgess, Richard Stillman Powell, Elliott Flower and Frederick M. Smith. "The Philanthropic Work of the Roman Catholic Church" is treated of by the Rev. John Talbot Smith. The departments are given over to summer matter. Mrs. Herrick tells how to give a high tea; the fashions are devoted to the vacation girl, and the editor has a department of reviews of books for summer reading. Altogether the number is especially suited for summer holidays. Published by the Crowell Publishing company, Springfield, Ohio; $1.0 a year; 10 cents a copy.

The August World's Work is the annual educational number containing a remarkable series of articles treating concretely the most important educational problems of the day. Booker T. Washington, in his lavishly illustrated article on "The Sucessful Training of the Negro," tells for the first time the results of his work at Tuskegee institute. President Eliot, of Harvard, explains "The New efinition of the Cultivated Man," President Hyde, of Bowdoin, recounts "The Educational Progress of the Year," and President Taylor, of Vassar, shows what is being done in his field of work in "The Education of Women."

The Popular Science Monthly for August contains the following articles: "Modern Views of Matter," by Sir Oliver Lodge; "The Training of a Physician," by President David Starr Jordan; "American Titles and Distinctions," by Professor W. Le Conte Stevens; "The Bird Rookeries on the Island of Laysan," by Professor C. C. Nutting; "Bacteria in Modern Economic Agriculture," by Dr. Albert Schneider; "The Story of English Education," by J. E. G. de Montmorency; "The Declining Birth Rate and Its Cause," by Dr. Frederick A. Bushee; "Hertzian Wave Wireless Telegraphy," by Professor J. A. leming; "The Problem of the College;" "The British Antarctic Expedition."

When the first news of the pope's serious illness was received in this country, the August forms of Everyboy's Magazine were already on the press. The publishers realizing that all live Americans would be interested in knowing the name of the pope's successor, stopped the presses that were running on the August number, worked photo-engravers, compositors and electrotypers overtime, got to press in record time with the distinguished article "The Pope's Successor," by F. Marion Crawford, ran the presses night and day, worked the bindery force until 12 o'clock every night, and made complete deliveries to their distributing agents two days ahead of the usual time, issuing the magazine on July 18, instead of July 20, the usual day of issue. The illustrations are superb, the article is authoritative and convincing. The publishers of Everybody's Magazine are to be congratulated upon their achievement, but especially upon the alertness and enterprise which made it possible.

The August number of the Housekeeper is up to its usual standard of excellency and comprises a number of especial features which are exceptionally interesting. "Woman's Work at the World's Fair," by Ruby Danenbaum, is a timely article on a subject, which is interesting the whole country at this time, and the illustrations to this article make the regular center page illustrative features of the magazine. Jassie Ackermann tells of her "Visit to an Oddest Tribe in the World," and "The Three Girls in Paris" are having some interesting experiences.

A bit of inside history concerning Bismarck appears in Harper's Magazine for August, written by Henri de Blowitz, the late world-famous correspondent of the London Times. M. de Blowitz has told the real facts regarding Bismarck's wrath when he found that his resignation was actually accepted by the young Emperor William. The feelings of Princess Bismarck were also so irritated that when a portrait of the kaiser arrived at a souvenir of the emperor to Bismarck she said, "Let it be taken to Friedrichsruh and placed in the stable." M. de Blowitz recounts how he came into possession of these and other notable facts relative to the iron chancellor, and how a journalist of position frequently finds himself between the upper and nether millstone in diplomatic affairs.

Among the notable features of the Argonaut for July 27 are: "The Capture of the Colonel: A Story of San Francisco," by Marguerite Stabler; "The Beoutiful Aurelias," a witty review of Hugues le Roux's book on America, by Geraldine Bonner; "Electing a New Pope," and a criticism of the performances at Fischer's theater, the Orpheum, and the Columbia theater, by Josephine Hart Phelps.

The August Atlantic is largely a fiction number for summer and leisurely reading. It opens with a striking novelette by Margaret Sherwood, entitled "Daphne," which presents an original and delightful love story portrayed with great skill and charm. Shorter complete stories are Lafcadio Hearn's fascinating Japanese tale, "Mimi-Nashi-Hoichi;" Esther Tiffany's "Anna Mareea," an entertaining sequel to her "The Countess of Pondsville Center," recently published in the Atlantic; Alexander Black's amusing "The Widder," and R. E. Young's "The Trail of the Tangler," the latest and best of the Henderson stories.

The August 10 Story Book is now on the stands. For summer reading this popular little magazine cannot be excelled. A particularly smart list of writers appears this month, the most conspicuous names being George Ade, Martha McCulloch Williams, H. S. Canfield, William Hamilton Osborne and Edgar Welton Cooley. The stories are all decidedly clever—not a slow one in the issue. These are busy days for George Ade, but nevertheless his story, "Shiner's Diplomacy," proves that he can do more than one thing at a time, and do all things well. It is a thoroughly characteristic conceit. "Outwitting the Major," by Martha McCulloch Williams, has a most ingenious plot, and is in her best vein.

The Four-Track News for August is the largest number of that magazine yet issued, and contains sixteen articles specially written for this magazine, together with the usual departments, a large number of short poems, humorous extracts, "Little Histories," etc. The frontispiece is a striking picture of "Shamrock III;" a full-page picture of "The Reliance" being another feature of this number. The first article is an account of the home life of Sir Thomas Lipton, entitled "The Master of the Shamrock;" Earl W. Mayo contributes one of his readable articles, "On Gay Coney Island;" "An Island in the Northland" is a description of Mackinac, by Kathleen L. Greig; "A Famous Old House," by L. K. Becker, briefly tells the story of the Jumel mansion; "The Footprints of Columbus in Spain," by Frederick A. Ober, is an intensely interesting article containing much that is new; "Byways of Niagara," by Helen Rathbun Parry, impresses upon one the fact that the whole story of that remarkable region is not confined to the cataract.

The August number of What to Eat, that dainty, entertaining monthly magazine that is making such a winning fight against food adulteration and fraud, presents an unusually varied and interesting table of contents. It opens with an unusually interesting contribution from Dr. Felix L. Oswald, entitled "Traveling Temptations," being his twelfth paper in the series "Dietetic Health Hints." Genie Rosenfeld writes on New York as a summer resort, giving an amusing account of the poor stay-at-home husbands. Among the entertainments are "Battles of the United States," by Elizabeth Pegram Lumpkin; "A Sunset Wedding," "A Morning Porch Party," and "A Ragtime Musicale," all by Laura A. Smith; "Paper Parties," by Eva R. Gaillard, and "A Hungarian Dinner." Margaret Rayburn's New York Letter gives the newest fads and fancies of Gotham.

The contents of the August magazine number of the Outlook are varied, and include a group of articles on educational topics (this is also the Outlook's special educational number), the most noteworthy of which is, perhaps, that on "Recent College Architecture," by Professor A. D. F. Hamlin, of Columbia university, with many interesting original drawings. Other special features are: A portrait of the late pope (from a painting declared by Leo himself to be the best portrait ever made of him), and one of President Finley, the newly-chosen head of the college of the city of New York; "The National Exposition in Japan," by Dr. W. E. Griffs, with many photographic reproductions of scenes in the great Osaki fair, now going on; "The Moravians and Their Festival," by Ernest Hamlin Abbott, a readable account of the quaint customs of the Pennsylvania Moravians, and of the nature and character of the famous Bach festival.

The anonymous "Reminiscences of an Interviewer" in the Reader for August treat of Sarah Bernhardt and Eleanora Duse, and a new and intimate impression is given of these two famous women. Whoever the author of this series of articles may be, he or she can be credited with aving met all the dramatic, literary and political celebrities of the time, and is writing about them with unfailing entertainment. One of thes trongest features of the varied contents of this numberis "Letters From Editors to a Literary Aspirant," in which the writer points out, with the help of quotations form letters in his possession, the great help and encouragement that was offered to him, an unknown "literary aspirant," by well-known editors. So much has been written of the indifference and selfishness of editors that this well-written article should be read by the whole army of literary aspirants. "The Fortunes of Fifi," by Molly Elliot Seawell is continued with a sixteen-page installment.

The Pilgrim for August appears in a striking cover from a design by W. H. D. Koerner. Indeed, it is not too much to say that no summer issue of an American magazine ever was more charmingly garbed. The first article is entitled, "The Great White Shepherd of Rome," it being an interview with Pope Leo obtained not long since, an added interest in which is due to the fact that it is the only interview ever afforded a journalist by the aged pontiff. A second article of decided interest is by Henry D. Lloyd, noted as sociologist and student of economics, who writes of "The Public and the Coal Question." The issue contains several illustrated articles of a lighter nature.

Outing for August is a mid-summer number. The breath of the woods is in the opening article and pictures, "Going to the Woods," by Leonidas Hubbard, Jr., and the smell of the sea in A. J. Kenealy's story of "Small Boat Sailing;" Emery Pottle's sketch, "An Island Summer," and Robert Dunn's characterization of the Atlantic summer shore, the last illustrated by some striking drawings by Henry McCarter, who also designed the attractive seashore cover of this number. There are, also, a practical description of how best to build seaside lodges, by E. E. Holman, and a study by John R. Spears, of "The Usefulness of the America's Cup Races." Adventure characterizes Ralph Paine's story of filibustering off the Cuban coast before the war with Spain; Robert Hichens' weird Eastern story, "Desert Air," and "The Florida Fast Mail, A. D. 1835." Photographs full of human interest illustrate Vance Thompson's story of "Paris Race Courses" and "The Fisherman of Gloucester," by Victor Slocum. People interested in nature-study will enjoy L. W. Brownell's "Mid-Summer Musicians;" fishermen and their wives will like "Fishing a Trout Stream," by W. C. Harris, and "Angling, as Viewed by an Angler's Wife," by Justina Johnson. Those who like to be amused will enjoy "Some Snakes I Have Known," by W. S. Dunbar, and everyone will read Edwyn Sandy's "Woodcock Philosophy."

The Review of Reviews is unequalled among monthly periodicals in the freshness and range of the topics which it "covers" every thirty days. In the August number, for instance, we have a most interesting character sketch of the late pope from the pen of that stalwart English Protestant, W. T. Stead, while the art of the eccentric James McNeill Whistler, who died ssuddenly on July 17, is represented by reproductions of several of his most characteristic works, with a biographical sketch by Ernest Knaufft; Mr. Wolf von Schierbrand writes on the results of the recent German elections, with especial reference to the gains of the Socialists, and Othon Guerlac contributes a character sketch of the Fhench Socialist leader, M. Jaures.

The fiction number of Scribner's magazine has become an institution. For fourteen years it has appeared every August with its wealth of beautiful illustration, much of it in color; its short stories by famous writers, and the first remarkable stories of entirely unknown writers, who soon became famous. The fiction number this year is a notable successor in this series. As the earliest attempts at color printing in an American magazine appeared here, it is fitting that the best modern color pictures should adorn this number. They are of great variety in method and design. The cover is an elaborate and beautiful reproduction of a design by A. E. Foringer. The frontispiece, by Walter Appleton Clark, (who illustrates this and succeeding numbers, of Mrs. Wharton's serial, "Sanctuary,") is a charming drawing in a delicate color scheme of grays and mauve. Frank Brangwyn, the eminent British marine artist, has four full-page paintings of a sea-fight in the eighteenth century. These are reproduced in color. Drawings by Child and J. J. Gould are reproduced in tint. Altogether this number is artistically one of the most sumptuous produced by this magazine.

The change, begun in the July number, of enlarging the range and interest of Gunton's magazine, will be found carried to a farther point in the August issue. There have been included a number of articles of such remarkable literary interest and charm as would of themselves make this number noteworthy. The range of topic and interest runs from the great crisis in the far East, precipitated by the encroachmen of Russia on China, to the recent completion of the American Pacific cable; and, in the literary numbers, from a treatment of an American Aristocracy to The "Boy in Fiction, and the quaint festival of the gardeners of old St. Cloud, France.

Harper's Weekly for Aug. 1 contains an illustrated article describing a new mono-railroad, to be built between Manchester and Liverpool, England, which will carry passengers at a rate over 100 miles an hour, and with greater safety and comfort than is possible on the express trains of today. In the system to be used the engine and cars will rest upon a single rail, which is about half-way from the oflor to the top of the car. By arranging the seats back to back, like a jaunting-car, the construction is such that each of the carriages straddles the rail and extends to trucks on either side below the floor. On these trucks are set wheels which lie horizontally and run on the outside of two other rails. They thus act as steadiers, and admit of very high velocity with safety, and make abrupt curves possible. The plan is to run an engine and one car every ten minutes, and the probability is that in time, for a radius of 100 miles around a large city, people can get in and out each day to their business within an hour.

An unusual number of pictures of extraordinary excellence make the choice of the leading article in the August New England magazine a difficult one. Perhaps it should be accorded, however, to Hanscom Packard's description of Moosehead Lake and its Gibraltar-like headland, Mt. Kineo, with its dozen fine views of Maine woods and mountains that frame this sheet of blue at the edge of the great northern wilderness. The number opens with an account of Beacon Hill and its various elevations from the time before its summit was reduced to its present moderate height. There are pictures of the state house, without and within, of the grounds and the monuments which adorn them. Those of the Bulfinch front, looking up Park street, from near the Union club, and of the Shaw monument, are particularly good and quite unusual.

The Burr McIntosh Monthly continues to surprise and delight its steadily growing circle of friends. This unique publication, different from all others, has already scored so great a success that the August number will be certain to increase. There is a most attractive list of reproductions, including Blanche Powell Todd, a well-known stage beauty, as a "Bathing Girl;" Mary Mannering, "Katey" Cheetham, Miss Ashley, Elsie Leslie, Ethel Barrymore, Belle Harper, Ade Herne, Mrs. Gilbert, Yoonnee de Treville, Alyce Kee-Nan, John Drew, "Dickie' Outcalt and others. Then there are fine pictures of the Yale-Harvard race, camp scenes in the Adirondacks, the Lake Forest horse show, pole contests, etc. It is a great number, and Mr. McIntosh has reason to feel proud of it.

The Metropolitan Magazine for August, in a new summer dress, refined, artistic and wholly pleasing, is a notable issue. This is the first number appearing under the new management, and is, for the most part, a magazine of illustrated fiction. There are fourteen short stories, all by well-known authors, and all strongly human in motive and character. Among the contributors to the August Metropolitan are Maurice Hewlett, (best known, perhaps, as the author of "The Forest Lovers"), whose latest story, "The Queen's Quair," began its serial appearance in the last issue; Charles G. D. Roberts, Henry Harrison Lewis, Henry Tyrell, W. A. Fraser, Charles B. Stover, Carolyn Wells, H. B. Marriott Watson, William Dean Howells, Clinton Scollard and many others of literary note. The illustrations, of which there are fifty, are superb works of art. Published by the Metropolitan Magazine company, New York.

BRIBERY ALLEGED.

Governor La Follette of Wisconsin Makes Charges.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 1.—Strong and direct charges of attempted bribery in connection with the legislatwre of 1901 were made by Governor La Follette in his Chatauqua speech before the Monona assembly, in this city.

The remarks were not included in the prepared address of the governor, but were gleaned from the stenographic report of the governor's speech. No attempt was made to declare that the fact of the successful use of money was capable of proof. The governor said:

"Bribery is a crime in the dark. There is the bribe giver and the bribe taker. It is a crime difficult to prove. No one will confess himself willingly into the penitentiary. That money was used no one who watched the session can doubt.

"That money was offered and refused is susceptible of proof. But you can understand with what reluctance men in public life are willing to come forward and offer their testimony of even that. They know they will be pursued by all the agencies in the power of these great and rich corporations."

The Tyfold Collar

The picture shows how the collar is cut out on each side to allow for adjusting a neck tie without springing the collar open. The collar comes close together in front, it keeps the tie in place and you don't see the cut-out part. Besides the tie is retained just over the button, which is also kept out of sight. Your summer comfort will be increased if you wear one, and you'll thank us for the style. Dealers sell them.

Keep Your Insides Cool!

Here's a man who thinks he has heart disease, and is scared half to death. His face is all drawn out of shape from fear and agony. Every time he eats, his heart "palpitates"—that simply means that his stomach is swelled up with gases from fermenting undigested food, and his heart thumps against his diaphragm. Nothing the matter with his heart. In the summer time, this gas distention is much worse, his whole body and blood get over-heated, and his heart and lungs get so crowded for room, that he gasps for breath. There he is, look at him! Every minute he expects to drop dead. As a matter of fact, all he needs is to stop that souring and gas forming in his stomach and bowels, help his digestion along, and keep cool inside. You all know that whenever something rots or decays, heat develops. Same in the body. Keep cool inside! Take a candy cathartic CASCARET every night at bed-time. It will work while you sleep, clean up and cool your insides, give you a regular, comfortable movement in the morning, and you'll be feeling fine all day every day. Heart Disease! Fudge!

RAPID RISE OF WOOD

Claim That It Has Been Due to Personal Force.

Gen. Lawton's Story of Wood's Work In Indian Campaign.

January 5, 1886, assistant surgeon.

Jan. 5, 1891, captain and assistant surgeon.

May 8, 1898, colonel First United States cavalry, volunteers.

July 8, 1898, brigadier general, volunteers.

Dec. 7, 1899, major general of volunteers.

Feb. 4, 1901, brigadier general, regular army.

Aug. 8, 1903, major general, regular army.

If Gen. Wood lives and his star continues in the ascendant he will wear before he retires from active service the three stars of a lieutenant general in the regular army of the United States. Upon the retirement of Gen. Miles early next month the office of general commanding the army is abolished, but the new and more influential position, that of chief of the general staff, remains. Will Gen. Wood follow Gen. Young and Gen. Chaffe into this high office? His friends say that he will. His enemies, who have already begun a campaign of detraction against him, will try to prevent his attaining the prize. Those who know him best know that it is the immense personal force of the man, the rare ability to win the absolute confidence of every one with whom he comes in contact, that has won him successes and has so persistently suggested his name for still higher places.

The young major general, who is now on his way to the Philippines, where he has been sent for the purpose of giving those islands the benefit of his invaluable experience in Cuba, as governor of the island, and as Indian fighter in the famous Geronimo campaign, is a remarkable personality. Although he lacks an inch of being six feet tall, he gives the impression of a very large man. He is what the athletes would call "well put up." He is powerful of shoulders and arms, with a large head and short neck. He stoops slightly and steps with a long, swift stride. His face is one of great strength, large featured, calm and studious. He rarely smiles and is not much of a talker, but can tell a good story in an interesting way when he feels like it. He has a low, well modulated voice and a direct way of speaking. His clothes always fit him well, whether he appears in uniform or civilian's dress; in fact, he has the reputation of being one of the best dressed men in the army. He is a superb horseman and makes a strikingly powerful figure in the saddle. Then indeed, he appears the type of the unconquerable American officer.

Gen. Wood has reached his present high grade in the army at an early age. He is not yet 45 years old. A few years ago he was unknown outside of the limited circle of his personal acquaintances and to those military men who had read Gen. Lawton's high tribute to him in his report to the war department on the Geronimo campaign. At the beginning of May, 1898, he was an army surgeon with the rank of captain. Two months later he was commanding a brigade at San Juan and his name was known in every hamlet in the United States. Before the year was out he had risen to the rank of a major general of volunteers, and he held what was then one of the most important foreign commands in the gift of the government, and his name has been moving up on the army list ever since. Because of his quick promotion he has made enemies, who have accused him of pushing and advertising himself at the expense of others. Men who achieve success may always count on being abused by many of those whom they pass on life's highway.

Gen. Wood has been called a man of opportunity, certain is it that he has always been ready for the opportunity when it came to him. Within eight months after he received his army commission, back in the eighties, he had earned a congressional medal for gallant and hazardous service, and he was only a contract surgeon, green from the schools.

Gen. Wood is a direct descendant of Susanna White, whose son, Peregrine White, was the first white child born in New England. Nine years after the coming of the Mayflower, the first of the Wood family, William Wood, landed in Massachusetts, and there, within a day's journey from Plymouth Rock, the family has grown and developed, although Gen. Wood himself was born at Winchester, New Hampshire. His mother, who is still living, comes of the old Massachusetts families, Hager, Cutler and Nixon. His immediate ancestors were nearly all farmers. His father was Dr. Charles Jewett Wood, a man of sturdy individuality and great physical energy. The old Wood family homestead, at Barlow Landing in Pocasset, where the boy Leonard lived between the years of six and eighteen, has been swept away to make room for a summer cottage. It stood only a stone's throw from the waters of Buzzard's Bay. It was young Wood's first ambition to follow the sea. For three years he attended the old-fashioned academy at Middleboro.

After his father's death, in August, 1883, Wood entered the Harvard Medical school. Dr. E. H. Bradford, who was superintendent of the Boston City Hospital while Wood labored there, says of him: "He was one of the most satisfactory assistants I ever had, if not the most satisfactory. He was indefatigable in his work, and when he was told to do a thing he could be counted upon absolutely to do it, and to do it immediately, and he knew how to hold his tongue."

At 24 Wood began the practice of medicine in a little office on Sandford street, Boston. There he spent nearly a year in a bitter struggle to get a start, but the people were poor and the pay slow. In April, 1885, he went to New York to take an examination for admission as surgeon in the army. To his surprise he passed second in a competitive class of fifty-nine, and there being no vacancies, he accepted a contract position, which he held until he was commissioned, January 5, 1886.

"If you want to know something about Gen. Wood," said Secretary Root to the correspondent, "read Gen. Lawton's report on the Geronimo campaign. It is on file in the war department." The secretary is right. That report is well worth the reading. Wood's enemies refer to him contemptuously as an army doctor and not a soldier. They should peruse the gallant Lawton's story of his most famous of Indian campaigners—the pursuit of Geronimo. In the days of the old Crusaders there were famous fighting bishops well to the fore in every battle. From July, 1885, until March, 1887, this young fighting surgeon was almost continuously in the field chasing Apaches through Arizona, New Mexico and four hundred miles into old Mexico. Before he had been commissioned three months and even then he was not a line officer he was assigned to command all the infantry of the expedition, and sometimes to those islands the benefit of his invaluable experience in Cuba, as governor of the island, and as Indian fighter in the famous Geronimo campaign, is a remarkable personality. Although he lacks an inch of being six feet tall, he gives the impression of a very large man. He is what the athletes would call "well put up." It was the way of the man. He has gone up by mere personal force.

President Roosevelt once said of Gen. Wood, "no soldier can outwalk him, can live with a greater indifference on hard and scanty fare, can endure hardship better or do with less sleep."

In his report of the Geronimo campaign, Gen. Lawton says: "I desire to invite the attention of the department to Assistant Surgeon Leonard Wood, the only officer who has been with me through the whole campaign. His courage, energy and loyal support during the whole time, his encouraging example to the command when work was the hardest and prospects darkest, his thorough confidence and belief in the final success of the expedition, and his untiring efforts to make it so, have placed me under obligations so great that I cannot express them."

How small and contemptible appear the recent attacks upon Gen. Wood's qualities as a soldier, after reading these words of praise from Lawton, the stern and gallant veteran, who laid down his life for his country on the plains of Luzon. Gen. Wood's subsequent service in the army, his first meeting with Roosevelt one night in the fall of 1897, when they were dinner guests of the Lowndes family in this city, his organizing Rought Riders, his work in Cuba as soldier and governor of Santiago, need not be dewlt on here. They are contemporaneous history. He rehabilitated a war worn and turbulent province and made clean and sanitary a dirty and disease stricken territory.

CHIMMIE FADDEN STORIES BY EDWARD W. TOWNSEND

Reflection of Chames As to New York and New Yorkers, That Are And Are Not.

(Copyright, 1903, by R. H. Russell.)

"Cheems," says Duchess to me de odder day, as we were strolling up de Avenoo to give de lads on de boxes of de carriages, and de maids on de front seats, a chance to pipe de sure It in style, "Cheems," says she to me, as I tipped a wink to a fren on a box and smiled at a lordy's maid, out of de corner of me mout dath was on de off side from Duchess, "Cheems," she says, as she passed a glad eye to a French shuffler, what was on de shuff of a bubble dat was puffing by, "Cheems," says she, feteling a dead swell bow to me fren de bar-keep, what was out fer an airing wit his steady, "Cheems," says Duchess, "if dere was a little more smell of napto here dis would be near as good as Paris."

"On your way, woman!" I says. "Fift Avenoo can loose de Chansey Lazy in a walk, and never knew it was in a race. Look at de golfs!' I says. "De golfs alone can win out for dis country over any forn neek of woods dat lies out of doors."

Duchess only gives me de shoulder raise, like she was saying dat forn golfs was good enough for me, seeing as how I married one. So I says, "You was a pretty good American when I married you, and no galety goes wit dat gas."

Duchess says, "Of a soitainty; I was pretty and I was good," and den she looked a tousand miles over me head, de way she does when she tinks she has sowed off a horse on me.

De trouble wit French golfs is, dat dey has de long-distance glad eye. Honest, when a French goil in Paris gives you de jolly peeper she has a look dat is furder off den Sandy Hook—and any ting furder off is too far from de Bowery. When I was to Paris some of de golfs Duchess gives me a knock down to passed me out a glad eye—so Duchess says when she made a rough house about it—but I taut dey was flagging a mug in de next county, and I never got wise in time to retoin de compliment.

But dat isn't what I was going to tell you about; as me and Duchess walzed up de Avenoo I says to her dat dere is no use hrying to beat dis little old Island as long as it was on top of de eart, Duchess said dat de trouble was dat New York wouldn't long be on top of de eart, wit all de tunnels getting ready to bury de people underground.

"Hot air for farmers!" I says. "No fear," I says. "Dere never won't be no tunnels ready, except de loops, and when day is ready nobody won't ride in em."

Listen, I'll put you wise on tunnels: I rode in one in London. Dey is to de bad! De air in de tunnels is like when you light a cigarette, and only de sulphur is boining on de match. Dat's right. It'll do for Londoners, what never has no good air down deir throats, but New Yorkers won't stand for it. Dey'd radder stand up. Anyway, what's de use getting under ground till you has a long call? Tunnels is all right to get to Laneyville in time to mow de grass before de sun goes down, but for folks what isn't farmers—nit!

If you listen to some folks dere isn't many New Yorkers left, and dey is chasing deirselves under de "No children" rule.

I wonder dat President Teddy did not knock New York flats when he was swinging his hammer about dere not being enough gold-spoon kiddies growing up to make Republican voters in de sweet Summer time dat's to come? It isn't because a mug has been to school to Harvard dat he doesn't raise kiddies; it's because de flats has put de dead line on kids.

"Light, airy dog kennels on de roof, wit all de comforts of home for poodles. Children not allowed." Is de way de swell flat passes out de law dose days. Dat's what's putting de cradle makers out of business. I tink it was because de kiddies distobbed de janitors' afternoon naps, but Duchess tips me straight dat's it's because kiddies pulls de ears of poodles, dat de kiddies is kept in Heaven, in stead of in Harlem.

I hears Whiskers and Mr. Paul talking about it de odder day, and, say, honest, I says to meself dere's so few of us left we ought to come high.

"To be sure," Whiskers was saying, "dere is few New Yorkers left, but what bodders me to make out is what New Yorkers do."

"Mostly dey does de rest of the country," says Mr. Paul.

"Not even dat," Whiskers says. "If I understand you. For instance, de big banks and dat kind dat is raided, or de kind dat raids?" butts in Mr. Paul.

"Bote kinds," Whiskers says. "Most of our big banks is run by men who came here from de provinces."

Dat's dude langwudge for long grass.

"Besides de banks," Whiskers goes on, "our hotels, insurance companies, municipal offices and odder money-making institutions is run by forners from over de sea, or beyond de Bronx. What do New Yorkers do, I asks you?"

"Well," says Mr. Paul, "I see dat you will be answered. Some New Yorkers go to South Dakota, and some to Newport; but de main push goes to de races if dey is sporty, or to New Jersey if dey is domestic. We is mostly too strong to work and too bored to see dat we gets a fair deal; so farmers from de tall timber comes in and rakes off de pot, kitty, and percentage. Derefore de city is going to de dogs a heap, but it can find kennels to hold itself. Strangers in New York is de only ones dat gets any good out of de city. All dat most New Yorkers gets out of de city is deir trunks."

"Then we should stop in New York," says Whiskers, getting a mad on.

"We would stop in de city and browse if we had de run of de pasture, but we refuses to be stalled," says Mr. Paul.

"Nonsense!" says Whiskers. "We has underground rapid transit almost ready."

"Chames," says Mr. Paul, toining to me, "you has been seeing de city—how is rapid transit going on?"

"It's getting on so swift," I says, "dat if dey don't take a wrap in de reins, and pull up a bit," I says, "dere is babes alive at de city minute dat will live to see daylight," I says, "and some of em may take a ride on de loop," I says.

"Whats dat about a loop?" he says.

"I was talking about rapid transit."

"Dew is hole fingers for each odder," I says. "Main lines, trunk lines, side lines, double tracks, terminals—de whole bunch is loops when dey come out of de slot machine. When de front of somebody's house slips into de rapid transit hole-in-det-ground de Rapid Transit Board calls re Rapid Transit Mayor, and all de odder wise mugs dat has Rapid Transit bugs, and dey all says, 'let us get rapider.'

"'Sure,' says de Mayor. 'Let us put in de loop below City Hall.'

"Oeb de Comptroler says, 'No,' he says, 'let us loop under de East River, five times and repeat, best tree in five to take de money.'

"'Not a bit like it,' says de Chief Engineer. 'Let us all get togedder and loop from de old bridge to de new bridge, wit a pretzel twist around de Stuz Sighton building for beer.'

"Wit dat de Brooklyn Borough President makes a holler, and he says, 'De foist loop-de-loop dat is to be looped is to be to Williamsburg and back.

"'Why back?' says de Mayor. 'Derc's plenty of beer and teeatres in Williamsburg. Why back?' he says.

"Den dey all resolves to loop over and under and around all de bridges and rivers dere is, and de meeting adjoins, and reports progress. Dat's de only progress dat goes ahead."

"Notting doing?" asks Mr. Paul.

"Only loops," I says. "When all de loops is done you can run around in more kinds of soicles dan dere is in a slice of raw onion. Dere will be tousand-mile tickets for sale, and you can ride on out to a finish, and never get half a mile away from City Hall. Gents dat puts up a scream to get to Harlem can do as dey do now: 'Telephone to wifey to meet em half way; and dey can dine near Long Acre Square and call it a draw. De loops is coming for fair, but de up-town tunnels, when day is finished, is to be cut up into sections, and rented out for hotel wine cellars, and ratskillers."

"Well, Chames," says Whiskers, after he'd taut a while. "You don't draw a hopeful picture."

"Excuse me, sir," I says, "if it's only hopeful pictures you're looking for I'll fetch you a dope book on Rapid Transit called Report of Progress. Tree sure winners wired every day ain't in it alongside."

"After all," says Mr. Paul, "I suppose dere isn't no longer any use for rapid transit out to Harlem. Years ago, when dese tunnels was foist started, folks still had to hike out to Harlem to sleep, at least. Dat was before we decided to build twenty-story hotels on every corner, wit a few chucked in between for good measure.

"Wit all of de middle of de city covered wit hotels dere is no more need for a Harlem, dan dere is for a public clock in de Tenderloin, where every man has a watch and no woman cares what time it is."

Say, when Mr. Paul gets talking fast he only says wolds, not sense.

PRECIPITATED INTO THE RIVER

Bridge at Portland, Ore., Gives Way Under Heavy Crowd.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 1.—While hundreds of people stood on the Morrison street bridge yesterday to see Clarence Lutz, an armless man, swim across the Willamette river, a section of the bridge collapsed, precipitating more than 100 people forty feet into the river. Lottie E. Cameron and Edward Shark were drowned, five persons are missing and twenty-five persons were slightly injured. Many fell on two small houseboats moored to a pier of the bridge immediately under the spot where it gave way. Several persons were injured by striking on the houseboats while others were hit by falling timbers. Many fell from the roofs of the houseboats into the water, where dozens of small boats and launches picked them up.

The Willamette river at Morrison street is about three-eights of a mile wide. As Lutz was finishing his swim, the crowd rushed to the south edge of the bridge in oredr to get a good view. A section of the footwalk gave way. Some struck on the houseboats moored under the bridge, while others fell directly into the river, which is about fifteen feet deep at that point. Many fell between the houseboats, forming a pile ten feet high of struggling men, women and children.

Hundreds of people at the club house of the Portland Rowing club, men in boats and on shore, immediately started the work of rescue. Dozens of boats at the scene soon picked up those struggling in the water, while the injured, who were clinging to the houseboats, were taken into the club house and medical aid summoned.

Every ambulance in the city, several fire companies and a large force of police arrived within a few minutes and victims with broken arms and legs were hurried to the hospitals.

The bridge is an old wooden structure, having being built sixteen years ago and has been considered unsafe for some time, although it was not condemned.

THE WESTERN COAL TRADE

Worst Month of Year Ended and Demand Will Increase.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—The Black Diamond, reviewing the Western coal trade says:

From the standpoint of the total coal consumption of the country, the worst month of the year is now ended and demand will steadily increase until the maximum is reached in December and January. In the sofe coal trade some evidence to this effect is found in the position of the markets at the end of July. They are much stronger than they were the first of the month, due to an increased demand from all consuming trade, including the large steam users as well as the dealers. A perceipibly better feeling has been noted the past week and in the West prices rule nearer to the circular basis than they have at any time since the opening of the new mining year, while the dealer trade, which is the coming factor in the situation, is doing less complaining than it did a few weeks ago. Anthracite demand from shippers continue active; from retailers to consumers it is comparatively light, although there is evidence that it will improve during the coming months. Retailers report a better condition as to inquiries than they did a fortnight ago, and they take this to mean that consumers will look after their prospective wants more closely in the immediate future.

With today the August prices go into effect in all anthracite territory, amounting to an advance of 10 cents a ton over the prices prevailing the past month. The new August net price list is as follows:

	Milwaukee, Chicago and West Superior gross tons	F. O. B. Buffalo, N. Y., vessels, gross tons	Buffalo Bridge, F. O. B. shipmnt. West, gross tons
Grate	$5.15	$5.40	$6.15
Egg	5.40	5.65	6.40
Stove	5.40	5.65	6.40
Chestnut	5.40	5.65	6.40

Pressure to obtain shipments of anthracite has been somewhat greater the present week. Dealers, who had not yet received coal ordered earlier in the month, have been insistent that deliveries should be made before the August prices became effective. In some instances, it is reported that dealers sold coal on the opening basis named in April and have not yet received a tonnage which will permit them to take care of this business. Every time that an advance occurs in the wholesale price they lose that much out of their profits, and it is, therefore, quite natural that they should make every effort to prevent the loss from increasing. In fact to prevent the loss from increasing. During August it is anticipated that the tonnage demanded from shippers by retailers will be lighter than during any previous month since April 1, unless retail demand shows a decided improvement. The differential between August and winter price will be so small that many dealers will undoubtedly wait until the coal is moving into consumers' bins before they place orders for further deliveries, although the forehanded will continue to take all the coal they have room for, considering that the small differential which they will save will enable them to make that much more profit. A percentage of 1½ per cent a month saved on additional prifit, the sum that the differential amounts to, is considered a fair return on money vested in a commodity which is considered the most staple in the business world. Large dealers, who have plenty of capital, will look at the matter in this light and will continue to buy all the coal they are able to buy or they will need.

Movement by way of the great lakes continues to be heavy. There are many ports which complain yet that they have not taken freely in that locality and short on the descriptions which are in greatest demand. Of the Michigan ports, it is said that Milwaukee has received some lighter receipts of anthracite, comparatively, than any other point. Chicago has accumulated no important stocks. Duluth and Superior ports are fairly well supplied with anthracite, with demand in contiguous territory expected to quicken as soon as the harvest season is over.

In the all-rail trade there are many points which have not yet received all the coal wanted. St. Louis companies, in some instances, report having received only a part of the coal that has been ordered. Southern cities and territory is mengerly supplied, although greater progress has been made in reaching that trade with coal the present month than in any other thus far the present season.

In Chicago and some all-rail territory there continues to be a most active call for large and small egg coal, and also for broken coal. Stove and chestnut coal are in fair supply. Northwest, some of the trade, especially the line business, is calling for chestnut, and it is reported that it can not be obtained in sufficient quantities to meet all of the present requirements.

The retail trade continues to be quiet. Early buyers had their wants supplied during the early months of the season, and late buying has not yet commenced, but the outlook is for increasing activity in August. Leading metropolitan retailers report that they are having more inquiries than they did some days ago, and this they think presages a more active movement into consumers' bins.

In the Western soft coal trade the most important announcement during the week was one of a semi-official announcement to the effect that Hocking prices would be advanced 25 cents a ton on Aug. 15. This will make the dock price in Western territory $1 a ton, which with freight added to destination, will make the price the highest known in recent years at this season. It is claimed that the new prices will be rigidly maintained when they are put in effect.

THE LABOR WORLD

Plans For Labor Day Celebration Are Progressing Well.

Standing Committees of the Trades Assembly Are Named.

The Labor day committee of the Trades' assembly met last night and heard reports from some of the subcommittees. All of them reported substantial progress in the arrangements, but nothing of particular interest was done.

The arrangements are progressing satisfactorily all along the line, and the principal features of the day, the parade and picnic, will be of such a nature as to cast in the shade all previous celebrations of labor's holiday. All of the local unions are making plans, and some of them are arranging very neat displays for the parade. The various unions seek to outdo each other in the matter of uniforms and floats, as well as in the number of members represented in the parade.

John B. Swift, of Minneapolis, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, was in the city during the week, and on Thursday evening he addressed the local Electricians' union. His talk was along the line of advocating the formulation of a scale that will be uniform between the Twin Cities and Duluth.

* * *

G. A. Weinberg, formerly a well-known Duluth printer and secretary of the local Trades' assembly, has been visiting in the city for a couple of weeks, and left this afternoon for his new home at Minneapolis.

* * *

State Labor Commissioner John O'Donnell, of St. Paul, was in the city during the latter part of the week, looking over the local field and reviewing the work of Factory Inspector Allen.

* * *

President Perault of the Trades' assembly has announced the following standing committees:

Organization—Barron, Freshney, McKeivy, Schubiski and Barr.

City council—McEwen, Dworschak and Barr.

Publication and lectures—Blackwood, McEwen and A. V. Johnson.

* * *

The organization committee of the Trades' assembly has taken up the work of forming a metal trades' council in Duluth.

* * *

A Trades' assembly committee report gives the real estate agents of the city a severe roast, alleging that they exact 10 per cetn from contractors for all work done, and then inform their clients that the high price of work in Duluth is due to excessive wages paid to labor.

* * *

The call of the harvest fields has drained the local market for common labor, and complaints of shortages are coming in from vessels on the lakes and from railroad contractors.

* * *

The publication and lecture committee of the local Trades' assembly will work in connection with the State Federation of Labor to arrange a lecture course here this winter.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Further Evidence That Legitimate Trade Is on Solid Basis.

New York, Aug. 1.—R. G. Dun's review says: Further evidence of the solid basis upon which legitimate trade is established has been furnished by the equanimity with which commercial and financial institutions regard the recent speculative collapse.

Much more harm has been done to the country's manufacturing and trade by the inflated prices of cotton than by the depression in stocks. Reports are almost unanimous as to the heavy distribution of merchandise, and this is shown statistically by the increase in railroad earnings thus far reported for July, 12.5 per cent over last year's and 21.1 per cent above 1901. As a rule, retail trade in summer fabrics has continued heavy, and jobbers report fall business opening well.

Labor is well employed throughout the country except where voluntarily idle. Agricultural news is favorable. Foreign trade is maintained, both exports and imports from this city showing gains over the corresponding week last year.

Moderate improvement is noted in the tone of the iron and steel industry. There is a striking absence of urgent orders, however, especially in lines outside of railroad equipment. There is less anxiety regarding the danger of over-production, although dozens of new blast furnaces are in course of construction, and an active capacity of twenty million tons annually is now assured.

Cables report spirited bidding by European rail mills for large contracts in America that home producers cannot consider, owing to their oversold condition. Coke is moving freely, but the Alabama coal strike disturbs furnace men. Another decline has taken copper to about 13 cents.

Textile industries are still waiting for readjustment or evidence of permanence in the present position of prices for raw material. In cotton goods orders are placed only upon condition of prompt delivery, yet it is insignificant that stocks do not accumulate at the mills, which are steadily increasing their percentage of idle machinery. Consequently prices are fully sustained, rendering a good profit to the manufacturers who held raw material purchased at normal prices. Aside from a few of the highest grades, new lines of lightweight woolens for next spring are fully opened. Prices are about the same as a year ago. Buyers are numerous in the leading markets, taking woolen goods freely, and showing a preference for the fancy grades. Footwear factories are crowded with work, orders coming in briskly for fall goods, and Western jobbers have placed additional contracts for next spring. Hides again average much lower, and this continued weakness encourages shoe manufacturers to postpone purchases of leather in expectation of better terms.

Failures this week were 190 in the United States against 193 last year, and 19 in Canada compared with 18 a year ago.

During the terrific thunder-storm of Tuesday, the house in which he is kept was struck by lightning, but the bolt did not damage besides frightening the patient. Fryberger, the Duluth attorney who is interested in the Missabe Electric railway project for the connecting of the various range towns by electric cars, was in the city Tuesday and in the evening attended council meeting for the purpose of offering the feasibility of the adoption of an amendment to the company's franchise if the city fathers desire to realize the running of the system through the city. The franchise as passed last spring is to the effect that the company agrees to pave the streets, if the streets are ever paved, between the car tracks and to the end of the ties. Now, it appears that eastern capitalists who are in the corporation, together with prominent Duluth people, and who recently visited this city and the territory over which the proposed line will traverse, want this clause stricken out and agree to pay the difference between the cost of paving the streets without the existence of the tracks and with the existence of the same. The only places on the range where this clause has been inserted in the franchise granted are here and Hibbing. The ordinance, containing such amendment, was given its first reading at this meeting and it is altogether likely that the amendment will be adopted at its third reading. Mr. Fryberger says the company means business and that the system will be put in as soon as the company gets everything in shape to commence. The only town on the range not granting a franchise, is Eveleth.

New Things Strange and Curious

Australian Bats.

Uncanny and ugly creatures are the bats shown in the accompanying picture. Australia is their home, and nowhere else are they found. From the ordinary bat they differ in many respects, and their most peculiar characteristic is their habit of hanging downward from any object to which they may attach themselves. An odd and rather grewsome spectacle is presented when several are seen hanging in this way, and it is no wonder that among the legends which are popular with the natives there are few in which the stealthy and ravenous bat played leading and by no means a creditable role.

A few specimens of the Australian bat have been imported into Europe, but these creatures are not as plentiful as might be imagined, neither is it very easy to capture them, and for these reasons the accompanying picture is of more than usual interest.

Odd Smuggling.

Recently a book, containing some very uncomplimentary allusions to King Leopold of Belgium, was published in Paris, and as a result the publishers were promptly notified that no copies would be allowed to enter Belgium. There were, however, several persons in Brussels and other parts of Belgium who desired to read the book, and, in spite of the official notice, they managed to get copies of it. The method which they used was very simple.

The books were removed from the original covers in Paris and placed in other covers, bearing such titles as: "How to Grow Beet Root," "Popular Text Book on Horticulture" and "The Farmer's Every Day Book." In this disguise they were shipped to the frontier, and the officials, misled by the innocent titles, never dreamed of confiscating them.

Lady Of Babylon.

The sculptor evidently intended to portray some prominent Babylonian lady of his time, for he took great pains with his work, even to the minutest details. The nose is well formed, though rather large, and much of the low forehead is covered by a ribbon or band, which serves to confine the luxuriant hair and only allows free play to a few ringlets. Over the eyes droop large and heavy eyebrows, which, strange to say, run down almost as far as the upper part of the nose. Unfortunately, the eyeballs are lacking in the sculpture, and for this reason the face presents rather a hard and unnatural appearance.

This work, though it was fashioned hundreds of years before Christ, is still in an excellent state of preservation, one reason probably being because it is made of exceptionally durable material.

Wonderful Clock.

Pop. Leo was recently presented with a wonderful old clock, which has a remarkable history. It is in the form of a planisphere, and was made at Plaisance in 1725 by Bernardo Facini, a famous mathematician, who presented it to that princess of the Farnese family who subsequently became the second wife of Philip V. of Spain. On the planisphere are marked the hours and minutes according to the Spanish and Italian style, as well as the length of the days and nights according to the seasons, the solar and lunar eclipses and the daily position of the sun in the different signs of the zodiac.

From the Bourbons of Spain the clock passed into the hands of the Bourbons of Naples, and some time ago the Count of Caserta decided to present it to the Pope. As it was sadly in need of repairs, he first took it to a skilled watchmaker in Rome, and the latter, after a good deal of trouble, finally got it to work properly. When the Pope received it it was in an ebony box, on the top of which were two silver angels holding the Papal coat of arms, while on the pedestal were engraved the crest of the Bourbon family and the following inscription:—

"Iconi XIII. Exacto Summi Pontificatus. Anno XXV. Alphonsus Maria Bormonius Comes Casertanus. Pignus Laetitiae. Obsequi que sui."

The old clock, it is said, will be placed in the gallery of the Vatican library.

Laughing Jakass.

Australia is the home of the bird shown in the accompanying picture, and its scientific name is Dacelo gigantica. A kingfisher it really is, representing the Alcedinae family in the South of Australia, as the buff kingfisher does in the North; but on account of the extraordinary sounds which it makes it is commonly known as the "laughing jackass."

Those who travel through the bush for the first time cannot help being startled by the strong, weird voice which the bird possesses, and which, according to some, is very like the laugh of an idiot, while others maintain that it closely resembles the braying of a donkey.

The bird is thick set and has a long bill, short legs and rather long head feathers, which can be raised at will into the form of a crest.

Jubilee Children.

A few weeks before his jubilee was celebrated Pope Leo ordered that every child who was born in Rome on that auspicious day, March 3, should receive a sum of money and all the clothing necessary during infancy. Now during ordinary times the average number of daily births in Rome is thirty-five, and, taking this as a basis, the treasurer of the Vatican easily calculated how much he would be called upon to spend in carrying out the Pope's order. Greatly, however, was he surprised when he learned that ninety-three children had come to life in the Eternal City on the day of the jubilee.

He looked at the records and found them correct; each birth certificate bore the date, March 3. When the fact was noised abroad many persons hinted that the civil authorities, in order that as many parents as possible might avail themselves of the Pope's munificence, had given the auspicious day forty-eight, or even seventy-two, hours instead of twenty-four; but however this may be, no comment was made at the Vatican, and the ninety-three children received the gifts promised by His Holiness.

Three of these children are triplets—two boys and a girl. The boys have been named Romulus and Remus and the girl Roma. It is a singular fact, by the way, that the number of children born on this occasion should correspond exactly with the number of years which the Pope has lived.

GLIMPSE OF JAMAICA BANANA WOMEN

The banana would prove a unique article of headdress, as this picture shows, and surely it is not without a certain pictorial value. The dusky maids and matrons who stand lined up like a comic opera chorus are Jamaicans, and this is the method by which they transport the fruit any reasonable distance.

The color of the bananas and the bright hues that are sometimes in the costumes of the women combine to make a not unpleasing effect. The women also can carry very heavy burdens upon their heads for miles without letting them fall, such as unwieldy bundles and loads that would tax the strength of a strong man. But after all, the bananas are more "in the picture," as you will readily agree.

Not only does the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland receive a salary of £20,000 a year, but he is also given £1,000 to defray expenses of moving when he takes up office.

SOME FACTS ABOUT RULERS.

It is not generally known that almost all of the rulers of Europe are of a different nationality from their subjects, yet a thorough search through the various royal archives proves that this is the case.

The French princes of the Bourbon family are only one-sixteenth French, and are almost wholly of German, Spanish and Italian descent. Prince Victor Napoleon Bonaparte is only one-third French and two-thirds a descendant of the Wurtemberg and Savoy families. King Alfonso XIII. of Spain is four-fifths an Austrian. King Victor Emmanuel III. of Italy is also more of an Austrian than an Italian, and his descendants will have Montenegrin blood in their veins.

Emperor Franz Josef of Austria is just as much a Wittelsbacher as a Hapsburger, and, moreover, some of his ancestors were Bavarians. King Oscar of Sweden is French on his father's side through the Bernadotte and Clary families and German on his mother's side through the families of Holstein-Gottorp and Leuchtenberg.

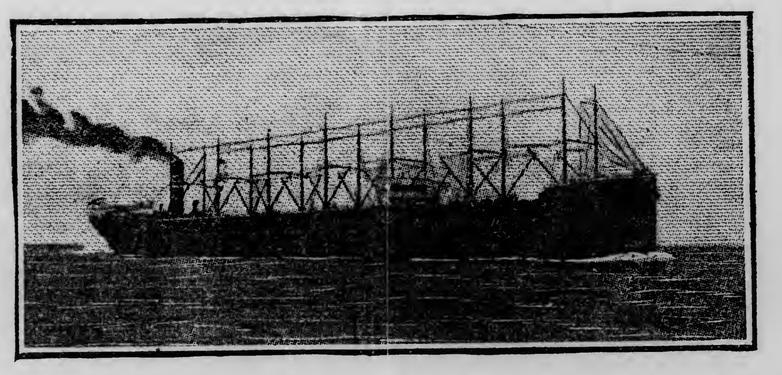

The King of Greece is a Dane; the late King of Servia was half a Russian. The Prince of Bulgaria derives his descent from the Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and Bourbon houses. The Tsar of Russia is partly a Dane and partly a Russian, since he is descended not only from the Romanoffs, but also from the Schleswig-Holstein-Gluecksburg line.

The King of the Belgians is descended from the Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and Bourbon families. The Queen of Holland is just as much German as Dutch, since she has in her veins much of the blood of the Orange, Nassau and Waldeck-Pyrmont families.

Among the King of England's ancestors are Guelphs, Normans and Frenchmen. Though Emperor William of Germany is a Hohenzollern on his father's side, he is on his mother's side connected with the house of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and, moreover, he is somewhat of a Frenchman through Louise de Coligny, daughter of the great Admiral, who became the fourth wife of William the Silent.

Fish have no eyelids. They do not require them, as their eyes are constantly washed by the water in which they swim.

FOURTEEN MASTED STEAM FREIGHTERS

Ocean freight steamers have undergone a transformation in the last few years even more marked than the more familiar express liners. Little is heard or seen of the vast fleets of freighters. They slip in and out of the harbors unnoticed. Many of them, however, are as large as the passenger steamers, and nearly as fast, while their facilities for hauling freight are far in advance of the largest and speediest ocean greyhounds.

The latest departure in this class of steamers is the giant English freighter Grangeberg. The steamer is capable of carrying 10,300 tons of cargo, which places her in the first class of ocean steamships, as regards bulk, at least. A striking feature of the great steamer is the absence of any cabins or deckhouses on her enormous deck, with the exception of a small section of the stern. Even the bridge, which is located well back from the prow, stands alone, taking up very little of the deck space. The steamer has a single funnel, which is located in the stern, thus leaving the deck practically free.

There are in all twenty-four masts on the new freighter, all of which are equipped with powerful derricks, there being in all twenty-four derricks. The great hull is divided into twelve spacious holds. The unusual number of derricks makes it possible to unload a full cargo of more than ten thousand tons in less than thirty hours.

The superstitious collier is often laughed to scorn, but a miner in North Wales is just now thanking his lucky stars that he believes in omens. He was boring under some coal, and was startled by seeing a rat scuttling away. He walked away from the spot, and directly afterward a large fall of coal occurred just over the place where the man had been working.

FIVE LEGGED FLORIDA COW.

A remarkable freak of nature has been discovered in Polk county, Florida. It is a cow with five legs. The fifth leg grows out near the right shoulder and has perfectly formed joints, but a deformed hoof.

The animal is five years old and has been purchased from its owner, J. Henry Waters, by Jules Kaufman, of Jacksonville, who will take it to the St. Louis Exposition. The cow is attracting much attention in Tampa, where it is now on exhibition.

America now stands second among continents in Jewish population. She has 1,100,000, while Asia has but 368,000.

HARDY PONY OF CONNEMARA.

Indian ponies of America are hardy little beasts, with much intelligence and fire, but their cousin, the Connemara pony, of Ireland, is a more placidly companionable creature, as this picture will serve to illustrate. The Irish nag is hardy, like the people of the district, and does his share of work with a good humor that is characteristic. It will take its master and mistress on a journey to town with never a thought of bucking.

It will carry a heavy burden a long distance and feel well recompensed with a little food and a few words of "blarney." It is withal a good worker, an excellent companion and something of a philosopher in its way.

Love Letter Romance.

Half a century ago a young Englishman, while travelling, met a beautiful girl and promptly fell in love with her.

A few days later he returned home, and his first act was to write her a love letter. In it he told her that he could not be happy without her and that if she regarded his proposal favorably he would expect a reply by the next mail.

To this letter he received no answer, and so disappointed was he that from that time until his death, which occurred recently, he shut himself up in his home and lived like a hermit. Most of his time was spent in reading, and the day after his funeral the heirs began to search the books in his library, for they thought it quite possible that the eccentric old man might have hidden some bank notes in them.

They found none, but in a tattered old pamphlet they found another kind of note, the love letter which was written fifty years ago, and which the writer had forgotten to mail.

Strawberry Barrel.

Here is a horticultural curiosity, a strawberry bed containing a hundred plants flourishing in the small compass of an ordinary flour barrel. Next season when you set out your plants and feel that you have not a 150 foot run by 2 feet wide of garden space to devote to strawberries just take a copy from the accompanying illustration.

Burn out a flour barrel, paint it any color you please on the outside, then screw four rollers to the bottom. Next bore a hole through the bottom to take an inch iron bar just long enough to keep the cask in position. Let the rollers rest on a flagstone or cement floor, so that the barrel may be partly turned around every day to face the sun. Two handles should be affixed to the top.

Bore two inch holes in a zigzag around the cask and at each of these apertures insert the crown, or head, of the plants in some fine mould. A wire netting one foot in diameter is placed in the center of the cask, which should be filled with rich manure. When the barrel is full place nine or ten plants around the top, keep well watered and you will have a fine crop of berries and a decided novelty in gardening at the same time.

Hard Debt To Collect.

Recently the butcher who supplies meat to the animals in the Zoological Gardens at Budapest complained to the authorities because his bill had not been paid for several weeks and threatened to take legal action if he did not receive at once a portion of the amount due him. Apparently no attention was paid to his demand, for a few days later a court officer appeared in the gardens, and, handing the superintendent a warrant, informed him that he had been instructed to seize all obtainable property and to dispose of it for the benefit of the butcher.

Not the slightest objection did the superintendent make, but, instead, courteously conducted him to the lions' cage and then stood calmly by, waiting for him to seize the lions and carry them off. At a glance, however, the officer saw that this was a hopeless task. The animals had not been fed for three or four days, and at sight of the officer, who was quite fat and, from their standpoint, an appetizing morsel, they set up a terrible roar and tore at the bars of the cage in a frenzied manner.

As quickly as he could the officer hurried away from the demoniac noise and, as he left the gardens he shouted back to the smiling superintendent:

"If the butcher wants this job done he must get someone else to do it, for I've got five children depending on me, and I can't afford to die just yet."

Unique Benevolent Idea.

A novel plan for benefiting the funds of the Railway Benevolent Institution has been devised by the Irish railway managers. It has been decided to collect from railway men a sufficient number of stories and incidents—"humorous and thrilling"—appertaining to railway life to make up a book, which will be published and sold for a shilling, for the benefit of the funds of the institution.

Japanese Court Lady.

In the accompanying picture is shown an admirable specimen of Japanese metal work. The figure is that of a court lady, and it was formerly the property of the Mikado. In 1876 it was taken to London by a Japanese nobleman, and after several professional photographers had failed it was successfully photographed by a clever amateur, a lady, to whom, as a token of his gratitude, the nobleman presented the negative as soon as he had obtained all the pictures he desired.

The notable fact about this figure is that it is made of a combined metal which is known as "shakudo," and which consists of copper, gold and silver, or of "shibu-ichi" (a combination of copper and silver), the proportions being about 90 per cent. of copper and 10 per cent. of gold and silver. That the figure is a beautiful work of art anyone who studies it through a magnifying glass will readily see.

This is not surprising, however, since M. Louis Gonse, speaking of Japanese art metal work, says: "The humblest artisan in this universal outburst of art is superior in his mastery of the metals to anyone we could name in Europe."

Queer Newspapers.

Fourteen years before any newspaper was published in Paris, namely, in 1609, there appeared in Strasburg the first number of a journal, which claimed to be the "leading newspaper in Europe," and which bore the following extraordinary title:

"Full account of all the principal and memorable events which have taken place or which will take place during this year, 1609, in Upper and Lower Germany and also in France, Italy, England, Scotland, Hungary, Moldavia, Turkey and other countries. All the news will be edited as carefully as possible and will be printed exactly as received."

Zoo Smiles.

The young lion who is here shown lazily reclining in a steamer chair is an inmate and a native of the Berlin "Zoo," which has adopted the excellent plan of keeping its young lions in large cages, or rather rooms, and making them well acquainted with their keepers by almost constant association.

The result is that the lions grow up strong and healthy and at the same time quite tame, docile and even affectionate.

Three Curious Epitaphs.

In a cemetery near Dublin the following words appear on a tombstone:

"Here lies John Hurley, whose father and mother died while on their way home from America. If they had lived they would have been buried here."

The following epitaph adorns the tomb of a gravedigger in the Talbach Cemetery in the South of Wales:

"Hurrah, comrades, Parson is dead! If he had lived he would have buried all of us."

Here is another curious epitaph which was recently discovered. It marks the grave of an indefatigable smoker and contains only the following four words:

"My pipe is out."

SILVER PLAQUETTE FOR "WIRELESS PRIZE."

Nowhere have Signor Marconi's notable achievements with wireless telegraphy attracted more attention or evoked greater admiration than in Florence, and in order to convince him that their interest in his work is not transitory the young inventor's friends in that city recently decided to present him with a token of their regard. Accordingly, they consulted Signor Sodini, a well-known artist, and finally they decided that the gift should take the form of a beautiful silver plaquette

The work was designed by Signor Sodini and the accompanying picture shows what the plaquette is like. It is 10 inches by 4½ inches and is in every detail a beautiful work of art. The project of giving a present to the inventor was first broached in the rooms of the Pro Cultura Society, and an inscription on the handsome piece of silver shows that the gift is from this society.

SIXTH BALLOT PROVES FUTILE

No Decision Yet Reached Regarding a Pope.

Guards Doubled to Prevent Any Communication.

Rome, Aug. 3, 6:35 p. m.—A sixth ballot was held this afternoon and proved fruitless. The smoke announcing that fact was seen rising from the Sistine chapel at 6:25 p. m.

Rome, Aug. 3.—Today's first ballot for pope has been taken and apparently resulted in no election. Smoke was observed issuing from the Sistine chapel chimney at 11:16 o'clock this morning, it indicating the burning of the ballots.

Though this is the third morning of the cardinals' imprisonment, they have not yet arrived at a decision. In the hope that over night some agreement might have been arranged, the foreign ministers, many other personages and two or three thousand of the general public went to St. Peters this morning to await the developments. They were doomed to another disappointment, for at 11:16 a. m., like the broken out pennant of a ship, the smoke announcing that the fifth ballot had been fruitless, rose from the chimney of the Sistine chapel and was borne away by the breeze. It was a homeward bound pennant for the crowd, which immediately left the piazza. Many expressed regret at the failure of the ballot. There is a popular feeling that this afternoon's ballot may bring the new pope, but this does not appear to be based on any particular reason.

The correspondent of the Associated Press visited the inside of the vatican this morning and found that all around the precincts of the conclave the guards had been doubled, and wherever there is the slightest possibility of communication with the conclave, the Swiss guards, gendarmes and Palatine guards watched the ground. The antagonism existing between these bodies is the best guarantee that nothing underhand will be allowed. Besides, the captains of the conclave, in their cocked hats and uniforms embroidered with gold lace, assisted by the valets of Prince Chigi, the marshal of the conclave, in gorgeous liveries, are constantly on the alert. The only thing known from inside is that the cardinals rose early today, and individually celebrated mass in the Pauline chapel. They took breakfast at 9 o 'clock, going shortly after to the Sistine chapel, where they remained until about 11:30 a. m.

The piazza of St. Peter's this morning bore the usual appearance of these past days. Italian soldiers occupied two colonnades, and stood about in groups, vainly trying to keep in the shade, the sun being scorching this morning. A new note to the scene was given by a caravan of peasants from the surrounding province, composed of men, women and children, in costume, who have evidently come to Rome for the pope's blessing. The women wore bright red skirts, white bodices, with colored corsets outside, spotless white handkerchiefs on their heads, and sandals laced with leather thongs to the knee. The men were scarcely less gorgeous, in velvet knee breeches, with gold buttons. The group camped in the shadow of the Obelisk, eating watermelon and making so brilliant a picture that all on the piazza, especially the foreigners, feasted their eyes on the characteristic scene.

According to a reliable report from inside the conclave, but one which it is impossible to verify, Cardinal Herrero y Espinoza grew worse to such a point that the last sacraments were administered to him.

It is stated that on the request of Cardinal Herrero himself, the vicar general of his arch diocese of Valencia, Spain, who accompanied the cardinal to Rome, was allowed to enter the conclave and visit him. The cardinal is affected with heart disease. It is reported that artificial respiration is being resorted to.

WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Delegates to Convention of Finnish Temperance Union Return.

They Report That the Convention Was Glowing Success.

The 800 and over of the members of the Finnish Temperance society from the Minnesota iron ranges, who went to Ishpeming to attend the international convention last week, arrived home shortly after midnight this morning.

The party came up on the South Shore and two trains were made up here, one over each road to the ranges.

Capt. John Pengilly, who has been one of the potent influences in building up this society, was a member of the party, and was immensely gratified at the success of the meeting. Congressman J. Adam Bede and Peter Schaefer, of Ely, were also in the party as well as John Heine, an attorney and prominent citizen of Aitkin.

The meeting is reported to have been a great success, and one of the most pleasing features of the whole meeting was that not a delegate or visitor indulged in intoxicating liquor while in that city. The town was filled to overflowing, but there were no complaints on the part of the visitors and all were taken care of in some way, so that no street walking at night was necessary.

The meeting was a great success, and the members from this part of the country were most enthusiastic over it. There were band concerts, speeches and business meetings, and those who attended believe it will add to the strength of the organization.

The members appreciate the value of the society, and on the ranges particularly, it has been an institution of inestimable value. It has been the cause of making a large Finnish population good citizens and reducing the fiery tendencies of a few wild and reckless foreigners, whose influence has not been for the best in the past.

Capt. Pengilly, who has labored early and late for many years in building up the institution, is gratified over its results, and looks upon the members with a sort of fatherly spirit.

There were a great many funny things took place at Ishpeming, and among them was one told by Mr. Schaefer.

One of the Finnish delegates from the East arrived at Ishpeming minus one wife.

He reported the fact of his loss to the officials, and they made inquiry as to where he missed her.

He said:

"It was in a big city. There are a whole lot of big buildings, and they were building another."

Afterwards it was learned that it was Utica, and the wife was brought on and restored to her husband.

SILVER FROM GOLD.

Oregon Chemist Makes Some Interesting Experiments.

Merlin, Ore., Aug. 3.—J. A. Rix, chemist and metallurgist, has made silver from gold and developed a new metal from slate, from which he expects to produce gold. From notes, which were scanned by the government inspectors, it seems he has developed a new metal from commercial slate, abundant here, which has an affinity for the atom of gold and silver, which he calls "Rixum." The theory he has been working on is the disintegration of the atoms into unitions to the silver atom. The process consists of a strong acid solution combined with powerful electric currents and long exposures to their action, causing the destruction of a portion of the atom by electrical conveyance into a similar solution of Rixum.

QUESTION OF JURISDICTION

Over Shanghai Matters Arises Among Ministers.

Pekin, Aug. 13.—The question has arisen among the foreign ministers as to whether they have jurisdiction at Shanghai in the case of the editor and staff of the Chinese reform newspaper (Upoa) published in that city, against whom warrants of arrest have been issued by the Tao Tai of Shanghai on the charge of publishing seditious matter. The Russian, French and American ministers are in favor of surrendering the reformers, while it is understood that the British minister is opposed to taking this step, and is awaiting instructions from London. The conflict of opinion will probably result in no action being taken.

LETTERS OF REGRET

Received By Catholic Societies From Prominent People.

Atlantic City, Aug. 3.—At the early session of the American Federation of Catholic societies today, letters of regret and congratulations were received from President Roosevelt, Apostolic Delegate Falconio and others.

After the appointment of committees, pontifical high mass was celebrated, a sermon of requiem for Pope Leo XIII being preached by Vicar General Fox of Trenton. Rt. Rev. Bishop Messmer of Green Bay, Wis., was the celebrant.

ORDINATIONS FALL OFF.

Paterson, N. J., Aug 3—Figures of the Presbyterian church for 1903 have been issued. The most striking feature is the falling off in the number of ordinations, there being fifty-two fewer this year than the ordinations for 1902. The total membership, however, shows steady growth.

KILLED MAN BY MISTAKE.

Bay City, Mich., Aug. 3.—Capt. Frank Wallace, of a schooner, list night shot and killed George Tasker, an employe of the boat, mistaking him for a burglar.

PROSECUTION RESTS CASE AGAINST JETT AND WHITE

The Commonwealth Attorney Presented Forty-Two Witnesses, Many of Whom Gave Damaging Testimony Against the Alleged Assassins.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 3.—In the Jett and White trial here today Bruce Little, a bailiff of the Breathitt county court during the first trial of Jett and White, testified that he and several men with soldiers captured Tom White after an 18-mile ride over the mountains. After he was taken White said to Little:

"In a few minutes more you would not have gotten me, as I would have left here."

Woodson McCord, sheriff of Clark county, testified that he arrested Jett at his mother's house; that after being arrested Jett asked for whisky, which was not given him, and Jett said:

"I am sorry to be arrested on Sunday, as I would not be taken to Winchester if arrested on any other day. I could be taken to Jackson, where I would be all right."

Witness said he asked Jett where he was when the killing occurred, and Jett replied: "None of your business."

W. H. Bantan, who was recalled by the prosecution, testified that in a conversation with Capt. Ewen the day after the shooting of James B. Marcum, Ewen told him who did the killing on the previous day.

After having presented forty-two witnesses, Commonwealth Attorney Byrd announced that the commonwealth rested the case and court adjourned till afternoon.

BRIDE OF ONLY THREE WEEKS FOUND DEAD IN A BATH TUB

Mrs. Louisa Kelly of St. Paul Suddenly Expires While Bathing—She Was Married to F. J. Kelly on July 7 Last at Chicago.

St. Paul, Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Louisa Kelly, a bride of three weeks, was found dead in a bath tub at her home, 57 Iglehart street yesterday. Mrs. Kelly asked her husband, F. J. Kelly, to prepare the water for her bath. She went to the bath room, but returned to her room, saying that the water was not warm enough.

She re-entered the bath room a few minutes later. Mr. Kelly thought he heard her groaning soon afterward, but did not follow up his suspicions. When his wife did not come out of the room in what he thought a reasonable time, he went to the bath room door and heard her breathing heavily. He forced the lock of the door and found his bride dead in the bath tub.

The body of the woman was found in the bath tub face upward, and as there was no apparent cause of death, Dr. A. W. Miller and Dr. J. M. Finnell held a post mortem examination at the request of the husband. Mrs. Kelly had been suffering from inflammation of the bowels and it was found that death was due to a shock caused by a perforation of the bowels. Mr. Kelly, July 7 last, was married to Miss Louisa Petters in Chicago, and they came to St. Paul a few days ago.

MORE PORTUGUESE FESTIVITIES

Lisbon, Aug. 3.—The marquis of Alvete, the king's chamberlain, has invited Rear Admiral Cotton and United States Minister Ryan to spend Thursday at his chateau of Ulvito.

Shortly after noon today the Portuguese cabinet and military and civil authorities here proceeded in naval barges across the harbor to the Brooklyn, Admiral Cotton's flagship, on board of which an exquisite menu had been prepared for the luncheon to be given in their honor. Rear Admiral Cotton and United States Minister Bryan, with officers of the squadron, received the guests at the gangway.

President Roosevelt's cablegram reply to the message from King Charles, which is published today by the Portuguese newspapers, has created an excellent impression here.

AMERICAN TO MARRY DUKE

Dowager Lady Cook Reported Engaged to Wealthy Noble.

New York, Aug. 3.—A London cablegram to the Herald says: According to the Weekly Whitehall Review there is yet again the rumor of an exciting American alliance. The woman in question is the Dowager Lady Cook. Miss Tennessee Claflin that was, and a wealthy duke whose name the Review for the moment is bound not to reveal. He is one of the wealthiest men in Europe, with half a dozen different castles, including a palace on the Rivera.

Lady Bagot received many lovely jewels as wedding presents. Lord Bagot quite loaded his fiancee with gifts, among other things being an almost priceless pearl ring, as well as a pearl necklace and a tiara of diamonds, also some fine emeralds.

J. Pierpont Morgan sent a diamond head ornament, which was greatly admired, to Miss Breckett, the daughter of Ernest Breckett, on her marriage to Count Otto Czernin last monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvy Haig have left London on an automobile tour for different parts of England. M. Phoklewsky, the charge d' affaires of the Russian embassy, has taken a house for Cowes week, and will entertain among others Consuelo, the duchess of Manchester, and Miss Emily Yznaga.

United States Ambassador and Mrs. Choate have not yet found a house in the country to suit them, and probably will not leave London during the summer. Lily, the duchess of Marlborough, has bought a house at Brighton. Although the west end looks desolate from a society point of view, there are still some smart people left in town. The Princess Hatzfelt is staying on in Berkeley square to the middle of August, as she is awaiting her mother, Mrs. Huntington, who arrives about the 12th.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

Occurs on Railway Between Sucha and Kalvaria.

Berlin, Aug. 3.—A dispatch to the Vilks Zeitung from Breslau reports a serious disaster on the railway between Sucha and Karvaria, Austrian Silesia. A train consisting of eleven cars, heavily loaded with stone, broke their couplings and with terrific speed went down a sharp grade for twenty miles until they collided with a passenger train. Thirty persons are said to have been killed and fifty two others severely injured.

VILLAGE DESTROYED.

Constantinople, Aug. 3.—A conflagration has devastated Armenaki, in the villayet of Adan, Asia Minor. The mosque, the other public buildings, 400 shops and sixty houses were destroyed. There is great distress and a relief fund has been started.

A NATIONAL ORGANIZATION.

Oxford, Mass., Aug. 3.—A national relief organization with branches in every city and town in the United States, with branch No. 1 in her native town of Oxford is proposed by Miss Clara Barton, founder and president of the Red Cross society. The plan has been formulated by Miss Barton in anticipation of the time when she must necessarily lay down the work.

GORMAN EVADES DIRECT QUERY

Does Not Affirm or Deny His Probable Candidacy.

New York, Aug. 3.—Senator Arthur Pue Gorman, of Maryland, who, with his wife, has been in Europe several weeks, returned Saturday night aboard the American liner, New York. The senator was affable, but diplomatic, not to say reticent, with the interviewers. To the question: "Are you a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the presidency?" the senator said: "I am not and never have been considering individually including myself as a candidate. It is not the man, but the good of the party that a good Democrat should think about."

To a reporter who asked the senator if he would support Cleveland if the ex-president would be nominated by the Democrats, Gorman said:

"We have never quarreled. We merely differed."

About the attitude of President Roosevelt toward the negro, Gorman said:

"The negro question is now outside the pale of politics. It is heavier than a political problem."

"Will President Roosevelt's attitude make the South more solid?"

"Oh, the South is solid enough."

"How about financial legislation?"

"Well, I don't know what to think. I understand that the banks are opposed to some of the plans proposed. The Democrats can't do anything this year; besides, I think it is up to the Republicans to frame the necessary legislation."

"What, in your opinion, will be the issues of next year?"

"So far as Democracy is concerned, it seems to me that tariff reform, economy and honesty in public office are issues enough."

"Will you take a prominent part in the next national campaign?"

"I am just a soldier in the ranks."

Senator Gorman intimated that Baltimore had small chance of being selected as the place for the Democratic convention. He expressed no preference for any Democratic candidate for governor of his state.

FIFTY THOUSAND

In List of Revolutionary Soldiers of Cuba.

Havana, Aug. 3.—A list of the revolutionary soldiers entitled to pay has just been completed. The list consists of about 50,000 soldiers and does not include civil employes. Gen. Gomez, the chairman of the commission in charge of the matter, believes the pending loan will not cover more than half the claims.

BOHEMIAN TURNERS.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Aug. 3.—The annual meeting of the Western division of National Bohemian Turners opened today with 100 athletes present from points in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Nebraska and Minnesota and Kansas.

SIXTEEN ARE BADLY HURT

In Collision Between Two Pan Handle Trains.

Passed Flagman Owing to a Very Dense Fog.

Indianapolis, Aug. 3.—A special to the News from Hartford City, Ind., says: A head-on collision, at 2:40 this morning, between a westbound Pan Handle freight and the eastbound passenger, injuring sixteen passengers, some of whom may die. The injured:

W. H. Maul, Logansport, leg cut and bruised; George Aldworth, Chicago, leg crushed; M. L. Bain, Richmond, leg crushed; C. H. Frederick, Ridgeville, Ind., leg broken; J. A. Watts, Chicago, leg cut and dislocated; Christopher Gerhardt, Chicago, legs crushed and hurt internally; William J. Wells, Chicago, legs crushed; P. J. Barrett, legs broken; George Rowe, Logansport, foot crushed; Ben Palaors, Denver, leg bruised; John R. Kling, Logansport, conductor, leg broken and foot bruised; George Galtwein, Chicago, feet bruised and back sprained; E. W. Snyder, foot crushed; W. A. Rumell, Logansport, leg bruised; E. P. Whistler, Logansport, leg and side bruised; Richard Havey, Elmwood, leg broken.

Five or six others were cut and bruised. The accident happened opposite the Clelland factory. The freight was a section of No. 81. It had orders Clelland factory, and let the passenger to get to the lap track, west of the by. A broken drawbar caused six minuates' delay. The engineer sent the brakeman ahead to flag the passenger. The freight stopped at the Washington street crossing, but soon followed the flagman. A heavy fog made it impossible to see fifty feet ahead. Opposite the Clelland factory the flagman saw the passenger coming at full speed. He had just time to give a shout and jump for safety. Both engines were reversed when they met, but the momentum was not checked to any extent. The passenger train consisted of six cars. There were two baggage and express cars, a smoker, a coach and two sleepers. The second baggage car telescoped the smoker, tearing through half its length and sweeping the passengers from its path. The shock threw many from their seats. The passengers from the other cars rushed to the aid of those in the front of the smoker, but it was nearly an hour and a half after the accident before the last one was taken from the wreck of the smoker.

VISIT OF KING TO IRELAND PROVED A GREAT SUCCESS

Issues an Address to the Irish People at Conclusion of Trip In Which He Predicts a Brighter Day Is Dawning.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Aug. 3.—The royal yacht, Victoria and Albert, reached here last evening and King Edward immediately ordered the issue of the following address: To my Irish People: I desire, on leaving Ireland, to express to my Irish people, how deeply I have been touched by the kindness and good will they have shown to the queen and myself. Our experience on previous visits has indeed prepared us for a traditional welcome of a warm-hearted race, but our expectations have been exceeded.

For a country so attractive and a people so gifted, we cherish the warmest regard and it is, therefore, with supreme satisfaction, that I have so often during our stay heard a hope expressed that a brighter day is dawning upon Ireland.

I shall eagerly await the fulfillment of this hope. Its realization will, under Divine Providence, depend largely upon the steady development of self-reliance and co-operation, upon better and more practical education, upon the growth of industrial and commercial enterprise, and upon that increase of mutual toleration and respect which the responsibility my Irish people now enjoy in the public administration of their local affairs, is well fitted to teach. It is my earnest prayer that these and other means of national well being may multiply from year to year in Ireland and that the blessings of peace, contentment and prosperity may be abundantly vouchsafed to her.

EDWARD R AND I.

Their majesties received a great reception on their arrival here. They remained on the royal yacht, where they were visited by the prince of Wales.

Cowes is crowded with people who have come for the week of yachting.

The king will have a busy week. Entertainments, either aboard the royal yacht or ashore, have been planned for each day.

London, Aug. 3.—In replying to an address presented to their majesties at Queenstown, Saturday, the king said that the queen and himself "looked forward to renewing in future years the happy experience of the present visit."

This promise of another visit to Ireland has given the greatest satisfaction throughout the country and the morning papers here all pay tributes to the inestimable service which the king has rendered the realm by his tactful conduct.

The visit is commented on as a great success, which will open a new era of prosperity for Ireland and the address issued by the king at Cowes yesterday is welcomed as a felicitous ending of a memorable journey. Even the Irish papers are enthusiastic, declaring that if only the king will pay a yearly visit or send the prince of Wales, if he cannot come himself, that Ireland's troubles will soon begin to disappear.

Before leaving Queenstown, the king summoned Horace Plunkett, vice president of the department of agriculture and technical instruction for Ireland, aboard the royal yacht and complimented him on his work in Ireland's behalf, conferred the honor of knighthood and presented him with a knight commandership of the Victorian order, saying:

"I wish you to take it as a personal gift from myself."

SOLENT YACHTING SEASON OPENS MOST AUSPICIOUSLY

King and Queen of England and Many Other Notable People Are There—Emperor William's Yacht Wins the Race of Her Class.

Cowes, Aug. 3.—The Solent yachting season, which opened today with matches under the auspices of the Royal London Yacht club, promises to be more than usually interesting. The presence of King Edward and Queen Alexandra guarantees the social success of the week, while the entries for the races will be up to the average. The fleet of pleasure yachts at Cows includes many large steamers, but Mr. Drexel's yacht dwarfs all with the exception of the royal Yacht Victoria and Albert. The other American yachts are Allison Armour's Utowana and Mrs. Robert Goelet's Nahma, while among the racers the German emperor's yacht Meteor is a favorite.

A smart westerly wind was blowing when the fleet of cruisers started on a 30-mile course for a cup worth 60 guineas, presented by the vice commodore of the club. There were five entries. The gaff of Sir James Pender's yawl Brynhilde snapped just before she crossed the line, while immediately after the Therese carried away her bowsprit, leaving Mr. Eckford's Namara, Mr. Danielson's Bona and Mr. Kerr's Valdora to compete for the prize.

The race for the rear-commodore's cup, value 110 guineas, brought out three schooners. The German emperor's Meteor led over the line, with Mr. Quentin's Cicely on her weather beam and Mr. Cayley's Adela close astern. In the course of the first round the Cicely carried away her gaff and the Meteor led to the end of the round with her handicap well in hand. A number of other minor handicap races started.

The king landed at Cowes this morning and visited Consuelo, duchess of Marlborough, who, with her sister, Miss Emily Yznaga, and the Hon. and Mrs. George T. Keppel, are among the guests of M. Poleski at Egypt house.

The Meteor and the Valdora won their respective races.

ST. PAUL BOY ACCIDENTALLY KILLED

St. Paul, Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—George Frederick Merton, 15 years old, and residing with his parents at 999 Oxford street, accidentally shot himself in the abdomen with a rifle yesterday while about to hunt rabbits, and died in a few minutes.

Morton, John Clark and Theobald Thiens, boys of the same age, started on a rabbit hunt after attending services at Andrew's church. Morton had a rifle which he bought last spring, and which his father did not know he possessed.

They went in the neighborhood of the Northern Pacific shops. After amusing themselves for a while, Morton decided that it would be best to have his dog along, and Theobald Thienes was sent after it. Then Morton and Clark lay on the grass.

The gun was beside Morton, the end of the barrel being close to his left side. He had his hand on the automatic loading device and was working it carelessly back and forth, when the safety was released and the gun was discharged. The shot entered the abdomen, tearing the intestines.

GENERAL STRIKE IS ON AT MADRID

Madrid, Aug. 3.—The threatened general strike commenced today in several centers, including Barcelona, Murcia, Cadiz, Ronda and Alcoy. General unrest is largely attributed to bad harvest, but the immediate motive to reinforce the demands for the release of numerous workmen thrown into prison for offenses in connection with the recent strikes. The leaders of the movement are exhorting members of the trades unions not to return to work until all the imprisoned men have been released. The government has taken stringent measures to cope with disturbances, the military forces and the civil guards having been reinforced.

The residence of the mayor and a number of private houses at Alcoha, province of Cadiz, have been attacked by strikers, who exchanged shots with the gendarmes.

AT WEST DULUTH

Peter Richards were aired this morning before Justice Robert Stone.

Two cases were brought before the court, each of the parties being plaintiff in one of them.

Richards accused his wife of deserting her child, an infant of about 18 months, whom he claimed she had left on the street in a baby carriage.

Mrs. Richards laid a counter charge against her husband, accusing him of assault and battery, and of using obscene and profane language before her. T. J. McKeon represented Richards and H. W. Lanners Mrs Richards.

Judge Stone dismissed the first case, in which Mr. Richards was the plaintiff, claiming that the evidence was insufficient to warrant any action.

In the second case the defendant was found guilty of assault, and was sentenced to thirty days in jail at hard labor. The sentence, however, was suspended on condition that Richards should keep away from his wife during that time and not attempt to speak to her.

The two parties in the case testified that they had had some trouble, and had not been living together for some time past. Mrs. Richards refusing to be reconciled to her husband, who had visited the Phillips hotel on the occasion of the alleged assault, for the purpose of inducing his wife to return to him.

She had refused and the judge gave him the sentence for the purpose of preventing him from molesting her.

Salt Rheum

You may call it eczema, tetter or milk crust.

But no matter what you call it, this skin disease which comes in patches that burn, itch, discharge a watery matter, dry and scale, owes its existence to the presence of humors in the system.

It will continue to exist, annoy, and perhaps agonize, as long as these humors remain.

It is always radically and permanently cured by which expels all humors, and is positively unequalled for all cutaneous eruptions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

THE STAGE

"Alabama" will be presented one more time at the Lyceum theater by the Melbourne MacDowell company tonight. The reason for the continuation is that the immense amount of work necessary to properly present "Antony and Cleopatra" will consume more time than at first supposed.

"Alabama" pleased two crowded houses Saturday, standing room being the only thing for sale at the box office after 1:30 o'clock, and the play was pronounced a most delightful one by everyone.

After the Saturday performance Miss Stone rebelled against a Sunday night performance at Superior, on account of her physical condition, she being nearly worn out with the three weeks of hard work in stock performances just passed.

She said that owing to the great strain she would be under for the next week in "Antony and Cleopatra," she would not attempt to disturb her rest on Sunday. The performance was therefore cut, but she was still unable to prepare her part in a manner that suited her, and she induced the management to defer the opening another day.

The whole company is working hard, and the production promises to be one of the finest things seen in Duluth in a long time. The staging will be most elaborate, and the spectacle conceived by the great Sardou will be faithfully carried out.

Matinees of "Antony and Cleopatra" will be given Wednesday and Saturday, and the opening of the play tomorrow night will mark the return to the stage of Melbourne MacDowell, who has been out of the company's cast for the past week and a half.

* * *

The Metropolitan Stock company, beginning tonight, will put on an elaborate production of "The Three Musketeers," a dramatization of Dumas' great novel, made famous by several leading actors. The version here is the one in which Alexander Salvini appeared and made much of his fame. Mr. Forbes will appear as d'Artagnan and Miss Marshall will be seen as Miladi. The latter part of the week "Fanchon" will be given, with Miss Carter in the title role.

JACK IS DEAD.

Amusing Stories About King Edward's Favorite Dog.

London, Aug. 3.—The king's favorite Irish terrier, Jack, is dead. He was first reported as having come to an untimely end by eating rat poison, but the truth appears to be he was choked while feeding. Jack is credited with remarkable sagacity. He usually accompanied his royal master, except on official occasions, when the king said: "It's duty, Jack," and Jack, crestfallen but obedient, instantly retired.

The Illustrated Kennell News tells some amusing stories about Jack. He was curiously fond of gnawing cloth. Sometimes when people thought the dog was lying quietly beside them they found on getting up that he had investigated a coat tail and made a hole in it.

The story is told that at one royal reception Jack was apparently lying beside one well-known foreign ambassador. "I was about to go up to him," says the correspondent, "as we were old chums." "Don't," said a friend. "Jack has chewed up his coat tail (referring to the ambassador.) Let the dog alone. He will eat the coat before he finds it out." There was no doubt of it. Jack was lying there, slowly grinding away.

MET AFTER YEARS

Two Brothers Meet For First Time In Half Century.

Came Across Each Other In Duluth Last Week.

Ole Gunderson, aged 79 years, and Charles Gunderson, aged 75 years, met in Duluth last week for the first time in fifty years. They are now in Minneapolis on a little trip to celebrate the reunion.

There had been no quarrel or other cause of estrangement, but since they were boys together in the fishing fleet at Grimstad, Norway, they have never set eyes on each other.

Ole Gunderson is a guide, hunter and fisherman. He lives on th north shore of Lake Superior, at Chicago bay, and every man in that territory for 100 miles knows Ole for a good, square fellow, with rather more of this world's goods than is acquired by the average fisherman, and a popularity among sportsmen that extends from his own bailiwick among the pines into the very heart of New York. Many New York anglers have really learned their first about landing heavy fish on light tackle from old man Gunderson, and the friends of the old Norwegian who live in Chicago are legion. Scores of Minneapolis and St. Paul men who frequent the north shore know and respect Ole Gunderson for the strongest man at 79 years that ever packed camp dunnage through rough country.

Charlie Gunderson has sailed the salt seas for nearly fifty-five years, but now he is in the fresh water trade, sailing out of Duluth aboard a freight boat, of which he is second officer. The two old men will most likely decide to spend the remainder of their lives in close proximity to each other.

And this is how they met: Ole Gunderson had taken out a party of sportsmen from Minneapolis, including Si Harris, of the cigar firm of Cox & Harris. On the return tour the party stayed a day in Duluth, and while taking a glass of beer in a Zenith City resort to remind them of civilized ways, the attention of Ole Gunderson became attracted to a man of about his own age, who stood at the bar, also with a glass of beer before him.

Gunderson could not understand what made the other old fellow stare at him so persistently, nor did he take kindly to the other old fellow's sudden invitation that Ole and his friends join him in having a drink for old times' sake.

"I don't know you," said Ole, "so how can we drink for old times?"

"You ought to know me," said the other old man, disdaining circumlocution, "because I'm your brother Charlie, and I haven't seen you since the day we made the big herring catch and you were off for the states. That," he added, reflectively, "was fifty-one years ago next May."

At this extraordinary statement Ole Gunderson became intensely interested in his new-made friend. It did not take him thirty seconds to become convinced of the old fellow's honesty or the truth of his story. In two minutes they had become mutually satisfied of the correctness of their first impressions.

The two old men excused themselves from further companionship with the rest of the party and put in the remainder of the evening in renewing the ties of brotherhood severed so long ago. Ole Gunderson heard of the death of his parents and wept over them as though their deaths had occurred yesterday. He learned of the present whereabouts of brothers and sisters, whose existence had been to him but an abstract satisfaction, and letters have already been dispatched which will reunite a family long separated by the exigencies of life in the hard times of fifty years ago.

BIDS HELD OPEN

May Be Further Bids For Constructing Ship Canal Bridge.

John A. Roebling Sons Company Wants to Make a Bid.

Bids for building the aerial ferry were not opened this morning, according to program.

Several members of the bridge commission were unable to be preesnt, and those at the city hall were assured that another bid would be submitted if the commission held off the opening of proposals until late in the afternoon.

It is understood that the second bid comes from a structural steel manufacturing concern at Waukesha, Wis., and the bid is to be made along plans submitted by C. A. P. Turner, the bridge engineer first interested in the local project.

Efforts will also be made to have the commission postpone opening bids for several days, in order that the John A. Roebling Sons company, of New York, may get in a bid for an earial ferry, designed after a suspension bridge style of construction.

The Roebling concern, recognized as one of the strongest independent bridge building companies in the country, built the famous Brooklyn bridge, and also took first honors for suspension bridge work at the Paris exposition.

In a letter received here today, S. A. Cooney, chief engineer of the Roebling concern, says:

"Gentlemen—In a few days we expect to send you our revised plans for the Duluth ship canal transfer bridge.

"We have found a good many points in connection with this matter that have taken a long while to work out, but our entire drawing room force is at present engaged on the same and have been for some time, and it is our intention not to let go of it until we have completed the entire job."

Whether or not the members of the commission would agree to hold over for the Roebling bid, could not be determined, and in fact Mayor Hugo, chairman of the commission, was not certain that any of the bids would be considered today, and asked regarding it at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Claus Tillman Becomes Insane In County Jail.

Claus Tillman, who was given a 30-day sentence in the county jail for vagrancy has developed some unmistakable signs of insanity and this afternoon he will be examined before Judge Middlecoff in probate court at the request of Sheriff Butchart. Tillman for about a week past has been driving the rest of the inmates of the county jail almost to distraction by his cries. He paces up and down his cell and yells almost ceaselessly. Close watch has been kept over him as he threatened to commit suicide. Since his incarceration he has been growing worse and the county authorities believe that Fergus Falls is the proper place for him.

OUTLOOK IS POOR

There Is Little Encouraging to Report About Shipbuilding.

Lake Yards Are Now Well Up With Their Work.

Cleveland, Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Very little of an encouraging nature concerning shipbuilding, or the American merchant marine in the foreign trade of the United States is to be noted in this year's blue book of American shipping, which is just from the press. Rather, indeed, is foreign shipping still dwindling, since no new vessels have been ordered for this service. The blue book, issued annually by the Marine Review, of Cleveland, is a statistical publication and also a directory well known in shipping and shipbuilding circles throughout the country. It contains as an introduction a careful review of conditions prevailing in these lines, from which the following is taken:

Except on the great lakes, where the industry is peculiarly a special one, protected by the coasting regulations, there is little encouraging to report regarding shipbuilding in the United States. Orders have become like the proverbial visits of the angels—few and far between. During the fiscal year ended June 30 last, 1536 vessels of 456,676 gross tons were built in the United States, compared with 1657 vessels of 473,981 gross tons for the previous fiscal year. Vessels now under construction indicate a further lessened output for the coming fiscal year. The principal decrease for the past year has been in steel steamers built on the great lakes, which number forty-one of 133,660 tons, compared with fifty-two of 161,797 tons for the preceding year. The previous year was the one of greatest output in the lake district. On the seaboard eighteen ocean steel steamers of 101,471 gross tons were built—the largest output of this type in our history. Think of it. Eighteen ocean steel steamers in this continent—covering a country with 70,000,000 of souls. Nor were these all for oversea trade. Far from it. Only five of them can properly be credited to that service—the Finland for the Red Star line, the Massachusetts, Mississippi and Maine for the Atlantic Transport line, and the Siberia for the Pacific Mail Steamship company. The Red Star and Atlantic Transport lines are now controlled by the International Mercantile Marine company. All these ships were ordered over two years ago, and there have been no new orders to fill the plans left vacant on the stocks.

A few contracts have been received by the coast shipyards for some splendid vessels for the coastwise service. These include a side-wheel passenger steamer and a freight steamer for the Fall River line, the former to cost $1,000,000, and the latter $400,000, and both to be built by the Fore River Ship and Engine company, Quincy, Mass.; a 400-feet passenger and freight steamer for the Mallory line, of New York, and a similar vessel for the Ocean Steamship company, of Savannah, both to be built at the Roach Shipyard, Chester, Pa.; a 300-feet steamer for the Clyde line, to be built by the cramps, of Philadelphia; a steamer for the Eastern Steamship company, to be about 350 feet long, two steamers for the Ericsson line, each 203 feet long, all to be built by the Harlan & Hollingsworth Co., Wilmington, Del., and four dredges for government service, to be built by the Maryland Steel company, Sparrow's Point, Md. These embrace all that are of any importance.

It might be pertinent to state, since so many laymen appear to be ignorant of it, that the coastwise trade of the United States and the foreign trade are two different things. The coastwise trade, meaning trade between United States ports, is a protected trade. Vessels of other flags may not engage in it. The past four years have marked a distinct revival in shipbuilding for the coastwise trade, but the crest appears to have been reached, for new orders are not forthcoming. The novelty of the coasting trade during the past year has been the construction of the seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson.

Since the Spanish-American war naval contracts have been well distributed among the coast shipbuilders. During the year contracts for four battleships, two armoured cruisers and two gunboats have been given to them. Contracts for two more battleships are about to be given, and in addition the New York navy yard is building one battleship. Forty-one warships are at present under construction, representing a diplacement of 338,948 tons, a total horse power of 415,500, and costing for hulls and machinery $90,314,516.

During the year the United States Shipbuilding company was formed to take over the plants of the Union Iron works, San Francisco; the Bath Iron Works and Hyde Windlass company, Bath, Me.; the Eastern Shipbuilding company, New London, Conn.; the Harlan & Hollingsworth company, Wilmington, Del.; the Crescent Ship Yard, Elizabethport, N. J.; the Canda Manufacturing company, Carteret, N. J., and Samuel L. Moore & Sons, Elizabethport, N. J. Later the plant of the Bethlehem Steel company was added, Charles M. Schwab transferring it to the shipbuilding company, though retaining an issue of $10,000,000 in bonds as an exclusive lien upon the property. In addition he received $20,000,000 in stock, equally divided between preferred and common. It was soon found that the shipbuilding company was capitalized far beyond its tangible assets and earning power, though the subsidiary plants themselves were in a thoroughly healthy condition. The inevitable result was failure to meet the fixed charges upon its sheaves of securities, and the court was under the necessity of nominating a receiver for it. The unfortunate plight of this company is no reflection whatever upon shipbuilding as a thoroughly sound and excellent business; it is merely another evidence of the folly fo supposing that values are created by artificial means. plant is worth no more than it can earn.

A foreview of shipbuilding on the great lakes does not show many orders in abeyance. A year ago the ship yards were filled up with orders for a full year ahead. But that is not the case now. The lake ship yards, broadly speaking, are now well up with their work. If they had to do so they could probably turn out all orders on hand within six months. Those best informed however, do not take a dubious view of things on the great lakes. The industry, as stated before, is special; the ships are not like other ships; the shipping is not like other shipping; it is not made up fo a multiplicity of things, as is ocean carriage, but is congfined to a few items in bulk; these items are likely to continue to be moved for years in a constantly ascending scale, and ships will continue to be built to carry them. Moreover, a fair part of existing tonnage on the lakes is wooden; it is old and decaying and must go the way of all craft; and it must be replaced by new and more modern carriers. Thus shipbuilding on the lakes for many years is assured, although the number of orders for the coming year will fall considerably below the business of any of the past three years.

TAX LEVY LARGER

City's Expenses May Necessitate An Increase This Year.

City Hall People Think Duluth Is Economically Run.

Despite constant efforts to be economical, indications are that the natural growth of the city will cause an increase in current municipal expenses next year.

An instance of this is shown in a rough estimate for next year's requirements prepared by the board of public works. It is estimated that $114,000 will be required to run the department of public works and building inspecting department. Last year it was estimated that $108,000 would be required, but the conference committee and council limited this department to $106,000.

Mayor Hugo says that all department estimates must be as conservative as possible, and pays a very handsome compliment to the heads of the various departments for the economical administration of finances during the current year.

It is claimed that the estimate of $114,000 prepared by the board of public works is conservative, but even at that it will be cut down considerably before it goes in the 1904 tax levy for city purposes.

According to reliable figures prepared by several municipal publications Duluth, during the past year, was one of the most economically administered cities in the 60,000 class and about the city hall there seems to be a general desire to get the record in this respect for next, but it is claimed that Duluth should really be figured in the 70,000 class by that time.

The anual effort is being to get an appropriation for a fire tug included in the next year's levy. Commercial interests along the water front are making a loud demand for it and it is probable that the council and conference committee will take the matter up when ocnsidering the fire department appropriation.

MISSING BOY IS FOUND

Duluth Lad Missing For Several Days Finally Located.

The lost has been found and is on his way home to his parents, who have been beside themselves for half a week.

Word was received this noon that he was coming home.

Alfred J. Bawden, of 203 Eleventh avenue west, has been missing since Friday and his father, A. H. Bawden, has been greatly concerned over his whereabouts and safety.

The last he heard from him was Friday, when he received a telegraphic message from the boy asking for money. The message read:

"Easton, seasick. Send money at once. Alfred Bawden."

Mr. Bawden said this morning he sent the money, and the telegraph company said the money had been delivered.

That was the last trace of the lad in the possession of his father, and the latter was prepared to leave for Houghton and the copper country in search of the boy, until he heard from him at noon today.

Alfred Bawden is 15 years of age. He was graduated from the Emerson graded school this spring, and declared upon finishing the eighth grade that he wished to work during vacation time, and before starting in the high school.

He wanted to be a sailor on the lakes.

So his father, a few weeks ago, arranged for him to ship as a cabin boy on the steamer Easton. The boy stayed on the run until last week, when he left the boat at Houghton, and sent the message his father received.

Since that the whereabouts of the boy could not be found, not a trace remaining to show what became of him, though the police were called in the chase.

Mr. Bawden applied to the police, but could find out nothing through their inquiries. He has relatives at Eagle Harbor, but they knew nothing of the boy, and a relative in Houghton wired back that he had seen nothing of him.

BRITISH PLAYS INCREASE.

Will Be Prominent During Coming London Season.

London, Aug. 3.—London writers on dramatic subjects are taking credit to themselves on the ground that during the coming autumn season drama in England will be more in evidence than has been the case for some years.

"Not one single important play of continental or American origin" says one critic, "is definitely settled for production except Clyde Fitch's 'The Climbers,' though there is some prospect of London seeing another transatlantic play called 'Pretty Peggy.' Add to these the musical play 'Dolly Varden,' in which Mabelle Gillman—whose name, by the way, is printed as Mabel Gillean—will be seen at the Avenue, and one has the whole of what has been grandiloquently called the American invasion."

This invasion, too, the critic goes on to point out, is counterbalanced by the exodus to merica of Irving. Marie Tempest, G. P. Huntley, Charles Hawtrey, Mrs. Longtry and Martin Harvey. To this list should be added Forbes Robertson.

Mme. Rejane thinks the English stage would be benefited by a school of acting. In an article in the National Review she attributes the excellence of French actors and actresses to the conservatoire which the state subventions.

"If," says Mme. Rejane, "for our army of actors the conservatoire doesn't give as many generals as one might expect. If especially it doesn't hasten the full development of the particular merits of its students, nevertheless it furnishes us with a regular supply of strong lieutenants and good soldiers, whose help is not to be disdained in the hour of battle."

Rejane strongly urges the English to found a similar school, but on a wider basis. In some quarters it is thought Beerbohm Tree's scheme for the foundation of a school for acting may meet some of the needs to which Rejane draws attention, but in other quarters it is argued that individual effort can never accomplish so much as could be expected from a national institution.

THEY ASK DELAY

Minnesota Lumbermen Want Time to Cut Reservation Timber.

Will Ask Legislature to Petition For Ten Years Time.

The lumbermen of Minnesota who are interested in the delay of the opening of the Cass Lake Indian reservation are about to petition the state legislature to extend its aid in the matter by passing a resolution requesting the president of the United States that a period of ten years be given in which to remove the 1,200,000,000 feet of Chippewa pine estimated to be on the reservation.

The initiative in the matter has been taken by the Minneapolis lumbermen, and next Thursday a banquet is to be given in Minneapolis to the legislators, at which the matter will be broached. The movement for the modification of the time clause in the cutting of the pine is said to be in charge of Lieutenant Governor Ray W. Jones, who was in Duluth recently, with Senators Calhoun and E. E. Smith, for the purpose of getting the signatures of Senators Laybourn, Pugh and Hawkins. The original purpose was to visit every senator and make a personal appeal, but this was dropped because of the time it would consume. The invitations were then sent out by Lieutenant Governor Jones for the banquet.

The bill authorizing the sale of timber from the Chippewa reservation was backed in the house by Congressman Page Morris and in the senate by Senator Nelson. The time for the cutting o fthe timber was left to the discretion of the secretary of the interior. That official, acting on the sentiment that if the reservation was to be opened there should be no delay, prescribed the shortest time possible for the removal of the timber. The Minnesota loggers claim that it is impossible to get so large a cut out of the way in one season. It has also been claimed that the throwing of so much new lumber on the market in so short a period would be disastrous to the lumbermen, because it would force down prices.

It is also claimed as an argument against the proposed short time for the cutting of the timber, that as soon as it is removed the country will not immediately settle up, and the jobbing interests will derive no benefit from the sale. If the cutting is made to extend over a period of years the country will settle as it is cleared up, so that when the last of the timber is cut the jobbers will have a new field to work in, they claim.

The amount of timber advertised to be sold in December and cut before 1905 is a little over 200,000,000 feet, which is only a small percentage of the annual cut of the concerns at the head of the lakes. This amount would be divided among different lumber companies, so that it is claimed there would be no delay in removing the amount advertised in the time scheduled. Information from Washington indicates that Secretary Hitchcock proposes to give ample time for the removal of each subsequent batch when advertised and sold, and he has repeatedly stated there would be no undue haste.

The intention of the Morris law was for the selling of the timber and the opening of the reservation for settlement at the earliest date, and it is claimed that the protracted delays up to the crescent time have been followed by destruction and timber stealing in parts of the reservation.

Those opposed to the delay lay the blame of the present trouble on large Minneapolis lumber concerns, who are said to have a large amount of pine on their hands now, and who wish to postpone the cutting of the Chippewa pine until they are able to dispose of their own and buy the cut from the Chippewa lands.

Machinist Drowned Under the Falls Near Iron Mountain.

Iron Mountain—Frank Behlm, a machinist of Menominee, was drowned this week in the Menominee river two miles from Iron Mountain. Behlm moved to Iron Mountain several years ago from Menominee and was employed in the hydraulic works there. Shortly after supper four employes of the hydraulic works—Behlm, Thomas Corne, Angelo Izzo and another man—took a boat and began rowing around the pool below the hydraulic falls. They had not been on the water long before their boat was caught by a strong current and, in spite of all they could do, were carried toward the falls. The men all jumped into the water, and three of them swam for the shore. It seems that Frank Behlm, either could not swim, or he became so excited that he lost all reason, for he hung onto the boat that was drifting at a terrific rate of speed toward destruction. The boat and the unfortunate young man were caught under the falls.

The Dickinson county board of supervisors adopted the following resolution at its meeting at Iron Mountain: "Whereas, on the evening of July 13 last, the Hon. Peter White, of Marquette, presented to Dickinson county a beautiful life-sized portrait of Hon. Don. M. Dickinson, of Detroit, after whom this county was named, painted by Mr. Ives, of Detroit, now, therefore, be it resolved, that we acept this beautiful painting and accord it the place of honor in our court house and that the thanks of this board be and they are hereby extended to the Hon. Peter White for securing us this beautiful painting, and that the county clerk be and he is hereby requested to spread this resolution on the minutes of this meeting, and send a copy of same to the Hon. Peter White."

Escanaba—J. C. Kilpatrick and H. W. Reade, of the Pittsburg & Lake Superior Iron company, etarted to drive to the Soo depot at Escanaba the other night to meet a train. The night was rather dark and the buggy in which the gentlemen were riding, strusck a stump alongside the Flat Rock road, just within the city limits. As the team was going at a lively pace, the shock threw Mr. Kirkpatrick out and he fell with such force that his collar bone was fractured and he was quite severely bruised otherwise. The horses were somewhat frightened and might have run away had not Mr. Kirkpatrick held firmly on to them.

Gladstone—A petition was recently filed in the Delta county circuit court for a writ of mandamus to compel Mayor Sourwine to sign a certain order in favor of a book publishing house in payment of a bill for books which had been received by the new Carnegie library, the payment to be made out of the $2500 appropriation voted by the council, but which the mayor declares illegal. The mayor, through his attorney, filed an answer to the petition in which he alleged, among other things, that there was no money in the general fund at the time the appropriation was made. This raised a question of fact to be tried by a jury and as the last term of court was a non-jury term, the court has now ordered issue framed and the case continued until the October term.

VERY GOOD SEASON

Log Towing on Lake Superior Has Continued Very Active.

Barnett & Record Company Contracts Large Supply of Piles.

The log-towing season on Lake Superior has been a very favorable one. In fact, the lumbermen claim they have never before had so good a season.

The record shows only one raft lost thus far during the season at this end of the lake. A great deal of log towing has been carried on, but there have not been so many hard northeast storms as have usually occurred in former years to break up the rafts and scatter the logs.

Plenty of water in the driving streams tributary to the lake has helped a great deal in the way of getting the log supplies out of the country, and most of the streams are pretty well cleaned up. This is true particularly of the Cloquet river near Duluth and Cross river on the north shore, the two largest driving streams in Northern Minnesota.

The Barneft & Record company has closed a contract with the Edward Hines Lumber company to furnish 8000 40-foot piles to be used in the foundation work of the new elevator which is to be constructed at Port Arthur. The contract is said to be the largest of its kind in the Northwest this year. The piling will come from points along the Hines company logging road in Northern Wisconsin.

The Burlington Lumber company, of Iowa, is shipping 14,000,000 feet of logs this season from Cass Lake to its mill. About 8,000,000 feet have already been sent on the way, and the rest will be shipped during the next two weeks.

The Scott-Graff Lumber company will begin very shortly to saw 1,000,000 feet of lumber for itself, following the closing up of the Richardson & Avery contract. Under this contract the Scott-Graff company has handled the log from the tree until it was turned out finished lumber. The present contract covered between 50,000,000 and 60,000,000 feet, and the mill has been operating on it since last October.

Among the rail shippers of logs the McAlpine Lumber company is getting to be a large factor. The company is bringing down from its camps near Mile 46, on the Duluth & Iron Range road, about thirty carloads of logs daily to the St. Louis mill. The Brooks-Scanlon company is shipping about the same amount to the Clark-Jackson mill, and will for a month longer, when its contract will probably be completed.

From 90 to 100 cars of logs are being turned over to the Duluth & Iron Range road daily at Knife river from the Duluth & Northern Minnesota road. All this log hauling makes the summer business of the Iron Range road larger in volume than during any previous season.

The logging business along the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road is showing rapid gains, and the indications point toward a very large business along the line this coming winter. The company is now bringing logs to the Virginia mill for the Taber Lumber company and other concerns that have contracted to deliver logs at Stillwater and other Minnesota and Iowa points.

The Empire Lumber company, of Pittsburg, Pa., and Cleveland, Ohio, has removed its branch office from Menominee, Mich., to Duluth. Its interests here are being represented by J. D. Elliott.

TWO SMOOTH GRAFTERS

Pawning Bogus Diamonds for the Real Thing and Making Good, Local Man Is Duped

Buffalo, July 12.—A couple of smooth grafters are coming this way with a scheme that seems to "make good." A traveling man at the Iroquois this morning stated that these grafters have loaded their grips up with bogus diamonds, which they are peddling out to people about the country. The so-called stones are mounted without a mirror background, and were procured of the Transvaal Diamond company of New York, and it seems that the brilliancy is about the same as in the genuine diamond. The stones are so much like the real thing that the grafters have succeeded in pawning them at loan shops about the country and have secured large sums from hotel proprietors, to whom they have told a tale of woe, on the stones.

They purchase a three carat stone for about $1.50. With this stone they have realized in some instances as high as $100, the value of the stone, provided it be genuine, being about $300. The strangest part about these stones is that they can be put to every test the genuine diamond can and will stand it. The diamond merchants about Buffalo have been notified of these "sharks," and as a result are skpetical about any stone that comes into their place. A local newspaper man visited a few of the pawn shops regarding the bogus stones. One of the pawnbrokers, who insists that his name should not be used, said:

"I am willing to confess that I have been duped by the Transvaal diamond. A man came in here last week and wanted a loan on his stone. I looked it over and it looked good to me. In fact, I have been handling diamonds for twenty years and I actually bit on that 'bum stone.' It was just as brilliant as any diamond I ever held in my hands and I gave it the usual test. It proved 'all right.' One day while examining the stone I found the word 'Transvaal' on the inside of the ring. I had been reading the papers and knew in an instant that I had been duped! I have said nothing and do not want anything said about it, for I am sore to think that after my twenty years' experience I should be duped in such a manner."

TOOK THE SERIES

Duluth Won Saturday's Winnipeg Game In the First Inning.

Long Series to Be Held on the Home Grounds.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Winnipeg	47	18	.723
Grand Forks	39	24	.619
Crookston	36	28	.563
Fargo	29	37	.439
Duluth	25	38	.347
Superior	16	42	.275

Pretty bunting, an error, a passed ball, and a wild pitch gave Duluth Saturday's game at Winnipeg in the first inning.

After the first Shaw and Bartos fought out a pretty pitchers' battle and the Cardinal twirler got a shade the better of it.

It is the first time this season that a visiting team has taken a series from the Champions on their own grounds and indicates that the Duluth team is playing a fast, sassy game.

"Demon" Shaw pitched himself out of several critical holes, striking out heavy hitters when a single would have given Winnipeg enough runs to win out.

The score was as follows:

Winnipeg	2 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—2	4	1

In a great ten inning game at Fargo yesterday Crookston was defeated 1 to 0. This boosted Fargo up into fourth place again but as that team has to play Duluth five games this week in this city it is probable that the local bunch can regain the lost ground and come pretty near clinching the position for the remainder of the season.

Crookston	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0	5	2

Pitchers—Foulkes and Martin.

The Duluth team arrived home this morning, and, with the exception of three games at Grand Forks and three at Winnipeg, will play on the home grounds until the end of the season, Sept. 8.

The players are feeling as good over taking the series from Winnipeg as the fans at home, and all are anxious to take the series from Grand Forks.

Two strangers came in with the bunch.

D. J. LANDAHL,
President Northern League.

They are Wilson, an out-fielder picked up in Fargo, and Casselbrie, who has been playing second base for Duluth since his release by Superior.

Here the team has been joined by Outfielder Bradley and Infielder Morrity, secured from Chicago, and these men will be given a tryout in the Grand Forks series.

Since Illness retired Murphy from third base Quillod has been playing that position in a way that has opened the eyes of the fans all around the circuit. He is also hitting well.

* * *

A home run at Winnipeg is a feat seldom achieved but Wilkes turned the trick nicely in Friday's game. He straightened out one of Corbett's shoots for about the longest hit seen in Manitoba this year.

* * *

The board of control of the Northern league met at the Spalding yesterday and discussed finances and protested games. It was decided that Infielder Laxdal should have full powers in settling protests and the finances of the league were talked over at considerable length.

In view of a general falling off of attendance at Crookston it was decided to transfer the remaining Crookston-Duluth games to this city. The board then adjourned but there will probably be another meeting soon at Grand Forks to consider plans for next year.

Among those that attended were: D. J. Laxdal, of Cavalier, N. D.; E. H. Kent, of Grand Forks; W. J. Liverman, Grand Forks; E. C. Cooper, of Grand Forks; Scott Karns, of Grand Forks; R. J. Smith, of Winnipeg; W. S. Lycan, of Crookston; Len Van Praagh, of Duluth; E. A. Rush, of Fargo and C. A. Marshall, of Superior.

While the matter did not come up in an official way there is some talk of adding Eau Claire, Ashland and Bemidji to the circuit for next year. Eau Claire would probably replace Crookston, where the attendance has been ridiculously low during the entire season.

* * *

After dinner baseball will be tried on the Duluth fans Thursday and Friday. Duluth has two postponed games to play off with Fargo and it is proposed to start the regular games at about 3:30 and the postponed games at 6:15 each evening. With good weather it is probable that a large number of people that cannot attend the regular afternoon games will turn out for the evening events.

* * *

F. C. Braig is the name of the new Northern league umpire selected to fill Cusack's place. He will be seen for the first time in the Duluth-Grand Forks series.

* * *

Umpire Owens has resigned to accept a position in the Central league.

* * *

Grand Forks is after a pitcher named Snooks, now with Fort Dodge, Iowa. They threaten to try him on Duluth first.

* * *

McCoy, who has been mixing home runs, three baggers, doubles and timely singles all the way around the circuit, says he still has a few left for home distribution.

* * *

Jim Burns, the Fargo twirler has at last rounded into form and is pitching good ball.

SHOT FROM AMBUSH

Escaped Convicts Caught Soldiers In Cleverly Laid Trap.

Placerville, Cal., Aug. 3.—A report received last evening states that four convicts, not believed to be the same who ambushed the officers Saturday night, were discovered near Lotus, in the Webber creek district, by a posse. A number of shots were exchanged, but so far as known without result.

The five who engaged in a fatal fight with pursuers at the Grand Victory mines Saturday night have not been seen since, and apparently have made a successful retreat. In their haste to get away from the militia and sheriff's posse they left a water can, several hats and some firearms on the hillside where Saturday night's conflict occurred.

The dead body of Festus Rutherford and Jones, the two militiamen who were shot by the outlaws, were found yesterday morning where they had fallen. Jones had served in the Philippines as a member of the First Tennessee and the Thirty-seventh U. S. Volunteer infantry. Al. Gill, the National Guardsman who was shot through one lung, is now expected to recover.

Another victim was Philip Springer, a resident of this district. He is hard of hearing, and, failing to respond to an order to halt, was fatally shot by a picket early yesterday morning.

Saturday night's fight between the convicts and members of Company H of the state militia was an ambush. Lieut. Smith and seven men were pursuing a trail that had been discovered earlier in the day. The first intimation of the presence of the convicts was when the latter opened fire on them at close range from hiding places in the bushes.

Three members of Lieut. Smith's squad fell at the first volley. They were Rutherford, Jones and Gill. The soldiers returned the fire of the outlaws, and at the same time retreated down the hill, leaving the fallen men to take care of themselves. Gill managed to make his way down the hill to a place of safety, and was then picked up by friends and carried to the mine. Fearful of the bullets of the convicts, the pursuers made no attempt to get back to the scene of the battle to learn the fate of the other two men.

News of the battle spread quickly to Placerville and the surrounding country, and by 9 o'clock the hill was surrounded by a large force, including the entire strength of the Placerville company. Nearby, and co-operating with the militiamen, was a posse of citizens from Placerville, headed by the sheriff's son, Dallas Bosquit. They were within sound and sight of the fighting, but dared not fire for fear of hitting the militiamen.

Lieut. Smith says there were four convicts in the band that opened fire on his men, but he was unable to identify any of them except the negro, Seavis.

It was impossible to have a cordon extended around the hill for some hours. The cordon covered nearly two miles, and required over 100 men. Before the picket lines could be formed, it is quite possible that the convicts got away eastward along the creek. It is thought that the plan of the convicts is to shoot their pursuers from ambush, and take chances on getting away afterwards.

RAILROAD PICNIC

Event at Two Harbors Was the Biggest Ever Held.

In Spite of Weather, 5000 People Enjoyed a Good Time.

The annual picnic of the employes of the Iron Range road, at Two Harbors, Saturday was one of the largest and most successful outings ever held by the railroad men and their families, in spite of the weather. It is estimated that the attendance was in the neighborhood of 5000, special trains running from the extremes of the two ranges.

The picnic was held really by the employes of three roads, the Duluth & Iron Range, the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Duluth & Northern Minnesota.

It was "Range Railroaders' day" in Two Harbors, and the railroad men owned the town.

The trains from Proctorknott, Duluth and Knife River took about 1000 people to Two Harbors, and these were met by a large delegation of citizens. The whole town was gaily decorated for the big event.

The committees of the railroad employes' organization had the affair well in hand and nothing was lacking in the way of arrangements, everything passing off without an unpleasant feature or hitch. The weather was not the best for a picnic, but the people were well taken care of and they enjoyed the day.

The main center of attraction was Lakeview park. Here occurred the games and contests and the lunches.

The sports began shortly after 1 o'clock in the afternoon, opening with a warm baseball contest between the teams from Two Harbors and Proctorknott. The two Harbors team won the $50 purse by a score of 11 to 7.

Following is the list of prize winners in the contests:

300-yard dash—George Mills, Two Harbors, first; Lens Glasford, Two Harbors, second; Lee Spurbeck, Two Harbors, third. Time, :55.

300-yard hurdles—John Cable, Two Harbors, first; Willis Irwin, Two Harbors, second. Time, 1:10.

CLOQUET MAN IS BADLY HURT

He Breaks Two Ribs In a Runaway Accident Here.

R. E. Griffith, of Cloquet, is suffering from two broken ribs and some severe bruises, as the result of a runaway accident, which occurred last evening while he was on his way from Cloquet to the city.

Mr. Griffith was accompanied by Percy Vibert and George Richardson. Mr. Griffith, in the dark, drove to the wrong side of a red lantern, which marks the excavation for the new tracks of the street railway at Sixtieth avenue west and Grand. The team became frightened and started to run. Griffith and his companions jumped, and Griffith fell heavily to the ground, breaking two ribs.

The team was stopped by some boys near the Missabe tracks at the head of Central avenue. Griffith and his companions took a car for the city, but as he did not go to any of the hospitals, it is not thought his injuries will be serious.

STABBED BY ITALIANS.

Well Known Citizen Of Canton, Mass., Killed.

Canton, Mass., Aug. 3.—Hiram H. Poole, a baker, and one of the best known citizens of Canton, was stabbed to death last night on Sherman street, not far from his residence, by one of a party of three Italians. His assailants fled after the murder and have not been arrested.

There were no other persons on the street at the time of the murder, and there were no witnesses of what transpired, save the principals themselves. It is certain that there was a dispute of some kind, and residents of the neighborhood were startled by Mr. Poole's cries for help.

He was stabbd three times, twice in the neck and once in the breast, but managed to stagger into Washington street, a distance of 500 feet, and fell, dying in the street directly in front of the public library. His cries were answered by many citizens, some of whom caught a glimpse of the fleeing Italians, but were unable to effect their capture.

The Blue Hill Street Railway company employ a large number of Italians upon its construction work, and it is believed that these three were members of that gang.

THE YACHT RACES

Good Stiff Breezes Makes Them a Very Lively Game.

Fulton, of Superior, Wins Handsome Panton & White Trophy.

With a stiff breeze and the white-caps rolling in the harbor, the keenest kind of sport was the feature of the races of the Duluth Yacht club, held Saturday afternoon.

The winners in Classes A and B were Mildred J and Skip Jack. Sweeheart won in the class D race for cat-boats, while the Class C race was declared off, the Fritz being the only boat to start in that class.

The races were all closely contested, Mildred J winning hers only by reason of her time allowance of 5 minutes and 24 seconds.

The start was a good one, the entire bunch making the first buoy with less than a minute between any of them. The Siren led the procession from the start and passed over the line in that position, losing to the Mildred J, however, on her time allowance. The Betsy Jane was a close third.

The feature of the day was the excellent showing made by the Skip Jack, a low flat craft, that is the only one of its class in Duluth. She covered the course in faster time than the Besty Jane, which sailed in Class A, and surprised even her owner with the excellent showing made. The Margrave finished second in this class, pushing the Skip Jack hard at times, although the latter won by a good margin.

The Naiad was disabled shortly before the race, and the Fritz was the only boat to start in the C class. It covered the course once and then pulled into the club house.

The Sweetheart and Stroller had a pretty brush for first place in the race for cat-boats, the Sweetheart winning, without the aid of her time allowance of about a minute.

The club will hold a series of three races, to be held on three consecutive Saturdays. The winners will be required to take two out of three events. The following prizes have been determined on by the club: Class A—First prize, club pennant "1903"; second prize, club cap, with club monogram. Class B—First prize, club burgee, "1903"; second prize, club pin. Class C—Prize pennant. Class D—Club cap with emblem.

SUPERIOR MAN WINS.

Takes Panton & White Trophy From Duluth Shooters.

Much to the disappointment of many of the Duluth members of the gun club, the handsome Panton & White trophy was won yesterday by the Superior member, Fulton.

By his victory he is entitled to the possession of the cup for one year, and if he wins it again within two years, will be given permanent possession of the beautiful trophy.

His victory has been well won, and his competitors have but one regret, which is that Mr. Fulton does not live in Duluth.

The weather was unfavorable yesterday for good shooting, the mist and wind making it very difficult to judge the birds. In spite of this, however, the sport was keen, Nelson and Cap pushing the winner hard for first place, and finishing only three birds behind him. Luck in the manner in which the birds ran was a large factor in the shoot, as a number of low fast ones were thrown from the trap, which were practically impossible to kill. Nelson had the misfortune to receive three of these in succession at a critical time in the shoot, and he failed to get any of them.

The scores made yesterday and totals of each of the contestants for the season are as follows: Fulton, 88-529; Nelson, 86-526; Storey, 75-515; Warren, 80-510; Cap, 85-510; Bob, 75-456.

THE LEADERS WIN.

Kelley-How-Thompson Nine Keeps Its Lead.

In a fast exhibition game played Saturday afternoon, the Kelley-How-Thomson team won out from the Patrick nine by the score of 3 to 1 after five innings' play.

The regular scheduled game was postponed, owing to wet grounds, neither team being willing to have the result decided under unfavorable conditions, and the exhibition game was played in its place.

The game was a pitchers' battle between Menice and McDougal, with the odds slightly in favor of the former. He had seven strike-outs and two assists to his credit. McDougall having the same number of strike-outs, but allowing the hardware men a couple of extra hits.

Berlin, of the Kelley-How-Thomson nine, opened the game by hitting the first ball pitched over the right field fence for a home run.

The Patrick men also scored in the first inning by a couple of errors and a hit. No further scoring was done until the fourth when the hardware men secured two on a combination of hits, errors and a sacrifice.

The score by innings is as follows:

Kelley-How-Thomson	1 0 0 2 0—3
F. A. Patrick	1 0 0 0 0—1

HUNGARIAN BRIBERY.

Budapest, Aug. 3.—Evidence given before the bribery commission, although largely hearsay, is regarded as seriously compromising the independent party and the Hedervary government. Premier Hedervary will have to explain, Monday, and unless he can fully clear himself, it is feared he cannot retain office long. Count Szapary's testimony created a very unfavorable impression. Under cross-examination he refused to answer so many of the questions that the only inference to be drawn is that several others are implicated, and that large sums were expended.

The Tyfold Collar

The picture shows how the collar is cut out on each side to allow for adjusting a neck tie without springing the collar open. The collar comes close together in front, it keeps the tie in place and you don't see the cut-out part. Besides the tie is retained just over the button, which is also kept out of sight. Your summer comfort will be increased if you wear one, and you'll thank us for the style. Dealers sell them.

INSULTS PRESIDENT.

An Unpleasant Incident Occurred at Oyster Bay.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Profane and abusive language was directed toward President Roosevelt and his family yesterday as they were driving up to Christ church here, to attend the morning service. The offender was a resident of Oyster Bay named McCann. He was hustled away from the church unceremoniously by the secret service operatives.

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and two of their children, the president had driven to the village from Sagamore Hill to attend church service, as is their custom on Sunday mornings. Directly in front of Christ church, the man, McCann, was walking along the roadside pushing a bicycle. As the president's carriage was about to turn into the driveway leading to the church grounds, it passed McCann. Without provocation, the man, with an offensive oath, demanded to know whether they wanted the whole road. This was followed by abusive and profane language. As the carriage stopped at the church door, the president, greatly annoyed at the insult offered to Mrs. Roosevelt and the children, alighted and directed the attention of the secret service officers to the man and ordered that he be compelled to leave the vicinity of the church. McCann resisted when ordered to move on, but as an officer was about to stimulate his movements, he sprang on his wheel and rode away rapidly. While the incident was annoying to the president and his family, it is his desire that no action be taken against the man.

VALUABLE GEMS STOLEN.

Hawaiian Woman Loses Jewelry of Great Value.

Honolulu, Aug. 3.—Mrs. Samuel Parker has been robbed of $80,000 worth of jewelry, consisting chiefly of diamonds, rubies and solitaire studs. She wore them on Sunday night at a reception held to signalize the opening of a new hotel. Several hours later the thief or thieves entered her room and stole many of the gems she had displayed. Mrs. Parker, who is the wife of Col. Samuel Parker, one of the wealthiest men in Hawaii, was widow of J. K. Campbell, who left her one-third of his $4,000,000 estate. She was married to Col. Parker about a year and a half ago and on the same day her eldest daughter was married to Prince David.

AUSTRIAN MINER HURT.

Caught Between Cage and Shaft at Savoy Mine.

Ely, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Anton Schuster, an Austrian miner, while about to board the cage at the Savoy mine, had the misfortune to get caught between the cage and the shaft and sustained severe injuries to his spine and lower limbs. He was taken to the Shipman hospital where his wants were attended to. The doctors express the opinion that he may recover. Schuster is unmarried and about 30 years of age.

SIX MEN KILLED.

Somerset, Ky., Aug. 3.—Through a misunderstanding of orders two Queen & Crescent freight trains, both double headers, collided head-on between Cumberland Falls and Greenwood, killing six men, fatally injuring one and seriously injuring another. The bodies of Fireman Joseph Philipps, Frank Fletcher and —— Walters and an unknown man were recoved. The dead bodies of two brakemen, whose names were not learned, are known to be buried under the debris, where forty cars were wrecked. One of the engines was wrecked and the other badly damaged.

TROOPS FIRE ON RIOTERS.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 3.—There are reports that there were fresh collisions between the troops and strikers on the trans-Caucasian railway near Tiflis last Thursday. The troops were ordered to fire upon the rioters, who were using revolvers, with the result that twenty-one workmen were killed. The removal of a rail by the strikers wrecked a trans-Caucasian train. Twelve carriages were smashed and two persons killed. It is asserted here that the Armenians are inciting the strikers.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Man and Woman Meet Death At Northboro.

Northboro, Mass., Aug. 3.—Frank Foss, while on his way home last night, heard screams in the direction of Grange hall, on School street. Hastening in that direction, he came upon two dead bodies lying in a yard close to the sidewalk. According to the police, they were the bodies of F. P. Egan and Mrs. Sadie Booth, both of Spencer. Mrs. Booth was 28 years old, and had been living for the past month with her sister, at Northboro. Her throat was cut almost completely across. A razor was found under her body. Death had been almost instantaneous.

The man's throat was cut in a similar manner. The theory of the police is that the man cut the woman's throat and then killed himself.

BLOW UP BRIDGE.

Northern Pacific Structure Over Yellowstone Wrecked.

Livingston, Mont., Aug. 3.—An attempt was made by unknown parties this morning to blow up the large Northern Pacific bridge crossing the Yellowstone river, east of this city, and wreck the eastbound passenger train. The explosion was terrific and broke windows in scores of houses in the eastern portion of the city. No part of Livingston escaped a severe shock. The big bridge was twisted out of alignment. The powder had been placed by inexperience persons, and to that fact is attributed the escape of the structure. A large hole was made in the central pier of the bridge. The Northern Pacific company has offered a reward of $1000 and the county commissioners $2000. There is no clue to the miscreants.

JUDGE LOCHREN'S DECISION.

By his decision against the state's contentions in the case of the State of Minnesota vs. the Northern Securities company, Judge Lochren has dissented from the conclusions reached by the court of appeals in the federal case against the same company. Some judges would have accepted the decision of the higher court and followed the views it expressed on this question, but Judge Lochren believes that every judge should interpret the law and the facts according to his own judgment. "The rights of litigants and my own sense of duty," he says, "alike require that my own deliberate judgment, guided by my understanding of authoritative expositions of the law, be given in all causes tried before me." As the decision by the circuit court is still to be passed upon by the supreme court at Washington, there is no direct decision on any of the points involved which must be followed, and Judge Lochren is as likely to be sustained by the supreme court as is the court of appeals. Indeed, there are many eminent lawyers who believe that the opinion he has given will be finally upheld by the highest court.

The decision by Judge Lochren appears to be sound, and to best follow the law and previous court rulings. While he upholds the Minnesota law against the consolidation of railroads, he holds that it does not apply to this case because there has been no consolidation. The Northern Securities company is not a railroad company, and is not subject to restrictive laws concerning railroads. It is not a railroad purchaser or manager, but merely an investor in the stocks of the two companies, and it was finally formed as a means of securely holding the stock of the Northern Pacific against any repetition of the attempt of the Union Pacific or other rival company to get control of it, and thus deprive the two companies of the great commercial advantages which they derive from their common ownership and control of the Burlington system. The Great Northern and the Northern Pacific are managed independently of the Securities company. They have not violated the law, and the Northern Securities company, its incorporators, directors and officers are as much beyond the reach of either the state or federal law as any individual who chanced to own stock in two competing lines. The power of common stockholders is exhausted when they have appointed separate boards of directors for the constituent companies. These separate boards of directors and their officers are under jurisdiction of the state law. When they consolidate the two railroads, the state law can reach them; as the federal law can reach them when they commit acts in restraint of trade. But at present there is no consolidation.

"The contention that because it was to the pecuniary interest of the incorporators of the Northern Securities company to consolidate the Great Northern and Northern Pacific systems," says Judge Lochren, "such consolidation was actually made, is rejected on the ground that an act to advance pecuniary interest cannot be held to imply intent to commit a penal offense." Inasmuch as this contention was the gist of the decision of the circuit court, Judge Lochren placed himself squarely in opposition to the views of that court. "I am compelled," he again says, "to reject the doctrine that any person can be held to have committed, or to be purposing and about to commit, a highly penal offense, merely because it can be shown that his pecuniary interests will be thereby advanced, and that he has the power either directly by himself, or indirectly through persuasion or coercion of his agents, to compass the commission of the offense."

The effect of this decision upon the supreme court, when the whole question comes before that tribunal for review, cannot fail to be great, because it affirms the right of men to buy and hold property, using it within the law, and makes no new or strained interpretation of the law when it holds that nothing the Northern Securities company has done can directly or indirectly affect trade, commerce, transportation or rates, and that therefore the company is clearly not affected by either the Sherman act or the state law.

Both the federal and state cases will go to the supreme court for final adjudication. The question involved is one of law solely, and those who would drag the case again into the arena of personal politics are likely to find that the public cannot be deceived a second time.

NEGRO CADETS AT ANNAPOLIS.

Perhaps in no public institution in the world has the race problem been so pronounced an issue as in the naval academy at Annapolis. Under the new condition of things there is likely to be trouble there and at no far distant date. A boy from Hawaii has been appointed as a cadet and is on his way to this country, and what his reception will be at the academy is yet very problematical. This matter has been discussed of late by leading officers in both services, and also by officials of the war and navy departments. Some concern has been expressed by them as to what the outcome will be. The feeling against having negroes in the military service is decidedly stronger in the navy than in the army. Possibly this comes from the fact that after graduation from the academy naval officers are thrown into more intimate personal relations with each other than are officers of the army. Life on a warship brings all officers into pretty close contact, and it is likely that this thought is responsible for the deep-seated prejudice that has always prevailed against negro cadets at Annapolis.

It is a matter of record that while many negro youths have been designated for appointment to the naval academy very few have succeeded in passing the entrance examination. Occasionally, however, one puts up so creditable an examination that it is impossible, even by a stretch of the prejudiced mind of the examiner, not to pass him. History has yet to report the graduation from Annapolis of a colored cadet. For one reason or another they were either dropped or preferred the quiet of life at home to the rigors of existence in the academy with a lot of uncongenial whites.

The question of the kind of reception natives of Porto Rico are to receive at Annapolis has been postponed for a few months by the failure of all candidates from the island thus far to pass the examination.

The issue in the army will also be brought up very soon. Negro officers in the army who have heretofore been isolated with colored troops are about to be promoted to positions where it will not be practicable to further separate them from white officers and enlisted men. All told, there are now eight colored officers in the army. Four are chaplains and are hardly classed with commissioned officers. With one or two exceptions all are comparatively recent appointees. The four colored chaplains are assigned to regiments composed of men of their own race. There is one colored paymaster in the army. He was appointed as a volunteer by President McKinley, and at the close of the war with Spain was given a commission as paymaster in the regular army.

Within the past couple of years two negroes won shoulder straps by coming up for examination from the ranks. They are now lieutenants, and one is in the Tenth and the other in the Twenty-fourth infantry, both colored organizations. Well up in the list of captains is Charles Young, colored. He is the only negro graduate from West Point now in the army. There have been others—two, but neither is now in the service. One named Flipper had a rough time of it from the day he presented himself at West Point. He was exceedingly unpopular with the other cadets and was the recipient of some rough hazing. He got his commission, however, but almost immediately fell into trouble and was court-martialed and promptly dismissed from the army. The other was named Alexander, and from all accounts was a superior negro. He was universally liked by his brother officers, and died after a few years of creditable service.

The sooner the race problem is settled in the army and navy, the better. There is a general tendency to snobbishness among the cadets and perhaps a little intermingling of color will prove to be a good thing.

THE PROGRESS OF THE SOUTH.

The people of the country at large, who have been wont to consider the South as a minor proposition in the make-up of the United States, must certainly have failed to note the wonderful progress that section has been making in the last few decades. Its growth has been almost marvelous and its material wealth has increase rapidly. According to the Manufacturers' Record the South possessed $14,000,000,000 worth of property in 1900, only about $2,000,000 less than that possessed by the whole country in 1860. The average increase in its assessed valuation between 1860 and 1880 averaged about $28,000,000 a year ago. Between 1880 and 1890 the assessed valuation increased from $3,051,175,098 to $4,659,514,833, or $1,608,339,735, an average of $160,000,000 a year. In the next ten years the increase was to $5,457,553,031, or but $798,038,198, an average of less than $80,000,000 a year. But during the next two years, between 1900 and 1902, there was an advance to $5,916,960,712, or $459,407,681, more than half the advance between 1890 and 1900. The total advance between 1880 and 1902 was $2,865,785,614, or nearly 94 per cent.

Material betterment of the South thus indicated is more clearly shown in comparing the true valuation of property in the South with that of property in the rest of the country. The increase in true valuation 1860 and 1880 was from $6,286,214,108 to $7,505,000,000, or $1,218,785,892, equal to only 19 per cent in the South, while in the rest of the country it was from $9,873,401,960 to $36,137,000,000, or $26,263,598,040, equal to 266 per cent. During the next ten years, with the wonderful industrial, agricultural and railroad expansion in the South, the rates of increase in the South and in the rest of the country became about the same. Between 1880 and 1890 the true valuation increased from $7,505,000,000 to $11,150,532,304, or $3,645,532,304, equal to 48 per cent in the South and in the rest of the country the increase was from $36,137,000,000 to $53,886,558,893, equal to $17,749,558,893, or 49 per cent.

If there was the same rate of increase between 1890 and 1900 as between 1880 and 1890 the true valuation of property in the South for 1900 would be $16,787,810,000. If the actual increase was the same the true valuation would be $14,796,064,608. If the same proportion of assessed valuation to true valuation obtained in 1900 as in 1800 the true valuation for 1900 would be $13,311,104,954. The total in 1900 of farm values, $3,951,631,632, of capital in manufacturing, $1,153,002,368; of railroads, $2,734,888,000, was $7,839,522,000. That sum is 36 per cent greater than the sum of thhe values of these three leading classes of property in 1890. If that percentage obtained for the increase in the value of all the property of the South during the ten years the true valuation for 1900 would be $15,164,723,933.

An interesting sidelight partly coincident, partly explanation, upon the importance of cotton in Southern economy appears in a consideration of the range of cotton prices at New York in connection with the changes in assessed valuations of property in the South. Between 1880 and 1890 when the price of cotton averaged more than 10 cents a pound falling below that price in one year only, the assessed valuation of property in the South increased more than $1,608,000,000, or on an average of more than $160,000,000 a year. In 1891 there was a sudden decline in the price of cotton and it continued to fall until the average price was only 6 cents in 1898-99. Between 1890 and 1900 the assessed valuation increased something more than $798,000,000, or less than an average of $80,000,000 a year. In 1900 there was a fair advance in the price of cotton which has since been increased, and between 1900 and 1902 assessed valuation in the South has increased about $460,000,000, or an average of $230,000,000 a year. Another contributor to Southern wealth is iron. Comparing the production of pig iron in the South for the first half of 1902 and 1903 an increase of 202,000 tons is shown, more than one-fourth of the total increase in the United States.

HOTEL GOSSIP

A little group was standing in front of the St. Louis hotel desk this morning—Congressman Bede, Editor Peter Schaefer, of the Ely Miner, and a couple more.

They were talking about the visit of the congressman to Ishpeming to attend the international meeting of the Finnish Temperance union, from which they returned early this morning.

Congressman Bede had made a short speech in presenting the flag, and incidentally met Congressman Young and had a nice chat with him.

From there the talk drifted on to speeches, and one man of the party told about the first speech Charley Towne ever made in Duluth, and how the speaker took it, a Decoration day oration, and started him toward fame.

It seems that Towne had a complete copy of his speech in his pocket, though he protested it was extemporaneous. Finally he admitted he had it and gave it up and it was printed.

"They all carry them," said one, "excepting, of course, this man," indicating Mr. Bede.

He had only said a few words in the flag presentation.

"Well," he said without a smile, "a man must have his talk written out if he is making a finished speech, and that was, I believe."

"And," he continued on a sudden inspiration, "You see I didn't have a Finnish speech—mine was English and I could remember it."

"There were several things that were funny in spite of the dangerous appearance on that wreck Saturday morning on the Omaha down by Rice lake," said B. Kupler, of New York, at the Spalding hotel, who was eating a dish of soft boiled eggs and some other rather spilly food, in the dining car at the end of the train when the crash came.

"There were five men and a woman eating breakfast and they all piled up in a corner together with the boiled and scrambled eggs and oatmeal and coffee. It took the waiters and conductor ten minutes to separate the food and the passengers. Every dish in the car was broken.

"The cause of the wreck was another funny thing, a psychological study. The foreman of the section crew at the place heard the train coming, and, instead of lifting his handcar off the track, as is usually the case, opened the switch and ran it on a siding. Then he forgot to lock up the switch again, and the train crashed off into the siding and the freight house.

"The engine was broken to pieces—simply shattered, while the mail and the baggage car were both broken in two squarely in the middle. The fireman and engineer were up in the air with the engine, when it stood on its end, and stayed till the finish, but Ed Pease, a brakeman, who was in the baggage car, started through the door and a trunk fell on his leg, breaking it. He was the only man hurt, and the people in the day coach never knew there was a wreck.

"There were twenty barrels of gasoline in the freight house, and a fire started, but the town fire department managed to put out the fire, and saved an explosion. It was the worst wreck I was ever in, and I have been traveling for twenty years. We got into Duluth at a little before 4 o'clock."

H. A. Hazeland, a member of the English civil service at Hong Kong, and police magistrate for the crown at that community, arrived from the West this morning and registered at the Spalding hotel. He will be here part of a day and will proceed down the lakes and to Buffalo, from whence he will go to England on his vacation.

Judge Hazeland, before he left Hong Kong, signed a circular agreement, issued by Chamberlain, pledging himself not to talk to newspapers anywhere, and so could not consent to an interview.

He did say, however, in the course of a short chat, that he had become acquainted with many Americans from the states, through his official capacity, and the most frequent calls made upon him by Americans, were requests for extradition. The formal and most frequent charge against Americans who came to Hong Kong from the American Philippine possessions, was "jumping bail," making that a specific offense.

This rather tickled Judge Hazeland, as he recollected it.

The judge is on a vacation, which he will spend in his native land.

"Billiards is rapidly getting to be a thing of the past in and around hotels," said the astute and traveled hotel clerk and manager at the West Superior hotel last evening. "I do not know of a half a dozen hotels of any importance in the country now—the new ones I mean—which have them at all, and of those which do have billiard rooms connected with them, very few are making them pay. The Palmer house, the Plankington in Milwaukee and a few more in the West are about all.

"The people who play billiards don't want to stay around the hotels to do it, it seems. They go some other place. At any rate the managers of hotels, who merely wouldn't have a hotel without a billiard room, wont have a billiard room connected with their hotels now, if they are seeing to the building of new hotels. I guess it takes too long to play a game for the fast livers who reside at hotels, or something."

SUMMER SMILES.

New York Journal: "Have you ever been a caddy before?"

"Sure, lady. Yer needn't be afraid o' cussin' in my presence. I'm used to it."

Philadelphia Record: Blobbs—I understand, sir, that you referred to my photograph as a side show.

Slobbs—Don't get excited, old man. I merely meant that it was a profile.

Yonkers Statesman: "Who was it who saw the handwriting on the wall, Freddie?" asked the Sunday school teacher.

"The landlord, ma'am," quickly replied the little boy who lives in a flat.

Tit-Bits: "It is sad," murmured the musing theorizer, "to think that, as a great statesman once said, 'every man has his price.'"

"Yes," admitted the intensely practical worker, "and it is a sad fact that half the time he can't get it."

Philadelphia Press: Wife—You know, dear, you told me to invest that money so that I'd have something for a rainy day.

Husband—Yes.

Wife—Well, here's the investment. Did you ever see a lovelier rainy-day skirt in your life?

Chicago News: "No," said the new arrival at the temperance hotel, "I can't understand why all those sensible men take that foolish tramp every Sunday morning to see the hermit."

"You'd understand, if you went along," said the wise guest, with a wink. "The hermit is bartender."

New York Weekly: Tramp—You has purty easy times—nothin' to do but stand here sellin' lead pencils.

Pencil Peddler—Think it's easy, do yeh? Don't you know people won't buy pencils of a feller on th' street unless he looks starved an' dejected an' desparin'?

"That's easy."

"Taint easy to look that way right along w'en y'r rakin' in $1 a day."

Lippincott's: A Misnomer—A very pompous woman attempted to leave a car while it was in motion, and the little conductor detained her with the usual: "Wait until the c-a-a-r sthops, leddy!"

"Don't address me as 'lady,' sir!" she said, haughtily.

"I beg your pardon, ma'am, but we are all liable to mek mistakes," was the immediate reply.

WHAT WRECKED THE HOME

One day a gay young mermaid,
While swimming near the shore,
Gasped with delight to see a sight
She'd never seen before.
It was a pretty maiden
In a bathing suit of red—
The mermaid's eyes were twice their size
And popping from her head.

She swam a little closer
To the witching seashore maid,
And watched her play, and, strange to say
Was not a bit afraid.
She took in every detail
Of the suit the maid had on,
Then, like a fish, she gave a swish
And instantly was gone.

She fled and sped all breathless
Where sea gems flashed and glowed,
To a fine cave deep in the wave,
In which her folks abode.
Her youthful heart was fired
With what she had beheld;
She told her ma and then her pa,
And both with pride were swelled.

They undertook to dress her
Exactly in the style
That she had spied; they tried and cried,
And in a little while
The happy home was desolate;
Her ma was on the brink
Of going mad, and her old dad
Had drowned himself in drink.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: When a girl is always smiling it is a sign she has been told she has pretty teeth.

TO REDUCE OUTLAY

The School Board Confronts Urgent Need of Economy.

Dr. Charles L. Codding Made President of New Board.

Dr. Charles L. Codding was elected chairman of the board of education Saturday evening, at the first meeting of the new board, held since the recent elections.

It was also the occasion of the final and yearly meeting of the former board, and the reports of the various officers were received and read.

The treasurer's report showed a total balance in the bank of $6,154,07. The summarized report is as follows: General funds—Receipts, $283,649.94; disbursements, $282,772.94; outstanding orders, $12.50; balance, $889.50. Building fund—Receipts, $7,-650.27; disbursements, $2,285.70; balance, $5,364.57. Sinking fund—Receipts, $24,846.62; disbursements, $24,846.62.

The report shows a rather critical condition in the district's financial affairs, owing to heavy necessary expenditures during the past two years, and it was the opinion of the members that every possible means of cutting down expenditures should be made. The report of the superintendent, which followed, contained several suggestions along this line.

Mr. Denfeld took up the question of transportation of pupils from the smaller outlying districts to the larger schools in the more central parts of the city. This would enable the board to close several of the smaller schools, which accommodate from ten to twenty pupils, and would mean a saving in expense, without any inconvenience to the pupils. Mr. Denfeld further claimed that it would be of direct benefit to the scholars in these outlying schools, as they would be given the advantages of the better equipment and teaching in the more central schools.

The plan has been tried very successfully in the East, and it is likely that it will be adopted in Duluth during the coming school year.

The Lexington, Kenwood, Woodland and Cobbyville schools were the ones which were mentioned by the board as being subjects for the experiment.

The superintendent also dwelt upon the question of spelling.

Mr. Denfeld recently sent out fifty letters to representative business men in the city asking their opinions on the merits of the two different kinds of writing, slent and vertical. But a small minority of the replies of the letters, replied to them, but the general opinion of these seemed to be that the slant had many advantages over the vertical style, although there were several strong supporters of the vertical system. The result was very unsatisfactory on account of the small percentage of replies, and the manner in which some of the important questions were unanswered. One strong supporter of the slant system, wrote his answer in the vertical style. The question will probably be thoroughly investigated during the coming school year.

Mr. Denfeld also advocated the taking of a school census, to determine the number of children in the community, who are of school age.

Director Washburn moved a formal vote of thanks to the retiring President J. O. Milne, and in a brief address expressed his own and the board's appreciation of the long and faithful services of Mr. Milne, and their regret at seeing him leave their membership. Mr. Milne replied in a short and fitting speech, and left the chair.

Charles A. Bronson, clerk of the board, then called the meeting to order, and Dr. Charles L. Codding was elected temporary chairman, being chosen chairman on the ballot which followed, without opposition.

J. J. LeTourneau was re-elected treasurer, and Charles A. Bronson, clerk.

President Codding then announced the following committees: Schools—Washburn, Phelps and Powell; buildings and grounds, Smith, Moe and Hendricks; administration, Codding (ex-officio), LeTourneau and Stevens.

Among the minor actions taken by the board were motions re-electing Miss Edith Pierce as stenographer, H. C. Dash as assitant to the secretary, a motion forbidding employes of the board participating in the management of high school athletics or in fraternal organizations in the school, and a motion appointing Frank Peterson to the position of assistant janitor at the high school, in place of John Beck, whose resignation was accepted.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Woman's Body Exhumed and Examined By County Officials.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—McHenry county officers, Sheriff Pitts, Coroner Newlove and State's Attorney Christianson, returned from Velva at noon where they yesterday afternoon exhumed the remains of Mrs. Anna Collier, who was supposed to have been drowned with suicidal intent three weeks ago, and was buried before the coroner reached there in time to hold an inquest. The officers are reluctant in making known anything connected with the investigation, but sufficient is gleaned from their movements and utterances to indicate further developments and the arrest of several persons who are believed to have been implicated in the woman's death. One story which is current about the mysterious death of Mrs. Collier, who was only married three months, is to the effect that her husband and his father murdered her and afterwards drove in a buggy with the dead body to the Mouse river and threw it into the stream, where it was found four or five hours later. This theory is concurred in generally by Velva citizens who are anxious that the case be fully cleared up. The cause leading up to the theory are based on the fact that the woman gave birth to a child two weeks after her marriage, the husband ignoring any knowledge of her condition at the time of his marriage to the girl, who is of respectable parentage and has wealthy relatives in Fargo. The excitement is increasing with every move and the authorities are determined to get to the bottom of the facts in the case.

The Gotch-Olson wrestling match has been postponed for ten days, owing to the inability of Gotch to reach here on time. Much money is changing hands on the outcome, with the odds on Gotch.

Grand Forks—John Hollinger, residing on a farm a few miles from East Grand Forks, was thrown from a wagon loaded with lumber while driving from the town. The wagon passed over his back, breaking one of the vertabrae. He cannot live till the arrival of his parents from Ferguson Falls, Ont. The deceased is single and 23 years of age.

Sioux Falls.—Information has been received here to the effect that Maj. James McLaughlin, inspector of the Indian bureau at Washington, who arrived at Rosebud agency last Tuesday for the purpose of securing the signatures of the Indians to an amended treaty for the opening to settlement of 416,000 acres of their reservation, situated in Gregory, county, is meeting with good success and will complete the work of obtaining the signatures within a few days.

United States Senator Gamble, who has taken a personal interest in the efforts to secure the opening of the land to settlement, while in Sioux Falls, stated that he was confident the treaty now being negotiated by Maj. McLaughlin will be ratified by congress, either at the coming special session or during the regular session.

It appears that several whites have entered into unlawful agreements with Indians for the use of their allotments, and the government is determined to protect the Indians by putting a stop to the practice. By direction of the attorney general of the United States, suits have been commenced against Frank McKinley and E. M. Bishop, charged with unlawfully occupying Indian allotments on the old Sisseton reservation in aMrshall county. It is alleged that the defendants leased the land from the Indians to whom it has been approved by the secretary of the interior, as required by law.

The suits are instituted for the purpose of ejecting the defendants from the land, who are also asked to pay damages to the Indians for their unlawful possession. These are the first cases of the kind ever instituted in South Dakota, and will be followed by several others of the same character.

Mitchell—The county auditor has just finished his assessment rolls for the state auditor. The total figures show a valuation of $3,066,688, which is a heavy increase over a year ago, although they do not contain the amount assessed against the railroad, telegraph and telephone systems, which will reach at least $290,000. The city of Mitchell has for its share of assessment $1,125,963. There are 263,435 acres of land in the county valued at $1,513,076, which is a low assessment. In the way of cattle, horses, hogs and sheep there has been a large increase.

Watertown—Mrs. Lillian Cooper, of the Springfield normal school, has been appointed superintendent of the South Dakota educational exhibit at the St. Louis fair. She is one of the prominent educators of the state.

Professor W. R. Davis has been appointed head of the Indian school at the Crow Creek agency, and expects to leave in a short time.

The Indian contest case has been continued until Stptember 9 to admit of the introduction of record testimony. The other four cases, which involve the same evidence as the case of Ko-zi-pi vs. Wolffe, have been stipulated to abide by the decision. The defense produced Hal Morris, the agent of the government, who made the allotment in question to the claimant. This in itself makes the case of the contestant to the effect that Charles Walker of Crow Creek, held the allotment, look rather shaky. The question as to his having been a hostile in 1862 was denied by Little Thunder, the only living heredity chief of the Sisseton and Wahpeton band.

SMILES WERE ALL TOO SOON

Lakesiders Get More Double Truckers, But Only Temporarily.

Residents of Lakeside and Lester Park were smiling largely yesterday and today because they had four double truck cars instead of two, and the "dinky" cars that ran between had been taken off the line.

They smiled too soon, however, for their joy will be but fleeting. The extra double-truckers are only temporary, and in a few days the "dinky" cars will go on again and there will be but two double truck cars running.

"It is only a temporary arrangement," said General Manager Warren this morning when asked about it. "I wish it was permanent, but it is not to be, yet. Sometime, when we have more double truck cars, the Lakesiders will have all they want, but the supply is not adequate as yet."

The Lakesiders had reason to be pleased at the change, because only those that have enjoyed the luxury of riding in the big double-truckers can appreciate the misfortune of having to get into a small car, with its multitude of jolts and bumps, when there is no big car in sight.

LOVED HIS VIOLIN

And Lived Alone In Hotel of Seventy-Five Rooms.

Thousand Letters Reveal Passions of a Remarkable Career.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Property worth $3,000,000 has already been unearthed by Executor Edwin A. Warfield as belonging to the estate of Col. George T. Cline, the eccentric Chicagoan who died on July 7, and whose will has recently been admitted to probate. Until the examination of Col. Cline's thousands of letters and papers is complete it will not be known how much more the estate is worth, but it is said to be possible that it will approximate $6,000,000.

Col. Cline, who was 80 years old and who lived sixty-three years in this city, was a strangely secretive man. He discussed his affairs with no man, and it is only by careful reading of every paper he left that the existence and location of his vast property holdings can be determined.

New discoveries of real estate, checks and notes are being made every day. It will probably take two years to get the estate closed up.

The colonel, whose title comes from the fact that he was a civil war veteran, was a real estate operator, and almost his whole fortune was in land. Executor Warfield has found that he held property in Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Ohio, New York, Virginia and Maryland. It is principally in large tracts with much farming acreage. One extensive piece of property belonging to the estate is in Clark Junction, Ind., near Edgemoor. This consists of 2500 acres, and is worth $2,000,000. Some of the acres were lately bought by the Illinois Steel company for $50,000. This tract is the first undivided tract south of Chicago that is open for manufacturing sites.

Col. Cline left his entire estate to his relatives in California and Maryland, of which latter state he was a native. One quarter of the estate goes to his sister, Mrs. Mary Yeakle, and one quarter to his brother, Nicholas O. Cline, both of Frederick, Md., and both over 70 years of age.

Another quarter is left to a nephew, Isaac T. Crum, Okland; the remaining quarter is shared by two other nephews, John Cline and George T. Cline, Los Angeles, Cal., collector of the port and deputy collector, respectively. A. R. Yeakle, a nephew, in Frederick; George T. Cline and Executor Warfield are the trustees of the estate.

Despuite Col. Cline's wealth he was known only to a few persons in Chicago. He belonged to the old school of financiers before the great Chicago fire. Some of his former cronies were "Long John" Wentworth, Matthew Laflin, Jonathan Clark and Jacob Forsyth. As his old friends died he failed to make new ones, and of recent years he had lived entirely alone, rooming in cheap boarding houses and eating in cheaper restaurants. Lodging house life ceased to have attractions for the colonel in 1893, and he then bought the Woodbine hotel, in Englewood, a frame structure put up for the World's fair, and containing seventy-three rooms.

Here he lived until his death, absolutely alone and inhabiting one room only. He took care, however, that the other seventy-two rooms were furnished, and for the purpose bought the furniture of the old Grand Pacific hotel and installed it in the Woodbine.

His own particular room, his "den," as he termed it, was a place of mystery and no one was ever allowed in it during his ten years' habitation. The door was doubly padlocked and never left open.

One man of much daring, however, did once obtain a view of the interior. This is what he saw: Two plain chairs, a table, washstand and bed. Along each wall of the room, from the floor upward, weer stacked five-foot piles of corded envelopes.

Each envelope bore on the outside a memorandum of its contents. These consisted of letters, of which there were 10,000, all relating to business dated as far back as 1854, and newspaper clippings for the same period. The clippings were in every instance obituary notices of men and women in every walk of life who had the slightest claim to distinction.

Underneath the bed were ranged eight violins, side by side, each in a leather case and each covered by a white silk handkerchief. Here the colonel's passion was concentrated. For ten years he passed the time in that room, rarely going out but to infrequent meals, and playing the violin the remainder of his waking hours. One of the eight instruments was an Amati, worth $1500. This was his favorite, and no other hand was ever permitted to touch it.

Through the howling storms of winter, through the golden summer days, there sat the lonely colonel, who might have commanded the best material things in the world, playing and replaying his old violin.

"Americans diz their graves with thier teeth," he used to say, and he confined himself to an average of one meal a day at a cost of $3 a month.

Besides his violin his other amusements consisted in finding somewhere a "real Irishman," one with an emphatic brogue. For him he would buy meals and drinks, pouring out money freely and getting his return in the Irishman's talk.

At the time of Col. Cline's death, which was due to senility, he had not bought any clothes for five years. He always dressed in a black hat and black frock coat. Winter and summer he carried a cane and an umbrella, the latter hanging from his arm by its curved handle. In springtime he invariably carried two coats, a light and a heavy one. He was vain of appearances, considered himself a remarkably well-dressed man and kept his hair and mustache carefully dyed. In addition to tea, that he carried in his trunk, whenever he traveled, he took his Amati violin and a bottle of hair dye along.

Besides the Woodbine, he bought a hotel in Cedar Lake, Ind., containing thirty rooms, all of which he furnished, and would occasionally go there for a week. He also bought a magnificent home at Lawndale, near Frederick, which he visited a few times, and which was otherwise closed. In Lawndale his passion for pictorial art asserted itself, and he had every available inch of the walls of the house, halls and bedrooms covered with oil paintings. In Chicago he was a radical Republican, but the instant he reached Maryland he become a red-hot Democrat.

In business the colonel believed in sticking to one thing.

"My business is buying land," he used to say. "If a man is going to make a success of selling peanuts, let him stick to that. No versatility for me." He made all his money from an original $5000, with which he reached Chicago.

In every city there is one paper favored by local advertisers. In Duluth it is The Herald.

ECZEMA SETS THE SKIN ON FIRE

No disease causes so much bodily discomfort, or itches, and burns like Eczema. Beginning often with a slight redness of the skin it gradually spreads, followed by pustules or blisters from which a gummy, sticky fluid oozes which dries and scales off or forms bad looking sores and scabs. It appears on different parts of the body but oftenest upon the back, arms, hands, legs and face, and is a veritable torment at times, especially at night or when overheated.

In 1896 I experienced at times patches on the inside of my hands that itched and burned, causing much discomfort. As time went by it grew worse, and I was convinced that I was afflicted with Eczema. I consulted several physicians and a number of specialists, and used several external applications, receiving but slight temporary relief. In February I decided to try S. S. S., and in less than a month I experienced a change for the better, and by May all symptoms had disappeared, and I found myself entirely cured, and have had no return of the disease since. W. P. BRUSH, Manager Stockman's Advertising Agency. Station A, Kansas City, Mo.

The cause of Eczema is a too acid and general unhealthy condition of the blood. The terrifying itching and burning is produced by the overflow through the glands and pores of the skin of the fiery poisons with which the blood-current is overloaded. While external applications, such as washes, soaps, salves and powders aresoot hing and cooling they do not enter into the blood itself or touch the real cause of the disease, but S. S. S. does, and purifies, enriches, and strengthens the thin acid blood and cleanses and builds up the general system, when the skin clears off and Eczema with all its terrifying symptoms disappears.

IMPORTS OF SUGAR

During the Past Fiscal Year the Greatest on Record.

Over Five Billion Pounds Valued at Over $100,000,000.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—More than 5,000,000 pounds of sugar, valued at over $100,000,000 was brought into the United States in the fiscal year just ended. This is a larger importation of sugar than at any preceding year in the history of the country, and the value is greater than in any preceding year, except the importations of 1891, 1893 and 1894. These figures include the sugar brought from Porto Rico and the Hawaiian islands, and while the figures of the shipments from Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands are not included in the official statement of imports, they are properly included in the statement to show the quantity of sugar coming into the United States. The total number of pounds of sugar brought into the United States during the year was, as shown by the records of the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, 5,217,077,024, while in no earlier year in the history of the country has the importation of sugar ever reached 5,000,000,000 pounds.

The largest importation in any earlier year was that of 1897, when the total was 4,913,905,600 pounds. Adding to the enormous importation of 1903 5,000,000,000 pounds as the domestic production, would give a total sugar supply of 5,817,000 pounds for the year, or sufficient to furnish an average of seventy-two pounds for each individual in the United States, estimating the present population at 80,000,000.

The record of sugar importations for the year differs materially in certain aspects from that of earlier years. The total importation of beet sugar during the year was only 87,000,000 pounds, against 255,000,000 in the fiscal year 1902 and 908,000,000 in the fiscal year 1901. Cane sugar, of course, composed the remainder, and the cane sugar importations of the fiscal year, exclusive of that brought from Porto Rico and the Hawaiian islands, amounted to 4,075,000,000 pounds against 2,685,000,000 in the fiscal year 1902 and 2,956,000,000 in 1901. From Porto Rico the total sugar brought into the United States amounted to 226,243,58 pounds, valued at $7,466,579, and from the Hawaiian islands, 774,825,402 pounds, valued at $25,310,634. Thus, the total quantity of sugar supplied by Porto Rico and the Hawaiian islands amounted to 1,000,000 pounds or about one-fifth of the total brought into the country, its value being nearly $33,000,000.

Another marked characteristic of the year's production of sugar is the fact that the price of sugar brought from foreign countries has averaged lower than in any preceding year. The official statements of the bureau of statistics have for many years shown the "average cost per pound in foreign country" of the sugar imported. This average cost was in 1872 and 1873 over 5 cents per pound. From that period it ranged downward, averaging four and a fraction cents per pond, until 1883, when the cost first fell below 4 cents, being in 1884, 3.6 cents per pond. From that date forward it ranged downward, in some years falling below 3 cents per pound, the figure for 1894 being 2.9 cents as the year's average rate of cost. By 1901 the movement was still slowly downward, the average rate for 1901 being 23 cents per pound, while in 1902 the average rate was 1.82 cents per pond, and in the fiscal year just ended the average cost in the country of production of the sugar imported from foreign countries was 1.71 cents per pound, which is lower than in any preceding year.

PREHISTORIC VILLAGE SITE

Unearthed on a Hill Overlooking the Scioto River, Ohio.

Chillicothe, O., Aug. 3.—Dr. M. C. Mills, curator of the State Archaeological society, has discovered that there is a prehistoric village site on the Gartner farm, a few miles south of this city. He has made excavations which disclose many valuable relics of the ancient people who wandered over the country ages ago. The site is a little elevation near the Scioto river and commands a splendid view of the surrounding country. The place was undoubtedly chosen by the Indians with a view of fortifying themselves from the attacks of predatory tribes.

Dr. Mills has opened forty-nine pits which were used for storing food and in some cases for burials. In these were found charred corn and beans, which leads the archaeologist to infer that the mound builders knew something of agriculture, dispelling the popular theory that they subsisted entirely on fish and game. Bones of elks, deer, grey fox, coon and ground hog were found in profusion.

Many of the bones had been skilfully fashioned into fish hooks and various charms. Broken pottery of varied designs, beautiful necklaces of delicately colored sea shells and polished beaver teeth, weaving instruments, including needles and small bobbins of stone, and many other implements were unearthed. Several skeletons and specimens of carved bones and pipes were also procured. All in all Dr. Mills believes the village site to be one of the richest archaeological "finds" of the day.

COLLIE DOG

Saved the Life of His Master.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 3.—John Hoff's collie dog saved his master's life. Hoff was alone with his dog, working at a sand bank. The bank caved in and Hoff was completely buried by it. The dog set up a howl and began scratching the sand away. His actions attracted a passer-by, who noticed the dog trying to move a piece of sod to one side. He removed it and was surprised to find a man's head sticking out. Dog and man both scratched the sand away and Hoff was removed unconscious, but soon recovered. But for the dog's actions Hoff's body might never have been found.

Prices of Really Good Stocks Should Show Improvement.

Henry Clews Finds the Situation Is Much Better.

New York, Aug 3.—Henry Clews says in his weekly financial review: The crisis in Wall street appears to have reached its climax, and from now on improvement may be reasonably expected, accompanied, of course, by the usual set-backs incidental to convalescence. Experts seem to agree in diagnosing the ailment which has attacked the stock market with such severity as financial gastritis—the inevitable result of an ill-advised attempt to swallow an immense quantity of indigestible securities. Singularly, the attack has been most severe upon those who took part in this sumptuous meal; but fortunately, owing to vigorous constitutions and heroic applications of the hycropathic or liquidation treatment, the disease did not become sufficiently acute to develop symptoms of hysteria or panic. The unhappy patients have suffered severely by their underwriting commitments; nevertheless a valuable lesson has been learned, and the experience should have its value to observers and all interested.

The most satisfactory feature of the last few days has been the easier rate for time money. This demonstrates reviving confidence on the part of bankers who are obliged to anticipate the future. While the high figure at which loans continue to stand in the weekly bank statement is a matter of concern to some observers who have been anticipating a sharp contraction as the result of recent liquidation, bankers do not show any anxiety in this respect, probably because they now have their resources unusually well in hand and profitably employed. There are three factors accounting for this high level of loans, which are sometimes overlooked, viz.: the large increase of banking capital in New York, the large amount of railroad paper outstanding and the increased extent to which big industrial establishments under the trust system now borrow in New York instead of near the mills as formerly. A good bank statement is anticipated this week, partly on account of payment of the Pennsylvania loans, and partly because Treasury disbursements have been exceeding receipts for some time past. Stock market liquidation must also have strengthened the banks much more than has yet appeared in the weekly statements. Besides these factors gold is now on the way here from Australia, and in the present condition of the European money markets any emergency here would quickly start gold imports to this center. The local money market, therefore, is in much improved condition. Very soon crop demands will assert themselves; but the banks are well prepared for these, and the present outlook is that no special inconvenience will be caused thereby. It is quite certain that legitimate trade will not suffer for want of proper financial accommodation this summer or fall; and speculative demands are not likely to be excessive for some time to come.

Now that liquidation has about run its course, it is proper to consider future influences, such as crops, general business, railroad earnings, currency legislation and political campaigns. As to crops, the outlook is still for more than average yields of wheat, corn, cotton, oats, hay and live stock. There will be plenty of wheat at good prices to the farmer. Corn promises a 2,000,000,000 crop. Cotton is likely to yield a normal crop and is sure of big prices to the grower, which means unusual prosperity in the South for the next twelve months. This is one of the most striking probabilities of today. Live stock raisers are also anticipating a profitable season. General business has not thus far been disturbed by the Wall street crash. Possibly new enterprises will receive some check in consequence; but all advices from the interior agree in reporting satisfactory conditions and fair prospects for another good season with distributers. Railroad earnings continue large, and in the great industries production has not yet outrun consumption. Some expedient remedial action on the currency question is expected from the next congress, but no important legislation on either currency or tariff need be anticipated before a presidential election. Discussion may develop, but real and important action need not be expected. The stock market is not likely to be disturbed by political agitation for some time to come.

Hereafter the tendency of prices ought to be conservatively upwards for really good stocks. More reactions are to be expected because of further liquidation on the part of concerns that were recently tided over. But sales of this character cannot be very large after such a thorough house-cleaning as we have just passed through. Stocks have been drifting into stronger hands, and no doubt some of the big railroad deals which have been pending for a year or two will be facilitated by the recent shifting of ownership and removal of antagonistic influences. How much the late depression has been aggravated by operations of this sort by some of the biggest leaders will never be disclosed, but the skill and force with which the downward movement was conducted—always effectually checked when panic threatened—strongly suggests that powerful interests have shrewdly taken advantage of recent conditions to further important plans. Good railroad securities purchased with discrimination on the declines will therefore eventually prove profitable investments.

THE WHEAT MARKETS

Market Slumped After a Strong Start Early In Day.

Duluth Closed Lower, Though Some Other Markets Gained.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 3.—The course of the market was decidedly erratic this morning, particularly when the various markets are compared. Some of the authorities ascribed the drop that took place from the earlier figures to profit-taking on the part of holders of long wheat, but in spite of the slump the general tone of the market was hopeful.

Duluth lost ¼c on December wheat and a shade on December.

On the Duluth board September wheat opened ¼c up at 81½c, sold up to 82c at 9:32, off to 81¾c at 9:33, up to 82c again at 9:45, off to 81½-¾c at 10:03, up to 82c at 10:52 off to 81¾c at 12:23, and closed there, ¼c off. December sold 1¼c up to 80c at 10:35, but lost this gain and closed a shade off at 78¾-⅞c.

Cash trading was not active, amounting to 20,000 bus at unchanged premiums, 5c over September for both cash and to arrive.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 207 cars, and at Chicago, 115, a total of 322 cars, against 276 last week and 573 last year.

The Liverpool market was closed today, being a holiday.

The world's shipments last week were 7,847,000 bus, against 7,286,000 bus the week previous and 6,197,000 bus last year.

The visible supply last week increased 464,000 bus.

Primary receipts of wheat were 743,000 bus, last year 1,396,000 bus. Shipments 412,000 bus, last year 594,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 458,000 bus.

The world's shipments of corn last week were 5,284,000 bus, against 5,499,000 bus the previous week and 2,844,000 bus last year. The visible supply decreased 219,000 bus last week. Primary receipts of corn were 362,000 bus, last year 24,000 bus. Shipments 207,000 bus, last year 216,000 bus. Clearances 77,969 bus.

September corn in Chicago closed ¾c off at 51¾c. September oats closed ⅛c off at 33⅞-34c.

Chicago September sold ¾c, while December gained ¼c. Minneapolis September and December both gained ¼c. New York also showed a gain, both September and December closing ¼c up.

Flax trading was fairly active on the Duluth board. September opened up firm and sold up ½c to 89c at 10:18, but closed ¼c off at 97¼c. October also lost ¼c. Other coarse grains showed no change.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board.

The close: Wheat in store, 1 hard, 86¾c; No. 1 northern, 80¼c; No. 2 northern, 84¼c. To arrive, No. 1 hard, 86¾c; No. 1 northern, 86¼c; No. 2 northern, 84¼c; September, 81½c; December, 73¾-¾c. Flax in store, 91¾c; to arrive, 9.3¼c; on track, 96¾c; September, 97¼c; October, 97¾c; November, 98c; December, 96c. Oats on track, 34-34½c; to arrive, 34c; to arrive in September, 33½c; to arrive in December, 33⅞c. Rye, on track, 50½c; to arrive, 50½c; to arrive in September, 50c. Barley, 34-45c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Shows Firmness on Various Bullish Factors.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Bullish foreign crop advices, a big advance at Paris, and continued rains in the Northwest, which will delay harvesting in that section, caused firmness in wheat at the start and there was good buying early in the day, with offerings rather light. September opened ⅛c lower to ¼c higher at 80¼c to 80⅝c, and during the first hour the price held around 80⅜@½c. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 207 cars, which, with local receipts of 115 cars, twenty of contract grade, made total receipts for the three points of 322, against 276 cars last week and 573 cars a year ago.

Trading was quiet the latter part of the day and the market was weak with considerable liquidation. After selling off to 79⅝c September closed ⅝c lower at 79¾c.

Corn opened steady on the firmness in wheat, but weakness soon developed on variable weather conditions, and September sold off to 51⅞c, after opening unchanged to ⅛c lower at 52⅛c to 52⅝c. Local receipts were 195 cars, with 22 of contract grade.

The weakness in wheat had a depressing influence on corn traders and prices ruled weak, September closing ⅝c lower at 51⅛c.

Oats opened steady to firm in sympathy with other grains, with September a shade lower to ⅛@¼c higher at 34c to 34¼c. There was a fair demand from local bulls and not much on the market which held prices about steady early in the session. Local receipts were 212 cars.

Provisions opened weak on larger stocks than had been estimated, there being quite an excess in the stock of lard. Trading was dull during the first hour and prices showed little change. September pork opened 10c lower at $13.60; September lard was off 7½c to 10c at $7.85 to $7.87½, while ribs were down from 5c to 7½c, at $8.00 to $8.02½.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

J. A. Pattern, Chicago: Has been large profit-taking today, but market holds very firm, with strong undertone. I feel very bullish on wheat and think it will sell much higher. Corn is neglected and it looks as it may go to considerable premius over nearby options.

C. E. Leins, Minneapolis: Market had to take a lot of wheat from longs and some short selling today; think it ought to be bottom now. Corn is quiet but steady. Keep a little May on hand all the time.

A report by wire from Amenia, N. D., received today by Donald Morrison, on the Duluth board, stated that harvesting began there today.

FOLK IS ENDORSED.

Swept All Before Him On Old Settlers' Day.

New Florence, Mo., Aug. 3.—The gubernatorial boom of Joseph Wingate Folk, circuit attorney of St. Louis, was launched here Saturday, and it at once assumed the proportions of a mountain avalanche, sweeping everything before it. It was old settlers' day, and 10,000 residents of Montgomery county turned out in honor of the man who is doing so much for the redemption of Missouri.

Mr. Folk was the speaker of the day and he carefully eschewed any reference to politics, yet everywhere could be heard words of praise for the circuit attorney who has dared to grapple with the octopus of corruption.

The ovation to Folk began at Warrenton, twenty miles east of here, and it continued to grow in strength and volume all day.

Mr. Folk spoke on "Civic Righteousness."

Here are some of the epigrams culled from his speech:

"Missouri is on trial before the world. Her fair name is at stake."

"Good citizens must defend her from those who would debauch her honor to selfish ends."

"The overthrow of corruption here would be the greatest battle won for good government in the tide of time."

"A fearless and righteous decision upon this mighty issue will give encouragement and cheer to the law-abiding everywhere."

"Gird up your loins for the fight, and let the decree be announced and enforced that the boodlers must go."

At the conclusion of the address resolutions were adopted by the old settlers' association endorsing Folk's fight against corruption and pledging him support in all his efforts. Folk badges and buttons adorned the breast of every man and woman on the grounds, and the amount of Folk lore assimilated by those present will furnish food for thought at every fireside in Montgomery county.

TRADING IN STOCKS

During the Forenoon the Smallest of the Year.

Market Continued Dull But Became Slightly Firmer Later.

New York, Aug. 3.—Dealings were very small at the opening today and price changes were unimportant in the leading stocks. The market generally showed steadiness and there were sharp fractional gains in Mexican Central and Realty preferred. Amalgamated Copper was slightly easier, but the specialties were otherwise neglected.

Prices were inclined to yield in the early dealings. Rock Island, Atchison and Union Pacific fell off fractions, but there were no offerings of consequence elsewhere. A few advances of note occurred in the inactive quarter including 4½ in Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred and 1 to 1¼ in Realty preferred. co rnproducts preferred and North American. Kansas City Southern declined 1½ and Minneapolis, St. Paul and Soo 1.

Dealings in stocks during the forenoon were the smallest of the year and prices did not move perceptibly except in a few cases. Metropolitan Securities rose 2⅜. New Haven 2 and American Wool 3. Virginia-Carolina Chemical lost 1¾. Rubber preferred a point and Realty preferred its rise. Bonds were dull and irregular at noon.

Traders offered the Pacifics more freely and lowered Union Pacific 1⅜. Western stocks generally sold off additional fractions and there were also losses of 1 to 2½ on Sugar, Ice preferred and Railway Investment preferred. Pullman and Tennessee Coal were lifted a point.

Missouri Pacific became more prominent in the downward movement and lost ⅞. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred reacted 2⅜ and Leather preferred lost a point. The general market continued almost lifeless, but somewhat firmer at 2 o'clock.

The market drafted aimlessly. Metropolitan Securities lost more than its early rise as did Tennessee Coal. Northwestern, General Electric, Colorado Fuel and Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & St. Louis lost 1 to 1¾ and Long Island and St. Joseph & Grand Island 1st pfd rose a point. Hide and Leather pfd rallied 3. The closing was stagnant.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Philadelphia to W. H. Laidley & Co.: It is officially stated that Consolidated Lake Superior company has sold about 1,250,000 of new 4 per cent 5 bonds. This means 750,000 of the 2,450,000 new cash needed or a little less than a third.

Ridgeley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The market is getting extremely dull and most trade believe this dullness will continue for some time or be interrupted by another smash. Well, the dullness may continue but it is just as likely that activity will develop. That the next pronounced movement when it does come will be upward there is no doubt whatever in my mind. Heretofore it has always been safe and profitable to be prudently sanguine on the continued growth and prosperity of the United States at such time as Wall street is pessimistic as at present. The annual reports of St. Paul, Union Pacific and Atchison are very encouraging. All roads are in better physical shape than a year ago and the money thus spent has been charged to operating expenses. The actual value of St. Paul stock is at least as great now as when it sold at 198. The prices, not values of securities, have declined. Of course, conditions are not all they should be. But people who wait for perfect conditions never buy stocks cheap. The bull pool in cotton continues perhaps the strongest bear factor of the stock market. Buy any active issues on weak spots.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Aug. 3.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 to 5 points and on the call showed slight further advances on covering as a result of uncertainty over the monthly report of the government due at midday. Owing to the continued holiday at Liverpool, there were no cables to influence sentiment. The weather map was favorable and private advices reflected satisfactory climatic conditions over practically the entire belt. After the call the list eased off slightly with the active months, showing recessions of 1 to 5 points from the best prices of the morning.

At noon the market was feverish and irregular with prices net 1 to 18 points lower, August leading the weakness. Spot quiet; middling upland 12.70; middling gulf 13.00.

Estimated receipts at the ports today 700 bales, against 183 last week and 1342 last year. For the week 3000 bales, against 1376 last week, and 15,715 last year. Today's receipts at New Orleans 200 bales, against 268 last year, and at Houston 19 bales, against 571 last year.

Cotton spot closed dull; mid ups, 12.75; do gulf, 13.00; sales, 1129 bales. Cotton futures closed steady. August, 11.50; September, 10.47; October, 9.96; November, 9.73; December, 9.73; January, 9.73; February, 9.74; March, 9.75.

A WRECK ON THE OMAHA

Chicago Limited Smashed Up a Bit at Rice Lake.

The second wreck on the Omaha road occurred Saturday morning near Rice Lake. The third is being looked for with anxiety by railroad employes.

The first one occurred Friday at Boardman, when a freight train jumped the track and laid out one of the excursion trains from upper Wisconsin for two hours and a half.

The next one took place at a siding near Rice Lake Saturday morning, when the Chicago train was badly smashed up, and the passengers didn't get in here till 3:40 o'clock in the afternoon instead of 10:55 in the morning.

In the first wreck no one was injured, but in the wreck of the Chicago train Ed Pease was injured, sustaining a broken leg, the result of a trunk falling upon it. Several employes on the train were bruised slightly, but none hurt seriously.

The dining car was shaken up badly, and all the china and earthenware broken and smashed, and the car went out on the Twilight limited with a short quota of dishes.

The mail car was broken in two, but the mail clerk was not injured, and the baggage car was piled to the dome with trunks, and yet the baggageman was not injured whatever. The engine was broken beyond repair.

The railroad men believe that wrecks never come excepting in threes, especially when the first one comes on Friday. They are looking for a third wreck at any minute.

LEGISLATIVE BOODLING

To Be Investigated By a Special Grand Jury.

Jefferson City, Mo., Aug. 3.—A special grand jury to inquire into legislative boodling was impannelled today by Judge Hazell.

Carthage, Mo., Aug. 3.—A subpoena was today served upon Col. W. H. Phelps, the railroad attorney at his home here, ordering him to appear before the grand jury at Jefferson City now investigating charges of legislative boodling on Thursday. Within the past two months several efforts have been made to serve subpoenas upon Col. Phelps but today was the first time that he could be found.

EIGHTEEN THOUSAND

Men Out of Employment On Account of Lockout.

Pittsburg, Aug. 3.—Because of the Builders' league lockout 18,000 men were out of employment today. The number is expected to be increased to 24,000, the total number affiliated with the Building Trades council. Work has been stopped on all the buildings being erected, with the exception of the contracts of the George A. Fuller company and a few other outside contractors.

MANY DISASTERS

To Climbers In the Alps Are Reported.

Lucerne, Aug. 3.—Despite all precautions, many Alpine disasters are reported. This week three guides found an unfortunate Alpinist in a dangerous position. They were unable to render assistance and the man perished. A young soldier of 22 years, on the same spot, slipped over a precipice and was killed. The body of another young man was recovered in the ice. His possessions proved him to be a Swiss, named Pendlar. Another youth gathering edelweiss fell 200 feet, narrowly escaping death.

For the first time in many years the Venetian fete was favored with ideal weather, the numberless small boats with Chinese lanterns mingled on the lake with illuminated gondolas and barges. The scores of pretty girls in Swiss costumes made a beautiful panorama.

New York, Aug. 3.—Helen M. Gould has been asked to act as arbitrator in the Holyoke Paper Mills strike involving 4000 employes.

IN MARINE CIRCLES

Steamer Swain Is Likely to Be Brought to Superior.

Sandsucker and Dredge Going on a Very Long Trip.

The steamer V. Swain, which was recently raised at Two Harbors, will probably be brought to Duluth or Superior for repairs.

It was the intention of Captain Davies, who has charge of the wrecking of the steamer, to send her down the lakes, after trimming her cargo, keeping her afloat by means of three pumps which are at work on her.

Her cargo of ore, however, is being lightered, and it is probable that the steamer will be brought to the head of the lakes for repairs.

D. T. Helm, the agent at Duluth for the Gilchrist line, was unable to confirm the rumor, as he has no further connection with the wrecking operations and did not know Captain Davies' plans in the matter.

The unloading of the ore, however, is thought by local vesselmen to mean that the steamer was found to be in too badly damaged a condition to risk the trip down the lakes, and if such is the case she will be brought to Duluth.

Captain Davies is still in Two Harbors, superintending the work on the steamer.

MAKE LONG TRIP.

Sandsucker and Dredge Going to Buffalo.

One of the large sand suckers and a dredge belonging to the Lake Superior Contracting & Dredging company, will leave Duluth during the coming week for lower lake ports.

The sand-sucker will go to Buffalo to start work on a large dredging contract in the vicinity of that port, and the dredge with four scows will go to Port Huron.

The dredge sent will probably be the "Port Huron," which came from that port to Duluth, about four years ago.

The dredge and the sand sucker will be towed down the lakes. Their departure will be watched with interest by marine men, as it will be one of the longest trips taken by a sand sucker in some time.

The exact date of the departure has not yet been announced, but it is likely the sand sucker at least, will leave before the end of the week. It is possible that the dredge will not leave until after the return of the tugs from towing the sand-sucker.

BREAKS ANOTHER RECORD.

Edenborn Smashes Fourth Record This Season.

For the fourth time this season the big freighter William Edenborn, of the Pittsburg Steamship company, has broken the ore-carrying record of the great lakes.

She cleared Saturday, taking 8838 gross tons, or about 9895 net tons of ore. Her draft was 20 feet forward and 20 feet 6 inches aft. The cargo is for South Chicago, and the steamer will, therefore, not be compelled to cross the shallow Limekiln crossing at Detroit.

It was predicted by many marine men that the ore record would pass the 10,000 ton mark, and the Edenborn's record is now within 135 tons of it. It is thought doubtful, however, that any of the vessels at present sailing the lakes, will beat the last record of the Edenborn. The present depth of the channels in the connecting waters, will not allow of much greater draft than the 20 feet 6 inches to which the Edenborn was loaded.

LIGHTHOUSE TENDER IN.

The United States lighthouse tender Amaranth arrived in the harbor from Detroit, Saturday afternoon, with Major Lansing H. Beach, lighthouse engineer for the great lakes district. Major Beach was accompanied by Mrs. Beach and children and they left yesterday for a visit to Yellowstone park.

MAY BUILD TEMPLE

Rumor Connects Hullet C. Merritt With a New Theater Plan.

Several Companies Will Open Next Season In Duluth.

Gossip is again rife regarding the rebuilding of the Temple theater, and this time it is said that Hulett C. Merritt is a party to the rebuilding scheme.

No definite information regarding this rumor was obtainable today, as Mr. and Mrs. Merritt left Saturday night for Pasadena, Cal.

Although the rumors that the theater is to be rebuilt are persistent and common talk, E. Z. Williams, whom rumor has connected with Manager John Condon of the Metropolitan theater in the proposed enterprise, has on several occasions denied positively that he is interested or that he knows anything about it, and has made this denial repeatedly.

As to the connection of Mr. Merritt, there seems to be no one in Duluth today who is competent to speak for him. He spent a month here and up on the ranges while visiting his native community.

It has been said that parties who are figuring on the rebuilding of the Temple theater have been engaged in figuring with architects and theatrical furnishing companies, with a view of securing all the cost of the rebuilding before making any plans public.

Florence Stone would like a snake—that is, in plain language, she wants one.

She has been in search of a garter snake—a tame one if available—to use to represent the asp in the last act of "Antony and Cleopatra," which opens at the Lyceum theater tomorrow night.

She has had two of the stage hands at Lester Park looking for one reported to have been seen by members of the Wilbur Opera company last summer, but they have returned empty handed.

In reply to inquiries made by her and Mr. MacDowell about town today, they were told that one had been seen recently on Bay View Heights, and a couple of the bill men will be sent up there.

In the meantime Miss Stone is in a flush of excitable impatience, for in her performance of Cleopatra she has always used a live snake. She considers her performance of the Egyptian queen the most artistic in her repertory, and wants things right.

When carrying the play on the road, she and Mr. MacDowell have spent their spare moments in hunting garter snakes, and they had quite a collection at one time, a few of which became quite tame.

While very much afraid of snakes, she says that she can stand the crawling of one of the harmless serpents about her for the sake of art.

Many a man has stood their crawlings on account of an inordinate appetite for liquor, but she and the Divine Sarah and Fanny Davenport stand as the only three who would go through the uncanny ordeal for the sake of a theatrical performance.

Manager C. A. Marshall received word today of three companies which will come into Duluth to open their seasons for 1903-4.

This is rather unusual, as heretofore Duluth has been such an out-of-the-way place that companies had a hard time getting here when thoroughly organized. Now an opening in Duluth will give them a straight road into the Pacific coast country.

The companies that will open here are "The Chaperons," a musical comedy, which has been seen here, coming Aug. 2; F. Miller Kent, in a new play, to be seen here for the first time, Sept. 23; and Walter Jones, who was with "The Chaperons," and who will present here for the first time anywhere. "The Sleepy King," Sept 7. Two of them will have their first production in Duluth, and are plays that have caused some talk in the theatrical world for several months.

WILL MOVE HERE.

Aitkin Attorney Will Make His Home Here.

John Heine, a prominent Finnish attorney of Aitkin, is in the city today, on his way back from the Finnish gathering at Ishpeming.

In talking to some Duluth friends this morning he said he intended moving to Duluth and taking up his residence and practice here.

Mr. Heine is a prominent politician, very influential with the Finns and feels that his business and other demands will be better subserved if he is within easier reach of the ranges, where the Finns are in the largest numbers.

He has set no date for the removal.

Gone to New York.

The heads of the subsidiary companies of the steel corporation in Duluth have left for New York to attend a meeting of the United States Steel corporation, which will take action in regard to Charles Schwab, whose resignation is said to have been reduced to paper.

President T. F. Cole, of the Oliver and Minnesota Mining companies; F. E. House, president of the Iron Range road; Commodore A. B. Wolvin of the Pittsburg Steamship company, and W. J. Olcott, of the Missabe road, are the four to go from here.

President Cole left over the Omaha, Messrs. Wolvin and Olcott sailed on the Tionesta Saturday and Mr. House went over the South Shore road.

The meeting will be held about the middle of the week.

SHEEHY IS RELEASED

Wins Out In Case Brought By Four Laboring Men.

Joseph Sheehy won out in a municipal court prosecution this afternoon, in which he was charged with taking money from four laboring men with intent to defraud.

The case was taken up before Judge Gearhart and Attorney Marshall, appearing for Mr. Sheehy, moved a dismissal on the ground that the complaints did not state cause for action. After considerable argument the court sustained the motion.

Sheehy was arrested last Friday on complaints sworn out by James Summerland, James Griemer and Osmon Tvedt. They claimed that he hired them to work on the docks for Knudsen & Eden without any right to hire men for that firm and accepted the customary fees for furnishing the jobs.

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 3.—A special to the Bee from Folsom says: Two bands of escaped convicts of five and three members each are definitely reported to be located, and it is thought they will soon be captured. The attention of the posse is now centered on these two groups, little attention being given to convicts like Gordon and Robertson, who are believed to have wandered off by themselves, it being thought that these men will eventually enter some small town and be captured by local officers. been at Dutch Flat or anywhere else in that locality have been found to be false.

FOUR MEN HURT

Collision on the Missabe Road In a Dense Fog.

Engine Bound Up Hill Crashes Into An Ore Train.

Four men were badly injured in a head-on collision of an engine and an ore train on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad, just west of the Bay View incline railroad, shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon.

A Duluth & Iron Range engine, running to Proctorknott, smashed into a southbound Missabe road ore train, the fog being so dense at that point that objects were not visible a block away.

The report was sent to the local offices of the Missabe road at 2 o'clock, and Superintendent Kreiter, with physicians, on a relief train, left immediately for the scene of the acident, and conveyed the injured men to St. Mary's hospital as rapidly as possible. Some time elapsed between the accident and the time the hospital was reached, and it was 3:30 o'clock before the injured men were received by the hospital attendants.

The injured are:

Conductor D. M. Kemp of the Missabe ore train, sustained several broken ribs.

Engineer Schulez of the Duluth & Iron Range road, one arm and one leg broken; not seriously injured.

Two brakemen on ore train, names not known; bruised slightly.

Four cars were ditched from the ore train, but the engines were only slightly injured.

Cheaper Postage.

All residents of Duluth who have occasion to send letters to Shanghai, China, will in future be able to save 3 cents apiece on them.

New postal regulations have recently gone into effect, whereby the city of Shanghai is classed as a domestic post-office instead of foreign office. Shanghai is the only city in China which has a branch postal agency of the United States government, and it is the only city which is affected by the recent change.

Letter postage is decreased from 5 cents to 2 cents, and all other articles which are admitted to the United States domestic mails are admitted to the Shanghai mail at the same rates.

STATEMENT ERRONEOUS

Baltimore, Aug. 3.— A press dispatch which was dated Doylestown, Pa., July 30, and printed in the Pennsylvania papers of July 31, contained a statement that Cashier Brock, of the suspended national bank of Doylestown was the president of the American Bonding company, of Baltimore, and that the defunct bank "holds many of the Bonding company's securities." This statement, the American Bonding company declared today, was erroneous, and without foundation in fact. A representative of the company said: "Baltimore is the home office of the American Bonding company, all of its general officers are citizens of Baltimore, James Bond being the president. It has a paid-up capital of $1,000,000 and surplus and reserve January 1, last of $627,339; its total assets then amounted to $2,155,630. The investments representing these assets are all first-class securities, largely state and municipal bonds, and are held in Baltimore, except about $900,000, which are deposited in various states for the transaction of business, some $50,000 being deposited in the state of Pennsylvania."

THE MILLER CASE

President Favors Open Door In Government Printing Office.

Is Most Expensive Printing Establishment In the World.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, Aug. 3.—(Special to The Herold.)—But for some foolish things he has done in pursuit of his peculiar race policy, there is no doubt, from the expressions of representative men of that section, that President Roosevelt would be a popular chief executive in the Southern states. It is a common expression among them that he is nearer like a Democrat than any Republican who has ever been in the White House, particularly on questions that affect the welfare of the people generally, such as the trusts, reciprocity, the anthracite coal strike and lately trade unionism. The president's stand in the case of Assistant Foreman W. A. Miller, who was forced out of the government printing office by the Bookbinders' union, is a striking case in point.

It is urged that Democracy has always been opposed to whatever interfered with the rights of individual liberty; that it has been the champion of freedom of opportunity, of self-reliance, of self-dependence in the highest degree consistent with common sense. Just now, to those who thoughtfully contemplate the issue pending between the government printing office and the union, the occasion is fraught with the profoundest interest. It is said to have brought the question to a clearer definition and nearer to a helpful understanding by the public than have all the conflicts that ever occurred between those two substantial quantities of human occupation. The government is finding itself in the attitude of capital confronted by the demand of labor. The government, Democrats insist, must assert its right and power, or disastrously weaken the whole spirit and capacity of the people for self-government. President Roosevelt, they say, is right in line with Democratic doctrine in the way he has insisted upon the restoration of Assistant Foreman Miller. So they can but endorse and approve him as avowing good old Democratic law and at the same time affording a refreshing view of his several-sided character, which is always at its best when sharpest obliquing from Republican principles and practices.

The president has plainly declared himself for an open door for non-union as well as union men in the government printing office. His clear-cut deliverance on the subject has set labor leaders hereabouts into a state of profound and somber cogitation. Credited as they are with a desire that he shall modify what he has done, letting Miller out again, they are not generous enough to disclose how he may do it without stultifying himself in every sentiment he has uttered on the subject.

In his first letter on the Miller case the president wrote:

"There is no objection to the employes of the government printing office constituting themselves into a union, if they so desire, but no rules or regulations of that body can be permitted to override the laws of the United States which it is my sworn duty to enforce."

The president's messages and speeches assert him a believer in the right of the individual initiative. His idea appears luminously to be that every man has a divine right to work, and that his individual initiative is the best element of the manhood-right that belongs to him. It does not in any way deny the right or wisdom of organization by labor.

Speaking last year to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers at Chattanooga, President Roosevelt said:

"I believe emphatically in organized labor. I feel that we must always keep before our minds that there is nothing sacred in the name itself. The worth of an organization depends upon its being handled with skill, courage, wisdom, a spirit of fair dealing as between man and man, and a wise constraint."

"You teach the benefits of organization," he added, "and you also teach the indispensable need of keeping absolutely unimpaired the faculty of the individual initiative, the faculty by which a man brings himself to the highest point of perfection by exercising the special qualities with which he himself is endowed. Any man who enters with the purpose of letting the brotherhood carry him is not worth much. A great deal can be accomplished by each working for all and all for each, but we must not forget that the first requisite in accomplishing that is that each man should work for others by working for himself, by developing his own capacity."

In his last message to congress, President Roosevelt says:

"Each must refrain from arbitrary or tyrannous interference with the rights of others. Organized capital and organized labor alike should remember that in the long run the interest of the general public and the conduct of each must conform to the fundamental rule of obedience to the law of individual freedom and justice and fair dealing to all. Each must remember that in addition to power it should strive after the realization of lofty, healthy, generous ideals. Every employer, every wage-earner must be guaranteed his liberty and his right to dispose of his property or his labor as he likes, so long as he does not infringe upon the rights of others."

That, Democrats say, is good Democratic gospel, handed down from Thomas Jeeffrson, although Mr. Roosevelt did write that Jefferson, the founder of Democracy, was constitutionally unable to tell the truth.

The Miller case, which may be investigated by congress, will afford an excellent opportunity to uncover how unionism has imposed upon the government, or rather how the government has permitted itself to be imposed upon at the expense of taxpayers, because of the demands of the union. Unionism has bossed the government printing office from top to bottom for years. Acknowledged to be the largest printing establishment in the world, the government printing office is the most expensive in the world, the dearest for the amount and quality of the work it does, costing piece for piece from 100 to 200 per cent more than the same class of work done by private concerns. Officers in the other departments of the government have incidentally learned of the excessive cost of producing government publications at the government's expense. For instance, Director General Merriam of the census, desiring to have the census records bound in a certain way, submitting estimates to a New York publishing house. When he was informed that the work had to be done at the government printing office, he showed the sample of the New York house as a standard. When the work of the government printing office was completed, its inferiority was not only palpable, but it cost the government just 150 per cent more than it would have been done by the private concern.

This is but a small specimen of the rule-and-ruin policy of the union in the government printing office. Because the union said so it has clung stupidly to type-setting by hand long after newspapers and printing offices everywhere have overcome the objections of the union to the use of linotype machines, thus keeping the greatest printing office of the most progressive government on earth tied to long-discarded methods. The question is coming up to congress whether the union will adapt itself to modern methods, and the plain dictates of economy against senseless extravagance, or whether congress shall knuckle to the dictates of the union.

WITNESSES ARE AT VARIANCE

Stories Told of Marcum Murder Do Not Correspond.

Dr. Kash Contradicts Testimony of at Least Fifteen.

He, However, Is at Variance With Original Evidence.

Cynthian, Ky., Aug. 4.—In the Jett and White trial for the Marcum murder, Dr. J. A. Kash, of Jackson, today testified to attending Marcum when the latter was dying in front of the court house. He averred that a few minutes before the killing of Marcum he saw Jett at Hargis Bros.' store, across from the court house, talking to several persons. This contradicted the testimony of at least fifteen witnesses, who testified for the prosecution to seeing Jett go into the side door of the court house immediately before the shooting. On cross-examination he did not remember seeing anyone else at the time of the killing about the court house. Cross-examination developed, it was said, that he had contradicted his testimony on the former trial at Jackson.

John Smith and John Abner testified, contradicting Mrs. Mary Johnson and Edward Marcum, who said they had seen Smith and Abner an hour before the killing of Marcum in a stone quarry near the Marcums' home, with other armed men.

POISONED CHILD

Summer Sausage Proved Fatal to Little Windom Girl.

The Food Will Be Analyzed For Deleterious Matter.

St. Paul, Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—W. W. P. McConnell, state dairy and food commissioner, yesterday received word from Andrew C. Olson, of Windom that a child of a neighboring farmer, Edward Flatgard, had died suddenly from eating "summer sausage" and that another child, who had eaten the sausage is at the point of death. Mr. McConnell immediately telephoned Mr. Olsen to send samples of the sausage to the department to be analyzed, and if it is found that it contains injurious preservatives the dealer or manufacturer will be prosecuted.

Mr. McConnell learned that several members of the family living on a farm twelve miles from Windom had eaten the sausage, but that so far only the children were seriously affected. The theory is that possibly the sausage was mixed with preservations not sufficiently deleterious to kill adults, but powerful enough to overcome children of a less robust constitution.

SLUMP IN UNITED STATES STEEL STOCKS AND BONDS

Large Blocks of These Securities Offered For Sale, Accompanied By Adverse Trade Rumors—Decline In Consolidated Gas a Feature of Market.

New York, Aug. 4.—Extensive selling of the United States Steel stock and the 5 per cent bonds was the feature of today's early trading in the stock market. Large blocks of these securities were offered for sale, the common making a maximum decline of 1¾ points and the preferred stock 2 in the first hour. The bonds broke about a point. The decline in these stocks was accompanied by adverse trade rumors, which had more effect than the coming resignation of President Schwab. Another feature was a point decline in Consolidated Gas. The selling of this stock was doubtless directly due to the proposed issue of $6,000,000 of treasury stock. There was a slight recovery by the end of the first hour, but the undertone was decidedly heavy.

The trading element made another successful raid on prices in the second hour. The most severe losses were sustained by North American and Virginia-Carolina Chemical, which dropped 4 and 6 points respectively. Consolidated Gas made virtually no recovery from its early loss. The Pacifics and grangers were sold freely at declines of 1 to 2 points.

TO ACCEPT SCHWAB'S RESIGNATION

New York, Aug. 4.—The resignation of Charles M. Schwab as president of the United States Steel corporation will be accepted at today's meeting of the executive committee.

New York, Aug. 4.—A preliminary meeting of the United States Steel corporation directors was held today. Those present included Chairman Gary, J. P. Morgan, H. C. Frick, Norman B. Ream and George W. Perkins.

Reports that important changes are impending could not be confirmed, Mr. Frick, who is said to be slated for the chairmanship of the finance committee, declined to be interviewed.

CARDINAL SARTO, THE PATRIARCH OF VENICE, HAS BEEN ELECTED POPE

POPE PIUS X.

Cardinal Giuseppe Sarto was born at Riese, diocese of Treviso, in Northern Italy, on June 2, 1835. He was a parish priest in the province of Venice for the greater part of his life and finally became a bishop. He was created cardinal by Leo XIII at the consistory of June 12, 1893, receiving the title of S. Bernardo delle Terma. He has also been patriarch of Venice since June, 1893, and bishop of Mantua. He belongs to the ecclesiastical congregations of bishops and regulars, sacred rites, indulgences and sacred relics. He is noted for his prudence, has never meddled in politics and is well known as extremely independent. His high executive qualities and unexcelled learning became known soon after his elevation to the episcopate and were recognized by the church. He is very learned in the ecclesiastical doctrines, is modest, energetic, a good administrator and organizer, a patron of the arts and his seriousness always has been proverbial. Early in April Pope Leo, in a conversation with Father Perosi, the Italian composer, said in speaking of Cardinal Sarto:

"Hold him very dear, Perosi, as in the future he will be able to do much for you. We firmly believe he will be our successor."

He has been known for many years as one of the greatest preachers in the church. In spite of his 68 years, he is strong and robust.

Cardinal Sarto was much talked of in Italy when, on his preferment to the Venetian patriarchate, he encountered a determined opposition on the part of the Italian government before he could take possession of his see. The government maintained that the patriarchate was part of the king of Italy's patronage, and that it was the king's right to present his own candidate. The difficulty which ensued was in reality solved, or shelved, because Cardinal Sarto, though chosen by the pope, was a favorite with the Italian government and with King Humbert himself—a rather singular case in Italy. The cardinal has, therefore, ruled his diocese undisturbed during the last ten years, beloved by Catholics, esteemed by the government and respected by his enemies. Under his sway the Catholic institutions of Venice have thriven exceedingly, and the cardinal's piety, combined with his very noteworthy common sense, have given him the reputation of being an ideal bishop.

FIRST GRADE TEACHERS ARE BADLY NEEDED IN MINNESOTA

St. Paul, Aug. 4.—Special to The Herald.)—The rural schools of Minnesota are sorely in need of teachers holding first grade certificates. This is evident from the reports of the summer schools, which closed last Friday, received at the office of the superintendent of public instruction.

Although the summer schools were largely attended the number of teachers holding first grade certificates was small at every school. Out of thirty-one teachers who attended the institute at Mora, Kanebec county, only one held a first grade certificate. Out of forty-four at Windom, Cottonwood county, three held first grade certificates. Reports from other counties were as follows:

Dodge county, eight out of fifty-one; Faribault, four out of fifty-eight; Pipestone, eight out of 123; Worthington, five out of forty-four; Carlton, four out of twenty-eight.

The problem of obtaining qualified teachers for rural districts has taxed the department of public instruction for many years. As one means to accomplish this end, State Superintendent J. W. Olsen recommended to the last legislature that summer terms be established at the normal schools.

MINNESOTA A GREAT HONEY STATE

St. Paul, Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Statistics compiled by J. J. Lomen, chief of the state bureau of statistics, show that Minnesota is fast becoming a great honey producing state. Returns from more than half of the county assessors show an increase of from 10 to 100 per cent in the number of hives and pounds of honey produced in 1902 over 1898, the last year for which the bureau has published reports. While the returns of the county assessors are fragmentary and incomplete, they show the great progress made in this industry during the past five years. Benton county, in 1898, reported 421 hives and 11,130 pounds of honey. In 1902 there were 955 hives and 25,113 pounds. Houston reported 605 hives and 9373 pounds in 198 and 795 hives and 12,170 pounds in 1902. In Stearns county the number of hives increased from 391 to 434, and the number of pounds increased from 7999 to 10,700. The number of pounds produced in Martin county increased from 3770 to 4428 and in Pine county 11,060 pounds were produced in 1902 as compared with 7322 in 1898.

THE U. S. MAY TAKE EADS BRIDGE

Washington, Aug. 4.—Secretary Root has addressed a communication to the Merchants Bridge company, the owners of the large bridge across the Mississippi river at St. Louis asking the company to show cause why the United States should not take possession of the bridge under the statute which provided for its construction. Under the law the secretary of war can take possession of the bridge without legal proceedings of any kind, if any of three things happens, namely, if the bridge company consolidates with any other bridge company; if the company pools its earnings with any other company; if the same officers of any other company become officers of the Merchants Bridge company. In the allegations presented to the secretary of war it is declared that leases made by the Merchants Bridge company constitute a consolidation with another company.

CHURCH BELLS WILL RING AS USUAL

Eldora, Iowa, Aug. 4.—The church bell ordinance of this city is dead, and the bells will continue to summon the people to divine worship. Maintaining that the ringing of the church bells disturbed and annoyed the patients in the city hospital, an ordinance was passed by the city council prohibiting the old-time custom of ringing and tolling the bells. The ordinance was vetoed by Mayor Robb, and an effort was made to pass the measure over the mayor's veto, but it failed by one vote.

TALK OF LYNCHING.

Alleged Assailant of Little Girl In Danger.

Butte, Aug. 4.—A special to the Miner from Anatonek, Wash., says: With a bad wound on her head, the body of Mabel Richards was found in the woods near here. Philippa Milton, a rancher, is under arrest and refuses to talk beyond a denial of guilt.

Mabel Richards, was the 13-year-old daughter of R. H. Richards, sheriff of Asotin county and was missed Sunday. The girl's clothes were badly torn and marks of a struggle were evident. There is talk of lynching.

Selection of New Pontiff Made on Seventh Ballot---Takes Name of Pius X.

He Is a Quiet Ecclesiastic Who Has Never Mixed Much In Politics.

Rome, Aug. 4.—Cardinal Sarto was this morning elected pope and assumed the title of Pius X.

The new pope appeared in St. Peter's, where, amidst tremendous excitement, he pronounced his first papal benediction. Many thousands witnessed the historic scene and signified their approval of the choice of the cardinals by tumultuous cheering.

The usual large crowd assembled before St. Peter's at about 10:30 a. m. to await the rising of the smoke from the Sistine chapel. Hundreds of carriages stood in the blistering sun, which seemed hotter than ever. The colonnades were blocked with people, but even there the anxious watchers could scarcely escape from the severe heat. When the quarter after 11 o'clock rang the crowd left its shelter and stood bravely in the sun in the belief that the smoke would appear within a few minutes, as it had constantly given its signal about this hour since the conclave commenced.

Minutes sped on and still no smoke was seen. When the bells sounded half-past 11 the ministers and others left their carriages and joined the watchers on the steps of the basilica. Inside St. Peter's also, many were waiting and the suspense brought thousands running from the nearby streets, the delay on the fourth morning of the conclave being interpreted to mean that a decision had at length been reached. The troops spread themselves across the squares, and nervous anticipation possessed all. Hundreds of surmises passed from mouth to mouth. Minutes seemed like hours.

St. Peter's boomed out the three quarters of the hour and there was still no sign either of the "fumata" or of an announcement. A second later the great central window of St. Peter's facing the piazza swung slowly open. A loud shout arose and all rushed towards the ordinal. At the open window half a dozen vatican attendants appeared. Suddenly there broke out into the fierce sunlight a banner bearing a cardinal's arms. Reinforcements of troops crossed the piazza, then closed their ranks and held back many who strained every nerve to get close to the window. For a minute or so none knew to which cardinal belonged the arms so significantly displayed. Then the rumor arose that they were Sarto's, but few persons were absolutely sure of their identity. Five hundred troops lined up around the top of St. Peter's steps, thus dividing the great crowd, which was increasing every moment, into three sections. The tension was soon relieved. Cardinal Macchi, in his cardinal robes, carrying a large red book and preceded by a glittering cross, appeared at the window. A wild shout went up. Cardinal Macchi waved both hands for silence. In a second a solemn hush fell upon the scene, broken only by a sharp word of command from an officer and the rattle with which the troops brought their rifles to the present. In clear tones Cardinal Macchi read the preamble, the people below meanwhile being scarcely able to contain themselves until he reached the word "Sarto," when a terrific roar went up. Those out of hearing of the cardinal joined in the acclamation, and the whole square became one mass of men and women throwing hats in the air and cheering at the top of their voices.

Vainly the cardinal waved his hand for silence. The long pent-up feelings of those who had watched the fumata for four days now found an outlet and for some minutes they could not be suppressed. Finally it was quiet enough for Cardinal Macchi to proceed and say that the new pontiff had taken the name of Pius X. Then with a blessing upon the crowd the cardinal disappeared from the window and the attendants quickly drew up the banner.

Those below instantly made a rush to go into St. Peter's and a mad scramble ensued for the basilica. Thousands dashed toward the four huge doors and in spite of their width a desperate jam occurred in which the women narrowly escaped injury. Like a roaring wave the people swept into St. Peter's.

Rome, Aug. 4.—Cardinal Macchi, secretary of apostolic briefs, announced to the crowd assembled before St. Peter's, that Cardinal Sarto had been elected pope and that he had taken the name Pius X.

The troops on duty immediately lined up on the plaza and presented arms.

At 12:16 this afternoon, Pope Pius X appeared inside the balcony of the basilica and blessed the populace, amid the acclamations of the enormous crowd assembled upon the plaza.

While Prince Chigi, the master of the conclave, was drawing up the official act of the election and acceptance of the newly elected pope, the latter, surrounded by his friends, disappeared into a small room near the altar, where he donned, with, who can say, what feelings of triumph and humility, the white robes of his office. Pius X was assisted by his conclavist, who first knelt and kissed his master's hand and thus received the first apostolic blessing given by Pius X.

The new pope was attired all in white with the exception of red shoes, which was quite regular, but he did not stop to remove the red cardinal's stockings for the white papal ones, and these showed as he raised his gown to move forward. When he was quite robed, the secretary of the conclave, Monsignor Merry del Val, offered him the papal white cap, amidst breathless silence. He did not follow the precedent created by Pope Leo, who declined to give his red cap to the master of ceremonies as a sign that he would soon be created a cardinal, but with a slight smile, Sarto took the white cap, placed it calmly on his head and dropped the red one lightly on the head of Monsignor Merry del Val amidst a murmur of approval. This is taken as a certain indication that the happy recipient is soon to be raised to the cardinalate.

As the new pontiff stepped from behind the altar, the only touch of color about him being his red and gold shoes, he really seemed to be the embodiment of his holy office. His face was pale and clearly softened by emotion. He paused a moment as he came before the expectant cardinals, then seated himself on the throne with a hurried movement, as though he had suddenly grown weak. His back was to the altar and he was enthroned to serve the so-called "first obedience" of the cardinals. They came forward, one by one, some calm and smiling, others sober and non-committal, while still others found considerable difficulty, even at this hour, in concealing their too obvious disappointment.

All kissed his hand and foot, while he saluted each on the cheek with the kiss of peace. Then all broke into the "Te Deum" with such effect that scarcely an eye was dry.

Pius X then arose and in a voice at first tremulous, but gradually becoming full and firm, administered the papal blessing to all of the members of the sacred college. It was received with bowed and uncovered heads.

The fisherman's ring, not yet having been found, a new one designed by Camerlingo Oreglia, was placed on the pontiff's finger as a symbol of renewed power, and evidence that the Catholic church has once more a sovereign head.

Sarto bore himself with becoming dignity and gave no outward sign of exultation in this, the supreme moment of his life.

In the meantime masons and carpenters had been busy breaking down doors, so that the cardinal deacons, together with the master of ceremonies and the conclavists and many others might proceed to the balcony of St. Peter's. The populace waiting in the piazza had already, at half past 11 o'clock, seen the tiny thread of smoke, almost transparent, which warned them what to expect, so that when the windows on the balcony slowly opened and the great gleaming cross was seen, the excitement and impatience heightened to the extreme.

Slowly Cardinal Macchi, secretary of the congregation of apostolic briefs, advanced and exclaimed in a loud voice:

"Annuntio Vobis Gaudium Magnum Habemus Papem Eminent Issimum Ac Reverendissimum Dominum Cardinalem, Josephus Sarto Qui Sibi Imposuit Nomen Pium X."

The following is a liberal translation of the announcement:

"I announce to you with great pleasure that we have elected a pope, the Most Eminent Reverend Cardinal Joseph Sarto, who has taken the name of Pius X."

Then the bells of St. Peter's pealed out, as did those of all the churches of Rome, giving the glad news to the world.

As Cardinal Macchi returned to the Sistine chapel after having performed his pious duty, the new pope rose, and an effort to make some kind of procession was made, but Pius X was literally carried in triumph to his cell, followed by a great concourse and preceded by the cross. He was stopped every step or two by those anxious to kiss his ring and receive the papal blessing, which Sarto accorded with great benignity and patience. As the new pope passed along, many of those present tried to prove that they had always known what the result would be, and how satisfied they all were. "Why, of course," shouted one, "before the conclave gathered I always said it would be he." If any of these compliments reached the ears of the pontiff, he gave no sign thereof. When he arrived at the door of his cell the pope turned and, raising his hands, gave, in a voice almost suffocated with emotion, his benediction to the assembly, which received it on bended knees. After a short rest, imposed by the fatigue and emotion of his election, Pius X joined his court in the ducal hall for the solemn benediction which he was about to give to the people of Rome. Although to ordinary eyes the confusion was as great as ever, to those practiced in the mysteries of the vatican order was coming out of chaos, and the bearing of all in the presence of the pope was much more formal. The babel of voices sank at his approach, while none addressed him unless he spoke first.

The formal salutations having terminated, a procession was formed. In the center was the pontiff in his white robes, his figure standing out above those surrounding him, his silver hair gleaming under his white cap. He was surrounded by the cardinals, still in their violet robes and preceded by the pontifical cross, the jewels of which flashed as though they also triumphed in Sarto's success, while the conclavists and prelates seemed really jubilant in their joy and satisfaction. The procession traversed many noble halls until it approached the window looking into St. Peter's. From below rose a murmur of voices, which, although subdued by distance, denoted the presence of a large concourse of people. The pope was seen to grow pale, and then turning to Cardinal Bacilieri, who stood beside him, he said:

"Now I understand the emotion Pope Leo always showed when going into St. Peter's to have the eyes of a great crowd focused on him. It is almost terrifying."

Standing forward in the window, the others having fallen back, he deliberately controlled himself and looked across the great basilica. Crossing himself, Sarto raised his hand, and in a voice palpably tremulous, he said, as soon as the cries from below gave an opportunity:

"Auditorium nostrum in nomine Domini." (We speak in the name of the Master.)

To this came in reply from thousands of voices the cry: "Qui fecit coelum et terram." (Who made heaven and earth.)

In a thrilling voice the pope responded: "Sit nomen Domini benedictum." (May the name of the Master be blessed.)

Then raising himself to his full height and leaning forward as much as possible, he intoned: "Benedicat vos omnipotens Deus." (May the omnipotent God bless you), which called forth such applause that several minutes elapsed before the pontiff could retire. He then drew back and, the procession reforming, turned to the ducal hall. At the moment of leaving the window Pius X turned to Monsignor Bisleti, who happened to be beside him, and said:

"I shall never again feel just the same emotion."

Berlin, Aug. 4.—The election of Cardinal Sarto, as the new pope, was made known here at 1 o'clock this afternoon, through extra editions of the newspapers, which were eagerly read. Replying to the question whether the election was acceptable to Germany, a representative of the foreign office answered:

"Unqualifiedly so, from an official viewpoint. Sarto is a mild-mannered man and has never been active politically."

In other quarters it was remarked that Sarto is the only Italian cardinal whom the king of Italy received.

The election of Pius X, once it was consummated, was proclaimed in a loud voice by the cardinal scrutineers to the sacred college. Mgr. Merry del Val, secretary of the conclave, and Prince Chigi, marshal of the conclave, were notified through a bell by Cardinal Oreglia. They entered the Sistine chapel amid visible excitement, the eager faces of the conclavists and prelates being seen crowding about the door.

It is impossible to describe the confusion in the chapel. The friends and supporters of the new pope gathered around him, complimenting and congratulating him, crying "Viva" and even clapping their hands without ceremony. They appeared to be unable to contain their joy. These few moments of oblivion gave Sarto's opponents time to recover their balance and conceal chagrin, although the majority, even among them, declared themselves to be satisfied with the result, and only a few sore faces were seen.

Among the conclavists and prelates the expression of opinion was much freer, and two so lost control of their tempers that they had to be separated by the scandalized onlookers. There was great irritation on one side and a correspondingly great exultation on the other.

"Sarto," "Sarto," rang from mouth to mouth, penetrating to the furthermost corner of the Vatican precincts. All scurried toward the Sistine chapel to see the new pontiff and pay their homage to the new sovereign and have the honor to be among the first to kiss his hand. After the election, even when the excitement began to calm down, none seemed quite to know what to do, it being to all, except Cardinal Oreglia, a new ceremonial. Even he had seen it only twenty-five years ago.

Cardinal Oreglia, as dean of the cardinal bishops, called Cardinals Netto and Macchi, the deans, respectively, of the cardinal priests and cardinal-deacons. They approached the new pontiff, saying in Latin, distinctly, but in a shaking voice: "Do you accept your election acording to the canonical laws as supreme pontiff?"

The moment was one of excitement. There was a perceptible pause before Pius X had controlled his voice. Then he answered simply "Yes." The cardinals thereupon removed their baldaschinos, so that that of Sarto was the only one remaining, thus marking him as their supreme head. The passing supremacy of the cardinals was gone and was now consecrated in one person.

Paris, Aug. 4.—The election of Cardinal Sarto as pope has created a distinctly favorable impression in government quarters here, removing the fear that the choice might fall upon a radical or a reactionary candidate. The foreign office received the first information of the election from press sources.

Although not espousing any particular candidate, official feeling has been favorable to one who would continue the conservative policy of the late pope.

Rome, Aug. 4.—There was great anxiety around the Vatican throughout the night, both in and out of the conclave, owing to the fear that Cardinal Herrero y Espinoza might die at any moment.

Feeling the end approaching, the cardinal confided his last wishes to Monsignor Boniface Marin, vicar general of his arch-diocese, Valencia, Spain.

At daybreak Cardinal Herrero's condition took a turn for the better. Nevertheless, the doctors still consider his life to be in danger.

New York, Aug. 4.—Cardinal Gibbons has been added to the sick list, which now numbers five of the sixty-two members of the conclave, according to a World dispatch from Rome. He is said to be suffering from a touch of malaria.

NEW CONEY ISLAND

Duluth May Have One Soon Up St. Louis River.

New York Parties Figuring On Buying Up Zenith Park.

There is a strong possibility that Duluth will, in the near future, have a miniature Coney island established in the St. Louis river.

A representative of a New York syndicate is in the city at the present time, and has been negotiating for the purchase of Zenith park, which the syndicate intends to improve and turn into a popular summer resort, should it acquire the property.

The island on which Zenith park is situated consists of 640 acres. E. P. Alexander owns 189 acres, R. H. Doran 40 acres and Judge Clough controls the greater part of the remainder.

E. P. Alexander, who is the agent for the property, admitted that he had been approached by parties who were figuring on the purchase of the island, but said that nothing definite had yet been done in the matter.

It is said that if the purchase is made the syndicate purposes spending from $25,000 to $50,000 in improvements on the island during the coming fall and winter, and will have it ready for business next summer.

"The island would make an ideal popular summer resort," said one of the owners today. "It is within easy access of the city. It has a beach that could be easily put into good condition, and if a street car line were extended to the mainland opposite, the crowds from the city could reach there for the price of one street car fare.

"Duluth is sadly in need of some such resort, and the purchase of the island for this purpose would be welcome news to the citizens."

NOT MUCH BUSINESS

County Board Is Not Likely to Have Lively Session.

New matters have not been coming in very fast for the county board meeting which will be held tomorrow afternoon. The regular committee meetings will be held in the morning at which time the monthly bills and account will be audited and made ready for passage in the afternoon session.

Among the principal matters thus far known to come to the attention of the commissioners will be the final hearing in two school districts to be established, one in an unorganized town and another in township 59-15 and part of 51-16. A large number of road petitions will come before the board for a final hearing.

Two new applications for county liquor licenses have been made, one for the two of Stuntz and another for the town of Great Scott.

One of the sureties on a saloonkeeper's bond near the Wallace mine will have a communication before the board stating that he will withdraw from the bond. In such cases the county board does not usually relieve a bondsman unless the person bonded either furnishes another satisfactory bond or gives satisfactory evidence of having gone out of business.

The usual routine business of the board will take a large part of the time of the session.

SUES FOR TREASURE.

Claims Buried Wealth of the Starke Family.

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 4.—Has the treasurer of the Starke family, of Virginia, known to have been buried on Warsaw island, thirty miles from the city, in 1863, been discovered? There is circumstantial evidence indicating that valuables have been found and taken by J. H. Haslip, a Philadelphia junk dealer. Haslip was much in evidence here two weeks ago, accompanied by his son. He talked freely and said he had information from an old Confederate blockade runner, whom he befriended, and who, on his deathbed, confided to him a secret of wealth hidden in the sands of Warsaw.

On his third return form the island Haslip returned in the dead of night and took a train for Philadelphia. He engaged a hack at the wharf and drove rapidly to the station with his son. The hackman who transferred them says two men had with them a small trunk that was so heavy it took both to lift it, and two canvas bags, that would apparently hold about eight quarts each. Persons who had visited Warsaw recently report mysterious actions of two strangers. Marks of digging also have been found.

A dispatch from St. Louis says William P. Osborn has employed an attorney to sue for the treasure, as he claims he is the rightful heir to it. The treasure is said to be worth $25,000.

LOWER RATE

Wanted By Millers For Wheat In Transit.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 4.—Millers from Minnesota and the Dakotas were in conference yesterday with officials of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific, in an effort to secure a reduction of the charges on wheat milled in transit. Under present arrangements wheat is milled in transit at a charge of one per cent per 100 more than the through rate per 100.

No agreement was reached and the roads have taken the requests of the milling interests under consideration. It is probable that another session will be held in a week or two.

TEMPERANCE FIGHT

In Pennsylvania Town Is of Novel Character.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 4.—At 12:06 o'clock yesterday morning informations were made in Wilkinsburg against S. S. Covell, W. S. Stout, J. C. Cauley and W. —. Smith, druggists of that place, for keeping open on Sunday. The druggists in turn will begin suits against all of the singers employed at the First Presbyterian church.

The church people scattered barrels of ice water all over town. Some person put a liberal quantity of whiskey in each barrel. There was a big demand for the water and more drunken people than were ever seen on the streets before.

PLAGUE OF MOSQUITOES

In London Is Worst In History of the Metropolis.

London, Aug. 4.—The sudden and stifling heat which overwhelmed London's millions last week brought with it such a plague of mosquitoes as the city has never before experienced.

Some people whom mosquitoes have a liking for had their hands and faces disfigured with swellings that surpassed the worst work of a wasp.

All the large public hospitals had mosquitoe cases among their out-patients on Saturday. The surgery album at Guy's showed 20 "bites" in the list of entries.

"We have mosquito cases every year," said the house surgeon yesterday, "but never had such a day as Saturday. Some of the patients were quite blind for a time, and in the case of others their forearms had swollen all round in a painful manner. Several babies were badly bitten."

The hospital doctors agreed that the insects doing all this mischief were the real mosquitoes, imported from abroad and hatched in the harbor.

East Ham, West Ham, Barking, Plaistow and all the inhabited places adjacent to the docks and the whole Thames marsh ground, Wolwich Greenwich, and even the high and wholesome land toward Blackheath are groaning under the common incubus.

During the heat of the day the mosquito lies sleeping in the grass or upon low plants and shrubs, and as the sun sinks he emerges to his fell work, and to sit in the garden in the cool of the evening is to invite attack, while the pleasant shadow of the trees is the aleadliest of all. An evening walk in Bostal Wood is a torment, and a stroll across the soft grass of Greenwich Park as twilight falls results in swollen ankles from the stings of mosquitoes brushed from their resting places, and they can sting through thick cycling stockings.

After dusk the streets are positively unsafe because of the infesting mosquitoe bands. In the East Ham hospitals they are obliged to cover the beds with muslin curtains, but during the long hot night little children toss their arms outside the curtain, and before morning they are suffering torment. Their hands are swollen and inflamed, and with stratching the tender skin it comes to the verge of erysipelas. Some of the nurses' hands are swollen like puddings.

BACK FROM ORIENT

Fred S. Cutter Returns After Three Years' Service In Philippines.

Reports Islands As Being Generally Peaceful and Prosperous.

Fred S. Cutter, of 322 West Third street, arrived in the city Sunday evening on the steamer North West, after an absence of nearly eight years, spent in various parts of the United States, including over three years spent in the Philippine islands.

Mr. Cutter was a member of C company, First battalion, United States Marine corps, under Captain Long. The company left Brooklyn, April 13, 1899, for San Francisco, where it took passage for Honolulu on the transport Newport. From Honolulu the men made a quick passage to Manila, where, on their arrival, they were quarantined for fifteen days on account of cholera.

After being released from quarantine the company saw some of the most active service of the war. The men were stationed both ashore and on shipboard, and saw both kinds of service.

They fought in the island of Samai under Major Waller, acting on the notorious order of General Smith, to "kill a... over 10 who are enemies." Mr. Cutter's company went into the island after C company, of the Ninth regiment, had been slaughtered by the natives, for the purpose of avenging the massacre. The men sailed along the shore, landing under the big guns and "cleaning out" the villages, according to the orders of General Smith.

The marines were also through much of the guerilla warfare on the islands of Luzon and Mindanao.

"There is now no fighting going on north of Manila," said Mr. Cutter, in speaking of the present condition of affairs in the islands. "There is still some fighting in the outlying districts of the southern part of the island, but the great majority of the towns are under civil government, and only in some of the towns far in the interior, is it necessary to keep the natives under military rule.

"The older generation is very bitter against the Americans, and the principal occupation of many of the natives is to think up plans for getting the better of the strangers.

"The attitude taken by the younger generation depends entirely upon education. That is the only hope for the Filipinos. They are hopelessly lazy, and dislike work in all its forms. They are great gamblers, and will spend hours over their queer games of chance.

"The island is now growing prosperous under the American rule. Manila is a clean and sanitary city. The sewerage system has been renovated, and cholera has died out. The city is growing and is assuming a prosperous air.

"The condition of the island at large it at present very unsettled. The people are trying to recover from the effects of the war and are commencing to turn their attention to the fields again.

"The chances for business are, in my opinion, good at present. While the islands have a very large population, few people realize their extent. The island of Luzon, alone, is over 20 miles in length. The natives huddle together in their villages, which are often of considerable size, and there are great stretches of wild and unexplored country in the inland districts.

"The lumber industry is bound to be the great field for American capital and brains. There are immense tracts of ebony, mahogany, rosewood, lemon wood, and all the other fancy woods, which have never been explored. The church owns great quantities of this timber, but much of it will go to the government and ultimately be thrown open to settlement.

"There are also good chances for mining. Valuable deposits of gold, iron, silver, and many other minerals are known to exist on the islands, but the dangers of exploration among the wild natives of the hills have prevented the development of these properties.

"The cost of transporting machinery would also be enormous, as there is only one railroad on the island, a short stretch between Manila and Dagupan.

"The hemp industry is another that offers a broad field to Americans."

The marines returned to San Francisco on the transport Warren, crossed the continent to Boston, and from there went to Brooklyn, where the company was broken up. Mr. Cutter came home by way of Chicago and the steamers of the Northern Steamship company. He was discharged from service July 25, after having served five years.

During the time he spent in the Philippine islands, Mr. Cutter learned to speak Spanish and some of the native tongues fluently.

He intends to remain in Duluth for some months to come, at any rate, and visit his parents here, who have not seen him for over eight years.

SHE MARRIED HER HUSBAND

Because He Could and Did Knock Her Out.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—This is the story of a queer courtship. Instead of caresses, Ernest W. Coombe won the love of his bride to be by a scientific display of uppercuts, left jabs and swings. Her maiden heart capitulated when he floored her with the "scissors" punch, that one Mr. Corbett first introduced to the public. Despite the memory of all these pleasant evenings, Mrs. Coumbe now asks a divorce.

"She was a boxer all right," says Coumbe. "Before our marriage we spent our evenings in perfecting ourselves. She's tioomy me as many times as I ever put her down, and once she landed on the point of my chin and I stayed 'out' for the 'count' and then some."

Coumbe yesterday filed his answer to his wife's bill in the circuit court. He says:

"The complainant is a large woman, and weighs about 180 pounds, being 5 feet 9 inches tall, and is amply able to take care of herself anywhere. And defendant further says that complainant and defendant were accustomed, both before and after marriage, to enter into friendly bouts and scuffles, winding up with defendant succeeding occasionally in landing complainant on her head with feet pointing heavenward, and to the seeming delight of complainant, as she afterward married defendant."

Coumbe does not forget his mother-in-law in making reply to his wife, and relates that she was constantly interfering in their affairs and advised her daughter to get a divorce.

The Coumbes were married Jan. 3, 1900, and lived together, according to Mrs. Coumbe, until June 10 last. She says Coumbe struck her in the face June 7 last while they were out riding, and on another occasion kicked her.

GIPSY GIRL IS SOLD

For $1200 By Her Parents Into Matrimony.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—There was merriment among the gypsies in Berwyn last night, when fourteen of their young people were married. The gypsies intend to break camp soon and move to St. Louis, it is said. Before moving their custom requires all girls of marriageable age to wed, that they may have husbands to care for them on the long wagon journey.

The securing of a wife among the gypsies is not merely a matter of the consent of the parties concerned, even though it be the desire of the tribe that the marriage take place. The young men had to pay the parents of the brides a sum of money, determined upon after considerable dickering between prospective grooms and the fathers.

In the transfers yesterday the lowest consideration was $50 and the highest $1200. The "auction" took place at the gypsy camp, Thirty-ninth street and Oak Park avenue. The camp has been located there for two years.

LI CHING HSU'S WIFE

Denies Positively That She Wears American Clothes.

New York, Aug. 4.—Mrs. Li, the wife of Li Ching Hsu, a nephew of Li Hung Chang, who is staying in New York for a few days, talked a little today about clothes.

"I do not know how any one got the idea that I wear American clothes," she said, "for I have never even put them on. American ladies are beautiful and they dress well, but—" and her hesitation showed plainly that Mrs. Li was struggling between a desire to be courteous and a feeling of loyalty to her own people, "but this is so much more comfortable, especially in hot weather," and she smoothed her bright blue silk tunic with a slender hand.

"In China we are different, she resumed. "We are more modest. I mean less bold in the things we do. Now, for instance, we consider athletes too mannish for ladies. Perhaps they do make you taller and broader," admitted Mrs. Li, gazing down at her own figure, which in its loose drapery of silk seemed scarcely larger than a child's, "but we have our pleasures."

Though Mrs. Li clings to her native costumes, she has put her little son Li Ye Thew in a blue sailor suit and a broad white beaver hat, and his hair is cropped short.

"There is no separating them," said Li Ching Hsu, pointing to his family. "They are together everywhere. The six years my wife and I have spent in foreign countries has had a broadening effect on us both, and my little son will grow up to be something of a cosmopolitan."

Mrs. Li does not altogether like the way she is stared at whenever she goes out," said Vice Consul Wing. "She is extremely diffident. On some of her tours through the city the people have been so inquisitive and curious that their actions were almost rude. That is, perhaps, what she means by her reference to boldness."

TROLLEY LINES MERGED.

Pass Into Control of a Trust Company.

New York, Aug. 4.—More than 200 miles of electric railway, worth millions of dollars, extending throughout Queens and Nassau counties, has passed into the control of a trust company in this city, said to be the United States Mortgage & Trust company, of Cedar street. This is one of the biggest street railroad deals ever made in Greater New York. Information of the transaction leaked out last night and aroused much interest in the territory affected.

For some time the Pennsylvania Railroad company and the interests represented in the Subway Rapid Transit have desired to secure possession of these railways. Whether the trust company represents the Belmont or the Pennsylvania railroad interests could not be learned.

Already many of the trolley lines make as good time as the railroad trains and carry thousands of passengers.

FEMALE WEAKNESS Is Often Due to CATARRH

A Grateful Wife and Mother Restored to Health After Years of Suffering.

Pe-ru-na Cures Catarrh Wherever Located.

MRS. J. P. REGNIER, 754 W. 20th St., Chicago., Ill., writes:

"I am anxious to show my gratitude for what Peruna has done for me, and hope this will reach the eyes of some woman who has suffered as I did. For two years I had intense pains regularly every month, had headache and backache. At such times I was hardly able to be about, and felt very weak and worn out. I am now feeling very well, but would not be without Peruna in the house. When I see my children are not feeling well and have a little cold, I at once give them Peruna, and they know it does them good, so they take it without any trouble. I am a new woman since I began taking Peruna. My friends say, "How well you look!" and I tell them what made me well, so some of my friends are going to try it themselves."— Mrs. J. P. Regnier.

Women all over the United States recommend Peruna. They praise it as a remedy particularly adapted to their peculiar ailments. But they do not stop there. They recommend it as a family medicine; they give it to their little children. They say they would not be without it in their home.

What then, is Peruna? Is it a cure-all? No such claims are made for it. Peruna cures catarrh and that is all that it does cure. But many ailments called by countless different names are dependent upon catarrh, that is catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membrane lining some organ of the body. Hence Peruna cures catarrh of the pelvic organs (female weakness), with the same surety as it cures catarrh of the nose or throat, or the many other catarrhal ailments of children.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

BIGGEST OF SEASON

Great Northern Will Bring In Immense Crowd Saturday.

Two Thousand People Expected to Be In the City.

The largest excursion of the popular summer cheap fare variety is expected here Saturday, over the Great Northern road.

In the neighborhood of 2000 people are expected to ride into the terminals at the head of the lakes, when the three heavy trains roll in Saturday.

They will come from prosperous farming districts, one train from Sioux Falls, one from Sioux City and one from Yankton, S. D., with people from the intermediate points, and all at a fare of $5.

If the weather is warm down in the southeastern part of the state and Southeastern Dakota, the railroad people do not think they can carry the people on three trains, and may put on another section.

The Omaha road experienced something in this line last week when the Wisconsin excursion came in. The conductors were not able to collect all the tickets, 1800 of them having been gathered in, though. On the return trip it was necessary to put four extra coaches on the train, and still the aisles were filled and the trainmen had hard times getting through the cars.

Coming up it was necessary to take the seats or benches out of one of two stations along the road and put them in the long way of the baggage car.

It will be the effort of the Great Northern to supply seats for all excursionists, and it will take a lot of cars to do this. On some of the excursions which came from distant points people have been compelled to stand in the aisles all night, which is rather wearing. The aisles were so full they couldn't lie down.

On the Great Northern trains there will be several tourist sleepers, and many of the berths have been disposed of already. It is the intention of the officials of the road to open the sleepers to the purchasers of berths, if Duluth becomes too crowded, and let them sleep there at night, and not have them walking the streets.

The Commercial club is making arrangements to handle the large crowds, and believes that sufficient accommodations have been secured for the purpose.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE.

Cincinnati, Aug. 4.—The fire which destroyed the Pittsburg plate-glass plant after midnight last night caused a loss estimated at $250,000. The insurance amounts to 90 per cent. Two firemen were injured. The fire was supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion, followed by an explosion. A large stock of paints and oils was stored in the building.

PLAY CAUGHT THE AMATEURS

"Alabama" Took Three Duluth Actors Into Professional Life.

Three of Duluth's most popular amateur actors were enticed to professional life by Augustus Thomas' play, "Alabama," and one of them, at least, has made a strong, well-defined mark in the theatrical firmament.

Adelaide Thurston, known to almost everyone in Duluth, was one of them, and perhaps the most successful, and besides, there was Julia Donovan, the singer. Arthur W. Little, who used to be the treasurer at the Lyceum theater, was also captivated with the play, and went away.

That was many years ago, when the two young women named were prominent in amateur theatricals here. It was while engaged in these that Clement Bainbridge appeared here with a production of "Alabama," and became acquainted with the young people. He liked them as well as they liked his play, and the result was an engagement for them to travel with him.

It was the sentimental beauties of the piece, perhaps, that led Miss Thurston to a career in which she is gracing the stage today. Next season she will appear in a new play that will put her far to the fore, it is said. The others are now in the East and have been prominent in the theatrical business.

And that is one reason "Alabama" has been drawing the packed houses it is playing to at the Lyceum this week, it is said, for the local interest is attached through the start of three of Duluth's talented ones.

BOYS WILL CAMP

Forty-Five Y. M. C. A. Juniors Leave For Long Lake Near Ely.

They Will Enjoy Camping Life Joys For Ten Days.

Hip Hoo Rah, Hip Hoo Ray!
Junior, Junior, Y. M. C. A.
Rah! Rah! Ray! Rah! Rah! Ree!
Y. M. Junior Boys Are We.

Forty-five lusty young throats shouted the above yell, as the Duluth & Iron Range train pulled out of the depot at 7:30 this morning.

It is the occasion of the annual summer picnic of the junior members of the Y. M. C. A., and the boys are off for ten days' outing at Long Lake.

Six years ago twelve boys took the first outing of this nature, and from this nucleus has developed the present annual camping party.

The picnic this year is the largest on record, and if the weather man deals leniently with the boys, it will be the most successful in every way. Every provision has been made for the comfort and safety of the boys on their trip. Seven large tents were taken along for sleeping apartments, in addition to the large mains tent, which will be used for a "grub tent." A competent cook will preside over the most important department, and the amount of provision taken along would seem sufficient to feed a regiment. But the leaders have been there before, and if they get back with four loaves and three small fish they will count themselves lucky.

The scene of the camp is Long Lake, in the vicinity of Ely. Last year's camp was in this spot, and it has all the requirements of an ideal camping ground.

The boys, who range in age from 12 years to 16, are in charge of five leaders, who will remain in the camp throughout the ten days, and guard the safety and good health of the lads.

Norman D. MacLeod, junior secretary of the Y. M. C. A., is in entire charge of the camp, Frank Maxwell, the physical director, is present and will have charge of the sports of the boys, including the swimming, fishing, boating and games. Dr. Bowden is present in case of any illness, and two of the older members of the association, John Brown and Frank Stone, will assist Mr. MacLeod in his arduous duties.

Phil Bevis and Paul J. Gilbert will also visit the camp during the ten days.

The following is the complete list of the boys who comprised the party: Guy Scribner, Robert McManus, Earl Waterworth, Basil Potter, Sargent McGonagle, William Robinson, Roger Spencer, Frank Whipple, Ben Nelson, Russel Maynard, Harold Cant, Kenneth Cant, Harold Churchill, Laird Goodman, Ray Segog, Willis Hamblin, Russel McLean, Harry Briggs, Howard Hill, Allan Johnston, Robert Lewis, Clyde Barnes, Laurence Jaques, Vernon Claypole, Ralph Pineo, Carl Peterson, Carl Longbridge, Robert Smith, David Fredin, Kenneth Morrison, Clifford Peel, Robert Grim, Jerriram Greene, Allyn Scott, Robert Scott, Roy Bridgeman, Charles McLennan, Allan Butchard, Lucius Mullin, James Wall, Palmer Bevis, Ledru Bevis, Walter Willcuts.

An attempt was made this year to find a suitable place to establish a permanent camp. Those in charge, however, were unable to find a spot which was in every way suitable. Next year another attempt will be made and if the right place is found, the association will purchase ground and build a cottage, to be used as a dining room and kitchen. The boys will sleep in tents as in former years, however.

GOES TO THE ASYLUM.

Vagrant In County Jail Is Declared Crazy.

Claus Tillman, who while serving a sentence for vagrancy in the county jail, showed signs of insanity, was yesterday ordered committed to the state asylum at Fergus Falls, by Probate Judge Middlecoff. Tillman was formerly a foreman of an extra gang at work on some new trackage near Hibbing, but he began to show signs of being mentally unbalanced and the range authorities were at a loss to know what to do with him. At last he was sent up for vagrancy, but Justice Connors notified the local authorities that the man was more fit for an asylum than the county jail.

SAVE MUCH MONEY

New Deal In Handling Prisoners Reduces County Expense.

Deputies Now Go to Range Towns For All Criminals.

Deputy Sheriff Bates left this morning for Eveleth to get and bring back a prisoner sentenced to a term in the county jail. Ever since the board of county commissioners passed a resolution cutting down the fees of the range officers for bringing prisoners to Duluth there has been quite a falling off in the official trips of those officers. Now, whenever there is a person sentenced in the range towns for a longer or shorter term in the county jail, the court telephones to the sheriff's office here and an officer is sent after the person convicted.

The county commissioners, in the interest of economy, cut the expenses of the local town authorities down to practically the actual cost of traveling between the range towns and Duluth, and now there is no inducement to the village marshal or constable to make the trip to this city. It costs the county no more to send an officer to one of the range towns to get a prisoner than it does to have one brought in by the local officers, and it keeps the sheriff's office very much busier.

O'NEIL HAS BEEN RELEASED

Gordon O'Neil, the Duluthian recently so prominent in settling the longshoremen's strike at Montreal, is expected back in this city soon to reside permanently.

According to a dispatch from Montreal, it was agreed by Mr. O'Neil, in making terms of settlement, that walking delegates should not approach men while working on the docks. At the time of the strike the Montreal union elected the Duluth man business agent and now the union declares that in the settlement Mr. O'Neil destroyed his usefulness and declines to pay him any more salary.

WOMEN OUTLIVE MEN.

That Is What Records In Chicago Show.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—The Chicago women live longer than Chicago men is a discovery just made by Commissioner of Health Reynolds. Why this is so, the commissioner is not prepared to state. But in this week's bulletin of the health department he produces figures to prove his assertion. By the same figures he also demonstrates that each year the disparity is growing greater.

"The census of 1900," says Mr. Reynolds, 'showed 863,408 males and 835,167 females as the population of this city—an excess of about 3.3 per cent in the number of males. During the first six months of 1901 there were 6682 deaths of males and 5416 deaths of females—an excess of 23.4 per cent in the deaths of males. In the first six months of 1902 the deaths were 7422 males, 5728 females—an excess of 29.5 per cent of males. This year's first six months show an excess of 37.4 per cent of male deaths—8798 males and 6403 females."

In connection, Mr. Reynolds calls attention to the fact that few life insurance companies insure women on the same terms as men, although, according to his figures, they are by far the better risks—10.6 per cent better, stated exactly.

DEMURRER OVERRULED.

New York, Aug. 4.—Recorder Goff has declined to entertain a demurrer interposed by Robert Martin and Henry Veithusen, who, as officers of the Delaware Surety company, were indicted for perjury in connection with the Montana Copper mine litigation. The indictments were found two years ago. Trial was fixed for Aug. 18.

DOUBT CANNOT EXIST

Investigation Will Only Strengthen the Proof We Give In Duluth.

How can doubt exist in the face of such evidence? Read here the endorsement of a representative citizen of Duluth:

Mr. A. Ebmer, of 321 Fifth street east, says: "A heavy dull persistent aching pain through my loins was most distressing for I could not rest well and no position seemed comfortable. I tried a great many different times to get relief, but no medicine I could find gave me any material benefit. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, procured a box at W. A. Abbett's drug store and used it. I obtained relief right away and since then I have never had them fail to relieve me promptly whenever I had a slight recurrence say from catching cold or straining myself."

THEY MAKE MONEY

The City's Gas and Water Plants Enjoy Flourishing Business.

Profits This Year Will Be Much Greater Than Last.

Municipal ownership continues to demonstrate its success in the Duluth gas and water system.

Taking the business of the first six months as a basis, the department will have an increase in business of over $60,000 at the end of the year.

This is remarkable, considering that last year was a record breaker, but those identified with the municipal service say that $60,000 is highly conservative.

About $20,000 of this increase in business comes from the West Duluth plant, which was added to the municipal system last winter. Owing to the growth of business there will be a growth of expenses, but Manager Case says this increase will not exceed one-third of the increased income, although during the first four months of the year the operating expenses were increased between $7000 and $8000 on account of the advanced cost of coal.

Between Jan. 1 and July 1 the department's receipts for gas and water aggregated $105,558, which is an increase of $25,651 over the same period a year ago. The growth of the gas business is simply astonishing. The gas receipts during the past six months have amounted to $25,926 and under this a reduction in the lighting rate of 15 cents per 1000 feet has been made. The gas sold, calculated on the same rate as last year, would increase these record-breaking receipts by at least $3566, making an actual increase over the first six months of last year of $13,503.

CHICAGO LABOR FEDERATIO

Warns Members Against Even Appearance of Corruption.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Startling admissions of attempts made to "reach" members of an investigating committee, direct charges of bribery and a warning that the first member found guilty of accepting a bribe would be expelled, were the sensational features of a meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Declaring that the special committee of three appointed to investigate alleged charges of bribery against John C. Driscoll, secretary of the associated teaming interests, an organization of employers, was endeavoring to record a "whitewash" report, the assembled delegates refused to accept it. The committee was discharged and another named, with instructions and warnings to bring in a report stating the facts in the alleged charges.

Secretary Driscoll was denounced as a "trickster" and openly charged with having made the statement that he had labor leaders on his pay roll. In the discussion delegates dramatically referred to the recent disclosures of corruption in New York, and warned their fellows that the very existence of the labor movement depended upon honest dealings between employer and employe.

MANY COFFINS

Used By Japs In Shipping American's Body.

New York, Aug. 4.—Extraordinary preparations were exacted by the Japanese health authorities in the removal to this city of the body of George H. Ferguson, an American engineer, who died in Kobe. Although Mr. Ferguson weighed only 140 pounds in life, when the body reached here the weight of remains and inclosure approximated 2400 pounds.

A heavy truck and a squad of men with a derrick were required to remove the casket from an express car to an undertaking establishment. After being embalmed by a local surgeon at Kobe the body was placed in a zinc-lined casket, which was then placed inside an oak coffin, which was itself inserted in a 1-inch Norwegian pine box lined with zinc. Several barrels of charcoal were used to envelope this, and about it was placed a two and a quarter-inch Norwegian pine casket, which was packed with four barrels of sawdust. Eight heavy iron bands were placed around the casket.

THE SUFFERERS FROM VOLCANO

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 4.—John Doerhoefer, a tobacco manufacturer of national reputation, died at his home this morning of a complication of disease. At the time of his death, he was president of the Manufacturers' Tobacco company, a large concern operating in this city. In 1891 he sold the National Tobacco works, an immense concern of which he was president, to the American Tobacco company. Shortly afterward he started another large factory, the monarch works, which he sold to the combine in 1900. He soon entered the field as an independent for the third time and remained there until his death. He was 54 years old and of German extraction. He started in life as a tobacco stemmer at $1.50 a week. He became a millionaire.

COMMENT MIXED

Opinions on Extending Time For Cutting Reservation Timber.

Some Favor It, Others Say It Is Minneapolis Scheme.

The approaching banquet to be given the legislators in Minneapolis, Thursday, when the proposition will be broached of having the state legislature petition President Roosevelt to have the secretary of the interior extend the time of the sale of the Chippewa Indian reservation timber over ten years, is attracting more and more attention from the lumber interests over the state and of the interests that are desirous of seeing the provisions of the Morris law worked out as already scheduled by the secretary of the interior.

Comment favorable and unfavorable is being made on provisions of the law for the cutting and marketing of the timber, and it is being urged that the Minneapolis lumbermen are the most interested in getting the time extended over a period of ten years.

Following is the attitude of two of the prominent lumber journals of the West and Northwest:

The American Lumberman says:

"It is the understanding that the United States department of the interior in arranging for the disposition of the timber on the Indian reservations in Minnesota has made the requirement that the timber to be offered for sale next December shall all be removed from the reservations before July 1, 1905. It is said that the amount involved is about 1,500,000,000 feet.

"It is hardly conceivable that such is the intent of the department. Such a task is practically impossible of performance. Nothing could be done the winter of the sale, simply because the preparations necessary for new logging jobs could not after December be completed in time for any actual work. It would leave the entire task to be done in the one winter of 1904-5. It is estimated that it would require 25,000 men for this work, and even if it could be accomplished it would throw such an enormous quantity of timber and lumber on the market that price demoralization would almost certainly follow. Furthermore, to sell such an enormous quantity under such conditions would seriously depress the market for the timber itself, so that it would be doubtful if anything more than the unset price of $5 for white pine and $4 for Norway could be secured.

"What would probably result would be the sale of such portions as the lumbermen thought they could take care of in one season at those figures, whereas the timber is worth more, and if the logging could be distributed over a period of, say, better ten, the market value could be secured.

"If it were possible literally to carry out the department plans it would mean a serious loss to the lumber business and to the Indian wards of the government. This timber should not be sacrificed and we apprehend that before the date for the sale shall arrive arrangements will have been made by which the interests of all will be subserved. We are inclined to think that there is a misunderstanding of the actual intent of the department as to this matter, especially since the advertisement announcing the sale on Dec. 5 offers merely a tract of 110,000 acres, of which the official estimate is 225,000,000 feet. Even such an amount as that is bad enough with the short time allowed for logging, and particularly in view of the other conditions surrounding the sale. If the interior department is actually as ignorant and short-sighted as appears it is another argument for placing all the timber resources of the government under the control of the bureau of forestry."

The Mississippi Valley Lumberman (Minneapolis) says:

"Dispatches from Washington indicate that the interior department has heard the protest of northwestern lumbermen regarding the regulations promulgated to govern the cutting of the Indian reservation timber that is to be put on the market next December. Department officials have promised to look more closely into the matter, and it is quite likely that the time which the purchasers of timber will be granted for the removal of their awards will be lengthened by a considerable amount. The government cannot afford to put itself in the position of insisting on a practice that has been condemned without reservation, especially when it has so recently made professions of favoring the preservation of the remaining forests of the country."

THE STAGE

"Alabama" will be given its fifth and positively its last performance this evening at the Lyceum theater, when the Melburne-MacDowell company will have everything in readiness for the mammoth production of Sardou's "Anthony and Cleopatra," which will be given for the first time tomorrow afternoon.

The management of the company was reasonably certain that it would all be ready this evening, but some hitches came at the last moment, and it was decided to hold the performance until it could be perfectly rendered. Starting tomorrow afternoon the play will be given the rest of the week, including the two regular matinees.

The production of Antony and Cleopatra" will be a heavy one, probably the largest one ever made in Duluth, and with Melbourne MacDowell as Antony and Miss Florence Stone as Cleopatra a more pretentious production could hardly be made, as the former has for years been playing the part and has studied deeply the drama.

For the past three days a crew of twenty or more men and a score of flower makers have been engaged on the Lyceum stage building the special scenery, with two scenic artists, who were imported, and the space back of the proceniun arch has been turned into a hive of industry.

The great barge of Cleopatra will be a most gorgeous affair, and the costuming of the characters and the large corps of supernumeraries, which will number in all over forty, will be elegantly clothed.

The opening performance will be the matinee tomorrow, with a regular Saturday matinee to follow.

If expressions of delight, liberal applause and excitement in an audience mean anything, they must mean that the show which that audience is witnessing in pleasing. Spch was the condition at last night's performance of "The Three Musketeers," given by the Metropolitan Stock company at the Metropolitan. Never has there been seen within the walls of that opera house, since its opening, anything approaching the enthusiasm of last night's production. This means a great deal for the stock company's ability, for all who know the drama produced realize how difficult a piece it is to give—and when on the first night of its peoduction the company plays it so well as to be given an ovation, collectively and individually, it speaks well. Last night every member came in for applause of a most hearty character, and at times the expressions of approval amounted to a veritable storm.

The scenery brought forth expressions of pleasure, for in every act the setting was superb and eminently fitting. Mr. McFarland, the scenic artist, who paints the scenery for each and every play produced, is showing remarkably artistic ability. Last night the throne room scene was a setting of which any theater might be proud. Everything about the piece was in keeping with the age in which the plot is set. The costumes are gorgeous.

There was a dash and brilliancy about the acting that made the play go with a snap and vim such as is necessary for a play of this kind, and every member of the company entered into the spirit of the thing.

Mr. Forbes made a remarkably good D'Artagnan. He surprised even those that admire him most by his acting of the part. He was graceful, dashing and all that could be desired. His fencing was superb and his elocution was faultless. He received round after round of applause, and his climaxes were strong. George Berry, as Cardinal Richelieu, did some of the strongest acting he has done since his engagement here. He has acted superbly in everything in which he has been cast while here, but last night as the cardinal he eclipsed every former effort. He was the crafty, cunning schemer of a statesman and meddler, in the life, and made his audience hate the character but admire the actor. Miss Marshall, as Miladi, showed herself a mistress of intrigue on the stage, and more than won the approval of the audience. Miss Carter, as Queen Anne; Mr. Franklin, as the king; Mr. Robinson, as Bonacieux, and Pouchet; Mr. MacRade, as Athos and Buckingham; Mr. Hester, as Porthos; Mr. Holer, as Aramis and Rochefort, and Miss Rose, as Constance, did splendid acting, and each won much applause.

Mr. Holer's facetiousness as an announcer is getting to be a feature of each performance, and last night the audience did its best to encore him—a most unusual thing for an announcer. The Gardner children made the biggest hit of their engagement here. Their feature this half of the week is pretty and tuneful, and the little ones are more graceful than ever.

"The Three Musketeers" will be given again tonight, tomorrow night and tomorrow afternoon. The advance sale is heavy for each of the performances. The latter part of the week "Fanchon, the Cricket," will be given, with Miss Carter in the title role.

CURE FOR HAY FEVER.

S. F. Boyce Says Hyomei Will Give Relief—Sold Under Guarantee.

The season for hay fever is almost at hand and many people feel that they will be obliged to leave town in order to avoid the sneezing, watery eyes and other annoying symptoms of this disagreeable summer disease.

S. F. Boyce wishes to announce that when Hyomei is used, either as a preventative or cure, there will be no hay fever. He advises the use of Hyomei daily for two or three weeks before the usual time for the annual appearance of hay fever. If, however, the preventative treatment was not started soon enough and the disease comes on, use Hyomei six or seven times daily and also rub Hyomei Balm thoroughly into the nostrils both morning and night. This treatment will relieve at once and give a speedy and permanent cure.

Hyomei actually brings into your own home a climate filled with ozone and healing balsams, the same air that one breathes at the White mountains or other health resorts.

There is no stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. It is nature's own method for curing all diseases of the respiratory organs, and is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that accompanies every outfit, so that the medicated air reaches the minutest air cells, killing all germs and soothing and healing the irritated mucous membrane.

It is the one treatment for hay fever where S. F. Boyce guarantees to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction. All who are subject to hay fever should begin its use at once so as to prevent the disease.

BARON WAS FLY

And Paper Was Sticky and Combination Caused Merriment.

Dignity of a German Nobleman Gets a Hard Jolt.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Two things there are which Baron Alexander von Schroeder, of Germany, cannot resist. One is a pretty face, the lips of which speak honeyed phrases and sweet flattery. The other is fly-paper.

Many Chicago women know the baron. He has beautiful mustachios and a foreign, military air that lend distinction to his charming personality. When he was last in the city less than two weeks ago he acquired notoriety because of his encounter with a guileless young woman who essayed to tell him of his splendid future as predicted by the lines of his hand. Matters were progressing smoothly when the baroness came upon them and the fortune telling had to be postponed.

The baron returned Sunday. The baroness was not with him. Whether or not the session of the palm reading was resumed has not transpired. However, there was another adventure in which he participated which must not go unchronicled.

At 4 o'clock the titled man descended from his suite of rooms in the lobby of the Auditorium hotel. He was attired in pearl gray trousers and gloves, blue coat, white felt hat and a light blue neck scarf. It is said he strutted, but no one blamed him. From crown to toes and to the tip of a slender walking stick he was beautiful, and he knew it.

He promenaded back and forth for the better part of an hour. Finally, becoming weary, he paused at the window of Michigan avenue and would have seated himself in one of the many chairs, but none were vacant at a point of vantage. Women, fashionably attired and good to look upon, were passing on the outside in groups. They could all see him, and he did not mind being seen.

No one of the lounging guests arose to give him a seat, so he made himself comfortable on the window ledge, and for half an hour he watched the passers by. Then he arose and resumed his promenade.

As he left the window the eyes of the men who had declined to give him a chair followed. So did a swarm of flies. He noticed both and could account for the one but not for the other. He walked here and there, and wherever he went the flies went with him.

Another half hour went by, and at last he began to notice another thing for which he could not account. In the eyes and on the faces that turned toward him, "as the sunflowers follow the sun," were smiles. Some were of the subdued, polite kind. Others were broad and vulgar. Searching the remotest recesses of his mind he could not recall that anyone had ever smiled at him quite that way before.

At last, involuntarily, he put his hand behind him. His fingers came in contact with something sticky and unpleasant. As he walked he noticed that a crackling sound followed immediately in his rear. He strolled again to the window on Michigan avenue and his eyes fell on the ledge on which he had been sitting. It was covered with fly paper—all save one spot, broad as a man's back, which was bare.

As the crawfish walks, so walked the baron to the elevator. He was seen no more that night.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Young Woman Accidentally Shot on Fargo Carnival Grounds.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The Fargo Commercial club took charge of Mary Johnson, who was accidentally shot by a stray bullet from the carnival grounds. She was sent to the hospital, where her expenses will be paid by the club and she will be paid for lost time and a purse given her. A bullet fired from a rifle at one of the shooting galleries hit the young woman in the breast just above the heart.

There are rumors that a wholesale drug house is to be established here by a woman who has a chain of drug stores in South Dakota.

At the recent examination of the state dental board, nineteen new dentists were admitted to practice in this state. There were twenty-six applicants for certificates.

The case of the state against Fred Winger, a representative of a St. Paul wholesale liquor establishment, is attracting attention. He was arrested under the new law, which restrains traveling salesmen from soliciting orders for whisky in this state. At the hearing before a justice he was held to the district court under $1000 bonds and the case will be carried through all the courts and the new measure thoroughly tested.

Bismarck—The state board of pardons met with about fifty applications for pardons and commutations to consider. Two lifers, serving sentence for murder, have applied for clemency, Joseph Till of Pembina county and George Kalinsky from Botineau.

Adolf Talmquist and John and Olaf Nicleby, sent up for a year each from McLean county, for manslaughter, also apply for pardons, also several violators of the prohibition law serving jail sentences.

Harry G. Adams, who escaped from the state penitentiary two weeks ago, gave himself up in Emmons county and was brought back. He was taken ill and was forced to surrender himself.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Whitewood—The son of Mr. and Mrs. aged two and a half years, was drowned in a rain water barrel at their home. The barrel was placed at the corner of the house, sunk part way in the ground. The little boy in playing about the house fell in head first. It was a small barrel and there was only eight inches of water in it, but the boy was dead when discovered.

Pierre—Each year a greater amount of the state school and endowment lands are taken under term lease, leaving a smaller area to be taken up in annual leases. The funds received from the annual leases for the past year were $58,271 for public school lands and $10,344 for endowment lands. The greatest increase in leasing is shown in the range counties, the receipts in Butte county increasing from $1510 to $2720 for common school lands, and from $132 to $1074 for endowment lands.

The office of the secretary of state has been working for one month under the new law and while there have not been as many corporations securing charters, and the capitalization of those which are coming is not so large as it was under the old law, the fees of the officefor the month are up to past averages, the total being $2082.70.

The city health authorities have been busy getting rid of thousands of sparrows which were killed by the storm. As the lower parts of the city were flooded, the dead birds were washed into these places, and after the water had disappeared they created such a stench that it was necessary to remove them.

Belle Fourche—Raymond F. Walter of the United States geological survey and a corps of assistants have commenced preliminary surveys for the purpose of deciding upon the most feasible route for the building of an irrigating ditch along the Belle Fourche river under the national irrigation law.

This project has been reported upon as the most feasible scheme in this portion of the Black Hills and will be surveyed and planned and estimates drawn and if the survey can be completed by spring, then a favorable report from the secretary of the interior is all that is needed to have the actual construction work begin.

The head of the ditch will be constructed just at the confluence of Redwater and Belle Fourche rivers. It is estimated it will reclaim 175,000 acres of government land, besides 50,000 acres of arid land owned by individuals.

Rapid City—The government Indian school is being inspected by Congressman Martin. The government is expending between $40,000 and $50,000 in the erection of additional buildings.

The intention was originally to increase the accommodations of the school so that it could receive 300 pupils instead of 150, as at present, but it is found that the enlargement now in process will only make room for about 225 all told.

A tract of 160 acres adjoining the school site has been purchased and is to be converted into a training farm. It contains a large apple orchard, besides many other fruit trees and bushes, and is under cultivation and irrigation. It is supposed by the government to teach the young Indians how to till the soil.

USE OF POISONED MILK.

It Is Not So Common as It Was.

Washington, Aug. 4.—With a view to decreasing the high rate of mortality among infants caused by impure milk and to improve the quality of this important article of diet, the agriculturtl department has investigated the milk supply of 200 cities in the United States. This investigation discloses the fact that a considerable advance has been made in the character and healthfulness of the stock, the conditions under which the cows are kept, and the methods of handling the milk. The chief improvement shown by the inspections in cities was the decreased use of chemical preservations. Conditions are not what they should be, however, and in the judgment of the officials of the department, greater care should be exercised by farmers and dairymen in handling product, and the health officers of the states and cities should devote more attention to this important business.

Many excellent suggestions were received regarding improvements needed, among the most important being the official indorsement of properly conducted dairies, the eradication of tuberculosis from all dairy herds, the branding of condemned cows, more severe penalties for violations of the milk laws, publication of reports on the inspection of dairies, more pay and allowances and greater authority for the inspectors, shipment of milk from the farms promptly after milking, delivery in sealed packages so as to avoid unnecessary contamination by city dust, etc.

PATENTS APPROVED.

Washington, Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Acting Secretary of the Interior Ryan today approved patents to 480 acres of indemnity lands claimed by the Northern Pacific railroad. These lands are located in the Duluth land district.

STERLING

AT WEST DULUTH

The West Duluth branch of the public library will secure 500 new books by the action taken at the meeting of the library board last evening.

The branch library at West Duluth has not had the patronage of the citizens in this portion of the city during the time that it has been established that was expected. But 300 books were placed in it, and these volumes, with but few changes, have remained there during the three years that the library has been in existence.

M. M. Clark, president of the West Duluth Commercial club, who was elected to the library board last June, decided to make the branch of more benefit to the public, and last evening induced the board to pass a motion recalling the 300 books at present in the branch and replace them with 500 fresh volumes from the main building.

This plan will be followed out, and the books will be changed as often as the needs of the branch demand. It is hoped that at the time of the next change the number of volumes will be increased to 700.

Signs will also be painted directing the public to the branch library, which is situated at the corner of Ramsey street and Central avenue, and while it is not the intention of the board to force the citizens to use the branch, it is hoped that it can be made sufficiently attractive to them to satisfy their wants without the necessity of a trip to Duluth.

In spite of the fact that the 300 volumes had been in the library for three years, with but few changes, the number of its patrons has been slowly but steadily increasing, and with the substitution of the new volumes, it will doubtless become a popular resort during the winter months.

ATTRACTING ATTENTION.

Northern Lumbermen Going Into Arkansas.

J. A. Barnes, of Camden, Ark., is spending a few weeks with his son, Alderman L. A. Barnes, of West Duluth.

Mr. Barnes was formerly a prominent lumber dealer of Camden, but has recently closed out his interests there and is taking advantage of a well-earned rest to visit his son here, whom he has not seen for several years.

"Your climate was rather a shock to me," said Mr. Barnes, who has lived for years in the South. "When I left Arkansas I was wearing a light linen coat and no vest. After I left Kansas City I put on the vest. When I reached the Twin Cities I changed my coat for a heavier one, and now I am trying to borrow an overcoat from my friends.

"Arkansas is attracting more and more attention from Northern lumber dealers. During the past few years a number of Duluthians have gone into that country to buy up our yellow pine, and the lumber business is becoming one of the principal industries of the state."

Miss Ida Mae Sears, of West Duluth, and Arthur L. Dundas, of Ashland, will be married tomorrow afternoon at the home of the mother of the bride, at 519 Fifty-eighth avenue.

Miss Sears is a very popular and well-known young lady of West Duluth, and the groom is a prominent business man of Ashland.

After the ceremony the young couple will take a short wedding trip, and will make their home in Ashland.

STRANGE DEED

To Property Filed By Pastor In Georgia.

Cartersville, Ga., Aug. 4.—A unique deed has been filed here, in which Rev. W. H. Kerr transfers a tract of farm land to "God, the Father; Chhist, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, for many mercies received in hand, paid, receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged," on condition that the farm is to be used for an orphans' home, to be known as the "Kerr Orphan home," and that Rev. Mr. Kerr and his family are to be the Lord's trustees and that the land is still to be liable for Kerr's debts.

The reason for this peculiar deed has just been revealed by a suit filed here by an aged couple of the name of Cochran, members of Kerr's congregation, who claim that Kerr defrauded them out of the land in exchange for a stock of goods, which he claimed to be worth much more than its true value, and that they were led into the trade by their confidence in Kerr. They ask to have the trade set aside and the land restored to them.

In the bill filed by the Cochrans it is charged that Kerr has no intention of devoting the land to the service of God, but that he made the deed purely to protect himself from the results of the fraud which they allege he committed.

WANTS MORE MONEY

To Make Suitable Alaskan Display at St. Louis.

Seattle, Aug. 4.—Governor Brady, of Alaska, in an address delivered before the Washington board of commissioners at a special meeting of the chambor of commerce, said $50,000 is too small an appropriation for a suitable Alaskan exhibit at the St. Louis exposition. He thinks at least $100,000 is needed. He believes, considering the amounts paid into the treasury by Alaska in the past, such a request is not excessive. He further said that the appointment of an outsider to take care of the preparation of the exhibit had caused a great deal of discontent in Alaska.

The governor is on his way to St. Louis where he will confer with Assistant Secretary Ryan and the fair commissioners.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Menominee Motorman Shocked By Running Over a Dummy.

Menominee—Some excitement was caused by one of the street cars running over a dummy. A doctor was on the car and went back to see the corpse. He was much surprised when he reached the spot to see a dummy with both of its legs cut off. The motorman did not recover from the shock for two or three hours.

The residence of Judge Henry Nason was entered by burglars last night and about $17 taken from the pockets of the roomers in the house.

Adolph Girard a Menominee river log driver, is almost toally blind from the effects of poison ivy. He was one of the members of the main river driving crew, and while at work on the logs was poisoned. The poison got into his eyes and they were terribly swollen and closed completely. The injury will not be pemanent. Many of the drivers this year have suffered from the effects of the poison ivy, several having come down with their bodies all broken out from contact with it. This has never before been known on the drive, and has added to the annoyance of the mosquitoes, which at one time was so serious that it was feared that work might stop altogether.

Ironwood—The Ironwood hardware company; of which George N. Slight is proprietor, has assigned to its creditors. The liabilities are $5000 and the assets next to nothing. Belmon Maples is assignee.

Ramsey—The postoffice, discontinued three years ago because the postmaster absconded, is to be re-established. An office will also be opened at Mikado Mine.

Sault Ste Marie—June traffic through the American and anadian ship canals reached the enormous total of 5,279,428 tons, which is the largest in history.

D. B. Whitewood, of Detroit, expired suddenly in the Park Hotel Monday morning. He had been coming here for twenty years on summer outings and arrived a short time since. In company with J. W. Edward, of Detroit, he went fishing early and upon returning dropped dead while washing in the hotel.

Crystal Falls—Mike Nybacka, living near Crystal Falls, has been adjudged insane and taken to the Newberry asylum. His mind has been affected for many years. He had been working on a perpetual motion device, and this, it is thought, deranged his mind. Recently hes tarted in to make a "rough house" at his home at the Dunn mine, where he has lived for many years, and beat his wife until help came.

Manistique—The First National bank of Manistique has decided to build a new bank building. The structure will cost $25,000. It will be two stories in height by 45 by 100 on the ground. The first tory is to be constructed of cut stone, the second of fire-flashed pressed brick with trimmings of cut stone. The windows will be of plate glass. The ground floor will be occupied by the bank and two stores. The structure will face on two streets, which will make it possible to have one store in the rear of the bank and one on the side. On the upper floor there will be fourteen office rooms arranged in suites of two and three. When completed it will be without exception the finest building in Manistique and will add much to the appearance of the business district of that city.

ADDICKS IS GOING TO QUIT

Reports In Delaware That the Gas Man Will Retire.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 4.—J. Edward Addicks will not repeat the great political campaigns that he has made in the past. This statement comes from a prominent leader in the Union Republican ranks. In the first place, it is said that Addicks is tired of putting up his good money and seeing others reap the benefit, even if they are his lieutenants. Another reason is that these trusted lieutenants and followers have made up their minds to throw Addicks overboard and sue for peace with the reglars. They have found out that although Addicks may get near the goal there are always enough regulars to keep him from getting into the United States senate. Addicks has sacrificed many of his old friends in his efforts to reach the seat of honor, but is still as far away as ever.

The leaders who have stood by him through thick and thin and have seen, as a result of their labors, splendid majorities piled up, feel that it is about time that they should get a share of the honors. They have decided to break away from him and run the party without regard for his wishes, and if need be without him at all. The only Addicks man of prominence to get anything has been J. Frank Allee, who was elected United States senator last winter. The secretary of state, C. R. Layton, who did as much for Addicks as Allee, feels that he should be recogniezd. He aspires to succeed Dr. L. H. Ball, a regular, in the senate.

It would occasion no surprise in Delaware six months hence to hear Dr. Layton declare that he is not an Addicks man, and never wanted to see the gas man go to the United States senate. Certainly if the fight for the senate should reveal an Addicks minority, there would be an open fight between the two former friends. No one believes that Layton could secure the support of any number of the anti-Addicks votes, but that is the vote he is after, nevertheless.

Layton is undoubtedly shrewder than a majority of his party. While such leaders as J. Frank Allee, Dr. Hiram Burton and Dr. G. W. Marshall are taking things for granted, Dr. Layton is on the alert. He is preparing to become the Moses of a reunited party. He has something to start with. He dominates Governor Hunn. His son is private secretary to Senator Allee, and understands the hopes and aspirations of that man. He has made an alliance with Frederick E. Bach, of Newcastle county, a strong advocate of former Senator Anthony Higgins. At the proper time he is willing to appear as a leader of harmony, with Addicks out of the game, but the highest honor must be bestowed on Layton.

It may be of interest to recall here that it was Layton who told Addicks that he must get out of the way last winter. The gas man protested and argued, but was compelled to take down his sign.

There are others besides Dr. Layton who are ready to leave the sinking ship. Among them are Governor Hunn and Dr. Hiram R. Burton, of Lewes, who would like to go to congress.

Why Pay as Much for an inferior beer?

Schlitz beer costs twice what common beer costs in the brewing. One-half pays for the product; the other half for its purity.

One-half is spent in cleanliness, in filtering even the air that touches it, in filtering the beer, in sterilizing every bottle. And it pays the cost of aging the beer for months before we deliver it.

If you ask for Schlitz you get purity and age, you pay no more than beer costs without them.

A BOYCOTT IS ON

Superior Butchers Still Fighting Two Wholesale Meat Houses.

Are Mad Because Wholesalers Quit Delivering Their Meats.

The Superior retail meat dealers have not yet lifted the boycott against Armour & Co., and Swift & Co., two of the several packing concerns that withdrew their delivery wagons from the trade in that city a little over a week ago.

The retailers are still firm and declare that they will continue to boycott the two packing firms until one or the other gives in and puts its wagons back in the city trade. According to the attitude of the two large packing concerns, however, this weakening is not likely to occur, as neither of the two concerns blacklisted among the butchers seems to be taking any steps toward conciliation.

At present the retail meat dealers in the city across the bay are doing business with the three other packing concerns, Cudahy, the Omaha Packing company and Elliott & Co., the latter being the only one which might be termed a local concern, for the other packing companies do a car trade and ship their fresh meats in from the outside.

According to the reports the proposition thus far in the boycotting line has been rather expensive for the Superior meat dealers, for not only are they compelled to go after their supplies from the packing companies, but the latter taking advantage of the fact that two of their competitors are out of the way, temporarily, at least, have raised their prices and the Superior retailers are now said to be paying more for their meats than are the Duluth retailers. Such conditions, it is claimed, will have one of two results, the retail dealers will either have to back down and lift the boycott or else the public will have to suffer through the medium of advanced prices of meats at retail.

The wholesale packing concerns claim that the arguments of the Superior retail dealers that they are being discriminated against as regards the privileges accordede the Duluth retailers is not logical. It is claimed that the conditions of the meat trade in the two cities at the head of the lake are very much different. The packing companies, with possibly one exception, do not maintain a branch house in Superior. They have been doing a car trade entirely. There is said to be no outside meat trade at Superior, the trade being confined entirely to local consumption and with five wholesale meat concerns in the field it is claimed by the packers that Superior is not entitled to the facilities extended by the branch houses in Duluth for the reason that the houses in this city are doing an immense trade. From the branch houses here meats are shipped into the copper country, to the ranges, to northern and western Minnesota points, while not a pound of the meats shipped into Superior go outside the city.

Because of these conditions the packing concerns claim the Superior retailers are no more entitled to free delivery than are the butchers in any of the range towns.

Another argument made by the packing concerns for the cutting down of their expenses in Superior is that they have been shipping large quantities of fresh meats into Superior by car from which the retail dealers there made their selections, but the trade did not begin to come up with the supply. The wholesalers, in order to dispose of the surplus stock rather than have it spoil on their hands, claim to have sold meats to the butchers at a loss on many occasions. At the same time the price of retail meats was maintained at a high figure, the public not getting any benefit from cut prices given the retailers.

HEAVY GRAIN SHIPMENTS

Expected By Railroads Penetrating the Canadian Border.

St. Paul, Aug. 4.—Railways penetrating the Canadian border country look for a large volume of grain traffic in bond into Duluth within a few weeks. It is expected that the shipments to the Minnesota forwarding point will be heavier than in any former year. General Agent Jackson, of Winnipeg, who represents the Milwaukee road in the province, says of crop and grain traffic prospects:

"The Manitoba crop will be light, because of the light rainfall when the grain needed moisture, but the decrease in the total amount grown will not be in proportion to the shortage because of bad weather. There is considerable new acreage and this will largely compensate for the loss due to weather conditions.

"Our latest reports from the Northwest territories are exceedingly favorable. Seventy-five per cent of the year's immigration has gone into this country, and the production of cereal crops has experienced a tremendous boom. The amount of grain shipped this year will be far in excess of anything Western Canada has ever before shipped. Harvesting is now in progress at many points and the new grain will soon begin to seek a market.

"There is an excellent prospect of heavy grain shipments to Minnesota points in bond for export to Liverpool, because the Canadian lines will not be able to carry all the traffic that is offered. American lines will handle the surplus, which will naturally go to Duluth. The Canadian Northern will probably send large shipments into Duluth, all of which will eventually get to Liverpool."

DENOUNCE TRUST

City Council Gets After Local Retail Butchers' Combine.

Committee Appointed to See Wholesalers About the Matter.

The council last night—

Denounced the local retail meat combine and decided to investigate it.

Received an offer from the Zenith Telephone company to give excess earnings to city.

Decided to ask the street railway company to make a definite statement regarding extra transfers.

Received annual estimate for fire department expenses for the next year.

Deferred acting on the plumbing ordinance owing to difference regarding weight of drain pipe.

Received petitions for improving West End streets and protest against telephone ordinance.

Passed the ordinance making Second street, between Lake and Third avenue west part of fire limit.

Denouncing it to be an illegal combination for unlawful gain, the council last night declared the combine of local retail meat dealers inimical to the best interests of Duluth.

A committee of five was appointed to investigate this wholesale discrimination in meat prices by retailers, and, if possible, to induce the wholesale interests to assist the citizens in breaking up the combine by selling to independent concerns.

This committee consists of Aldermen Sang, Tischer and Cullum and A. C. Weiss and E. R. Jefferson. The resolution adopted by the council was presented by Alderman Sang, and at the request of Alderman Barnes its author was made chairman of the investigating committee. The resolution is as follows:

"Whereas, it is a matter of common knowledge, and has been publicly charged without refutation from parties interested, that the retail meat dealers in the city of Duluth have arbitrarily raised the price of meat to such an extent that it has become a luxury and not obtainable by the man working for ordinary wages, and has greatly increased the cost of living for all classes of citizens, notwithstanding the fact that no increase has been made in the wholesale price; on the contrary, it being reported that the wholesale price thereof has been lowered; therefore, be it resolved

"That this council does hereby denounce such a combination as being illegal and prejudicial to the interests of the city of Duluth.

"Resolved, further, that the president of this council is hereby requested to appoint a committee of five, of whom three shall be members of the council and two to be selected from citizens outside the city council, to lay the facts before the wholesale meat dealers, with a view to ascertaining if said wholesalers will furnish meat to dealers outside the meat combine at the same price as it is furnished to members of the combine."

It was adopted by acclamation and the consensus of opinion was that the investigation should be taken up without delay.

The ordinance by which the Zenith Telephone company would be permitted to raise rates on business telephones from $30 to $38 a year did not come up for final action last night.

Instead the Zenith company surprised the aldermen with a new proposition. It agrees to give the city all its earnings in excess of 6 per cent on its investment, if the city will amend the franchise as proposed. This offer from the company read as follows:

"If the city will amend the Zenith City Telephone franchise as proposed by this company, we will, after allowing for depreciation, repairs and operating expenses and 6 per cent on the investment, pay any earnings in addition to this into the city treasury. We do not ask to be relieved of the one-half of 1 per cent already agreed to pay the city in the original franchise, as we will pay this in any event.

"The franchise provides and will provide that the rates shall be at all times reasonable. This company can in no event realize more than 6 per cent on the investment, which will be the strongest kind of a guarantee of reasonable rates, for we could not possibly make anything by extorting more money from the people under such an arrangement."

This was referred to a committee having the telephone matter in charge. It will be given full consideration by the aldermen before the final vote is taken on the proposed ordinance permitting the raise in rates.

A protest against the raise was received from the Duluth Produce and Fruit exchange.

On July 6 the council passed a resolution calling on the Duluth-Superior Traction company to issue transfers on all extra cars operated to handle crowds in emergencies. A second resolution was passed last evening requesting the company to advise the city in definite terms whether or not it intends to comply.

* * *

The board of fire commissioners submitted its annual estimate for expenses of next year. The total estimate amounts to $108,210, but the commissioners are of the opinion that if things were as they should be, an additional $71,000 could be added to this estimate, making a $50,000 fire tug possible. However, this additional sum cannot be considered a part of the estimate, as it is put in to show exactly what is needed more than anything else. The estimate will be taken up when the tax levy comes up for consideration next month.

The plumbing ordinance was discussed at some length, but the aldermen could not agree on the style of pipe that should be used in buildings of two and three stories in height, and the meeting adjourned before a final vote could be forced.

The Mannheim ordinance extending the down town fire limits so as to include Second street, between Lake avenue and Third avenue west, was passed.

The contract for paving Lake avenue from Superior street to the ship canal with sandstone blocks, awarded to P. McDonnell by the board of public works, was approved by the council.

* * *

Two unusually large bills were ordered paid immediately. One was from the Barber Asphalt company for $25,000 and the other from P. McDonnell for $11,280 on the Second avenue west paving.

* * *

J. L. Washburn, attorney for the Northern Pacific Railway company, appeared before the council and endeavored to get an expression as to whether or not the city intended repudiating a contract made fifteen years ago, agreeing to maintain the Lake avenue viaduct if the old St. Paul & Duluth road would build it. The council flatly refused to go on record, though it was strongly intimated that the city could not be expected to carry out an invalid contract and some of the aldermen insisted that the courts would hold the contract to be worthless.

* * *

Prominent West End merchants and property owners petitioned for the repairing of West Michigan street between Nineteenth and Twenty-fourth avenues west.

* * *

Business interests of the West End, Oneota and West Duluth urged the council to have Oneota street properly repaired at the Jenswold street subway in order that teamsters would not have to haul loads a half mile around to get a suitable thoroughfare.

KILLED HER HUSBAND

After He Had Fired Three Shots at Her.

Matewan, W. Va., Aug. 4.—William Adair, a prosperous farmer and timber dealer, was shot and instantly killed by his wife in front of their home on Pidgeon creek, in this county. Adair, who had been in Cincinnati, disposing of some timber, returned here rather unexpectedly and found his wife away from home. He went in search of her and finding her in the home of a neighbor became jealous and pulling a revolver from his pocket, fired three shots at her, all of which went wild. Mrs. Adair ran into the house, seized her husband's rifle and returned to the yard just as he was entering the gate. He attempted to escape by running towards the woods nearby, but a bullet from the rifle killed him. The woman rode horseback to Williamson, where she is now in jail.

LONG ON WILLS.

Six Written By Gen. Clay Are Presented.

Richmond, Ky., Aug. 4.—Six wills of the late General Clay were offered yesterday in the madison county court. The probating of each was objected to by the legal heirs of Mr. Clay. Objection was sustained by the court, and each of the wills was endorsed "offered." The court set September 2, the next county court day, as the time when the question of probating all of Clay's wills would be taken up. Other wills are expected to be offered on or before that day.

SECOND READING

Given Irish Land Bill By House of Lords.

London, Aug. 4.—In the house of lords very few showed a disposition to prolong the discussion of the Irish land bill. One of its stoutest opponents was Viscount Hampden, liberal, who characterized it as thoroughly mischievous and corrupt. He said it would result in a land war more fierce and imbittered than any which had preceded.

Lord Lansdowne, secretary of state for foreign affairs, did not share the sinister views which had been expressed regarding the effect of the bill on resident landlords.

The discussion was concluded soon after midnight, when the bill was passed to a second reading without division.

Weather Man Refuses Immediate Improvement In Weather.

July Weather Was Cooler and Drier Than the Average.

The belief that northeasters had a fixed habit of lasting three days and three days only has been shattered by the deplorable behavior of the weather during the past four days.

The wind has hung steadily in the northeast, and there has been rain and fog and dampness, with but fleeting views of the sun. And while the weather man promises some little amelioration of conditions tomorrow, he will not promise a change of wind. He predicts that it will be warmer, but there will be showers, and the wind will continue to blow from the lakeward side of the city.

Last month was cooler and drier than the average July, according to the records of the local weather office for the past thirty-three years.

The mean temperature for last month was 64 degrees, and the average for the thirty-three years is 66 degrees, so last month was 2 degrees colder than the mean. The highest temperature reached during the month was 92 July 7, and the lowest was 46. The lowest temperature was reached on the Fourth, of course. The greatest daily range was 27 degrees on July 7, the same day that saw the maximum of the month reached. The least daily range was 6 degrees July 27, when the maximum was 63 and the minimum was 57 degrees.

The year has been warmer than the average so far, however, and the accumulated excess is 187 degrees.

The prevailing winds were from the northeast, and the total movement was 6500 miles. The highest velocity reached was 35 miles from the west July 7, when a high hot wind accompanied the high temperature.

The precipitation for the month was 3.50 inches, and the mean precipitation is 3.74 inches. The year so far has been drier than usual, the accumulated deficiency being 4.08 inches.

There were seven clear days, eighteen partly cloudy days and six cloudy days, and there were fifteen days on which .01 of an inch or more of rain fell. The mean relative humidity was 71 degrees, and there were thunder storms July 1, 2, 7, 9, 10, 11, 19, 20, 25 and 27.

LITTAUER HAS VIOLATED LAW

Congressman Will Be Asked to Repay Money to Government.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Secretary Root has made public all the papers relative to the investigation into the government contract for gloves with E. R. Lyon. This contractor secured the gloves from Littauer Bros., the senior member of the firm, L. N. Littauer, being a member of congress. Secretary Root has referred the case to the department of justice, in order that it may be ascertained if the law has been violated, and if so, that measures may be taken in the premises. There is a statute which prohibits contracts fo: the government being made directly or indirectly with a member of congress, and this was the basis of the investigation by the war department. Col. Cartington, of the inspector general's department, was directed by Secretary Root to make an investigation of the whole matter, which he did, taking testimony, submitting a report as to the facts in the case. This report and the testimony were referred to Judge Advocate General Davis, who made an extensive review and submitted an opinion to Secretary Root. In the course of his report and opinion, Gen. Davis says that some discussion having arisen as to the price which Lyon was to pay for gauntlets delivered under the contract of Dec. 7, 1898, an agreement was entered into between Littauer Bros. and Lyon to the effect that an accurate account of the cost of manufacture was to be kept, and after the contract was completed, if it should prove that the cost of manufacture did not equal $1.65 per pair, Lyon was to receive one-half of the profits. There was a profit of $3537.05, one- half of which was credited to Lyon on the books of Littauer Bros. A case falling within the prohibition of the statute is clearly shown in the testimhony, which, in the opinion of this office, charges the department with the performance of the duties set forth in section 3379 of the revised statutes, and it is therefore "recommended that a demand be made by the quartermaster general upon the firm of Littauer Bros. for the repayment of whatever sum is found to have ben paid in consideration of the contract of Dec. 7, 1898, with E. R. Lyon, as extended, in accordance with its terms, by the quartermaster general's department."

NEGROES MUTILATE BODY.

Hartford City, Ind., Aug. 4.—George Hearshey, an invalid, aged 19 years, while hunting squirrels on his father's farm yesterday, was approached by two negroes. They grabbed the boy, searched his clothing for money and finding none tore his clothing from him. While one negro held him another mutilated him with a knife. The boy went home and told his father, who mounted a horse and called for volunteers to wreak vengeance on the negroes. Two hundred men and boys joined in the chase. Neighboring farms and towns were warned by telephone and the country was scoured. No trace of the negroes was found. The hunt proceeded until nightfall. Sheriff Horigan, with a detachment of deputies and policemen, followed the mob to prevent a lynching, if possible.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage made and executed by Zophirin Jolin, as mortgagor, to Neal Mack, as mortgagee, bearing date the 29th day of June, 1900, and recorded on page 314 in Book 161 of mortgages, in the office of the register of deeds of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at forty-five minutes past eleven o'clock in the forenoon on the 24th day of September, 1900, which mortgage was thereafter assigned by said Neal Mack by instrument in writing dated the 19th day of November, 1902, to Frank Almy, which assignment of mortgage was thereafter and on the 19th day of November, 1902, at forty-five minutes past one o'clock p. m., recorded in Book 137 of mortgages, on page 78 of the records in said register of deeds' office. That thereafter and upon the 7th day of July, 1903, on account of a defective description in said assignment of mortgage, by which the premises were erroneously described, said Neal Mack, as such mortgagee, mentioned in said mortgage, by an instrument in writing, assigned said mortgage to said Frank Almy, which last described assignment of mortgage was thereafter and upon the 17th day of July, 1903, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, recorded in the office of said register of deeds, in Book 189 of mortgages, on page 94. Said default consists in the failure of said mortgagor to pay the principal and interest of the note described in said mortgage, to secure which note said mortgage was given, said note being for the sum of one hundred dollars ($100.00), dated June 29th, 1900, and due June 29th, 1903, bearing interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, and in the further failure of said mortgagor to pay the taxes upon said premises for the year 1903, which taxes have been paid by the undersigned.

There is therefore due and owing on said mortgage at the date of this notice the rum of one hundred twenty-four and 44-100 dollars, ($124.44) in principal and interest, and the further sum of two and 31-100 dollars ($2.31) on account of taxes so paid, amounting in the aggregate at the date of this notice to the sum of $126.75.

The property described in said mortgage and thereby mortgaged is situated in the county of St. Louis and state of Minnesota, and is described as follows, to-wit: The southeast quarter of the southwest quarter, and south half of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter, (se¼ of sw¼ and s½ of sw¼ of sw¼) of section twenty-eight (28), township fifty-one (51) north, of range seventeen (17), west of the Fourth principal meridian.

Notice is hereby given that because of such default said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of said mortgaged premises, which sale will be made by the sheriff of St. Louis County, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, at the frent door of the court house, in the city of Duluth, in said county, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, on Wednesday, the 2nd day of September, 1903, to satisfy the amount that shall then be due on said mortgage and taxes paid by said assignee of mortgagee, if any, and an attorney's fee of $25.00 for foreclosing said mortgage, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption as allowed by law.

THE BUTCHERS' COMBINE.

The city council, at its meeting last night, took official cognizance of the local meat trust, and declared against it in a ringing resolution introduced by Alderman Sang and adopted by acclamation.

The council speaks well when it declares the meat trust to be "illegal and prejudicial to the interests of the city of Duluth," and no action that it can possibly take will be too harsh if it accomplishes the end that is sought—to get fair and decent prices on meats, whereby the consumer can have meat on his table without running a risk of bankruptcy. Meat is a necessity, vegetarians to the contrary notwithstanding, and it is a crime on the part of the local butchers to arbitrarily advance prices so as to make it a luxury.

The Herald has had occasion to speak of the exactions of the retail butchers of the city several times, and it was high time that the city authorities were taking some official action.

The plan contemplated by the resolution, to have a committee of aldermen and citizens interview the wholesalers to find out whether they will sell meat to parties outside the combine at the same prices as they do to members of the trust, is perhaps the best possible way of getting at the matter. If the wholesalers can be induced to do this, there is ample capital to be invested in a fair meat enterprise that will make decent profits and break up the combine that is doing all in its power to injure the city and interfere with its advance. The only reason such markets have not been established before is that the parties feared that it would be impossible to get meat from the wholesalers. If the latter will promise to sell outside the combine, and at the same prices, the rest is easy. The butchers' trust would not last twenty-four hours after that promise was made.

The determined manner in which the council took the matters up last night promises well for definite action, and it may be that the knell of the butchers' trust has been sounded. If so, it is well, and one of the greatest possible services to the city will be accomplished.

LOSSES BY FLOODS.

The losses by floods in Kansas and Missouri the past spring were simply enormous and show conclusively the awful work of the waters when they get beyond the control of man. There have been greater losses of life, but in the extent of the flood of 1903, the damage to property and growing crops establishes a record. Two reports on the flood will soon be furnished by the weather bureau. The Topeka report will deal with the local situation at that city. The Kansas City report covers in a general way the flood statistics for the Kansas river and its tributaries, and treats extensively of the flood at Kansas City. The total losses reported aggregate $9,250,000, and the loss of life is given as eleven. The flood losses along the Mississippi are largely those to growing crops, but the total will be large. Among the damages reported is the cutting of a new channel for the big Blue at Blue Rapids, which left the mills and factories far removed from the stream. Accompanying this report will be the recommendation of the bureau for an additional flood service for Kansas. Such a service would undoubtedly work wonders, and certainly everything should be done that will prevent such great calamities.

PRIVATE AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Some of the advocates of private schools for the youth of the country seem inclined at the present time to push forward the advantages of such institutions for the growing young. According to the latest statistics available there are in the private elementary and secondary schools of the United States 1,438,932 pupils as against 15,650,461 in public schools of the same grade. Thus nearly 9 per cent of the total number of children attending school are in private institutions. The reason for this large proportion is not to be found in the lack of public schools, for no such lack exists.

In the first place, private schools exist and will continue to flourish because of their advantages as educational agencies. That this statement is not extreme can be shown by reference to the expenditures for the two kinds of schools. The report of William T. Harris, United States commissioner of education, for 1900-1901, shows that the average expenditure per pupil for the whole school year in the United States was then $21.14. This should be contrasted with the fees for day pupils in private schools, ranging from $100 to $500 a year and from $400 to $1000 a year for boarding pupils. It is estimated by President Eliot that of this amount from $200 to $600 a year is spent for teaching purposes and general care, sometimes including a liberal expenditure for physical training, a branch of child culture which is practically neglected by the public schools.

According to Public Opinion, there are many reasons why the private schools offer superior advantages. Secondly to the colleges, to which they are the stepping stones, they offer the opportunity for the formation of congenial and enduring friendships. The associations of years cannot but leave a lasting impression on the minds and characters of the boys and girls who are thus thrown together and the alliances that are formed amid such surroundings are of the most unselfish and attractive nature. In every large college the existence of preparatory school societies composed of the young men who have prepared for college at the same school testifies to the bond of friendship that is knit around them during the most impressionable years of their lives.

Akin to this is the democracy of the private school. Although this is a quality supposed to be peculiar to the public institution, a very real, impartial democracy exists in the private schools and is a strong force for good in the development of the embryo citizens. The democracy of the private school is the highest form of democracy, in which there exists an equality of opportunity and rights side by side with an aristocracy of merit that guides and shapes the public opinion of institutions.

This process of democratization is facilitated by the quality of the pupils who find their way into the schools. They are recruited largely from the moderately prosperous, unpretentiously useful, and most intelligent class of our population; from the families who may be expected to endow their children with the greatest possibilities and the highest equipment of body, brain and character. As a result of this state of affairs the children whose names are to be found on the rosters of private schools may be said to be a "picket lot," as regards parentage, antecedents, and their own endowments.

This sounds well for the private schools, but it is safe to say, without having statistics at hand, that the graduates of the common school who have entered college have attained far superior positions in the world, as compared with private school pupils. The public school gives a training that cannot be obtained elsewhere. It teaches the pupil self reliance, and that the private school does not.

POPE PIUS X.

Cardinal Sarto, the patriarch of Venice, is the choice of the cardinals' conclave to succeed Pope Leo XIII, and he has assumed the pontificate, taking the title of Pius X. From what can be learned regarding the career and characteristics of the new pope, his selection appears to have been an eminently wise one, and it is extremely probable that he will carry out the same policy that was pursued by Leo XIII. Cardinal Sarto enjoyed great popularity in his diocese, and has been honored by all for his purity, for the stright uprightness of his life, and for liberal ideas. He is said to be a modest and agreeable man, highly cultivated, very kind-hearted, and although 68 years of age, is strong and robust and fully able to assume the heavy burdens of the papacy. He has never taken any great part in the political and public life of the church, but divided his time between study and good works. Although most faithful to the holy see he was on very friendly terms with the late King Humbert of Italy and has enjoyed the esteem of the present king and the Itlaian government. Consequently there is not likely to be any serious trouble between the vatican and the quirinal while Pius X lives. He was considered among the more liberal members of the Italian episcopate and sacred college, and it is said that Leo XIII always thought very highly of him.

The election of Cardinal Sarto may be regarded as a defeat for the Intransigents, chief among whom stands Cardinal Rampolla, who has been secretary of state for many years. Many regarded Rampolla as the probable successor of Leo. He has many enthusiastic admirers, and also many bitter enemies, his chief weakness lying in the fact that he openly denounced the "triple alliance" and therefore was not acceptable to Germany, Italy or Austria. But for his uncompromising attitude, he might have succeeded in his ambition. The interests of the church, however, may be better advanced by Sarto, who is free from all political entanglements and liberal in his ideas. Pope Pius X will undoubtedly prove an able successor to Leo XIII.

CONSULAR REFORM.

Government officials have by no means given up the idea of improving the consular service abroad, which was agitated some time ago, and the necessity of greater care and attention in this line, plainly shown. Assistant Secretary Pierce of the state department is now on a tour of the continent and will visit the principal consular offices. His report will largely guide the department as to future action. Repeated efforts were made during the last session of congress to pass a bill providing for improvements, but they were not successful. A great number of objections were raised to it, and it was finally amended out of all semblance to its original form. Even with these changes the opposition to the bill could not be appeased.

Its strongest feature was its practical application of civil service rules for promotion in the consular service. There is no attempt to disguise the fact that the opposition to the bill grew largely out of the feeling that many of the choice patronage plums in the consular service would pass away with the inauguration of a system of competitive examinations, both for entrance and promotion. This was not the ground on which the opposition was based publicly, but instead it was asserted that there was not sufficient information at hand upon which to base an intelligent reorganization of the service. These assertions were made in spite of the action of the state department the summer before in having each consular officer to prepare and send in a complete report covering all the details relative to the management of his consulate.

There is no question that the service can be greatly improved and when the report of Secretary Pierce is in, it is possible something may be done.

Sir Thomas Lipton, in an indiscreet moment inveigled into agreeing to award the prize in a beauty show, avoided the decision with extreme gallantry. He says: "The one is perfectly charming, while the other is delightfully bwitching. * * * Each represents the acme of a distinct type of betuty—to compare them is impossible—and both are entitled to rank as the perfection of their respective types." Those two girls will be his friends forever.

According to the Daily Express of London, Hon. Charles Rothschild, the flea fancier, whose collection of fleas is not only the largest of any in the world, but is also the most varied, has not only offered $5000 for an Arctic fox flea, but is fitting out a vessel to go in search of one. This is his second expedition, and if money and perseverance will do it he hopes to lift the flea.

George Gould's son Kingdon is to enter a technological school for a four-years' course in steam and electrical engineering, after which he will go on one of his father's railroads to learn the practical side of railroad life. Jay Gould would be pleased to know that his millions have fallen into such careful hands.

Uncle Russell Sage states that he did not lose a cent by the recent slump in the stock market, and those who know his methods believe it. Uncle Russell never makes a loan without ample collateral.

They can raise almost anything in Kansas. The board of equalization has just raised the state's valuation $25,000,000.

The man who wrote a book on "How to Live to Be 100," is dead at 55. Evidently he did not have the correct receipt.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Manager James Al Butchart is considering a proposition to place in the St. Louis hotel a telephone system, which will give service to each of the rooms, both long distance and city.

It is quite likely the system will be installed, though no contract has been signed as yet, but as such systems are a very valuable property, and are one of the modern conveniences now demanded by the traveling public, it is probable it will be put in.

Mr. Butchart said this morning that he was figuring on the plan, and entertained hopes of installing the system in the very near future.

This telephone system will be operated from a switchboard in the office of the hotel, and connections will be made with the city central telephone office from there.

The one at the Spalding hotel, which has just been put in operation has proven a successful and desirable convenience for the guests, and does away with bell-boy and other calls from the rooms, as the guests can talk directly to the office or the clerks from their rooms.

It is therefore something of a labor-saving device for the hotel, as attendants receive their requests from the clerks, without first having to go to rooms to see what is wanted.

The fitting up of the St. Louis hotel with the telephone system will give Duluth two progressive and up-to-date hotels in this regard, which is about all that St. Paul and Minneapolis together can boast of.

Maj. G. L. Scott, Indian agent at Ashland, is in the city and a guest at the St. Louis hotel. He is going up the north shore to look after the red men of his agency and see if there is anything he can do for them. The Indians up in that quarter are having a nice, lazy time this summer, though it has been a little chilly, and they have been keeping to the tall timber for a large part of the summer. Maj. Scott will be back again in a few days on his way to Ashland.

Genial, smiling and happy Charles J. Johnson, of Grand Marais, came in this morning on the Easton with a lot more folks from up on the north shore. Mr. Johnson registered at the St. Louis hotel. He registered twice—that is he registered his name and he registered a kick. He wanted a suit of clothes he left there some time ago, forgetting all about them. Luckily when he forgot them he had another suit on, so he got home all right, though if he hadn't someone would probably have reminded him of the fact that he forgot. He is now a decidedly lucky man—a man with two suits of clothes, and the envy of the larger part of the population of the North, who only have one. He will leave this afternoon for St. Paul on a short visit.

J. M. Dickey, United States assistant district attorney in Minnesota, is registered at the St. Louis hotel, and is in Duluth on official business.

Mrs. J. D. Jewett, of Hibbing, is a guest for a day or two at the Spalding hotel.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Ballard, of Moorehead, are registered at the Spalding hotel.

* * *

A. G. and D. R. P. Heaton, of Washington, D. C., are at the Spalding hotel.

The Easton from Grand Marais, and one or two of the Anchor line boats were in last night and today, and the hotels started to fill up in a rapid manner.

So far as known the steamer North West, which arrives this evening will not carry its usual quota of distinguished guests, as few reservations have been made at any of the hotels, and the outgoing lists are not very heavy. The weather at this end of the trip may have something to do with the depressing atmosphere surrounding the excursions at this particular time, but the folks who are here on tourists' principles don't seem to be making light and merry through the foggy weather.

The St. Louis, Spalding and McKay hotels are practically filled now, and there are more boats expected with tourists within the next twenty-four hours, and even with all the bad weather, it is probable the hotels will be filled to the limit.

IMPORTANT FIND OF ORE

Capt. J. H. Pearce and James Geary Strike Ore Deposit.

Another important iron ore deposit is said to have been discovered by Capt. J. H. Pearce, of Duluth, and James Geary, of Hibbing, on the Mesaba range, in a location described as the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 25, 58-17. The Robinson-Flynn syndicate owns the fee to the land, which is but a short distance from the Pettit mine at McKinley.

The ore is said to be of excellent quality and extending for about 300 feet in length. Five of the holes are said to show an ore depth of from 250 feet to 300 feet. A drill has been working on the property for about six months. The estimated deposit is 3,000,000 tons.

A number of Virginia people are interested in the proposition with Capt. Pearce and Mr. McGeary.

WILL INSPECT LAWNS.

Lawns In Prize Competition to Be Examined.

The inspection is to be made in connection with the prizes offered by the Commercial club for the best kept lawns in each ward of the city. Besides the cash prizes offered by the club, several of the nursery companies have offered nursery stock in prizes. The winners in the contest are to be announced at the next regular meeting of the club, Aug. 19.

GROSVENOR WAS WRATHY

At German Count Whom He Has Kept In Office.

Chillicothe, Ohio, Aug. 4.—Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor, of Athens, is having some trouble with his German count, John F. Von Muegge, whom he had appointed as Deputy United States marshal, with headquarters in this city, in order that the count might be able to fulfill the provision of a strange will which gives him an estate of $800,000 on the condition that he serve ten years under some government. It seems that his time of probation should have expired July 1, 1903, but when no word was received from Germany it is said that the Athenian statesman grew anxious, as he has been largely the instrument that kept Muegge in the government position.

Having heard that there was some question with in the German court whether the count followed strictly the provision of the will, the general sent for him the other day and demanded an explanation. The count was unwilling to tell all he knew, whereat Grosvenor waxed wrathy. The court agreed to go at once to New York and bring about a final settlement of the estate.

The history of John F. VonMuegge is a most remarkable one. He was born at Hanover, Germany, in 1844, of a noble and extremely wealthy family, his mother being the countess of Holzendorff and his father Baron Freiherr Von Muegge. The count was rather wild in his younger days and his mother believing him to be then incapable of managing so large an estate left a will which gave her son the entire estate only on condition that he first serve ten years in a government position. She died in 1880, and at the death of the baron in 1885 it was decreed by the Amts court that a trustee should manage the estate until the conditions of the will were complied with. If they were not the property should go to a charitable institution at Carlsruhe.

After the death of his father the count started on the fulfillment of the conditions by securing a place with the secret service in San Francisco and Philadelphia. He lost these positions, however, and had nothing to do until he met Congressman Grovenor, who agreed to keep him in office until his time of probation expired. He was at first placed in the office of the United States marshal, at Washington, D. C., and from there was brought to Chillicothe, where he is still stationed as deputy United States marshal, the office being expressly created for him by the late President McKinley. In fact, Grosvenor says that in looking after the interests of Von Muegge he is only executing the will of our late president.

EVANSTON SHOCKED

By Sworn Statement of Beer Wagon Driver.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—George Curtis, a beer wagon driver, threw a bomb into Evanston's prohibition camp yesterday by asserting in Justice Johnson's court that he received orders for and delivered from 1000 to 2000 bottles of beer and whisky a week to residents of the north shore suburb, despite the supposed universal crusades against peddling beer in the town and the ordinances to the contrary.

Curtis, who is employed by Peter Datrum, was a witness in the case brought by Datrum against Chief of Police Mersch and other policemen, who were charged with highway robbery and confiscation of liquor here. Justice Johnson took the matter under advisement.

MINISTER SENT TO JAIL

Because He Would Not Pay Dog Tax.

Vincennes, Ind., Aug. 4.—The Rev. Levi Murphy, Baptist minister, yesterday went to jail rather than pay a fine for refusing to take a dog tax.

The Rev. Levi Murphy likes dogs, but has a decided aversion to dog taxes. Keep a dog he would, and took a delight in its possession. But to pay for a license was quite another story. The minister had enjoyed possession of his dog for some time unquestioned, and the tax never troubled his mind.

Then came the request, mildly at first, that he comply with the law and take out a license. The minister ignored the request. Another visit from the dog taxers brought a request couched in more strenuous terms. He must pay the tax or be arrested. Still he refused. Then he was summoned to appear in court.

He went, full of wrath, determined not to pay the tax. The judge heard his objections and fined him. The minister grew more indignant. It was unjust to fine him, he claimed, and started in to lecture the court for unwarranted procedure. The court listened, but did not relent. He was told that he must pay the fine or go to jail. The minister would not pay the fine, and now he is in jail.

THE RETURN

By Nellie Cravey Gillmore.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Mrs. Carrington placed the length of the verandah and back again half a dozen times, sat down for a restless moment; then rose and began taking short turns up and down in front of the short flight of steps that led down to a winding path of gravel.

Every now and then she paused, with a hand on one of the polished railings, to peer anxiously—perhaps a trifle eagerly—through the thick-laced tree branches shadowing the lawn. Her hair, a heap of shredded copper, tumbled picturesquely over the smooth, white forehead, just relieving it of a sternness begotten by the deeply grave eyes beneath.

A half hour passed and the sound of a familiar footstep brought the blood in a rush of scarlet to the woman's face; in an instant it had receded, leaving her almost as pale as the Le Marque rose at her throat.

Etheridge fastened the gate carefully behind him, and came rapidly up the walk, flicking the flowers on either side with a nervous cane.

Mrs. Carrington extended both hands at once. "Tom!" she said, her voice subdued that he might not catch its trembling. "I'm half afraid," she continued, clinging to him with cold, shaking fingers.

Etheridge stooped and touched her face lightly with his lips. "With me?" he asked.

The element of reproach in his question forced back her self-control. "Of course not, dear. I was foolish, a trifle hysterical—that's all."

"We haven't any too much time, Nona," he reminded, pulling out his watch and glancing apprehensively at the minute hand; "a half hour at the outside."

She whitened and caught her breath at his words, but collected herself immediately and left him for a moment, returning cloaked and hatted for the journey. "We'd better take this side sweet," she suggested as they left the house; "he usually comes the other way."

Dusk was falling rapidly, so that they were not likely to be recognized as they walked on with swift, nervous footsteps, past all the familiar landmarks and down the wide clay road that led to where the team was waiting.

Few words were exchanged. Once Etheridge glanced furtively into the woman's averted profile, a shock running through him at its bitterness and pallor.

Presently they came in sight of the long, white-picketed fence that enclosed the village cemetery. Mrs. Carrington held her face resolutely toward other things as long as she could, but her composure suddenly broke and the hand that had clung desperately to Etheridge's arm loosed its clasp and dropped limply. She looked up into his face with mute, hunted eyes.

"Well?" The man's voice bore a note of uneasiness, despite his effort to appear natural. He took her cold fingers in his own and pressed them gently.

"Wait for me just a moment," she said, with quivering lips. "I want to go—there, for the last time, Tom." Her eyes, strained with a dry misery, looked toward the gleaming shafts pointing skyward in the distance.

Etheridge ceased her mechanically, turning away to hide a gathering frown.

Mrs. Carrington lifted her skirts in one hand and sped swiftly across the long, sunsated grass, through a small, revolving gate and on down to the tiny, violet-bloomed grave, with its simple cross if white marble.

Within ten feet of the grave she paused, the sound of a man's voice and that of a woman breaking sharply on her ears. To the left was a wire bench, screened from observation by a dense clump of shrubbery. She sat down out of breath, instinctively drawing the dark veil closer about her face.

"There's hardly any need of discussing it further," the man was saying in a low, determined tone. Mrs. Carrington's teeth sank into her lip till the blood started as she recognized, distinctly, her husband's voice. And the woman—who was she? A fierce pang shot through her—the bitterest she had ever known. After all, then, she had been right; he had not only ceased to care for her—but there was another woman!

In a moment they came into view and both sat down on one of the benches. Mrs. Carrington shrank closer behind the sheltering shrubbery, observing, with a sigh of unutterable relief, that the woman was her husband's sister, who had brought him up from knickerbockers.

"However," she insisted, "you must admit, John, that she has given you precious little attention since the boy died."

The man lifted his hand, enjoining silence.

"Now, I never was much of a believer in divorces, myself," she kept on; "but it appears to me that that's about the only thing left for you now."

Carrington looked up quickly, a challenge in his eyes. "What do you mean by that, Esther?"

"Mean?" she retorted scornfully; "is it possible, John Carrington, that you are such a fool as not to know the talk your wife's been making around town with that Etheridge person?"

The man's face flushed a slow red under its mask of bronze, and the eyes he turned to her were terrible in their sternness.

"That will do!" he said, in a concentrated voice. After a bit he went on more calmly, a little sadly: "I know he it's the truth that she doesn't care for me any longer; I don't blame her for that, though. No man, or woman, in God's name, Esther, don't tell me that a woman like Winona could deliberately put a stain on her dead baby's memory!"

The other gave a little short, sneering laugh. "Very well," she responded, curtly. "I've warned you—that's all. When she has succeeded in dragging your name through the mire, you'll remember that your sister tried to open your eyes in time."

Carrington rose and moved away toward the grave. "Leave me now," he said, coldly, "and never attempt to reopen the subject. Your advice is well-meant, I don't doubt that; but you have made a very serious mistake in following me here with garbled tales; and let me tell you this much, whatever my wife does or has done, she is the stainless mother of my dead boy. I have sworn to be her protector, and I intend to keep my oath. Good-by, Esther," he finished quietly.

A minute passed—five, then ten, and the man still knelt by the violet-bloomed mound.

Mrs. Carrington roused herself as from a dream; a strange dizziness blinded her and made her limbs nerveless to move. After what seemed an eternity, she rose, shaking almost beyond her control, as she moved noiselessly through the deep grass and stood on the opposite side of the grave.

The man looked up at the sharp crackling of a twig, and two faint points of color sprang to his white cheeks.

"Nona!"

For an instant she stood erect, then tottered and flung herself on his bosom.

"Jack!" she cried, with a little broken sob. "Jack—take me—take me home—with you!"

Municipal Meat Market.

Editor of The Herald:

I noticed in your issue of Aug. 1 a comparison of meat prices, both wholesale and retail, and your comments upon the same, which clearly goes to demonstrate that you are not without your bloodsuckers in the fair city of Duluth (namely the local butchers). I think a good remedy for the same would be for the city to establish a municipal meat market to be controlled by the city administration, subject to the dictation of the majority of the citizens thereof. Let the city buy their meat where they can get the best meat for the smallest amount of cash possible and sell for a profit that will just cover expenses. If the municipal ownership of a water works system or a gas plant is a good investment for the municipality would not a municipal meat market be a good investment for both the city and its citizens? If not, why not?

OFFICERS ELECTED

By the National Finnish Temperance Society.

Ishpeming, Mich., Aug. 4.—About 6000 Finns, all members of the National Finnish Temperance society, assembled here to attend the organization's sixteenth annual reunion. Delegates representing ninety subordinate lodges have been since Tuesday attending the grand lodge session. The officers chosen for the ensuing year are: President, Mike Syktta, Ishpeming; vice president, J. H. Mattila, Negaunee; secretary, Jacob Kaminen, Wakefield; treasurer, J. H. Jasberg, Hancock; board of control, Alexander Panttl, Ishpeming; Esa Torkio, Soudan, Minn., and Matti P. Makki, Ishpeming.

The lodge of Soudan is making an effort to take from the Ely, Minn., lodge the distinction of the largest membership of any temperance organization in the United States. The Ely lodge has held the banner for the past three years, though the Soudan Finns are crowding them for the honors. At the picnic here the Ely lodge was presented with a handsome American flag as a token from the national organization. The flag was presented in behalf of the lodge by Congressman Adam Bede, of Minnesota, to Jacob Pete, the oldest man in the Ely society.

Over 10,000 persons attended the picnic. Speeches were delivered in the English and Finnish languages. The English speakers were Mayor T. A. Felch and Congressman H. O. Young, this city; Congressman Adam Bede and Capt. John Pengilly, of Minnesota; J. H. Jasberg, of Hancock, and Dr. C. J. Sorsen, of Calumet.

TEST NEW MACHINE

Steel Corporation Officers Investigate On-Loading Device.

A party of United States Steel corporation officials, comprised of W. A. McGonagle, assistant to the president; J. W. Kreitter, superintendetn, and H. L. Dresser, chief engineer of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road; R. Angst, director and chief engineer; Thomas Owens, superintendent, and A. D. Holliday, assistant superintendent of the Duluth & Iron Range road, have gone to Ishpeming, Mich., to witness the test of a new machine for facilitating the work of getting ore from the cars when it is delivered at the ore docks. The machine was invented by Superintendent Greenway of one of the Steel corporation mines at Ishpeming.

The old method has been to punch the sticky and frozen ore out of the cars by hand, but the new invention is said to be worked by electricity.

MARRIES A COUNT.

Mabel Holden, of Duluth, to Wed a Title.

A clipping from one of the Eastern papers of recent issue states that the marriage of Mrs. Mabelle-Hayes and Wilhelm Heinrich Grilson Schaffer, Count von Leopold and Weddigen, is to be celebrated in Franklin, Delaware county, N. Y., Aug. 5. The bride was formerly Miss Mabel Holden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Holden, who reside in Duluth. Ten years ago, having acquired considerable local fame as a singer, she joined an opera company and has been on the stage ever since.

LIFE SAVED BY BEER.

Bartender Used It to Put Out a Fire.

Funkley, Minn., Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—But for the prompt action of a bartender, Ole Johnson, a laborer, would have been seriously if not fatally injured here yesterday morning. Mr. Johnson was intoxicated and in trying to light a cigar with an electric appliance, his celluloid collar caught fire, and instantly his head was enveloped in aflme. No water was at hand, but the bartender grabbed him and threw him to the floor behind the bar and opened the beer faucet on to his head until the flames were put out and Mr. Johnson almost drowned.

STANDARD FOR FOOD.

Milwaukee Man Is After the Boarding Houses.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 4.—Secretary Frank B. Schutz, of the health department, is framing a ordinance that will soon be introduced in the common council, providing a standard for food used in boarding houses and hotels. Just how the secretary is going to regulate it he has not yet decided, but he has experts at work on the job.

Mr. Schutz says he knows only too well what mysterious cincoctions are used in the average boarding house. He knows how we suffered and now that Mayor Rose has made him secretary of the health department he purposes to get even with some of his former boarding house keepers.

MAY UPSET CABINET

Laurier's Railroad Policy May Result In His Defeat.

Tariff Talk Among the Canadian Members of Parliament.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 4.—The government transcontinental railway policy is now formally before parliament and the country. If the temper in which the oppositon has received the scheme can be accepted as an indication, the government may fail to put the bill through this session. It is evident the opposition in house and senate can bring about a situation calculated to force Sir Wilfrid to abandon the attempt to carry this measure before prorogation, and to make an appeal to the country handicapped to a certain extent by less favorable conditions than the friends of the administration might desire. People who a few weeks back would have smiled at the ridiculous suggestion of any possible combination of circumstances by which the Laurier ministry could be upset are heard seriously discussing the likelihood of a government defeat.

The suggestion in Andrew Carnegie's last letter to the London Times that the United States might retaliate against Canada in case of British tariff discrimination affecting the United States has caused a good deal of talk among the politicians assembled at the capital. The Citizen sums up the matter as follows:

"As for fiscal retaliation, the Americans are in the unfortunate position towards Canada of having done their worst, while we have never even taken in hand the weapons of retaliation which we possess. If it came to a tariff war in which the Americans became nasty towards Great Britain, Canada could even launch some shafts into the American flank that would make the big republic writhe. The only real value of Carnegie's reckless and ill-informed talk is as an indication of the uneasiness and alarm of the United States over the Chamberlain proposals. And that uneasiness and alarm are not caused by any philanthropic anxiety lest Great Britain will injure herself by adopting the Chamberlain policy."

A powerful argument for a tariff on iron, steel and manufactures generally averaging that of the United States was delivered by the ex-minister of public works, J. Israel Tarte, in the debate in the commons on the United States control of the binder twine industry in Canada, and the finance minister's resolution for a bounty on that product. Joseph Chamberlain, said Mr. Tarte, is holding out his hands to Canada and making an offer that will be worth "countless millions" to this country if Canada were in a condition to take advantage of it. But Canada, he admitted, is not in a position to take advantage of it. Her average tariff is barely half the United States average. Let Canada place herself in a position as strongly relative as the United States and she will effect a preferential arrangement with England enabling her to deliver her products in the English markets at an advantage over all other countries. Every acre of land capable of producing wheat would as a consequence be worth $20 an acre more than it is today. But England will not admit Canada's products on more favorable terms than those of other countries unless Canada has something to give in exchange.

Mr. Charlton, in the coure of the same debate, was attacked by Dr. Sproule for truckling to American interests and opposing the building of Canadian industries for fear of offending the United States. Mr. Charlton made a dignified reply. He said:

"I have stood up in this house during the thirty-one years that I have had a seat here and advocated what I believed to be Canadian interests on the broad ground of the benefit of Canada, and I have had no motive or impulse beyond this during all that time. I have done this often in the face of opposition and prejudice, and have incurred on many occasions charges of the most unfriendly, unwarrantable and untruthful character."

Society people here seem to consider it about settled that an American duchess is to reign at government house when the earl and countess of Minto return to England. The appointment of the governor general of Canada rests with the imperial authorities, and the Dominion cabinet has nothing whatever to do with it but to welcome the new excellencies when they come. One of the local dailies, commenting on the renewed rumor that the duke of Marlborough is to succeed Lord Minto at the expiration of the latter's term, remarks that, 'as the duchess of Marlborough is a daughter of the Vanderbilts, her residence in Ottawa would no doubt be the occasion of frequent visits of parties of the 'smart set' from New York and Newport to this city." That is an echo of the society view. In political circles the opinion has always been, since the report the duke was likely to be chosen was first put into circulation, that the country generally would not approve the presence of an American wife of a governor general at Rideau hall, no matter how charming and otherwise desirable, at a time when questions of American relations were likely to assume unusual importance.

Resignations from Sir Wilfrid Laurier's cabinet furnished Mr. Taylor, opposition whip in the house of commons, an opening in a debate on the length of the session. He charged the government with responsibility for delays in bringing down public measures, and twitted them with the frequent changes in the ministry. The new cabinet, he said, had hardly met when Sir Oliver Mowat, a man in whom the people of Canada had great confidence, was found to be troublesome and had to be moved out. Sir Henry Joly de Lotbiniere, universally regarded as an honest, capable man, was put in his place, was also found to be troublesome, and was given the lieutenant governorship of British Columbia.

Sir Louis Davies, another honest man, was transferred to the supreme court, as was also David Mills, whose uncompromising integrity was a household word in Canada. Mr. Tarte, of whom Sir Wilfrid said: "When Tarte goes, I go," kicked over the traces and had to throw up his portfolio. And then, following close on his heels, went Mr. Blair, who left his seat in the ministry rather than consent to the transcontinental railway policy of his colleagues.

The second masterpiece in the August number of "10 Story Book" is Guy De Maupassant's weird story entitled "The Mysterious Assassination." It deals with a murder, the vendetta, an uncanny severed hand, things which go to make a plot that thrills and mystifies.

VERY SAD TALE

Duluth Is Buncoed Out of a Game In the Tenth.

Visitors Make Winning Run After Eight Scoreless Innings.

A bunch of suspicious looking green goods men from Grand Forks buncoed Duluth out of a valuable 10-inning game yesterday.

It's a sadly romantic story. Among those present were 250 moist and shivering faithful and THE HOODOO.

Duluth outplayed the Grand Forks bunch but after the first inning failed to bunch hits. In the tenth, with two men out and a bunco steerer looming up on third, Brown, who had been hitting nothing but the ambient fog all afternoon, accidentally singled down the right field foul line, scoring Hanrahan.

In the first inning Grand Forks scored threes runs on costly but excusable errors, a single and a double. With a dry infield this inning would have been a shutout for the visitors.

Quillan was the first man in Cardinal to face Slette and he reached first on an error by Scharnweber. Then Shepard stepped up and pounded out a three-bagger to left. Kennally went out from third to first and McCoy pushed out a spectacular double to right. Cassidine was out on an easy fly to Cole and Crippen reached first on an error by Slette. Wilkes pounded out a two-bagger bringing in McCoy with Duluth's third and last run.

After the first inning both Gehring and Slette pitched fine ball with honors resting even until the fatal and foolish tenth.

The official score:

Quillan is certainly playing a great game at third.

* * *

Crippen caught a pretty game. His throwing to second was a feature.

* * *

After his lucky drive scoring the winning run in the tenth, Brown joshingly apologized to the Duluth fans, saying: "You fellows ought not to blame me. I couldn't help it."

* * *

Superior did not lose yesterday. Wet grounds.

* * *

Crookston was beaten by Winnipeg at Crookston yesterday. The Champions got after Staples the Minneapolis pitcher and drove him out of the box in the second inning. Schulte, who replaced him was also hit hard. The score:

Winnipeg	1	2	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	—5

* * *

* * *

Look out for a change in the management of the Superior team within the next forty-eight hours.

* * *

Bradley, one of the new men, was tried in left yesterday and fielded the position nicely.

* * *

"Demon" Shaw is slated to pitch this afternoon's game against the green goods outfit.

* * *

Manager Scott Karns, of Grand Forks, watched the game from the grand stand. In the tenth he wore a smile that looked like a search light.

* * *

Morrity was in uniform yesterday, but did not play. He will be tried in the outfield today.

* * *

After the first inning Shepard played a fielding game yesterday that was fast enough for the National league.

* * *

Wilkes' error in center was caused by a misunderstanding between he and Cassibone on Scharnweber's high fly.

* * *

Manager Van Praagh has heard from Catcher Stratton. He desires to play in Duluth next season, but does not think it wise to come here so late this year.

* * *

The disadvantage of being left-handed was never more apparent than in the case of Pitcher Noldin, of the Cardinals. When the team was coming in from Winnipeg Sunday night, Noldin got off the train at a little station along with several other players. The others, being right-handed, got on the same train they got off, but Noldin took the left hand train and landed back in Grand Forks. He wired for money and did not get home till this morning.

* * *

Murphy is so much improved that he was able to leave the hospital yesterday and promises to get in the game again very soon.

* * *

Alfred McCullum, the old-time Duluth player, was pressed into service as an umpire yesterday.

* * *

Quillan's catch of Hanahran's line drive in the seventh yesterday was great.

OLD EMPLOYES ARE RELEASED

School Board Consolidates Two Positions to Save Money.

Two old employes of the school board have been dismissed from service, through the medium of a motion that was passed at the last meeting of the board.

The motion, which was introduced by Director Washburn, provided for the combination of the positions of superintendent of construction and chief engineer, and the employment of a man who would be competent to fill both positions.

The motion was in pursuance of the plan of retrenchment which the board has laid out for itself. It was believed that a saving of several hundred dollars annually could be made by the plan. The salary of the chief engineer, Thomas Bowers, is $1200, and that of the superintendent of construction, E. R. Cobb, $1080. The salary attached to the new position created will be $1500, which will effect a saving of $780 per year.

The new position has not yet been filled permanently, although William Hamnia, who has been engineer at the Jefferson school, has been appointed to the position temporarily.

Hints To Advertisers

Barley existing is the non-advertiser.

White's Sayings: Don't say you sell more boots than all your competitors combined—if you want your readers to believe you.

The Advisor: Never put out little advertisements in a lot of publications expecting big results—use larger space in the best and you will hear from them.

Keeping everlastingly at it in the right channel brings its reward. Real estate advertisers say most fruitful returns are obtained from The Herald. No stronger word could be said for the stability of a paper's readers.

Retailer & Advertiser: The merchant who believes what he puts in his advertisements can scarcely fail to inspire others with confidence in them. If he does not believe what he says, he cannot reasonably expect others to put faith in it.

Mahn's Magazine: Advertising is the portal to the business structure. Make it as imposing and attractive as possible, but see to it that when visitors pass through the portal the furnishings of the interior are in keeping with the exterior and that the welcome accorded is as hearty and honest as the invitation extended.

Mail Order Journal: Whenever possible a good illustration should be used in connection with advertising. Before an ad can be read the attention must be attracted, and there is nothing that will succeed in accomplishing this better than a good illustration, set off by an effective display of type matter. It should particularly be borne in mind that the illustrations which are used should have some connection with what they attempt to advertise. An illustration can be made to carry with it a convincing suggestion.

A good many merchants lose sight of the fact that a rainy evening is a most excellent one for their announcement in an evening newspaper. As a matter of fact, when the weather is inclement people stay indoors and every line is thoroughly perused.

HUMORS OF ADVERTISING.

These examples illustrate the curious effect which the misplacing of a comma, or of a word or two, often has upon the meaning of a sentence:

"Wanted, a servant who can cook and dress children."

"Annual sale now going on. Don't go elsewhere to be cheated—come in here."

"A lady wants to sell her piano, as she is going abroad in a strong iron frame."

"Dine here and you will never dine anywhere else."

"Wanted, a room for two gentlemen about thirty feet long and twenty feet broad."

"For sale, a pianoforte, the property of a musician with carved legs."

"Mr. Butcher begs to announce that he is willing to make up capes, jackets, etcetera, for ladies out of their own skins."

"A respectable widow wants washing."

"A boy wanted who can open oysters with reference.

"Bulldog for sale. Will eat anything—very fond of children."

"Wanted an organist and a boy to blow the same."

"Lost, near Lester Park, an umbrella, belonging to a gentleman with a bent rib and a bone handle."

SODINI RETURNS.

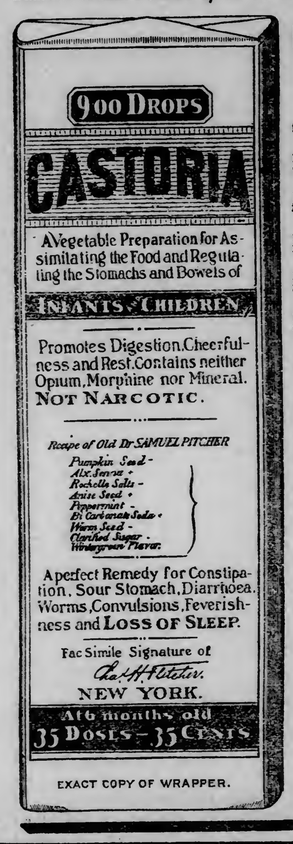

Minneapolis, Aug. 4.—J. C. Sodini, former theater owner of this city, who fled to Italy last year, presumably for his health, after being indicted by the grand jury, returned yesterday and gave himself up. He was arraigned, bonds were given and trial set for the fall term of court. Sodini stands indicted on charges of offering a bribe to a public officer, the specific charge being the paying of $1000 to Mayor Ames, with the understanding that Ames would close up two rival theaters. It is claimed that Ames took the bribe and closed up the theaters.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Was Strong Because There Were Plenty of Buyers.

Market Generally Strong, Coarse Grains Also Advancing.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 4.—Wheat advanced this morning on the Duluth board, as well as in American markets generally, but the reason for the advance was a little difficult to ascertain. One man put it that it went up because people bought it, but why they bought it nobody knew. The news was generally more bearish than otherwise, yet the market was strong throughout except early in the session, when it was a bit sluggish. Later, on the bulge about noon, it was very active.

Minneapolis led the advance, closing 1⅛-¼c up, while Duluth September gained 1⅛c. Chicago advanced ⅝c, and New York closed ⅜c up. Duluth December closed 1⅛-¼c up. Receipts of wheat at Minneapolis and Duluth, 149 cars, 42nd at Chicago 183, a total of 332 cars, against 372 last week and 719 last year. Bradstreet's report showing a decrease in the visible was a bullish factor. New York reported eighteen loads of wheat and 6 of corn taken for export today.

The Liverpool market closed ¼@¾d higher. Paris unchanged to ¼c lower, Antwerp ⅝c lower.

Primary receipts of wheat were 837,326 bus, last year 1,295,000 bus. Shipments 949,648 bus, last year 824,037 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 217,000 bus. Bradstreet reported a decrease of 1,613,000 bus in the world's visible.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅝d lower. September corn in the Chicago market closed ½-⅝c up at 52¾-⅞c. September oats closed ¼-⅜c up at 31½c. Primary receipts of corn were 405,990 bus, last year 233,000 bus. Shipments 589,857 bus, last year 559,000 bus. Clearances were 94,696 bus. Bradstreet reported a decrease of 650,000 bus in the world's visible.

December did a trifle better, closing 1⅛-¼c up at 80c.

Cash trading was light at unchanged premiums, 5c over September.

Oats in Duluth advanced ⅝c to arrive in September, and rye gained ½c.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat in store, No. 1 hard, 87¼c; No. 1 northern, 87¼c; No. 2 northern, 85½c. To arrive, No. 1 hard, 87¼c; No. 1 northern, 87¼c; No. 2 northern, 85¼c; September, 82¼c; December, 80c. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Becomes Weaker After a Firm Opening.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—There was a disposition among traders today to sell wheat, and after a firm opening due to some local buying on continued rains in the Northwest, the market became weaker, the depression being augmented by the weakness in corn. The September option was easier than the more distant deliveries and opened a shade lower to ¼c higher at 79⅝-¾c to 8c, later easing off to 79½c. Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 149 cars, which, with local receipts of 183 cars, 50 of contract grade, made total receipts for the three points of 332 cars, against 372 cars last week and 719 cars a year ago.

The market was more active the latter part of the day and developed considerable strength, due largely to advances in outside markets. The close was strong with September ⅝c higher at 80⅝c, after selling at 80⅜@½c.

Corn was weak at the opening on lower cables and favorable weather, together with increased receipts, September being unchanged to ⅛c lower at 51⅝c to 51¾c. Under free selling influenced somewhat by the poor cash demand, September declined to 51c, but rallied again on the bullish Missouri crop report and sold up to 51½c. Local receipts were 305 cars, with 29 of contract grade.

The strength increased as the day advanced and closing prices were strong, with September ½@⅝c higher at 52¾@⅞c.

Oats opened about steady with September a shade lower to a shade higher, at 33⅞c to 34c, but the early weakness in other grains discouraged buying and prices eased off a trifle. Local bulls seemed inclined to support the more distant deliveries and they were steadier. Local receipts were 308 cars.

Provisions opened firm on an advance of from 5 to 15c in prices of hogs and with not much for sale and a fair scattered demand, the market held firm the early part of the day. September pork opened 5c higher at 15.80. September lard was also up 5c at $7.57½, while ribs were 2½c to 5c higher at $8.17½ to $8.20.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Winters to Paine, Webber & Co.: There is a big short interest in all options of corn. Pit crowd very bearish and outside trade at moment all in wheat. Actual damage to corn will not be realized for a couple of weeks and until then corn will not do much. Pit traders sell it off a little and when they try to cover they find the corn is not there. Good people such as Harris-Gates, Patten and Bartlett take it on the weak spots and when time is ripe will put it much higher. Would buy corn anywhere around present price, but take profits for a few days on the quick rallies.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: It continues to be an active market with a strong tone. There was some little weakness early, but it reacted sharply and closed about ½c higher than yesterday. Northwest markets continue to lead in the advance. The Southwest markets report a good cash demand and prices half to one cent higher. The buying is for domestic mills and export business continues to be on a moderate scale. While receipts are increasing they are still far below the movement a year ago. Speculative feeling and situation seem to us still strong and favorable to higher prices. A better export demand is desirable, but with the small stocks abroad it looks as though this must come later. We still advise purchases of wheat on the weak spots.

Corn—After a weak opening market rallied and closed strong. A little increase in country offerings is the only change in the cash situation which is dull. The weather is the most favorable for the crop but the feeling rather prevails that the deficiency which now exists and the general condition cannot be restored and that the outcome is likely to be a very small crop. There is an active speculative interest and at least a good scalping market seems assured. Until the crop prospects improve much lower prices are, we think, not likely.

Oats—Market firm and higher. Receipts continue liberal and demand fair, but the oats market sympathizes to some extent with any strength in wheat and corn.

The Record-Herald says: "There has been a special sentimental reason for the summer bullishness. In the spring the crop prospects were so bearish there was created an exaggerated harvest expectation. The marking down of that prospect has been so steady ever since May there has been a persistent impulse toward buying at each crop announcement. This is kept up now by the private advices. There has been a cumulative story of crop trouble. It may have grown into exaggeration, but it has been told so uninterruptedly even the incredulous have been converted.

All the vehemence now is on the buying side. Even those who consider the price high can see the dangers in opposition. There are no stocks to embarrass the bulls. The movement is but half last year's so far, and no one feels certain when it will be large enough to prove any load to buyers even at these high prices. Last week there were some indications the foreigner was being stirred from his indifference. His purchases were some better."

CROP CONDITIONS

Shown By Weekly Report of Weather Bureau.

Washington, Aug. 4.—The weather bureau's weekly summary of crop conditions is as follows:

Throughout the northern portions of the country from New England to the North Pacific coast the temperature was too low for best results, light frosts occurring in North Dakota, but in the Southern states it was more favorable although clear and warmer weather is needed in West Gulf districts. Portions of the South Atlantic and East Gulf states and the Central and Lower Mississippi valley need rain, but elsewhere east of the Rockies rains have been ample, being excessively heavy in Central and Northeastern Texas, in the eastern portions of Nebraska and Kansas and over areas in the Ohio valley and East Gulf states. It is now very dry in the General and Southern Rocky mountain districts. Corn is greatly improved, especially in Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and portions of Illinois and the lake region, the least favorable reports being received from Missouri and the Ohio valley states. The crop continues late. An excellent crop is now assured in the Southern states.

Threshing of winter wheat has continued under favorable conditions, harvesting having been finished, except in portions of New York and Michigan and on the acific coast, with disappointing yields.

General rains in the spring wheat region of the upper Missouri and Red river of the north valleys checked the ripening of spring wheat and caused better filling of the heads. Harvesting is in progress, some of the early sown being cut in the northern portion, but was delayed by rains in South Dakota and Nebraska. Harvesting is also in progress in Oregon with highly yields and of excellent quality. In Washington the crop is maturing slowly, but is filling well.

IRELAND AND SARTO.

Archbishop Speaks Highly of the New Pope.

St. Paul, Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Archbishop Ireland, in speaking of the new pope, said:

"So far as known, Cardinal Sarto, now elected pope, is a man of deep learning and recognized prudence of action. He administered the important diocese of Venice in a manner to draw to him universal praise. While archbishop and cardinal, he seldom visited Rome.

"He enters into the pontificate free from all entangling alliances, free in every way to carve out for himself his own career.

"The election of Cardinal Sarto is not a surprise. It was evident from the beginning that if one outside of Rome was to be chosen, that one would be Cardinal Sarto, and a not uncommon course of conclaves is to take as its candidate one outside the Eternal City, so that his future administration may be, from the beginning, one entirely and manifestly inspired by his own wisdom and knowledge of affairs.

"This is exactly what happened when Leo XIII himself was chosen."

A SLUMP IN STOCKS

Heavy Selling of United States Steel Caused Weakness.

Steel Common Fell to the Lowest Point on Record.

New York, Aug. 4.—The resumption of business on the London stock exchange today after a holiday interval failed to bring any new demand for American stocks and prices here dropped on small dealings. The trunk line stocks were exceptions and showed small gains. Consolidated Gas broke 4¼ on the announcement of a new stock issue and U. S. Steel pfd was driven down 1¾ with a break of a ½ point between sales.

Pressure being more pronounced in the general market following additional large offerings of the U. S. Steel stocks and Consolidated Gas. Sharp fractional losses were the rule of the grangers, Pacifics and Southwesterns. Consolidated Gas declined 7 points to 179½ and Locomotive pfd, Brooklyn Transit, Leather pfd, Republic Steel pfd, Canadian Pacific, Erie second pfd, Wabash pfd and Kansas ity Southern 1 to 1⅝. U. S. Steel fell 1¾ and the pfd 2 points.

Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo pfd lost 1¾ and North American with a rally of 1. Realty pfd rose a point, but did not hold it while Pullman gained 1½.

The action of the market suggested renewed selling out of collateral in loans and invited short selling by the bears. Declines in the grangers and Pacifics, which bore the brunt of the selling, ran from 1 to 1½ approaching the low level of the year. A number of the coalers, Amalgamated, Sugar and other specialties fell a point. Consolidated Gas extended its loss to 7¾, North American 4, Virginia-Carolina Chemical 3¾ and New Jersey Central 2¼. U. S. Steel stocks were steady. Westinghouse Electric rose 2 and Colorado Fuel a point. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Large blocks of various stocks were sold all around the room after the noon hour, causing rather precipitate declines in a number of cases. The unrestrained liquidation of the specialties caused some apprehension. Virginia-Carolint Chemical pfd opened 19 points lower at 80 on the sale of 200 shares. The common stock dropped 8¼ in all, and Westinghouse Electric, 5. Declines ran to 2 points or more in many other stocks, including Amalgamated, Brooklyn Transit, Sugar, General Electric, Locomotive pfd, Leather pfd, Steel stocks, St. Paul, Canadian Pacific, Northwestern, Louisville & Nashville and Delaware & Hudson.

Buying orders were encountered for the Virginia-Carolina Chemical stocks and they rallied 1⅜ for the common and 3 for the preferred. Standard stocks also moved up a trifle, but renewed selling orders soon drove the market off again. Low prices for the year were made by some of the leaders especially Union Pacific and Atchison. The bulk of the selling in St. Paul, Atchison, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania and Reading. St. Paul dropped 3 and Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Reading, Wabash pfd, Atchison, Metropolitan Street Railway were added to the list of declines of from 2 to 2¾.

The pressure to sell continued into the final hour of the market when Union Pacific touched 71 and Delaware & Hudson, Frisco second preferred and Metropolitan Street Railway extended their decline to 3.

The pressure then was somewhat relaxed but the rallies were feeble. There were new weak spots developed, Baltimore & Ohio falling over 2 points and Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis 3. United States Steel common fell to 21, the lowest on record. The closing was feverish and unsettled.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The opinion most prevalent is that for the next few weeks there will not be much speculation and that Wall street will use the interval to put itself in the strongest possible shape. Urgent and forced liquidation seems to be terminated though many traders think we have not yet reached the foot of the toboggan slide. Merchants are borrowing now for fear they will not be able to borrow later on, accounts for much of bank loans, and makes the position better. However, it is no use trying to argue away the bear factors. The market is never a purchase except when numberless bear arguments are being exploited. The more "reasons" why prices cannot advance that are dug up, the safer it is to buy. I should not be surprised at a good bull wave starting any day.

* * *

Town Topics says: A sagging market is favored by the general apathy which will be taken advantage of by bears. There are strong combinations at work There are strong combinations at work endeavoring to depress Union Pacific and St. Paul. Many operators have left the city for vacations and a period of dullness will be experienced unless something occurs to promote activity. There is nothing to justify either a bull or a bear campaign now. London early market for American stocks was strong.

* * *

Waldorf to Coe Commission Co.: As might be expected, speculative sentiment is dampened by the absolute stagnation on the part of traders either to buy or sell and the important financial interests of the street continue to hold aloof. These conditions make the situation which leaves the market open to the tactics of the professional and as the most of the latter are bearish, there is persistent hammering of prices and forced liquidation. These attempts, however, did not meet with much success during today's session, and barring bad news they are not expected to do so. Long stocks are not pressed for sale in quantity, the short interest is large and increasing, prices are far below the level of a year ago, and the conservative feeling is that good stocks are cheap. This opinion is based also on continued satisfactions to the contrary, the general trade of the country will remain active for a long time to come. Persistent selling of the stock of the corn-carrying roads by the professional element has for its motive many rumors of crop damage and also of further issues of new securities. As to the former, they relate to corn. There is, however, a theory that the present growing season, while by no means perfect, has been far better than that of 1901, and that if 1,500,000,000 bushels of corn were raised in the latter year, 1903 is pretty sure to be good for an average yield. Brokers who spent most of the day on the floor of the stock exchange say that nine-tenths of the dealing was for the account of room traders and that the latter offered stocks down without meeting opposition from the banking interests, which seemed content for the time being at least, to let the market take care of itself. These observers generally agree that on any further set-backs stocks will do to buy.

* * *

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market very sloppy and lower. Reports of resignation of Schwab from the United States Steeel corporation accompanied by rumors that his successor would be a man favorable to reducing dividends, started the selling of steel stocks. This has been followed by bear pressure throughout the list and considerable liquidation. The decline has been general. The market shows but little rallying power. We see no special reason for the weakness. The dullness, however, leaves the market open to bear attacks.

* * *

Paine, Webber & Co., Boston: The weakness of Atchison, Union Pacific and the Steel stocks and the drop of 2½ points in Amalgamated caused some selling of coppers today and prices declined all round. There was no unfavorable news. Rumors of possible failures in New York were circulated, but they probably had their origin in decline of prices. The copper market was again reported stronger. Spot and futures are now 2-10 shillings apart in London, indicating a scarcity of supplies of copper there for immediate delivery. We advise the sale of stocks on rallies for a turn.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Aug. 4.—The cotton market opened quiet at an advance of 3@10 points on the cables which were somewhat higher than expected and for a short time maintained the advance with shorts displaying some uneasiness over the presence on the floor of the bull operators. But there was no indication that these interests were aggressively interested and with the weather map reflecting satisfactory conditions, prices soon developed a sagging tendency and returned to about last night's level.

RECEIVES LARGE FEES.

Corporations Yield New Jersey a Handsome Income.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 4.—Corporation Clerk John W. Brooks, of the secretary of state's office, has issued a statement showing that New Jersey has received since January 1, 1901, in filing fees for charters, $1,370,795.63. This represents only the fees for chartering corporations, not the annual corporation tax, which runs into the millions.

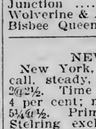

The figures show that for the seven months ending last Friday the states receipts from new corporations were over $75,000 less than those received for the same time a year ago, and nearly $275,000 more than half-less than the receipts for a like period in 1901 when the corporation business was at its best.

From Jan. 1 to August 1, 1902, the state received $294,155.57, and for a similar period in 1901, the receipts from new corporations amounted to $479,250.04.

Lumber Carrier Newaygo Hard Aground In Upper Harbor.

Hugo & Tims, of Duluth, Get Big Breakwater Contract.

The lumber carrier Newaygo is aground in the upper harbor, near the Murray & Jones mill.

The Newaygo was coming from the mill last evening, and attempting to make the lake without the assistance of a tug, she had on board a cargo of about 800,000 feet of lumber.

When but a short distance from the mill, she left the channel in some manner and ran into shallow water, grounding along the greater part of her length.

The tug Excelsior of the Great Lakes Towing company was dispatched to her assistance, but was unable to move her, and after working for some time gave it up. The Zenith was sent to her assistance this morning, but the vessel defied all the efforts of the powerful tug, and was still aground this afternoon.

The cargo is being lightered, and it is expected to have the vessel off the ground before night.

The Newaygo is a propellor of 995 gross tons, 196 feet in length, 37 feet in beam and 13 feet in depth. She belongs to the Mills Transportation company of Marysville, Mich. She will not be much damaged by the accident.

GET BIG CONTRACT.

Hugo & Tims Will Rebuild Port Huron Breakwater.

The million-dollar contract for the rebuilding with concrete of the great wooden breakwater, which forms the harbor of refuge at Sand Beach, on the west shore of Lake Huron near Port Huron, has been awarded to Hugo & Tims, contractors of this city.

Maj. Lansing H. Beach is the government engineer in charge of the work, which will occupy several years.

The length of the breakwater is 8000 feet. It is 8 feet in width and will be 17 feet in height above the level of the lake.

F. P. Tims will have charge of the work, and will spend the greater portion of his time in the vicinity, although the headquarters of the firm will continue in Duluth.

The sum of $200,000 is available at once for the work, which will be begun in the near future.

WILL BE ON TIME.

Steamer North West Will Break a Record.

There will be 300 people on the North West when she arrives this evening from Buffalo, and she will arrive on time, the first exhibition of punctuality for the past three weeks.

President Howard James of the Northern Steamship company is on board, and he is seeing if he cannot get that boat through on time. The North West left Houghton this morning on the minute, and unless there is some breakdown or other unforseen accident will be here shortly after 9 o'clock.

Among the 300 passengers there are about fifty who belong to a traveling party conducted by the Raymond & Whitcomb company bound for a tour through Alaska.

This will be the largest crowd by far brought here this season, and may be a record for the whole season.

The lists for berths on the down trip is growing larger every hour and it is estimated that the crowd going back will exceed that coming up by quite a number.

MAY BUILD PLANT

Johnson Smelting Process Is Said to Be Still Alive.

Reported That Smelter Will Be Built at Port Wing.

It was said today, on good authority, that the Frank Johnson black ore smelting process is still alive and will be put into practical operation soon.

A plant in which the ore will be smelted and made into steel is said to be under course of construction now, or is about to be built.

As near as can be learned, it is to be put up at Port Wing, and will be built after plans made by Frank Johnson, the originator of the process of making steel from the titanic ore, which he holds as a secret.

Johnson announced along last winter that he had a process which he was keeping secret, that would revolutionize the world of steel, when he got it working. He claimed he could make steel of such a hardness that it would defy any file. He said he could do this in one smelt and was laughed at a great deal by steel men.

Later he had some tests made at St. Paul in a cupola foundry and claimed that his words were justified by the tests in the presence of several iron men.

He then proposed building an experimental plant in Duluth, but receiving little or no encouragement, he abandoned that idea, and has been back here but once in the past three months. At that time he came in hurriedly and left in the same kind of a rush.

He would not say where he was going.

It has now been ascertained that Port Wing will be the seat of the trial of the new methods under conditions prepared after the most fastidious ideas of the inventor.

It is said the Port Wing people, and people interested in the place, have given Mr. Johnson a glad hand and offered to help him with his invention.

Recently John A. Stewart, of New York, was here and he had a similar process, and was looking around on it, and investigating ore conditions and getting samples of the black titani quality to show and test in New York when he went East again.

IS AGAIN ARRESTED

Joseph Sheehy was rearrested this afternoon on complaints, charging him with hiring four men to work for the firm of Knudsen & Eden without having authority from that firm to do so. It is the same charge that was dismissed in the municipal court yesterday afternoon, though the complaint has been slightly changed.

HARVEST LABOR

Men Not Going to Harvest Freely as Last Year.

Reports on Labor Demand and Crops From the West.

The movement of men westward to the harvest fields, which began with a small rush last week and which fell off considerably before the end of the week, but not nearly the number of men that left the head of the lakes for harvest work last year are going out this season.

Several reasons are assigned for this, one being because the men do not think teh conditions warrant so large a demand. It is also claimed that the $6 rate, made by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads from Duluth to western harvest field points, as compared with a $5 rate last year, does not strike the laboring man favorably, although the railway companies have made provisions for a return rate of $7 on the presentation of working certificates as the western offices. Last year the return rate was $7.28 from Fargo, and higher proportionately from points west of Fargo. This year the $7 is to apply from Fargo and points west of that place, but the rates back from points north of Grand Forks are a little higher.

The Northwestern company is the only road making a rate from the head of the lakes into South Dakota this season, although the Great Northern road has previously made rates to Watertown and adjacent points.

The harvest business has cut into the supply of labor for other classes of contract work in the Northwest, but not so much as in previous years. Orders are coming in almost daily for men for railroad work, and most of these are being filled, although the tendency of the laboring man is to get to some western point.

G. S. Richards, of the National Employment company, has sent out a large number of inquiries to Western Minnesota and North Dakota points relative to the crop situation, the probable demand for men and the prospective wages, and has received answers from several, the localities and conditions being shown in the following excerpts:

Crookston—The harvest here is going to be a good one and harvest hands are in great demand. Plenty of inquiry for help, but none to be found.

Grand Forks—Harvest here will begin this week, but will not be in full blast until next. The wages are now $2 per day, but will be from $2.25 to $2.50 next week and may be some higher. The farmers can use all the men sent them. The crop is a very good average.

Blanchard—Crops are very good and there will be a demand for harvest help this week. Wages, $2 per day.

Northwood—Crops will average eighteen to twenty-two per acre. Help scarce. Scandinavian help most desired.

Milnor—Crop prospects never better in the past ten years and there is a great demand for men even now for haying. Wages from $2 to $2.25 per day.

Casselton—Crops very good in this locality. Doubtful if there will be a large demand for men. The farmers usually have no trouble in getting all the help they need.

Valley City—Prospects good for fair crop, but nots o good as usual. Wages probably in the neighborhood of $2 per day.

Oakes—Crops are good. Quite a demand for harvest hands at $2 per day.

Langdon—Crop prospects not the best, but there will be a fair crop and the farmers will need some men. They are offering from $1.75 to $2 per day.

Devils Lake—Prospects not very good close around here, but all right a little further out. The demand for men will be large, according to present outlook.

Mr. Richards expects to hear this week from a number of the South Dakota harvesting points.

SCHWAB IS OUT.

New York, Aug. 4.—The resignation of Charles M. Schwab, as president of the United States Steel corporation was presented to the directors this afternoon and was accepted. W. E. Corey was elected president of the organization.

Mr. Schwab said his resignation was due to ill health. He said he will remain a director of the corporation.

The office of chairman of the board of directors was created and E. H. Gary was elected to the position and will continue to devote his entire time to the business of the corporation.

An advisory committee to consist of the president of the corporation and three directors was created and E. C. Converse and William Edenbern and Daniel G. Reid were elected members of the committee.

Over 600 Lives Lost.

Full particulars were recently received from the Samoan islands in regard to the terrible hurricane which visited those islands and in which over 600 lives were lost. Such a loss is appalling, but after all is not to be compared with the number of persons who have lost their lives from indigestion, dyspepsia and constipation and other stomach troubles. The number has, however, been considerably reduced since the introduction of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters fifty years ago, because it positively cures all such ailments. Your life and health are too precious to experiment with, therefore try this famous remedy first of all and be cured at once. It won't disappoint you. The genuine has our Private Stamp over the neck of the bottle.

GOOD CROPS

St. Paul, Aug. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Seven hundred reports from state banks in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, covering every section of every county in these states, shows that 58½ per cent of all crops are good, 29½ per cent are fair, and only 12 per cent poor. Oats, rye and corn show up the best.

The reports were received in response to inquiries sent out by Public Examiner Johnson.

CLOUDBURST IN IOWA.

St. Paul, Aug. 4.—A Mason City, Iowa, special to the Dispatch says: A cloudburst this morning caused Willow creek to overflow its banks and inundate the valley. Twenty-five families were rescued by boats, but no lives were lost. The water is receding.

THE New Era Business College
SUPERIOR, WISCONSIN.
THE BEST COMMERCIAL SCHOOL IN THE NORTHWEST.

Read this before deciding what business college to attend.

FACTS FOR CONSIDERATION.

1. No false representations are made by the management with the view of inducing patronage.
2. The College employs a large staff of excellent teachers, and is thus able to give each student the most careful individual instruction.
3. The College has been established for four years, has trained thousands of students who are now occupying positions of profit and responsibility, not only in every town in the Northwest, but in most of the large cities of the United States.
4. The College has an established reputation amongst the educators throughout the country.
5. The number of pupils in attendance is very much larger than that of any other commercial institution in the Northwest.
6. The courses of study are so arranged as to give the best results in the least time. The methods of teaching in all departments are based on the principle of training the learner to do exactly what will be required of him in a business office.
7. Graduates invariably indorse the school, and more than one-half of the attendance is due to their recommendation.
8. The business practice department is as complete as experience can make it. The instruction includes every transaction that can arise in a complex mercantile community, and the handling of the same kind of documents as are used in business houses, including Notes, Drafts, Bills of Exchange, Checks, Receipts, Mortgages, Leases, Powers of Attorney, Deposit Slips, etc.
9. Efficiency is preferred to display, and the teachers always keep in mind that the majority of students expect to apply their knowledge through employment. There is, consequently, no difficulty in obtaining positions for the competent. The College sends more of its graduates to employment than any other school in the Northwest.
10. The same advantages cannot be had anywhere else. The New Era is the standard of comparison with all others in the Northwest.
11. The methods of teaching are in large part peculiar to the College and have only been reached by careful experiment, investigation and comparison with the leading schools of America.
12. Whether you live in the city or in the country, a short or a long distance from Superior, Wisconsin, or even out of the state, we can refer you to a student from your own neighborhood who has attended the College and who will speak well of it.
13. The shortest methods of instruction as consistent with thorough knowledge, are always employed.
14. There is hardly a business house or corporation of any magnitude that has not one or more of the College's former students connected with it, either as owner or employe.
15. The demand for New Era Business College graduates is at least double the supply.

Our Teachers.

The College employs the best instructors it can procure, and its teachers co-operate to the fullest extent, in seeking to promote the welfare of the students. They take an active, personal interest, in furthering the educational, moral, and financial advantages of pupils. The reputation and financial standing of the institution enables it to command the best attainable services.

Students in Positions.

The record of students graduated by the College, shows the value placed on business education by business men, and proves conclusively, the opportunities that come to young men and women who secure the thorough training provided in this institution. The College is never able to supply the demand for its graduates. The demand is so strong that many of the students every year, are induced to leave school before completing the course, to avail themselves of the splendid chances offered; to make their start in the great commercial world. The employment records of the College show that fully twice as many positions are offered as it is able to fill. It frequently occurs that the students have a chance to choose from half a dozen positions. Hundreds of prominent business houses are managed by graduates of the College and they are regular patrons of the College employment department.

About 300 students annually secure positions through the influence of the College, and as many more could be placed. The demand for young men proficient in stenography and accounting is unprecedented. There never has been such wealth of opportunity for young men who have the industry, patience, and forethought, to prepare for it, and who have an ambition to rise above the ordinary world. The conditions of the Northwest today, constitute an actual appeal to young men.

To prove the efficiency of our departments and the work exemplified in them, we need but refer to one firm at the head of the lakes, who employs eighteen of our graduates, and are regularly making their wants known to us for additional help, knowing the superiority of our students, in practicability and thoroughness, over those from other schools. This firm is Marshall-Wells Hardware Co., Duluth, Minn.,who have now in their actual employ the following of our graduates:

Miss Eliza Ames.
Miss Louise Ord.
Mr. Harry McKay.
Miss Mable Johnson.
Mr. Fred Bolger.
Miss Gertrude Taylor.

THE AIR FERRY

Begins to Look More Like a Fact Than a Dream.

A Waukesha Steel Company Puts In a Bid of $100,000.

Again the aerial ferry looks like a fact instead of a theoretical joke.

The Modern Structural Steel company, of Waukesha, has submitted a proposal to build it for $100,000 and have it operating by June 1, 1904, or forfeit $30 a day for failing to perform the contract within that specified time.

While this bid is not exactly in conformity with the advertised plans and specifications, the members of the bridge commission say it is perfectly legitimate, and that the company gives every evidence of being sincere in its proposal.

The city intended paying the successful bidder $100,000 when the bridge should be accepted, but the advertising stipulated that the company building it must operate it at its own expense for a period of six months before the city would accept the bridge.

The new bidder desires the city to sell the $100,000 worth of bonds and money deposited before the bridge is finished, as a guarantee that there will be no delay when the time for paying arrives.

The company then agrees to operate the bridge for a period of one month at its own expense and to give a surety bond for its successful operation for five months more.

Only very slight changes have been made from the original style of construction. The bridge is to be what is known among engineers as a stiff truss affair, erected on a cantilever system in order not to interfere with navigation.

The bridge commission has not decided whether or not it will consider the plans of the Roebling company, of New York, which are now said to be en route.

THE TRIAL OF POWERS

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 4.—The defense in the third trial of ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers today offered affidavits for a continuance, supported by a plea in abatement to go behind the records of the legislature that unseated W. S. Taylor as governor and other state officers in favor of Goebel and others, as it was upon this authority that the court of appeals held the advance pardon of Powers by Taylor to be ineffective. The plea held that by going back of legislative records the defense could show the pardon to be good.

Commonwealth Attorney Franklin objected to filing his plea and Judge Robbins sustained the objection, stating that the court took judicial notice of the statements therein. Attorney James Sims, of the defense, stated that he desired to tender the plea so that the rejection could be noted fully and the court concentrated. The defense was allowed to supplement its plea with the affidavit of an additional witness and recess was taken.

IS BOUND OVER

George Fox Is Passed on to Federal Grand Jury.

George Fox, the young man charged with passing a counterfeit bill, was bound over to the federal grand jury at a preliminary hearing held before Capt. Thomas H. Pressnell, United States commissioner, this morning.

The crime with which Fox is charged is alleged to have taken place one week ago last Saturday, when he attempted to pass a bogus $10 bank bill on Matt Miller, a hack driver. The bill was made by pasting together two facsimile advertising bills of the Bank of New Brunswick.

Fox was brought up before Judge Windom, in the municipal court last Saturday, to be heard, when United States Marshal G. J. Mallory appeared with a federal warrant for him. The young man was then taken before Commissioner Pressnell, who set his hearing for this morning.

At the hearing the young man appeared without a lawyer, and was in a very silent and non-committal mood.

J. M. Dickey, the assistant United States district attorney, appeared against the young man. J. M. Lawrence, of the secret service, Chief Troyer and Miller, the hack driver, were present and gave their testimony.

When asked if he had anything to say, the young man replied in the negative. Capt. Pressnell held him to the grand jury for the sum of $2000 bail, and when it was not forthcoming, committed him to the St. Louis county jail until the fall sitting of the grand jury in October.

SAILOR BURNED TO DEATH.

Lost His Life on the Schooner Sandusky.

Buffalo, Aug. 4.—In a fire starting in the forecastle of the schooner Sandusky early this morning, one sailor was burned to death and his sleeping companions were saved by a narrow margin. The Sandusky was entirely destroyed with a cargo of 800,000 feet of lumber. John Kent, of Baraga, Mich., was the man who lost his life.

The Sandusky had just entered Lake Superior and was lying at the dock at Tonawanda when the fire broke out. The watchman on the deck attempted to extinguish the flames, but failed. Then he ran to the officers' quarters and sounded an alarm. The sailors were aroused just in time as their quarters were filled with dense smoke. Kent alone failed to scramble to the burning deck. He is believed to have been suffocated in his berth.
